It is a wholesome thing to speak about growing at the beginning of a new season. It is taken for granted that we are to grow, the question before us being an answer to a query. What sort of growth may be possible for us, and what do we need? Are there not too many who seem to be standing quite where they were not grown in grace or in knowledge or in character, who are still where they were a year ago and for some years before then? The misfortune in this case is that they do not seem to realize their undeveloped lives. Perhaps the matter would come close home if we would quietly ask ourselves as to our own growth during the past year. Are the weaknesses of yesterday brought into today? Is the hot temper still as warm as it used to be? Does the hasty word fall as easily as it did? Have we wandered about in a circle instead of climbing upward, growing into God's life and likeness? Let us have it brought fresh to our minds, the necessity of growing and the mischief of standing still. The kind of growth we need? Why, this Scripture helps to a very clear answer. We are to grow up into him. It is a Christlife we are living, and all development should be in direction of a larger and greater Christ life. What a suggestion for us! Here before everything else, is the necessity of growing up into him. This is the kind of growth we all need. He who grows into Christ is sure to have the Christlikeness, and man cannot fail to see the growth and glorify the life.

There is an intimation here that should help us over some common difficulties. We are not to grow alike save in one trend, that of Christlikeness. But we are to grow into the service he has planned for us. Our work varies; we are not all to do the same thing. Among the Ephesians to whom Paul was writing, there were some called to be apostles, others prophets, some evangelists, and others pastors and teachers. There was diversity of callings and diversity of gifts.

It is not an easy thing to tell another what his work should be, but it is well to remind ourselves that God has chosen us all to do something, and it is our business to discover what his purposes are. If we wait on God, he will indicate things to do. The sum of the callings was for service, for the development of the whole body of Christ, which is his church. How I wish we might all of us get the heart of this teaching of service. Here are people who go in and out of the church just as though they had nothing else to do but to come and go. They listen respectfully, worship devotionally, but when the call goes out for service, these people do not seem to think for a moment that any one could mean them; they are fulfilling their responsibility, when they sit in their pews, pay their dues, and keep quiet. But in the body of Christ there is no room for respectable idlers! What kind of growth do we need? Is it not worth while to call attention to this also? We are to grow into a perfect building; we are to fit in somewhere. There are those who sometimes excuse themselves from service on the ground that they do not feel at home in this or that place. Whose fault is it? I am inclined to answer, their own. The man or woman who does not feel at home should make himself at home and the feeling will come by and by. But we ought to fit in somewhere in the structure. The ideal, the measure? "The measure of the stature of the fullness of Christ." There is the ideal for every one. You are not right unless you are growing up into him, reaching after the perfect measure, the image of Christ! This simplifies and also complicates them.

The ideal is high, but it is one ideal, not two, we are to be like him and not like others. It is a long way up the hill, but we must climb, we must reach out and grow, and while we are not able to take our own measure, there are those about us who will take it and know how near like Christ we are. Come brothers and sisters, let us grow up in him, and make 1904 the best year we have yet lived.—Selected by J. C. Thompson.

What One Book Accomplished.

Only eternity will reveal the great results accomplished by means of simple tract distribution. An obscure parson (Bunny) in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, published a book, which he called "The Resolution." This book was the means of the conversion of Richard Baxter, who became a great religious light in his age. Baxter wrote, "A Call to the unconverted," which led Philip Doddridge to become a Christian. Philip Doddridge is the author of some of our best hymns, and of a book entitled "The Rise and Progress of Religion in the soul." An English statesman, William Wilberforce, read this book in a holiday in the south of France, and gave his heart to God, and resolved to lead a Christian life. His name is associated with the abolition of slavery, and some of the best legislation of his time. Wilberforce wrote, "A Practical view of Christianity," a book which has influenced a great number in the way of holiness. Leigh Richmond, a curate of the Church of England, got from it his first real impressions of gospel truth. And Leigh Richmond wrote, "A Dairyman's Daughter," than which no story has been more blessed in the reading.—Faithful Witness.

Wickedness and Revivals.

The prevalence of wickedness is no evidence at all that there is not going to be a revival. That is often God's time to work. When the enemy cometh in like a flood, the Spirit of the Lord lifts up a standard against him. Often the first indication of a revival is the devil's getting up something new in opposition. It will invariably have one of two effects. It will either drive Christians to God, or it will drive them farther away from God, to some carnal policy or other that will only make things worse. Frequently the most outrageous wickedness of the ungodly is followed by a revival. If Christians are made to feel that they have no hope but in God, and if they have sufficient feeling left to care for the honor of God and the salvation of the impenitent, there will certainly be a revival.—Chas. G. Finney.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the original restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

ANOTHER OFFER.

There is a general waking up among our people everywhere. Our public speakers are all busy, and calls are in excess of their ability to attend them. Many places want preaching at the same time, but must wait their turn. This shows a decided interest, and a desire among our brethren to sound out the Word to the yet unsaved. All seem to realize that the night is far spent, that the time to work is short.

Brothers and Sisters, our work is not well done, and is not ready for acceptance of God, unless we have done all we can—our very utmost. We cannot admit that it is our duty to do anything at all for the advancement of the Master's cause, without conceding it is our duty to do all we can—to make a sacrifice even.

Preachers of other denominations as well as our own, know and say that the best workers in a community are those who take and read their Church paper, and keep informed as to what is being done in the various departments of the work, and are thus interested in pushing along the car of truth.

The Managers of THE RESTITUTION are endeavoring to so conduct the paper that it will be a fit aid to the Evangelist in his work. We are trying to keep it clear from that contention that leads to mischief and strife. This is done by having certain well-defined truths which are taught in God's Word plainly, as a basis of belief, and by publishing articles that accord with these declared principles. Other outside subjects might be "investigated" as long as life and pencil and paper lasts, and no decision ever be reached, but we do not consider this a profitable work to engage in, hence do not ask for contributions on such subjects, and do not want them. Such are usually but the "opinion" of a man, and are often based on a mere inference at best.

This paper aims to teach the truth of the Bible, and the same is declared and believed in by our Church. We therefore believe it is a fit missionary to be sent out to the unsaved and lost of the human family. In order to make it possible for our friends to do more of this missionary work than ever before, we make this offer:

Any one sending us $10.00 may select 13 names of those not now subscribers, to whom we will send the paper for the year 1904. This makes a trifle over one-half regular price if taken in lots of $10.00 worth. You and the office practically go halves in scattering the truth of the gospel to your neighbors and friends. You who have money think of this. For $100 you can preach to an audience of 180 people over 200 sermons the coming year. Can you do better with that amount of money? You have a minister come to your neighborhood perhaps once a month, giving you two or may be three discourses each time—possibly 30 a year. When he is coming you invite your neighbors in to hear him. Suppose those neighbors have had THE RESTITUTION in their homes each week when the preacher was not there, and have read the articles, and are interested to hear more. Does not this increase largely the chances of the preacher being able to speak the very words that will start your friend on the way to the kingdom? Did you ever think of this matter? Will you not take it under consideration? We feel sure if you do you will not hesitate to go half partner with us in this work.

Who will send $10, $20, $50, $100 for this work? The best time to start it is now. Select your names and send at once, so they will get the rest of this year and all of next.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

SELF-CONFIDENCE is the corner stone of success; conceit is the deepest pitfall on the road to failure.

THE time a man spends in getting ready is never wasted time. Is it not a suggestive fact that nine-tenths of our Lord's life was spent in preparation?

GAUTIER says, "How many people I have seen who would have plucked cannon balls out of the muzzles of guns with their bare hands, and yet had not the courage to be happy!"

RUSSIA still delays her reply to Japan, and meanwhile preparations for war go on on both sides. One day the indications are that war will begin at once, and the next day peace is the cry. We can only wait and see what will be done.

To no kind of begging are people so averse as to begging pardon; we mean when there is any serious ground for doing so. When there is none, this phrase is as soon taken in vain as other momentous words are upon light occasions. On the other hand, there is a kind of begging which everybody is forward enough at, and that is begging the question.

A Serious Omission.

In our article on "The Genealogy of Christ" in the last RESTITUTION, the paragraph beginning

"Joseph in his own right," etc.; should read as follows:—

Joseph in his own right, as a descendant of Solomon, could have imparted to a son, the legal title to David's throne if that line had not been debarred from the royalty, as Jer. xxii. 24-30 proves that it had.

Holiness of Life.

Brother, what do business men, and the public generally, think of your conduct? Do they respect you for the uprightness and consistency of character which characterizes the man who lives by faith on God's Son? If not, there is something the matter. You do not die daily. The old man is not kept under. You are in the wrong place. You must have a good report of them that are without. There is no middle ground; and there is no time to consult the flesh; the Judge is at the door, and you are right where men will stumble over you, if you do not repent, and be able to say "for me to live is Christ."

We tremble as we write this; we are compelled to give this note of warning to those who may not be adorning the doctrine of the Anointed; or are heedless of the passing events which say the Lord is at hand to come.

God's purposes have ripened so fast of late that we cannot slacken the watch a moment; and those who have the oversight of his household, cannot hold the standard of holy living too high,—cannot too strongly emphasize the fact that only the pure in heart shall see God. If any say the weaknesses of human nature will not allow them to live godly lives, they should stop where they are till they have considered, that if they have been justified by faith and have peace with God; divine assistance to help them maintain that status, is provided. And they have no right to plead the excuse of human nature's weaknesses, till they have just exhausted God's resources. If he has truly said, "My grace is sufficient for thee;" it is proof that the complainants, instead of drawing upon God for strength to keep the body under,—have set the body to keep itself in subjection, and of course failure was inevitable.

We presume that we all, to some extent, try to throw the blame for shortcomings off on to peculiarities in our organism, and expect to be excused on account of them. But really and truly, have we any right to do this, when the provision made by our heavenly Father is sufficient for the most defective organism? When we say, "O, I am made up so that I cannot stand this, that or the other, are we not practically confessing that we have despised (i. e. neglected) the divine assistance graciously proffered us? As we have often said, First, last and all the time,—till faith is lost in sight, and hope in glad fruition. The gospel of Christ is the power of God unto salvation. If we are obedient to it, it can be depended on to correct defective organisms. Paul was a notable witness to its power.

Knowledge Puffeth up.

"Knowledge puffeth up, but charity edifieth." 1 Cor. viii. 1. Have you ever seen a boy blow up a bladder? It has not grown, it is puffed up! It has become big, but it is filled with wind, as a pin will demonstrate. Now, the apostle says, Knowledge blows a man up, and makes him look big, so he seems himself to be large. Love is the thing to build him up. The one swells him out so that he appears greater than he really is. The other develops him by actual increase. The one bloats him, and the other builds him. The apostle's declaration is that the mere realm of ideas, the simple sphere of knowledge, tends to produce among men immense inflation, and a sense of importance, while love, the essential spirit of Christ, is the thing which augments men, enlarges them, strengthens them, with foundations downward, and a superstructure upward."

"Inheritance."

In Col. i. 12 we read these words: "Giving thanks unto the Father which has made us meet to be partakers of the inheritance of the saints in light." What is inheritance? The pay of a soldier is not inheritance; neither are fees of a lawyer or physician; nor the profits of a business, nor the wages of labor. Rewards of toil and skill are earned by the hands that receive them. What is inherited, however, may be the property of a new-born babe. In the terms of a court of law the saints will take the kingdom, not by purchase, nor conquest, but by inheritance. Won by another arm than theirs, it presents the strongest contrast to the spectacle seen in England when a king I have read of demanded to know of his assembled nobles, by what title they held their lands: "What Title?" They shouted, and a hundred swords leaped from their scabbards. Advancing on the alarmed monarch, "By these," they replied, "We won, and by these we will keep them!"

How different the scene to be witnessed by and by when our Lord comes in his glory (Matt. xxv.) and says, "Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you." Methinks all eyes will be fixed on Jesus, and every voice in the vast assembly will exclaim, "Not unto us, O Lord, not us, but unto thy name give glory."

Annual Love Feast Letters.

Dear ones of the household of faith:

We have been enjoying the love feast so much, and yet there are so many we have missed. This is the only way I know for the whole church to "assemble together" when they are so widely scattered over the earth. As the wickedness of the last days increases we should ever be on the watch. Who must we watch, our brother or sister? No, let us pray for them and watch ourselves. The Lord does not require us to separate the wheat and the tares, but says let them be till the harvest. He is the only one that knows how to separate them. When the Lord broke bread with the disciples he told them "one of you will betray me." Yet he did not separate him from their company. We have so much need of charity in these evil days it would be well for us to look at the Bible definition and see if we have it. The Bible gives it one meaning and the world gives an entirely different meaning. The world would have you believe, that if you give a great deal of your money to the poor you are very charitable. The Bible says, "Charity suffereth long and is kind; envieth not; vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemingly, seeketh not her own, is not easily provoked, thinketh no evil, rejoiceth not in iniquity, but rejoiceth in the truth, beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things. Please notice this verse, "Though I bestow all my goods to feed the poor, and give my body to be burned and have not charity, it profiteth me nothing." When reading Bro. Halstead's letter saying he had been in the truth 50 years I thought I would love to have the prayers of all such brothers and sisters. Yes, let the strong bear the infirmities of the weak. I would ask all the brothers and sisters to pray that all my sins and uncharitableness of the year just ended may be blotted out, that I may begin the new year with a clean page.

Your Sister,
LAURA SKEELS.

Editor Restitution:

As my subscription has expired I will renew it as the paper is a great help to us. We feel greatly encouraged when we read the letters from different ones of the household of faith telling of the good work being done in various places. We have Sunday school here at Attica each Sunday and preaching every two weeks. Our hearts were made glad by a recent visit from Sister Hanna Barber of Blackwell, Oklahoma. It encourages us to have brethren from other localities meet with us and we trust that they may be encouraged as well as we. "Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another; and the Lord hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him, for them that feared the Lord, and that thought upon his name. And they shall be mine, saith the Lord of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels." How we would enjoy meeting with those whose names we see so often in the paper. May the time soon come when we will clasp glad hands in the glorious kingdom of God, where there will be no parting; no good bye's will be said, for the Lord of hosts will be King in that day. Yours waiting for the King.

LIZZIE B. OLIVER.

Dear brothers and sisters in Christ:

I am alone here in the faith of life only through Christ at his coming. There are probably a half dozen on the other side of this County that are believers, of Bro. J. F. Wagoner's coverts. Will you, dear brothers assist an evangelist or one of your good preachers to come to Crystal River, Fla., and preach a series of sermons. We will board them and make up all we can in money. I see that Brother Eychaner is at Tampa, Fla. I would be thankful if he would stop on his way home and run out to Crystal and give us a few sermons. I have not heard a sermon from any of our brethren in ten years.

Your Sister, in Christ.
MRS. N. T. WILLIS.

Editor Restitution:

I am so thankful for past favors. I am living with my daughter in the country. I dont know what I would do without THE RESTITUTION as I am shut out of all Christian society, it is my teacher and my preacher. I am looking and longing for the redemption of this corruptible body. I praise the Lord for his wonderful love and goodness to me in my old age. My hope is in Christ, he is my all in all.

Hoping for the coming of the kingdom.

MRS. H. S. DIEBBER.

To the household of faith:

Bro. Neill returned to Salem, O., from his first evangelist trip, Dec. 22. Began a series of meetings here Jan. 3, assisted by his wife. These meetings were well attended with the best of interest. An interest like that of the noble Bereans, who searched the Scriptures daily to see whether these things be so. As a result of diligent study we take pleasure in introducing to the household Sister McCase, who searched daily till she was thoroughly convinced of the truth as it is in Jesus, and then there was no rest in her mind till last night at 7:30 P. M. at the home of Bro. Neill in the presence of a few of like precious faith and a number who are searching for light, she was immersed into Christ for the remission of sins, affectionate obedience to the gospel of the kingdom, she arose a new creature in Christ Jesus, an heir of God and joint heir with Christ. Bro. Neill addressed those present with an earnest talk on the necessity of immersion, and what it does for us. This was one of the most earnest, impressive meetings we were ever privileged to attend. Our sister will be an efficient worker in the cause of Christ.

Conference Report.

The Conference of the Church of God of central Washington met on Jan. 1, 1904, at Wenatchee, Wash. and continued over the following Sunday with the following program:

Friday evening, Sermon, by A. L. Corbaley, 7:30.

Saturday, 11:00 a. m. Business meeting. 6:30 p. m Social meeting. 7:30. Sermon, N. D. Tiethenal.

Sunday, 10:00 a. m. Sunday School. 11:00 a. m. Sermon, Myrtle Tiethenal. 3:00 p. m. Young People's meeting. 6:30 p. m. Social meeting. 7:30. Sermon, N. D. Tiethenal.

On account of sickness Bro. Walker Perrine was unable to take his place on the program as was arranged.

It was decided that the next meeting of the Conference be held at Waterville on April 1, 1904.

MYRTLE TITCHENAL, Sec'y.

EVANGELIST REPORT.

On Dec. 6th last we began a series of meetings at Waterville, Wash. We preached seventeen sermons in all. The attendance was fair and interest good, but there were no immediate results, yet we pray that the seed sown may take root in some heart and bring forth fruit for the kingdom of God. We labored to the best of our ability in the Master's vineyard. We realize that Paul may plant and Apollos may water, but God gives the increase, so we leave the matter in the Father's hands.

At the close of the meetings at Waterville we returned home and found all well. We began to make ready for our quarterly Conference which convened on Friday Jan. 1, 1904 and continued over Sunday. We had splendid meeting which was well attended by the household of faith. We had a real feast of good things in the which we take new courage, and strength by the assembling of ourselves together, especially as we see the day approaching. We wish to thank Bro. A. H. Zilmer for his encouraging letter to the Conference. It is such tokens of love that cheer us on our way. "Let brotherly love continue."

At the close of the Conference we began a series of meetings at our home church, preaching sixteen sermons in all. Sister Nannie T. Skeels of Scholls, Ore., preaching one sermon and Bro. Walker Perrine one. Owing to sickness in his family he was unable to meet with us until the last four days of the meetings. There were two added to the church by letter, at this place, Sister Atwood and Bro. Wood.

The attendance was not as good as we would like to have had, but we are living in an age of indifference when people do not seem to care about things to come. The world is absorbed in the immediate present. The Master warned us of this time in Matt. xxiv. 37 38, As it was in the days of Noah, so shall it be in the days of the coming of the Son of Man. We see this condition of things at the present time, but let us take courage for the coming of the Master draweth nigh.

Obituary.

Died, in Oakland, Cal., on Jan. 12, Mrs. Martha Wilson, (widow) aged 92 years. (lacking 24 days.)

She was born in Halifax, England, March 5, 1812. She leaves behind, three sons, viz. Thomas, Wm. Henry, and Samuel Wilson. Her life has been well spent and all who knew her loved her. When young she was an active worker with the Baptists, then joined the Campbellite church, and over 50 years ago joined those who believe in Christ as the only Life-giver and the One who shall soon come to reign with the saints on the earth.

She died peacefully, passing from a transient sleep into a sleep that knows no awakening till Jesus calls together his own.

THOS. WILSON.

Died, on the 5th day of Jan. 1904, little Elmer, the youngest son of Bro. and Sister Lake, of that dread disease, diptheria, aged 5 years.

A bright boy—the joy of the household, and yet he must go, leaving behind sad, loving hearts. We went to the grave, though under quarantine ourselves, to offer a prayer and a few words of comfort. Come Lord Jesus and deliver the groaning creation from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

WALKER PERRINE.

Fell asleep in Jesus, at his home near Mearman, Kansas, Jan. 22, Bro. Geo. Calkins, aged 66 years.

Brother Calkins was born in Madrid, Franklin Co., Maine, in 1837. In early childhood moved with his parents to Wilberham, Mass., where he grew to manhood. In early life he embraced the faith of the second advent and no life out of Christ, which truths he retained till his death.

Brother Calkins, though not a minister, was instrumental in carrying the truth into many localities. His home and his purse were always open to God's people. His long and useful life was brought to a close by heart disease and pneumonia. All that loving hands could do for his comfort was done but to no avail.

He leaves to mourn his loss a devoted wife and two daughters, Sister Hattie Henry of town, and Mrs. Clara Mintern of Kansas City, also a noble son of 23, Bro. Wilson Calkins who stayed at home with his parents and to whom the blow comes with great force. May God reward and bless those who so faithfully and untiringly ministered to the wants of our brother in his last days. The hope of the resurrection was set before the people by Elder G. C. Whitton, assisted by the writer.

ELDER HARVEY B. DAVIS.

The Will of the Czar in Germany.

Word has been passed around among Russian students, exiles, and fugitives that they are not safe in Germany. Some have moved on to Switzerland, Holland, France, or England. Others are preparing to leave. They regard the country as no longer neutral. Strange things have happened during recent weeks. Russians arrested on orders of expulsion at Giessen, at Freiburg, at Posen, were taken by police and thrust across the Russian frontier. They have nevermore been heard of. The presumption is that Russian police, waiting at places agreed upon with the German police, took them into there voiceless keeping.

Domiciliary searches and seizures have taken place, especially in Konigsberg and Stuttgart, in houses where correspondence or literature of a kind forbidden in Russia was believed to exist. The office of the "Osvobozhdenie" at Stuttgart was entered three weeks ago and searched. The subscription lists and copy on hand were taken. The "Osvobozhdenie" is a Russian revolutionary paper of moderate tendencies. Struve, the editor, aims at the development in Russia of parliamentary institutions from the existing Zemstvos. He is a writer who left Russia three years ago with the object of founding this paper for secret circulation in Russia. Ample funds said to be derived from Jewish bankers in various capitals are at Struve's disposal. Personally he spends almost nothing, living in bare rooms kept by his wife. Although a Socialist, he excludes his Socialist views from the paper. Struve has issued an assurance that his subscription list was largely composed of ciphers that reminded him of names and places. Besides, the paper was sent, largely in bulk, out of Germany and distributed from other countries.

Bebel asserted in the Reichstag that Russian police were as much at home in Germany as in Russia, and that German police were used by the Russian for the attainment of secret objects. This attitude of the German, and particularly the Prussian, police began about November 10, and gives support to the theory that the Czar and the Emperor made an agreement at their meeting in October, of which one part was to prevent Russians discontented with political conditions at home from using Germany as a base from which to send their ideas and agents across the border. However this may be, Germany is no longer a secure harbor for Russian liberals and they are leaving.—From our Berlin Correspondent.—Collier's Weekly.

The Nine Ship Canals.

The ship canals of the world are nine in number, as follows: the Suez Canal, the Cronstadt and Saint Petersburg Canal, the Corinth Canal, the Manchester Ship Canal, the Kaiser Wilhelm Canal, the Elbe and Trave Canal, the Welland Canal, the American Sault Ste. Marie Canal, the Canadian Sault Ste. Marie Canal.

The Suez Canal was begun in 1859 and completed in 1869. It was the conception of the masterful brain of Ferdinand de Lesseps, and was carried to completion by him, amid the plaudits of the world. Memory recalls the successful diplomacy of the late Earl of Beaconsfield, during the sessions leading to the Treaty of Berlin, by which coup Great Britain secured control of the canal and thereby of the "overland route" to India and the far East. The advantage thus secured opens our minds to a vision of the advantage that will be ours when the American Isthmian canal becomes a fact. The total length of the Suez Canal is ninety miles, but about two thirds of it is through shallow lakes. Its cost has been about $100,000,000 (original estimate was $95,000,000). The tonnage passing through it rose from 486 vessels of 654,915 gross in 1870, to 3,411 vessels of 18,699,237 gross tonnage in 1900. The shareholders are getting 10 per cent dividends on $100,000,000. The canal is electrically lighted over its entire length.

The Cronstadt and Saint Petersburg Canal was begun in 1877 and completed in 1890. It is of great strategic and commercial importance to Russia. It connects the Bay of Cronstadt, with its impregnable fortress, with Saint Petersburg, an inland city. The length of this canal is six miles, and it cost $10,000,000.

The Corinth Canal connects the Gulf of Corinth with the Gulf of Ægina. It reduces the distances from Adriatic ports by 175 miles, and from ports of the Mediterranean by 100 miles. Its length is about four miles. Part of it was cut through granite. It was begun in 1884 and completed in 1893, at an expense of $5,000,000. The Manchester Ship Canal is a very important waterway, joining the great city of Manchester, with its wealth of manufactures, to the shipping facilities of Liverpool and the River Mersey, opening to the Atlantic Ocean. The length is thirty-five and one half miles, with a rise from sea level to Manchester of sixty feet. Four sets of locks of fifteen feet each are used. The cost of construction was $75,000,000. In 1901 the canal revenue was $8,105,940 and the working expenses $2,416,335.

Though the Kaiser Wilhelm Canal was constructed largely for military and naval purposes, it is proving also of great value to general mercantile traffic. It connects the Baltic and North Seas, through Germany, with a length of sixty-one miles. Work was begun in 1887 and was completed in 1895 at a cost of $40,000,000. The number of vessels passing through this canal in 1900 was 21,571, with a tonnage of 4,282,258, and the dues collected amounted to 2,133,165 marks.

With the value and work of the Welland and Sault Ste. Marie Canals we are familiar. Far more tonnage passes through the latter than traverses even the Suez Canal.—New York Sun.

Notice.

To the Brethren in Iowa:

I have decided to take up the Lord's work in Iowa, for several months at least and am ready to respond to all calls for meetings, funerals, weddings, or any other calls pertaining to the work of a minister of the gospel.

Address me at Fort Dodge, Iowa, P. Box 86.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres. Iowa Con.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

How great a victory was that which Jonathan must have gained over himself, when he rejoiced to see David raised above him! He discerned the mind of God in David, and had so learnt to delight in God, that he did not see in David one who was to outshine him, but another faithful man raised up for God and for Israel. Not so Joab, who in hellish jealousy slew his kinsman Amasa. 1 Sam. xxiii. 17; 2 Sam. xx. 9, 10.

Poetry.

Such as I Have.

Such as I have! It is so very small
That I am even tempted to withhold,
Because it is not houses or fair lands,
Or talents of fine gold.

Such as I have! I have no wit, no words!
I cannot speak with angels' glowing tongue,
I cannot sing thy praise in lofty strains,
As some of old have sung.

Such as I have I bring thee, O my Lord—
Thou who didst give thyself to ransom me;
Remembering that gift, can I withhold
Such as I have from thee?

Signs of His Coming.

Some one has defined prophecy as "history written in advance," and as the value of history written after the events have transpired depends upon its truthfulness, the same rule must apply to prophecy. That inspiration anticipated this reasonable conclusion is evident, for "When a prophet speaketh in the name of the Lord, if the thing follow not, nor come to pass, that is the thing which the Lord hath not spoken, but the prophet hath spoken it presumptuously; thou shalt not be afraid of him." Deut. xviii. 22. "Knowing that no prophecy of Scripture is of any private interpretation." 2 Pet. i. 20. Attention to these injunctions would have saved some expositors of prophecy from many serious blunders.

The logical sequence of the premises laid down in Scripture for applying prophecy, amounts to this; the thing or things claimed as fulfillments of prophecy must be exact duplicates of the prophecy. Prophetic truth must fit into human history with such exactness that there can be no doubt as to the relation of the prophetic and historic facts, and where labored efforts are made to compel an agreement we may be assured that all such attempts will be failures. "We have found him of whom Moses and the prophets did write." But how did they know that this particular person was the one of whom they wrote? The answer certainly must be, "there is one that fills in every detail the description given by the prophets." There could be no doubt about it, for earth's teeming millions never did and never will produce another that could fulfill all that was predicted of the Messiah. A counterfeit to be dangerous must closely resemble the genuine, hence false Christs are easily detected by those who know what Moses and the prophets did write concerning the true Christ. Prophetic truths may be compared to the sun's rays, a single ray of heat from the sun would have but little effect upon matter, but indefinitely multiplied every known substance could be melted. one prophetic truth might be so deflected by error that only a minimum of evidence could be claimed for it, but when the mighty lines of truth stretching across the ages are focalized at a given point, their concentrated power can melt the most stubborn case of unbelief. And I appeal to every student of the Bible to testify that at no time in human history has there been such an accumulation of evidence, both human and divine that Christ's coming is in the near future. Even men of the world who are ignorant of God's purposse are peering with deep anxiety into the future knowing that a tremendous crisis in human affairs is imminent. The mighty mass of humanity heedlessly pass on unmindful of the sure Word of prophecy. A sad sight indeed to people slumbering on the verge of a mighty volcano that will soon burst in all its fury upon a doomed world. The great fact in prophecy, yes, the key-stone in the arch of truth, is the coming of Jesus Christ to establish the divine government, the kingdom of God upon the earth. This fact being denied, completely nullifies the signs that portend it. But by whom is it denied? The secular world being ignorant of it can neither affirm nor deny it. But the sure Word of prophecy tells us who will deny it and when they will deny. The only difference between the prophetic history and its human fulfillment is in a modern change in the name. The prophetic name is "scoffer," the human agent fulfilling it is "religious teaching," but a "rose by any other name would exhale the same fragrance." Is evidence demanded that religious teachers scoff at the doctrine of Christ's coming? Omitting names we give facts. "Rev. —— said at a missionary meeting, 'what care we for the second advent.'" Rev. —— said publicly, "This preaching the coming of Christ in the clouds of heaven is pretty poor business.'" The two in white raiment at Christ's ascension are included in this sneer at all who wait for his appearing." Another in speaking of a proposition he did not believe said, "it could be proved as easy as some people could prove that the Lord was coming." The writer is aware of the fact that in several religious organizations individual members hold to the belief that Christ is coming, and can this excite surprise when it is known that two hundred passages of Scripture directly and indirectly teach it? The facts in prophecy are so utterly at variance with human expectations that are based upon false premises, that to the world the prophetic Word is meaningless, and often contradictory. The attitude of the nations at the time of Christ's coming is so plainly described that in point of time it can be readily located. Intimately associated with this predicted coming is the resurrection of Christ's dead ones, the reward of all the faithful, and the destruction of the enemies of Christ. "And the nations were angry." When? At the time above described. Rev. xi 15 18. What is an indication of anger? In an individual it is shown by acts of violence, getting possession of and using deadly weapons. The same rule applies to nations. And here is a strange thing confronting the world. A few years since a world's peace conference convened at the capital of Holland, the call was made by Russia, and extended to the nations. Then throughout the world rang the message, peace, peace, arbitration, international adjustment of all national troubles. Did the holy prophets of God predict both these conditions? They did. Does it look like both could be fulfilled? Does there seem to be some reluctance on the part of Russia to accept the situation? Does she refuse to take the wine cup of God's fury? Will she refuse to drink it? Read Jer. xxv. 15 to close of chapter. Read verse 28. That some of the nations would refuse is certainly implied. But One of stronger will and greater power has declared, "Ye shall certainly drink."

The Eastern question is now as never before the absorbing question. As many phases are being presented as there are changes in the figures in the kaleidoscope. No one seriously believes that any moral considerations hold Russia from the conflict, her ancient policy as outlined in the will of Peter the Great will govern her action. That Japan is in earnest and means business is shown by the purchase from the United States of twenty millions of dollars of war supplies. A spirit of patriotism animates the Japanese people who are clamoring for war. Like two athletes awaiting the call of the umpire, stand these two warlike powers, both realizing what such a conflict means. Both knowing that each will not only give but also take terrible punishment. Neutral parties see in the coming conflict the fearful work that modern warfare must produce. Gen. Miles recently said in reference to the war prospect that the world would soon witness one of the bloodiest conflicts in human history. Could the conflict be fought by the two powers at variance now, the struggle would be fierce and bloody, but even human wisdom can foresee a war that will involve the great powers of the earth. Whatever may be the result of the present movement the student of prophecy may look with increased confidence to see the literal fulfillment of the words of God's holy prophets. Each nation in the on-coming struggle will take its place in the order assigned by him who rules (disposes) the kingdoms of men, we can only conjecture the order in its details, for truly

God moves in a mysterious way, his wonders to perform,
He plants his footsteps in the sea, and rides upon the storm.
Deep in unfathomable mines of never failing skill,
He treasures up his wise designs, and executes his will.

And while to those who are watching the terrible upheavals in the world the thought may intrude itself "why all these terrible scenes should be enacted, what possible good can grow out of it." Listen again to the poet whose confidence in God cannot be shaken

His purposes are ripening fast,
Unfolding every hour;
The bud may have a bitter taste,
But sweet will be the flower.

Yes, amid the gathering storm, while gloom dark and dismal hangs like a pall over the earth, the child of God can look confidently to him who orders all things well, and has declared that all things work together for good to them who are called according to his eternal purpose which he purposed in Christ Jesus. Then why should the child of God ever despair? We are fully "persuaded that neither death, nor life, nor angels, nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature, shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our Lord." Then may we not with the poet say

Ye fearful saints, fresh courage take,
The clouds ye so much dread,
Are filled with mercies, and will break
In blessings on your head.

The dread proclamation of war has gone forth. The nations of earth have unconsciously responded in the mightiest preparation for war ever made in human history. "Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles; prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up. Beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruning hooks into spears; let the weak say I am strong." What remains in this prophecy that it is not now fulfilled? You will notice the marginal rendering is "sanctify" war, that is set it apart as the saving power or preserving power of every nation, and truly this has been most literally fulfilled. Even in our own peaceful country this idea has been emphasized by the "strenuous" president of the United States in his advice "to use soft words but at the same time to carry a big stick." Yes, "soft words" backed up by mighty iron clad war ships will no doubt have some influence upon nations. Then if Christ's coming was to be at a time of lutense activity in every human department, social, financial, industrial, if warlike preparations far exceeding any thing in human history are now going on all over the world where is the excuse for the scoffer? And to these evidences others must be added. "The social and financial phases of the signs of Christ's coming" will be given in an article following.

Table Talk.

RICH IN GOOD WORKS.

This is a faithful saying, and these things I will that thou affirm constantly, that they which have believed in God might be careful to maintain good works. These things are good and profitable unto men. Titus iii. 8. Brothers and sisters, what are good works? They are works that are done from a love to God and Christ. A love which causes us to obey his commands, a love which causes us to live a godly life, following the Christian virtues outlined in 1 Peter i. to be meek and lowly and longsuffering and gentle, to love our neighbor and to love our enemy, to visit the widows and the fatherless, to assemble ourselves together, to present our bodies a living sacrifice, to be living epistles of the Word, to study to show ourselves approved unto God, to suffer persecution, to preach the gospel, to shun profane and vain babblings, to be sober, nor a love of filthy lucre, etc. The cause of these good works is primarily the love of God to man, as causing us to love him. Herein is love, not that we loved God but that he loved us and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. 1 John iv. 10. Yet it is actually our faith in his Son which produces these works. Here you see we have "faith and works." Faith without works is dead. But by works is faith made perfect. James ii. Brethren, are we abiding in Christ, are we holding fast the doctrine of Christ? Do we follow the example of Christ? Do we mind the injunction to beware of covetousness? Do we remember our stewardship? Are we diligently seeking every occasion to show our love to Christ? Are we daily resisting the influence of a selfish spirit? What are we seeking first, our own things or those of Jesus? My prayer is that we may all be rich in good works, that we may gain a place in the coming kingdom of God.

GEO. NEILL.

It is the Father's good pleasure to give the kingdom unto the little flock, this means the overcomers. Jesus said, He that overcomes will I grant to sit down with me on my throne, even as I overcame and am set down with my Father on his throne. To be an overcomer we must put away self, and God's will must be first in every thing. When the young man came to Jesus saying, Good Master, what must I do to be saved? Jesus told him, Go sell that thou hast and give to the poor. The young man went away sorrowing, he said he had kept the commandments from his youth up, but when he was commanded to give up his riches it was hard for him to overcome. It is plain that to be an overcomer one must even sacrifice not only a little. Oh, dear brother and sister, how many are sacrificing any thing for the blessed Jesus, who bought us with his precious blood? Can we be overcomers and sit quietly down while thousands are perishing all around us? If we cannot preach we can hold up the hands of those that can, and if we do all we can to hold up others we are improving our talent whether it be one or ten, for we each have a talent and if we hide it in a napkin we will never be an overcomer. Then, oh the awful doom, Depart from me. But, dear ones, let us each be an overcomer, that it may be granted us to sit down with Jesus on his throne, even as he overcame and is set down with the Father on his throne. Let us join in saying, Come Lord Jesus and come quickly.

Falsehood in Dealing.

"Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hopocrisy and iniquity."

The robberies of mails, the frequent burglaries of stores and dwellings, the holding up of men and women who are a little late in returning to their homes in the great cities, the stopping of stages and trains, and the great and appalling bank defalcations of the day, point to something radically wrong in the training of our young business men, and it is our duty as Christians to ask wherein the wrong consists. We are "the light of the world," and our "righteousness must exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees." We must not only "outwardly appear righteous unto men," but must also be all clean within. We must take heed lest our example in little dishonest dealings and acts, do not lead others into deeper sloughs of dishonesty. If we are dishonest we sanction dishonesty.

Christian (?) men in business often do and say things that stamp them as false to the very core. One of our neighbors went to town one day to buy a pair of shoes. They were to be 5's over an E last, but instead of telling her honestly that they were out of that number, they gave her 6's over double E last—a shoe which she could not wear at all, but was obliged after repeated trials, to give away. I then went for her, telling the merchant's clerk of the mistake (?) that had been made, and charged him over and over again to be sure and give me the right number, but when I carried the shoes to my neighbor, we found that the same trick had been repeated! Coats of over size are tried on and pinched up in the back to make the customer think the fit is perfect! Blouses and overalls of unsuitable sizes are sold to small men, who go about in them, looking dowdy and uncomfortable, and feeling all the time as if they had been robbed, as indeed they have been.

A whole suit of Sunday clothes was put off on my husband, as custom made, and of perfect fit, when the vest looked like a little boy's vest and the coat stuck out behind, much as if a bustle had been placed beneath it! He always felt out of fix when wearing the suit, and was happy when it could be laid aside. It is such practices as these that train younger men in dishonesty. And dishonesty is like a pestilent weed; sow one seed, and it will grow and scatter its seeds by the million. The seemingly small acts and words of falsehood bring forth a fearful harvest of corrupted, iniquitous men, who will not scruple in the end at taking that which is not their own, be it in bank, house or store. A lie told in business is still a lie. No excuse can palliate the telling of it. The desire of gain, the anxiety to sell, the fierce competition of rival tradesmen, will not change the lie into truth. He who tells it blackens his soul, sears his conscience, lowers his reputation, destroys honesty and truth among men, takes away his right to the name of Christian, and loses not only custom, but eternal life. Men will go elsewhere to deal when they have been tricked by merchants in this manner.

A woman asked a merchant of our town "If he had good cider vinegar?" He said, "Yes," and she handed him her jug to be filled. In passing it to the clerk he said something in German, supposing the woman to be ignorant of that language. The clerk had been ordered to mix acid vinegar, that could not be sold, with the cider vinegar! The woman understood every word! Would she go back to that store again? And he a Christian (?) merchant! What would Jesus do in such a case? Do as he would have others do unto him. The outward righteousness and the inward lack, is at the bottom of all our troubles. We pretend as a nation to keep God's law, but keep it not, neither in letter nor in spirit. The sermon on the mount no longer governs even professed Christians. We are sowing to the wind and are reaping the whirlwind. The hidden iniquity is bursting forth like a lava tide from a volcano, and threatens to overwhelm us if it is not stayed. Come Lord Jesus, and come quickly!

S. ROXANA WINCE.

To the Brethren in Ohio.

I wish to once more call attention to the fact that the Ohio State Conference has made it possible for the isolated brethren to hold meetings. The brethren collectively throughout the State are helping you to do that which would be a great tax for you to do alone. One month of 1904 is in the past. I would suggest to all who are desirous of holding up the gospel of the kingdom, to this moment ask yourself this question, Could I find a place to hold a series of meetings? I am sure you can. Then put your shoulder to the wheel and help carry on this work. Awake to the fact that you are one of God's children. With this privilege comes responsibility. Our Savior explains the parable of the sower, stating plainly, "He that received seed into good ground is he that heareth the Word, and understandeth it, which also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth some an hundred, some sixty, some seventy. We have turned from idols to serve the living and true God."

Will the language of the apostle to the church at Thessalonica apply to us? They (the apostles) thanked God without ceasing, for their works of faith and labor of love, and patience of hope, "And ye become followers of us, and of the Lord, having received the Word in much affliction and joy of the Holy Ghost, so that ye were ensamples to all that believe in Macedonia and Achaia." How Paul? Tell us how they were ensamples? "For from you sounded out the Word of the Lord." Where? "Not only in Macedonia and Achaia, but also in every place your faith to Godward is spread abroad." They (the brethren at Thessalonica) themselves "show what manner of entering in we had unto you, and how ye turned from idols to serve the living and true God." And what else? "And who wait for his Son from heaven." Do you not see there is something to do besides wait? Yes; we must labor and sound out the Word in every place, so that our faith to God-ward is spread abroad.

Brother Neill returned from his first trip, Dec. 22, and began a series of meetings here in Salem, Ohio, conducted by himself and wife. The meetings were interesting throughout, good attendance with marked attention. We ourselves feel much benefitted by these meetings, and hope others may enjoy some such feasts.

Yours in hope of eternal life, when Jesus comes.

Seed Sown by the Wayside.

"A sower went forth to sow; and when he sowed, some seeds fell by the wayside, and the fowls came and devoured them up." Matt. xiii. 4.

A seed is one of the most wonderful things God has made. It contains great possibilities. Take the mustard seed for example—the seed which Christ used to illustrate the kingdom of heaven. Hold it in your hand and examine it. It is quite a common looking seed—small and round and to all appearance there is no life in it. But take that same seed and plant it in the ground and under favorable conditions it will spring up and become the greatest among herbs.

Jesus here represents the word of the kingdom by a seed—"When anyone heareth the word of the kingdom and understandeth it not," etc. This was the seed which fell by the wayside, and the fowls of heaven came and devoured it.

Our Lord's own application is found in ver. 18: "When anyone heareth the word and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked (one) and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart. This is he which receiveth seed by the wayside."

Notice, he received the seed in his heart, but he understood it not. Now we read that with the heart man believeth unto righteousness, and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation. The word must be planted in the heart and thus the affections are drawn to God; but it is also important that the word sown should be understood; that the brain, the intellectual nature, be quickened into spiritual activity and growth. The apostle in writing of Israel says in Heb. iv: "The word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard." "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Evidence appeals to the mind and not the heart. We determine the truth concerning a matter by the evidence presented in its support. So the evidence must be weighed concerning the word of the kingdom in order that the word preached may profit them that hear it.

Here, is a lesson for the teacher. In teaching the word, present the evidence in its support, that the mind may be able to grasp it intelligently and that the results may be lasting. Do not try to develop the emotional nature and the affections at the expense of the intellectual. Some one has said, "Educate a man's head alone and you have an infidel; educate his heart and you have a lunatic: but educate his head and heart and you have a Christian."

God doesn't want us to be one sided Christians. We have within us a capacity for knowledge and God has provided means by which we may attain knowledge. The highest knowledge of God; next, we might put the knowledge of man; and then the knowledge of God's relation to man and man's relation fo God; and of man's relation to his fellows. Pope said: "Know then thyself, presume not God to scan: the proper study of mankind is man." But we cannot understand man until we know something of God. All we know of God is revealed in his Word. Then how important that we receive the word in our heads as well as our hearts; that we understand the word of the kingdom.

Jesus said, "Ye shall know the truth, and the truth shall make you free." But you have doubtless seen people who professed to be enjoying the freedom of Christ and claiming to be filled with the Spirit, and yet they had not sufficient understanding of God's Word. Presently some wicked one comes and catches away that which was sown in their heart and they are again without hope and without God in the world. Peter says, "Sanctify the Lord God in your heart and be ready to give to every man that asketh you, a reason of the hope that is in you, with meekness and with fear." How can you give a reason unless you understand the word which tells of the hope?

What we need to-day is more knowledge and spiritual understanding. This was Paul's desire for the Colossians. He said to them: "We give thanks to God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, praying always for you since we heard of your faith in Christ Jesus, and of the love which ye have to all the saints; for the hope which is made up for you in heaven, whereof ye heard before in the word of the truth of the gospel; which is come unto you, as it is in all the world; and bringeth forth fruit, as it doth also in you, since the day ye heard of it, and knew the grace of God in truth...For this cause we also, since the day we heard it, do not cease to pray for you, and to desire that ye might be filled with the knowledge of his will, in all wisdom and spiritual understanding." Then he gives the reason why he desire this for them—"That ye might walk worthy of the Lord unto all pleasing, being fruitful in every good work, and increasing in the knowledge of God." By this means we become grounded and settled so that we are not soon moved away from the hope of the gospel.

This is the lesson that comes to me from Jesus' words concerning the wayside hearer,—the lesson of understanding the word and of being established in the truth.

Let us then give heed to the word of the kingdom and seek to understand it, so we can say with the beloved apostle John, "We know that the Son of God is come, and hath given us an understanding, that we may know him that is true, and we are in him that is true, even in the Son Jesus Christ. This is the true God and eternal life." —Harry L. Babcock in Herald of Life.

Are we on the threshold of a war which will involve not only Russia and Japan but the whole world—a war beside which the barbarities of the past are slight in comparison? Alexander's ambition was to conquer the world as he then knew it, Napoleon's mind held a fixed plan equally vast, and to-day those who understand Russia's policy see in it far more than a contest over a strip of Chinese territory. No subject can have greater importance, and the analysis of the situation by John Brisben Walker in the February Cosmopolitan astounds the reader with the monstrous results predicted.

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor,

The Power of Action.

It seems to us that if the individual members of the professed church of God were awakened to recognize the responsibility which their sacred vows involve, they would astonish the world. Is it a marvel that the world in a vaunting tone is reproaching the church for the slumbering condition in which it is found today, while great numbers of her membership are wholly indifferent to the alarming increase of sin and wickedness on every hand, and so few seem to be interested in the salvation of the many?

Yonder you see a professed saint who claims to be wholly sanctified, having experienced the second blessing and complete filling of the Holy Ghost. He tells you that he is a peculiar person, and in a special manner made so by the amount of religion which he enjoys, and attempts to prove to you from the Scriptures, that his sort are called a "peculiar people, zealous of good works." He says that he bears his daily cross, and is at war with sin, the world, the flesh and the devil, but to all outward appearance he leads an ordinarily easy life, and differs little from the common people of the religious community; he seems not to trouble himself about arousing the sinner to see his lost condition, but contents himself in proclaiming his holiness, and what the Lord has done for him; hence he makes no impression upon those who listen to his boastful claims to a sanctified life, while his conservativeness calls from the ungodly scorn and reproach. This class of Christians talk much, but do comparatively little to spread the gospel outside of their narrow limits.

On the other hand it is apparent that the majority of the professed people of God at the present time are so much like the people of the world that they have no power to arouse the lost to see and feel their need and danger. The line of distinction which marks the boundary between the church and the world has become extinct, being buried by pride and worldliness. Jesus said, "And because iniquity shall abound the love of many shall wax cold. But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved."

The seal makes no impression upon cold wax; and is it a marvel if a cold, worldly church makes no impression upon the world? "Like begets like," and certainly "the stream cannot rise higher than the fountain." Again, it is a noticeable fact, that many who claim to hold the the truth in its purity, hold it in a negative state, and practically lag far behind those who distort the truth. What is most needed in these days of fables and fiction is action, power, love and zeal, set in motion by the Holy Ghost. Some one says, "Oh, I cannot do anything, I have no influence; nobody will take any notice of what I say or do; and if the masses go to ruin I am not responsible. I have all I can do to look after myself, and am still in doubt whether I shall be saved or not." Alas! there are too many of this sort in the church to-day.

Dear reader, do not try to shift your responsibility and personal duty upon the shoulders of another. No matter who or what you are, if you are the Lord's child he has a place and work for you. He has given you your sphere, and yours only; and unless you fill it, it will remain unoccupied. Dear friend, you can do something, however small, by trying.

Some time ago the writer read of a Sunday School superintendent who became very anxious that his school should undertake some active work to make the institution more interesting and profitable. He asked the children if they would not promise to bring a new scholar with them on the next Sunday. Several responded with a whisper, "I'll try what I can do." One little boy of the class went home to his father and said, "Father, will you go to Sunday School with me next Sunday?"—"I can't read, my son," said the father with a look of shame on his face. "Our teacher will teach you to read, dear father," replied the son, with feeling and respect in his tones. "Well, I'll go," said the father. He went and learned to read, sought and found the Saviour, and became a great worker in the Master's vineyard.

Years passed on and that man had established over four hundred Sunday Schools, into which had been gathered nearly forty thousand children. Here we see what trying did. The boy's effort was like a tiny rill, which soon swelled into a brook, and finally became a great river. The boy's effort was blessed in the salvation of his father; and his father, by the grace of God, became the instrument by which nearly forty thousand children were brought under the influence of the gospel of our salvation.

"God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform."

Yes, God has many ways of guiding his people into active service, when the direction is left entirely to him. Sometimes he will close up all avenues except the right one, and leave us to decide whether we will go that way or not. At times he will so strongly impress the mind as to our personal duty that there can be no doubt but that he is speaking to us. "They that sow in tears shall reap in joy."

"He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him."

The order from the Master is, "Go into my vineyard and work." "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel."

"As we have, therefore, opportunity let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith" (Gal. vi:10).—G. W. Sederquist, in Crisis.

Broad-Mindedness.

We are constantly being told that Christians must broaden out in there theology. That our evangelical teachings are too narrow for the enlightenment of the twentieth century; that we must be more liberal if we would bridge the chasm between the church and the masses of the people. We are told, also, that charity should move us to be more broad and liberal, more sympathetic and forbearing with those who differ from us in theory and practice.

How often we hear: "It makes no difference what a man believes, if he is really sincere." If this be so, why should we search so diligently for the truth? And why spend our time and strength defending it?

The Savior says: "The way is narrow and few there be that find it." All this talk about the Fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of all men is a fascinating but dangerous heresy, a palatable but poisonous error. The Savior once denominated a class of high ecclesiastics and moralists "children of their father, the devil," and candidates for "the damnation of hell." The word says, "First pure then peaceable." Peace and charity, at the expense of purity and truth, is a costly commodity.

Let us be narrow as well as broad thinkers; close as well as free thinkers; conscientious, as well as independent thinkers. As one has said: "Charity is like Gabriel when she is in right relation to the truth, but she is like Satan when she falls from that right relation and becomes the apologist of error.

Please do not forget our financial needs.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. C. IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles mail will scatter ear almost invariably tell a letter with money it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Fruition.

We scatter seeds with careless hand
And dream we never shall see them more,
But for a thousand years
Their fruit appears.
In weeds that mar the land
Or helpful store.

The deeds we do, the words we say,
Into still air they seem to fleet;
We count them ever past,
But they shall last
To the dread judgment day.
And we shall meet.

I charge thee by the years gone by,
For the love's sake of brethren dear,
Keep them the one true way,
In work and play,
Lest in that world their cry
Of woe thou hear.

Notes By the Way.

My last notes closed with my work in connection with the church on the Red River, near Scotland, Arkansas.

My work being completed at that place, Bro. Jacobs and wife conveyed me by carriage, a distance of fifteen miles through a dense forest, to Center Ridge, Arkansas. In passing through those woods, I witnessed the terrible effect of a tornado, which passed through that country. Nothing could withstand the fury of that storm. The trees were mown down, and the path of the tornado as distinctly visible, as the path of a reaper through a wheat field. One can scarcely realize the power of a wind timt can twist around large strong oak trees, until the trunk of the tree is wrenched into splinters. After a brief visit with Bro. Snowden and family, I took the United States mail stage, for a distance of twenty miles to Plumville, Ark., where I remained overnight at the hotel. Early next morning I took the Fort Smith train for Little Rock, Ark., which is the capital of the State. It is a city of some enterprise and push, and contains many nice buildings. The city is built upon the hill sides, and gives a very pretty effect from a distance.

As I was boarding the street cars, I heard a news boy cry out, "Full account of the great fire in Chicago." I immediately bought a paper, and was shocked to note how six hundred people were so suddenly deprived of this life, while in quest of worldly pleasure. I was asked if any of my acquaintances were killed or injured in that fire? I replied confidently "No," as my people as a general thing do not frequent the theatre. It would grieve me to know that any member of the Church of God had ended their life in a worldly play house. Personally, if I had my choice, I would much rather end my mortal existence in a railroad wreck, while in the field proclaiming the gospel, than die in a worldly play house. Beloved in the Lord, keep away from such places, it does not become believers in the blessed hope.

Arriving at the Choctaw depot, I took the train on the Choctaw road for Magazine, Arkansas. I was met at the depot by Bro. Daniels and son, and conveyed by carriage to his home. I was there welcomed by Sister Daniels, whom I found to be a very estimable and kind lady. I also appreciated the acquaintance of their oldest daughter who is engaged in school teaching.

I preached in two different churches. The Baptist denomination prevails in Magazine, and they will not admit of any teaching that is adverse to the ile of the serpent.

The country surrounding Magazine is mountainous. Mount Magazine is the most prominent mountain between the Allegheny and the Rocky mountains. Its altitude is said to be nearly three thousand feet above the valley level. Snow was visible nowhere except upon its peak. Its snow cap glistened in the bright sunshine.

Dr. Daniels is a practicing physician in Magazine, and was kept quite busy during the week I remained in Magazine. The Baptists don't like to patronize him on account of denominational prejudice. Many preachers of Platonic philosophy have found their match in public debate with Dr. Daniels. He has written an article for THE RESTITUTION, entitled, "The Great Salvation," read it.

After a week's sojourn at Magazine, I took the stage for a distance of seven miles to Driggs, Ark. I was entertained while there, at the home of B. Jones and family. Driggs is situated in a small deep valley, completely surrounded by mountains and great hills, all covered with forest trees. They have built a union church house at that place. They cut out space in the side of a mountain, at its base and there built the house.

As I approached Driggs from the top of the hill, this snow-white church with its red-capped spire nestled among the hills, at the foot of a mountain, was a conspicuous and pretty object.

The Universalists have also just completed a neat church building, which is said to be the only one existing in the State.

I held meetings in the Union Church to fair audiences. They would have been much larger, but for an epidemic of sickness which seemed to prevail at the time I was there. I enjoyed making the acquaintance of Bro. Shelton and son.

Having completed my work at Driggs, I again took the mail stage for Paris, Ark. Railroads are very scarce in this new country, and therefore we have to patronize the mail stages to a large extent.

A portion of the trip I must say, was the most romantic and beautiful that mortal eye could rest upon. The stage was constantly winding among mountains covered with trees, with here and there a mountain of rock. One rock mountain was all covered with sharp spires of rock like a huge cathedral. A most perilous road was cut out on the side of a mountain. It seemed fearful to look from the stage down the mountain side into the valley below.

Arriving at Paris, I stayed over night at the hotel. Travelling by stage, and staying at hotels, to catch a train next day, is quite expensive, and draws largely upon the slender resources of an evangelist, proclaiming the gospel of the kingdom.

The next day I took the train for Fort Smith, Arkansas. I was met at the depot by Bro. Coleman. We have only one family of believers at Fort Smith. I did not preach at Fort Smith, but spent a short time visiting with Bro. Coleman and family. One of the buildings of the old frontier fort, still stands upon the banks of the Arkansas river. The city contains about eleven thousand inhabitants, and many handsome buildings. Bro. Coleman conveyed me in his carriage to view various points of interest about the city. We visited the National cemetery, where the Union soldiers are buried. We also visited a large cotton seed oil factory. As we stand upon the banks of the Arkansas river, we can look over the stream into the Indian Territory.

My visit being over, Bro. Coleman escorted me to the depot, to take the train for Hanson, Indian Territory. On arriving at Hanson, I was met at the depot by Bro. Turner, and taken to his home.

I am now in the red man's country. Not a foot of land in the entire Territory is owned by a white man. They have no Territorial government. The Indians are permitted to govern themselves. The white man is simply a citizen of the United States. No one is taxed a cent. There are no public improvements, no public roads, bridges, schools, etc. The land is simply the public domain, and the white man builds his log hut, or box shanty just where he wants to, he is nothing more than a squatter upon the public domain. As yet the United States government does not allow an Indian to sell his claims. The land is divided between five nations or tribes of Indians, viz: the Cherokees, Choctaws, Chickasaws, Seminole, and Creeks.

The Cherokee Indians run a school in Hanson. They also own a school house. The white man has nothing. The post mistress at Hanson is an Indian woman.

My meetings were held in the Cherokee Indian school house. The congregation of baptized believers at Hanson, number about twenty.

The gospel of the kingdom has already been preached as a "witness." We also have some Indian believers in the Blessed Hope, thank God. I am invited to my next appointment by a Choctaw Indian.

It is too laborious to give full details in a written report, but if I am permitted to visit you in your several Conferences, when I return home in the Spring, I will have a wonderful story to relate about the household of faith scattered abroad. Yours in love,

W. H. WILSON.

Table Talk.

FORGIVENESS

For if ye forgive men their trespasses your heavenly Father will also forgive you; but if ye forgive not men their trespasses neither will your Father forgive you your trespasses; and when ye stand praying, forgive if ye have aught against any, that your Father also which is in heaven may forgive you your trespasses. And be ye kind one to another, tender hearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you; and above all these things put on charity which is the bond of perfectness; and let the peace of God rule in your heart to the which also ye are called in one body and be ye thankful. Let the Word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom, teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord. And whatsoever ye do in word or deed do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him. If my people which are called by my name shall humble themselves and pray and seek my face and turn from their wicked way them will I hear from heaven and will forgive their sin and will heal their land. Blessed is he whose transgression is forgiven, whose sin is covered. Blessed is the man unto whom the Lord imputeth not iniquity and in whose spirit there is no guile. For thou Lord art good and ready to forgive and plenteous in mercy unto all them that call upon thee. Then came Peter to him and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me and I forgive him, till seven times? Jesus saith unto him I say not unto you until seven times, but until seventy times seven. Bless the Lord and forget not all his benefits, who forgiveth all thine iniquities who healeth all thy diseases, who redeemeth thy life from destruction, and forgive us our sins as we also forgive every one that is indebted to us, and lead us not into temptation but deliver us from evil. But that ye may know that the Son of Man hath power on earth to forgive sins. Then saith he to the sick of the palsy, arise take up thy bed and go unto thy house. We should not go to God asking pardon for our sins with malice or envy in our hearts. We should have charity and forgiveness toward brethren, for how could we ask God to forgive us if we forgive not others. So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you if ye from your heart forgive not every man his brother their trespasses. Judge not and ye shall not be judged. Condemn not and ye shall not be condemned. Forgive and ye shall be forgiven.

ANNIE BURTON.

CHRIST THE LORD.

"For unto you is born this day in the city of David a Savior, which is Christ the Lord. Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the days of Herod the king, behold there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem saying, Where is he that was born King of the Jews? We have seen his star in the east and are come to worship him." Christ was born to be King. He himself said, "Unto this end was I born, for this cause came I into the world." He was rejected and crucified, but was raised from the dead on the third day, and appeared unto his disciples who were grieving for the one they had hoped would redeem Israel. Now when they knew that he was risen from the dead, they were reassured that he was Christ the Lord or King of Israel. But he told them that he must first ascend unto his Father. And gave them the parable of the Nobleman going into a far country. But that he would return. That they should see the Son of Man sitting on the right hand of power and coming in the clouds of heaven. Yes, he will return with power, to take the throne of his Father David, and rule the world in righteousness. For he said unto this end was I born. And he commanded the disciples to go into all the world and preach the gospel of the kingdom and gave them power to do miracles. And he said these things are written that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ the Son of God. And that believing ye might have life through his name. Christ promises unto them that look for him a second time will he appear without a sin offering unto salvation. Then if he appears unto them that look for him how important that we look and wait for him. Christ the Lord will come with power to change the living and raise the dead, and they shall be priests of God and of Christ and shall reign with him a thousand years.

MARY KNOWLES.

The Name.

Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is none other name given under heaven among men whereby we must be saved. Then this must be a very important name, if this is the only name in the universe of God by which salvation can be procured. In other words, if the person bearing this name is the only one having power to save men "from death," then we certainly want to know what this name is, and who the person is that bears this name. Now, let us go to the great store house of truth that our heavenly Father has given us, and see if we can find what this name is.

In Acts ii. 38, "Then Peter said unto them, Repent and be baptized every one of you into the name of Jesus Christ for remission of sins." Now, dear reader, has Peter given us "the name?" He says, "be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ," but does not tell what the name is. Let us now go to the commission, xxviii. 19, here it is called the name of the Father and the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. But here again we are left in the dark in regard to what the name is. "Trio immersionists" claim there are three names in the commission. But Christ says name, singular and not plural. So it is one name belonging to all three, "Father, Son and Spirit." Now go with me to the Philippian letter, ii. 9, and see what we can find there. We read, "Wherefore, God also hath highly exalted him and given him a name which is above every name. Well, then, this name is the highest name in the universe of God. Now it seems that we might know what the name is. But let us go one step further, go with me to Hebrews. Here the apostle is speaking of Christ and his exaltation. And in the third verse he says, "Being the brightness of his glory and the express image of his person and upholding all things by the Word of his power. When he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high. He has purged our sins. Yes, dear ones, it was he that brought life and immortality to light through the gospel. It was he that poured out the sweetest life that ever graced this green earth. Then is he not the proper personage for God, the Father to bestow the greatest name upon? Verse 6, Let all the angels worship him. Verse 4, Being made so much better than the angels, he hath obtained a more excellent name than they. Now drop down to the 8th verse, and hear the words of the eternal Father to the Son, "But unto the Son he saith, Thy throne, O God, is forever and ever, a sceptre of righteousness, is the sceptre of thy kingdom. Here we find the Father calling him "God." But this is not the real name yet. But we will let the Father tell us what the name is. Turn to Exodus vi. 3, And I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac, and unto Jacob, by the name of God Almighty. But by my name "Jehovah" was I not known unto them. So we find the name is the family name, the name of the Father and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost. The name that we are baptized into when we are adopted into the family of God. Then we see what the apostle meant when he said, "Behold, what love the Father hath bestowed upon us, that we should be called the sons of God. Now, dear reader, the great question with you and me is, have we been adopted into this great name and family? If not, why not?

H. F. COMMIL.

Dear Restitution:

I am a little late in testifying for our blessed Master. But I have something so good to tell all, that it is like the wine at the marriage of Cana of Galilee, (the best is kept for the last of the feast.) We have paid the last cent on our church and we want you all to rejoice with us, and from the fullness of our hearts we wish to extend our thankfulness to all the dear brothers and sisters who have so cheerfully responded to our aid in helping clear off this debt from the church. We are so glad to have a house to worship the God of Israel in, and extend an invitation to any of the preaching brethren to call on us if traveling through this part of Iowa. Come and help build us up in the faith of the gospel of Christ's coming and kingdom. Unto God be all the glory.

Your Brother and Sister in Christ.

J. P. & M. ALLARD.

To the Household of Faith:

As our love feast is now on, through the kindness of Brother Underwood, we are allowed through the columns of THE RESTITUTION to tell each other of the goodness of our heavenly Father towards us. We have much to thank our Father for in the past year. We have all been blessed with health. My adopted son has had work to keep us in food and raiment. For all this and much more we thank the Giver of every perfect and good blessing. We enjoy reading from week to week the writings which are contributed to our paper by our Brothers Joblin, Neill, Zillmer, Woodward, Winco, and all the brethren who are doing so much to bring people to see the truth as it is in Jesus. It fills our heart with joy and happiness to read the many encouraging letters from our brothers and sisters scattered abroad. We think our paper is one of God's greatest blessings to us. What could we isolated ones do without it? The signs of the times are fast fulfilling. May we all so live that when our dear Savior comes he will answer, "Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the glory of the Lord." We ask an interest in all your prayers.

We remain your Sisters in Christ Jesus, awaiting the coming of our King and Savior.

MRS. SMITH & WATKINS.

Notice.

To the Brethren in Iowa:

I have decided to take up the Lord's work in Iowa, for several months at least and am ready to respond to all calls for meetings, funerals, weddings, or any other calls pertaining to the work of a minister of the gospel.

Address me at Fort Dodge, Iowa, P. Box 86.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres. Iowa Con.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

Mary C Smith	50
Mrs Lizzie Watkins	1 00

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

ANOTHER OFFER.

There is a general waking up among our people everywhere. Our public speakers are all busy, and calls are in excess of their ability to attend them. Many places want preaching at the same time, but must wait their turn. This shows a decided interest, and a desire among our brethren to sound out the Word to the yet unsaved. All seem to realize that the night is far spent, that the time to work is short.

Brothers and Sisters, our work is not well done, and is not ready for acceptance of God, unless we have done all we can—our very utmost. We cannot admit that it is our duty to do anything at all for the advancement of the Master's cause, without conceding it is our duty to do all we can—to make a sacrifice even.

Preachers of other denominations as well as our own, know and say that the best workers in a community are those who take and read their Church paper, and keep informed as to what is being done in the various departments of the work, and are thus interested in pushing along the car of truth.

The Managers of THE RESTITUTION are endeavoring to so conduct the paper that it will be a fit aid to the Evangelist in his work. We are trying to keep it clear from that contention that leads to mischief and strife. This is done by having certain well-defined truths which are taught in God's Word plainly, as a basis of belief, and by publishing articles that accord with these declared principles. Other outside subjects might be "investigated" as long as life and pencil and paper lasts, and no decision ever be reached, but we do not consider this a profitable work to engage in, hence do not ask for contributions on such subjects, and do not want them. Such are usually but the "opinion" of a man, and are often based on a mere inference at best.

This paper aims to teach the truth of the Bible, and the same is declared and believed in by our Church. We therefore believe it is a fit missionary to be sent out to the unsaved and lost of the human family. In order to make it possible for our friends to do more of this missionary work than ever before, we make this offer:

Any one sending us $10.00 may select 13 names of those not now subscribers, to whom we will send the paper for the year 1904. This makes a trifle over one-half regular price if taken in lots of $10.00 worth. You and the office practically go halves in scattering the truth of the gospel to your neighbors and friends. You who have money think of this. For $100 you can preach to an audience of 180 people over 200 sermons the coming year. Can you do better with that amount of money? You have a minister come to your neighborhood perhaps once a month, giving you two or may be three discourses each time—possibly 30 a year. When he is coming you invite your neighbors in to hear him. Suppose those neighbors have had THE RESTITUTION in their homes each week when the preacher was not there, and have read the articles, and are interested to hear more. Does not this increase largely the chances of the preacher being able to speak the very words that will start your friend on the way to the kingdom? Did you ever think of this matter? Will you not take it under consideration? We feel sure if you do you will not hesitate to go half partner with us in this work.

Who will send $10, $20, $50, $100 for this work? The best time to start it is now. Select your names and send at once, so they will get the rest of this year and all of next.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

Bro. P Neill and wife have closed a very interesting and profitable meeting at Salem, and have started meetings at Brush Creek, O. where they expect to be for some two weeks. While they are away their home church will be aided by Bro. Pate and Bro. Geo. Neill of Cleveland.

A most disastrous fire occurred at Baltimore, Md. commencing on Sunday and continuing for 28 hours. 140 acres of the heart of the business part of the city is burned over, the loss being estimated at $200,000,000. The lose of life was small, only one man being reported killed, though a number were injured.

At last the war has started. Many reports of battles are heard, but they lack confirmation. The Japanese are invading Corea and taking possession of all the southern part, while Russia is rushing her troops as fast as possible to get control of the region of the Yalu river. The fleets may play an important part in the next few days, as the Japanese have already taken several Russian merchantmen. The Russian fleet has passed outside the harbor at Port Arthur, evidently not intending to be "bottled up." No one can tell as yet any thing about the extent of the war, whether it will be confined to the two nations, or whether others will be drawn in. If we might hazard an opinion it would be this, Should Japan be successful now at the start it will last for some time, without the interference of any other power. Should Russia be successful at the start, and appear likely to be able to whip Japan, then the United States and England will interfere and demand the integrity of the Chinese empire. It is not likely that Russia will feel like resisting by arms such a demand from such a source, and the war would end, unless Russia should enlist on his side the German empire, and take courage from that. However, this is but guess-work, and not news. We will endeavor to keep posted as it progresses, and give what is reliable information.

Our Burden Bearer.

When we came across the following lines in an English magazine, they were helpful to us, and we thought they might be helpful to many of our readers, and so concluded to extend their field of usefulness, if possible.

The little sharp vexations,
And the thorns that catch and fret,
Why not take all to the Helper,
Who has never failed us yet?
Tell him about the heartache,
And tell him the longings, too,
Tell him the baffled purpose,
When we scarce know what to do.
When, leaving all our weakness
With the One divinely strong,
Forget that we bore the burden,
And carry away the song.

IF.

The above may seem a strange heading for an article in a religious paper. Yet it is a Bible word, and is frequently employed in important connections. It is used in the same way as "grant, allow, admit, suppose." It introduces a conditional sentence or proposition: one not absolutely certain, but dependent on certain other things. One says, "I will do so and so, if I can." Here the performance of the thing promised depends on the ability of the person promising. Again, "He can, if he will." In this case the question is not one of ability, but of willingness to do, and the want of this element is the only hindering cause. I want to show the use made of this word in the Scriptures relative to our salvation. Speaking of the gospel, the apostle Paul said, "By which also ye are saved, IF ye keep in memory what I preached unto you, unless ye believed in vain." 1. Cor. xv: 2. "The gospel" which Paul "preached," which they had "received," and wherein they were "standing," had in it that potency which would "save" them, but only on condition that they "kept it in memory" (Marg. held fast). If they did not hold fast what had been preached, it could not save them: not because there was no power in it, but because that power was neutralized by neglect. The power to save was not originally in them, but in the gospel; yet they possessed the ability to either "hold fast" or "let slip" the things which they had heard. This is illustrated in the letter of Paul to the Hebrews (c. ii: 1): "Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip." "We" are they who "ought to give heed." Such an exhortation would be an idle play upon words if those who had heard certain things in the gospel could not neglect or let them slip. In this preaching those things had been brought to their attention; these they had received, impressions having been made upon their minds; and these impressions they were to keep fresh by frequent exercise of the mind with them.

All this is as true and as applicable today as it was then. Our salvation is conditional. I will append a list of Scripture passages in which this conditionality is set forth in the same way. "But Christ as a Son over his own house (was faithful); whose house are we, IF we hold fast the confidence and the rejoicing of the hope firm unto the end." Heb. iii: 6. "For we are made partakers of Christ, IF we hold the beginning of our confidence stedfast unto the end." Heb. iii: 14. "IF ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii: 29. "You hath he reconciled in the body of his flesh through death, to present you holy and blameless and unreprovable in his sight: IF ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard." Col. i: 21-23. "IF ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." John xv: 7. "Now IF we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him." Rom. vi: 8. "Ye are not in the flesh, but in the Spirit, IF SO BE that the Spirit of Christ dwell in you.....And if Christ be in you, the body is dead because of sin; but the Spirit is life because of righteousness. But IF the Spirit of him that raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead, shall also quicken your mortal bodies because of his Spirit that dwelleth in you." Rom. viii: 9-11. But IF any man love God, the same is known (acknowledged) of him." 1. Cor. viii: 3. "For IF we should judge ourselves, we should not be judged." 1. Cor. xi: 31. "And IF children, then heirs; heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ: IF SO BE that we suffer with him, that we may be also glorified together." Rom. viii: 16, 17. "But IF ye be led of the Spirit, ye are not under the law." Gal. v: 18. "IF ye then be risen with Christ, seek those things where Christ sitteth at the right hand of God." Col. iii. 1. "IF we be dead with him, we shall also live with him; IF we suffer, we shall also reign with him." 2. Tim. ii: 11, 12. "IF ye endure chastening, God dealeth with you as with sons; for what son is he whom the Father chasteneth not?" Heb. xii. 7. "IF ye fulfil the royal law according to the Scriptures: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself, ye do well." Jas. ii: 8. "For IF ye do these things ye shall never fall: for so an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." 2. Pet. i: 11.

In all the above cases the things promised can only be enjoyed or received when the requirements set forth in the conditional proposition are met. Where those conditions are not fulfilled, the promised blessings or favors are withheld. It is a fundamental principle of God's dealings with men to suspend the reception of his blessings and the enjoyment of his favors upon certain conditions. Not that by fulfilling the requirements men can earn God's blessings, but he requires hearty obedience to his will. His demands are reasonable, and therefore right. It is true, salvation is a favor, but it must not be inferred from this that it is indiscriminately bestowed without any regard to the principle of obedience. Salvation by faith and obedience has been made possible to fallen man. The preaching of the gospel with its requirements, the injunction of repentance, the command to be baptized into Christ, the provision for a holy life—all these are great and inestimable favors from the good God to his needy creatures; but neglect of these means of salvation will surely entail upon the neglectors the loss of the very blessings which his grace provided for them. He will not and does not save them notwithstanding such wilful neglect. Let us beware of wilful sin. Heb. x: 26, 27. Remember, "IF ye do these things."

A. H. ZELMER.

The Preciousness of Truth.

In these days, when there is so much said about liberality, charity and the union of all churches, there is great danger of forgetting the untold value God has set upon truth, and what it has cost to keep it in the world. The belief in God himself, is dependent upon belief of the truth. The very fact of his existence would soon be lost among men if his Word were not upheld as incontestibly true. And as Higher Criticism, and the teaching of all error, whatever that error may be, weakens the hold of the Bible on the masses, how important that we be "rooted and grounded in the truth and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel."

Some of the Advent converts in India say, "We do not know much of God's truth as yet, but we would die for what we do know." And that has been the spirit of true Christians in all ages. Truth, has been valued more than life. Gold could not buy the renouncing of it.

To sell truth, is to sell God to his enemies, it is to sell ourselves, to sell country, to sell the peace and uprightness of society, to sell eternal life.

We are not to "be carried about by every wind of doctrine," as so many are now allowing themselves to be carried, but are to set our feet firmly on the rock that future being is dependent upon faith in and obedience to Christ.

Man is mortal, and immortality is conditional. How much Adventists have suffered because of this doctrine, some having even died for their faith! They have been rotten-egged, have been stoned, have been spit upon, scoffed at, called all manner of names, been kicked and cast out of synagogues on account of it, and shall we now give it up, or if isolated, hide the light under a bushel, by uniting with the churches that our fathers came out of, giving our strength and our means to support the very error that they battled so long and so valiantly against? To stand on the side of truth, is to stand with God, to stand with error is to stand against him.

WORK.

Go work in my vineyard. Mat. xxi. 28. Dear ones of like precious faith, are we working in the vineyard of our Master as we should? There is a great work for us to do. It is high time for us to awake out of sleep, for now is our salvation nearer than when we first believed, the salvation ready to be revealed at the last time.

The signs of the times indicate the near coming of our Lord from heaven. Our redemption time. He will come and save us, if we endure to the end, grant us to sit with him in his throne if we overcome as he has. This is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith.

Yes, dear ones, faith that is expressed by action—works—then we will be blessed with faithful Abraham, not after or before him, if we walk in his steps.

Let us sound out the glad tidings of the coming kingdom, which is nigh at hand, to the fallen. There are different doors of opportunity open to us. Some can preach, others can invite and encourage their friends to come to the place of worship, and thereby direct dying ones toward the coming kingdom. Invite the strangers that come into your community to go to your house of worship; assure them they will be treated well, and do that. Tell about the good meetings you have, and get them interested, and so win them to Christ. We can all work in some manner for our dear Lord, and we will work, for we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works.

Annual Love Feast Letters.

Dear brothers and sisters, and readers of The Restitution:

We feel as though we ought to say a word for our Master and his holy religion. My wife and I have been trying for over fifty-four years to follow in his footsteps, although it has been a long while we are not weary of the way. The only regret is that we have not walked closer by his side, "And shall we turn back into the world? Oh no, oh no." We do not feel like giving up now that we are so near our journey's end. Brothers, sisters and friends, shall we all meet in God's kingdom on the new earth, and go no more out forever?

Your Brother and Sister,
MR. & MRS. W. D. THOMPSON.

Editor Restitution:

We had the pleasure of visiting Brother and Sister Clinkenbeard, with friends, neighbor, children and grandchildren, to commemorate their 50th marriage anniversary. It was a joyful occasion. The dinner was excellent. We passed the time with sacred singing, happy greetings and pious admonitions, with thanksgiving. All present seemed inspired with joy and delight. It does us good and makes us happy to be with those grand, good old people, whose faces are lit up with radiant smiles of love and good cheer. They have their lamps trimmed and are waiting and watching for the coming of our dear Lord. Their daughter, who lives with them, is a bright, lovable jewel, with all the Christian graces, and is only known to be loved and admired. Our best wishes to the Editor and all of like precious faith.

T. C. BLAKEY, M. D.

Dear Brother Underwood:

Please find enclosed my subscription to The Restitution, as I can not do without it. I celebrated my 88th birthday on the 22d of January, and have taken your paper ever since it has been published.

CARY NOBLE.

Dear brothers and sisters:

As the love feast time is here I wish to cast in my mite. We are admonished to speak often to one another, especially as we see the day approaching wherein our redemption draweth nigh. It is certainly a great comfort to know that there are few scattered over the land that know the truth. All the preaching we have is the Bible and the dear, old Restitution, with an occasional good letters to let us know that a few are waiting for our Savior when sickness and sorrow will have passed away. Yours, watching.

Obituary.

It is with deep sorrow we write to announce the death of Brother John Teague, which occurred very suddenly at the home of his daughter, Mrs. S. A. Nichols, Crowell, Texas, Jan. 18, 1904.

He was born in North Carolina Jan. 30, 1823, and spent several years of his younger life in Indiana. The larger part of his life was spent in Texas, he having moved to Wise Co. Texas, in its earliest settlement.

His long life was that of a devoted Christian. He had been for many years a firm believer in the teachings of the Church of God, and looked forward with great confidence and hope to the coming of Christ, when he will establish his kingdom on the earth.

He leaves an aged wife, three sons and two daughters, to mourn his loss. The funeral services were conducted by Brother Emery. Scriptural reading 1 Cor. xv. 12, after which the body was laid to rest in Crowell cemetery, to await the great and final awakening when he shall be called forth from the grave, with all others who love his appearing.

May God comfort the bereaved.
His granddaughter,
JOSIE NICHOLS.

Many times we cry out if opportunity presents itself we will do something in the work of the Lord, forgetting that if the opportunity comes not it is generally our fault. There are many golden opportunities that pass by unseen, because we are accustomed to close our eyes to the common-place opportunities that so often come.

Generally speaking, those who have accomplished most in life have been those whose opportunities have been seemingly very limited; while on the other hand those whose opportunities have seemed greatest have generally accomplished the least. We might look at some of the characters that rise before us as we study the historical books of the Scriptures. Look at Joseph, who was sold as a mere slave into Egypt. Where were his hopes of a great and wonderful career? His last hope must have died when he found himself a slave in Egypt. But if we watch him a short time we see him rise above the surroundings and come into favor with the king because he had not lost heart. He had done a favor for a person that had also promised to intercede for him when he should go free, but when freed he forgot all about Joseph and his promise to him. But after all we see him rise to be premier of Egypt. He is master of his circumstances.

Look at Moses. He must, even at the age of forty years, go out to the seemingly barren life of a herdsman and forty years later he is still there. How many would have given up in despair. Not so with him. He also rose above even his impediment in speech, to lead the host of Israel out of bondage and become the greatest general the world has ever known.

Look at Daniel, a captive in Babylon. It seems almost a miracle that he could rise above his surroundings. But we soon see him at the head of national affairs in that old country.

Then we might take a glance at another mighty man, who was many times made a prisoner, yet when all other names of that kingdom which imprisoned him are going down in shame, that of "Paul the aged" stands out in letters bold, as a mighty man, and one who did much in the face of all opposition. As we see him with irons on his hands and feet, surely we must think he is defeated in the purpose of his life. But no: far from it; for whether he lives or dies it is to the glory of God.

What golden opportunities were those of Belshazzar. How many openings there were while he was king for him to have achieved fame and honors that would never die. But with all his advantages he died in despair and defeat, and his name and his reign are covered with disgrace.

Think what might have been the history of Nero. He had abundant opportunities for gaining the favor of God and man, and placing his name in the annals of history as a great and good man. But how has his name been presented to us and our children? There are great cathedrals and buildings that bear the name of Paul. That name has been honored in thousands of ways since he closed his eyes beneath the axe of Roman power. But he who stood at the head of Rome, what about his name? I have seen only dogs and horses that bore the name of Nero.

We might turn our attention to some of the people who have lived nearer our own time; but we will leave you to think of them. Picture in your own mind the men and women who have accomplished much in the world and ask concerning their advantages in early life, or even later years. It is not lack of opportunities but lack of firm resolution that unfits us to accomplish something. The old year is dead; its privileges and opportunities are also gone, never to be recalled. Age is advancing upon us. Perhaps the better part of life so far as years are concerned is gone, and we have been promising the Lord that at some day we should start in earnest in this work, and so far we have not done so. Then as the new year dawns upon us, with all that it holds, let us determine that we will now commence the work of our life.

I don't know what you can do; that is for you to decide; but rest assured there is more for you to do than to go to church and hear the preacher. Too many think this is the end of Christian duty, and stop at that. It is not the place of Christians to go to church to hear the sermon, but they should go there to worship God. Some will not go unless the preacher suits them, or the services are as attractive as they should be. The preacher should always try to reach the unsaved, and the prayers of every loyal worker should be with him in the effort. Though he may not preach as you would, yet he is doing his best and it is your duty to ask God to bless the effort.

I heard a man say not long ago: "We go to church and resolute, resolute; and then go out and hoot-a-toot, hoot-a-toot." Let's not make many resolutions, but what we do make let us be sure that the cold wind of March does not kill them. What more can we say? Need we come again to you with a specific message? Our hearts are sometimes made heavy as we see so many incapable attempting to do and failing in shame and defeat. Let us find something to do and not ask if we can possibly get along without doing it, but rather, shall we or any one else be the better for our doing it? and then be, that be decisive.—W. M. Stuckey in Our Hope.

The Bible.

No book claims so much for itself as the Bible.

No book has so mercilessly assaulted all evil as the Bible.

No book has been so bitterly hated or so dearly loved as the Bible.

No book has met with such opposition from men of all ranks, from fire, edict, and denunciation as the Bible.

No book stands to-day translated and studied in so many different languages by so many different people, of so many different grades of intellect, as the Bible.

It claims for itself Divine authorship. 2 Tim. iii. 16.

It claims for itself eternal existence. Psa. cxix. 89; Matt. xxiv. 35.

It claims for itself absolute truth. Psa. cxix. 151; John xvii. 17.—Lyman R. Sweet.

Get to Work.

Amongst a heap of lumber there lay an old time piece; its face was very dirty and its hands begrimed. Certainly its coat needed dusting, and altogether there was room for improvement. On looking inside, what a scene presented itself! Every corner was crowded with cobwebs, and all the cogs were clogged with the nests of spiders. The wheels and mainspring all seemed to be in order, and yet the clock had stopped, to all appearances, "never to go again." Near at hand was the key, and soon the machinery was wound up, and after a good shaking, click, click, click went the escapement, whiz, whir went the wheels, and hurry-scurry went all the spiders too. In two minutes what a change had taken place, and all because the clock was set in motion. Now came the time to "wash and brush up," and once more the hour of day was seen pointed out on the white faced dial by bright shining hands. No longer was the interior a home for spiders and cobwebs, for action drove them out.

Arise, good friend, and yet to work if you wish to cast out doubts and fears.—Spurgeon.

The Good, Kind World.

A little girl was trying to get her small brother across the chaos of lower Broadway. He clung to her with one hand, and with the other clasped his ragged jacket as if for courage and support. Twice they started to cross and twice retreated. The girl looked about her for help. She let several unpromising people pass her. Then, says the New York Mail and Express, she found a friend.

A shuffling, limping, ignorant negro boy approached, whistling thoughtlessly. She saw something in his face that other people did not see.

"Please won't you help me'n my brother 'cross the street?" she asked with confidence. The negro smiled charmingly. A genuine lovely look came over his dirty face.

"Come on, kid!" he said, seizing the small boy by the hand, and plunged ahead among the cars and horses, the two in tow behind him. They ran on without looking round, and he returned singing unconsciously the popular song: "Everybody's awful good to me!"

Any teaching which relies for its support chiefly upon human reason and logic, and which seldom refers to Scripture except for the purpose of making explanations of apparently conflicting passages, is on a very shaky foundation.

Education embraces more than is commonly supposed. It not only implies the cultivation of the intellectual faculties, but shows good breeding and true refinement.

Poetry.

I Can Trust.

"I cannot see, with my small human sight,
Why God should lead this way or that;
I only know that he has said, 'Child, this is the path'
But I can trust.

I know not why my path should be at times
So straightly hedged, so strongly barred before—
I only know God could keep wide the door;
But I can trust.

I find no answer often when I cry
With questions fierce and subtle on my way,
And often have but strength to faintly pray,
But I can trust.

I often wonder, as with trembling hand
I cast the seed along the furrowed ground,
If ripened fruit for God will there be found;
But I can trust.

I can not know why suddenly the storm
Should rage so fiercely round me in its path,
But this I know—God watches all my path,
And I can trust.

I may not draw aside the mystic veil
That hides the unknown future from my sight,
Nor know if I am safe in the dark or light;
But I can trust.

I have no power to look across the tide,
I can see while here the land beyond the river,
But this I know, I shall be God's forever;
So I can trust."

In His Pavilion.

PSALM XXVII 5.

O God amid earth's sore distress,
Thy trusting people guide and bless;
And keep them safely from all harm;
Shield us by thy protecting name,
From pestilence, and flood, and flame,
From tumults, strife, and war's alarms

O gather us, thou King of kings,
Surely beneath thy sheltering wings,
Before the storms of wrath descend;
When sorrows like this world betide,
'Tis in thine own pavilion hide,
Our Savior, our Almighty Friend

Random Thoughts. No. 10.

Having been delayed for some time, I now proceed with Random Thoughts No. 10. We have seen that the locality of the kingdom of God will be under, not above, nor in even, but under the whole heaven, including the whole earth. And Jesus will be the great King, and associated with him will be the saints who will share with him in the government, being subordinate kings and priests with him. Having glorious bodies like the Lord's and will reign for ever and ever. And this brings us to my 4th item, Over whom will they reign or who will be the subjects in the kingdom of God? I remember some years ago listening to a "sermon" so called, from the text, "If we suffer with him we shall also reign with him." A few days later I met with the preacher with whom I was pretty well acquainted—a very pleasant gentleman, and we got into a conversation. I remarked to him that I listened to his discourse on Sunday, would he allow me to ask him a question? He very willingly gave his consent. I remarked that I did not know that I objected to anything he did say, but that if I had any objection it was to what he did not say. Said I, you will remember you told us that if we suffer with him (the Lord) we should also reign with him. Now the question I wish to ask you is, over whom shall we reign? If the Lord and his saints reign, they must reign over some body, there must be subjects over whom they reign, who are they? This to him was a new thought—he had never thought of it, so he began to think and say to himself, "Over whom shall we reign?" Why, said he, I suppose it must be over one another I remarked, this would not be very pleasant would it, according to what the Lord says, "He that overcometh will I give power over the nations, and he shall rule them with a rod of iron, as a potter's vessel shall he dash them to pieces? This was new to him as it is to most of our clergy to day, who believe we have immortal souls who go to heaven, but to those who understand the gospel of the kingdom of God this would not be new, as we cannot have a complete kingdom without subjects. I know many will sing, Oh, it will be glorious with Jesus reigning over us, thus conveying the idea that the saints will be the subjects, and yet the same party will sing on and say,

With thee we reign, with thee we rise,
And kingdoms gain beyond the skies.

All of which shows what vague and indefinite ideas they have as to God's purposes. And yet what can be plainer than this, that if the Lord and his saints shall judge, rule or govern the world—then the world including the people in the world will be subject to the Lord and his saints, and will be judged, ruled and governed by them. The kings and priests who rule will not be the subjects to be ruled or governed, nor will the subjects who are ruled and governed, be the kings and priests who rule, etc. No one occupies both positions. If we are the one, we are not the other, and if we are the other, we are not the one. I want my readers to know how to rightly divide or apply the Word of truth. What God says to the rulers is not said to the subjects, nor is what it said to or of the subjects to be applied to the rulers. I remember a man once saying, every word in the Bible is the Word of God, and is said to me. I asked him if what Jesus said to the Scribes and Pharisees, "Woe unto you Scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, etc. was addressed to him. I hardly think it was, but if I did think so, I do not think he would like to have been told so. But people do sometimes say of themselves, what they would not like others to say of them, nor would they like it if you sometimes believed what they say of themselves. But now to the question, who will be the subjects in the kingdom of God? I answer the people living in the world when and after the Lord comes. Especially at first the twelve tribes of Israel, but in time all the other nations will be subdued and become subjects in the kingdom of God. These will be all mortal and will marry and be given in marriage, to whom children will be born, and they will multiply and increase. And this at the same time they are being governed by the Lord and the immortal saints who will not marry, etc.

There are those who hold that the work of the saints during the millennium will be to raise from the dead all those who died in the ages past without having had the gospel preached to them, and to preach and teach the gospel to them, by which means all or nearly all we saved, and this is considered to be the great discovery of the 19th century! And if this were so, there would be no lack of subjects in the kingdom without marrying etc. and children being born, as I will show later. But I will not stop here to argue that point, farther than to say that I know of no word or promise of anything like the gospel being preached in the age to come to any who had lived and died without having heard it in the ages past. Of course gospel or glad tidings will be announced to the people who will live in the age to come, but I know nothing about its being preached then to people who lived and died in former ages.

Some people hold that when the Lord comes there will be two classes of people on the earth, the good and the bad; the good he will take to heaven, the bad (wicked) he will send to a burning hell, and burn up the earth and everything on it! But God's purpose is very different from that. Instead of God taking the good even, or righteous to dwell with him in heaven, he will remove his tabernacle from heaven, and dwell with man on earth, etc. True he will cut off the wicked, but the Lord with his saints or holy ones whom he is taking out of or from the world, will take possession of the kingdom and the dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven! Dan. vii. But all this will take time, I am inclined to think the thousand years! I do not think the thousand years (millennium) will be all peace and glory all over the earth, for a long time after the Lord's coming. True the kingdom of God, at first small, will be glorious, and like the stone, Dan. vii. will roll on, conquering one nation after another, consuming them till all be subdued, but at first the twelve tribes of Israel will be the subjects. Matt. xix. 28, shows that the apostles with the Lord will sit on thrones (not a judge's bench), judging, ruling, governing the twelve tribes of Israel! Then it follows that the twelve tribes of Israel will be subjects in the kingdom. According to Luke I. God will give to our Lord Jesus the "throne of his father David," etc., which shows that the same nation (Israel) over whom David reigned will be subject to the Lord Jesus. Now David reigned over the twelve tribes, and his throne must be for ever! 2 Sam. vii. 7-16; lxxxix. 3, 4; 36. 7; Jer. xvi. 14, 15; xxiii. 1-8; xxxiii. 14-26; Heb. i. 8. To the son thy throne, O God, it for ever and ever." And as David's throne is the throne of our Lord Jesus, and will be for ever and ever, so must the twelve tribes be for the same length of time. That this will be so is shown also from the fact that Jesus himself made the good confession (John xviii.; 1 Tim. vi. 13) that he was born to be a King, namely of the Jews, which confession cost him his life, for at that time the Jews as a nation would not acknowledge him to be their King, but urged Pilate to have him crucified, to which Pilate reluctantly yielded, and placed on the cross the cause or crime for which he was to die, namely because he claimed to be or was the "King of the Jews." And though as yet the nation of Israel has not acknowledged him as such, when or after he comes again they will. He will then be in fact "the King of the Jews." Now if he is or will be the King of the Jews, then the Jews will be subjects of the kingdom. I do not mean dead Jews—that is Jews that in time past have lived and died, that they will be raised from the dead to be subjects—but living Jews, now scattered among the nations, that they will be returned to the land of their fathers. Nor do I mean the identical persons that were carried away captive, but their children, or descendants, the identical nation of Israel, not the identical persons. Just as we so often read of Israel, where the Lord speaks of them as having brought them out of the land of Egypt, hundreds of years after the death of all the persons who were brought out of that land.

Perhaps this paper is sufficiently long, so I stop here for the present. More anon.

GEO. ELTON.

Signs of Christ's Coming.

Among the many forecasts of the future, that of the Apostle James describes the present social condition of the world so vividly, that students of prophecy cannot fail to see its literal fulfillment in the present state of society. Note the force of the language: "Go to, now ye rich men, weep and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you. Your riches are corrupted, and your garments are motheaten Your gold and silver is cankered, and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped together treasure for the last days. Behold, the hire of the laborers who have reaped down your fields, which is of you kept back by fraud, crieth; and the cries of them which have reaped, are entered into the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth. Ye have lived in pleasure on the earth, and been wanton. Ye have nourished your hearts as in a day of slaughter. Ye have condemned and killed the just, and he doth not resist you. Be patient therefore brethren, unto the coming of the Lord. Behold the husbandman waiteth for the precious fruit of the earth, and hath long patience for it, until he receive the early and latter rain. Be ye also patient, stablish your hearts, for the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." Jas. v. 1-8.

Now in order to a literal fulfillment of this prophecy two conditions in human society must be found.

1. A period of vast accummulation of wealth.

2. Intense suffering because those who produced the hoarded treasure are defrauded of their just rights.

Statistics show the total value of all property in the United States in 1891 was 66 billions of dollars. No wonder Gladstone characterized the present as a "wealth producing age." A New York statistician names fifteen persons and corporations in this country each of whom own over twenty millions of dollars. One hundred Americans average one and one-half millions annual income. Think of a man on a salary of one thousand dollars a year having to labor fifteen hundred years to earn one and a half millions of dollars.

Twenty-five thousand people in the United States own thirty-one billions of dollars. Twenty millionaires own one-sixth of the wealth of the country. The average mind does not grasp the idea numerically of a billion. How much is it? How long would it take a person to count a billion? Well if Adam had undertaken the task to count a billion he would not be one-third through his task. It requires over nineteen thousand years to count a billion.

Chauncy M. Depew said that fifty men in this country could control its finance and dictate its legislation. W. E. Gladstone once said in a speech at Liverpool, "There are gentlemen before me who have witnessed a greater accummulation of wealth within the period of their lives than has been seen in all the preceding times since the days of Julius Cesar."

Twenty-nine railroad kings recently met at the office of J. Pierepont Morgan to discuss railroad competition, whose capital aggregated three billion of dollars. How long since there was not a half dozen millionaires in this country? Now four thousand six hundred can be found, and the number is rapidly multiplying.

The following item is not given as late news, but as evidence. "In 1860 Vanderbilt made thirty millions, Jay Gould fifteen millions, Russel Sage ten millions, Sidney Dillon ten millions, J. R. Keene eight millions, and a few others who were comparatively bankrupt only made one or two millions," and with this I will put a later item: "Women in New York and Brooklyn were making shirts at six cents a piece, and finding their own thread." Is it any wonder that a pale emaciated woman in the city who made double-stitch seamed overalls at four cents each, whose four year old sickly child sewed the buttons, enabling her mother to make in seven days of fourteen hours each the paltry sum of three dollars and seventy-five cents a week, is it any wonder that she repulsed the missionary who came to tell her of God, saying "Why do you preach to me of God? I tell you there is no God for the poor, no heaven, no hell except this life, no devil except the men who grind the lives of women and children into dollars and cents."

Now while but a mere fraction of the evidence that this is the time in which immense treasures are being heaped together, consolidated wealth in the form of stupendous trusts to control every necessity and luxury of society, it certainly is enough to demonstrate the fact. No other time in human history has such a condition prevailed, and the fact that it is world wide is irrefutable proof that this is the time spoken of by the prophet, for the "things spoken of have followed, have indeed come to pass."

The first party in the case having been identified, let us look for the other party. Can we find in the world now a party that has actually produced the vast wealth of the present age?

We answer unhesitatingly Yes, for all the wealth in the world is the result of labor either physical or mental. Try it by the most rigid rules of logic, what gives commercial value to the coal in the mine, the lumber in the forest, the useful and ornamental in the arts, the products of earth that feed its teeming millions? The universal answer comes from every department, labor! labor! honest, manly and womanly labor, the current coin that God gave to purchase every blessing, necessity and luxury of this life.

Nihilists may reject it, idle wealth may scoff at it; covetous, penurious men may not accept it, but there it stands with God's divine approval and the hearty endorsement of every honest member of the human family. Had this truth been recognized the "irrepressible conflict" between labor and capital could not exist. But it cannot be denied that the elements that will enter into the struggle are assuming shape for the dread affray. But may not this disastrous result be averted? That no power, human or divine will avert it is certain, for the simple reason that the only remedy that could bring the antagonistic interests into harmony will not be applied. The greed of capital will not consent that labor shall have its proportionate share of the wealth that it creates. Labor demands this, has the right to demand it, both human and divine rights are the rightful claims of labor.

Just here let me anticipate an objection to the proposed remedy. The nihilist, the socialist, and the pessimist propose a redistribution of the wealth of community, giving an equal share to each, but such a distribution would not remedy the evil, for the same causes that have produced the trouble would in a short time reproduce it. Such a policy is based upon the misconception that "all men are created equal." Human history as well as divine disproves this sentiment. Different talents are possessed by different individuals. The one talent man is not the equal of the five-talent man. He may, and indeed ought to have equal rights to life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness, but neither in ability, nor in environments can it be truthfully said that all men are either created or attain to equality.

Now with this explanation the right of labor to its proportionate share of the wealth it creates is certainly a simple proposition if capital and labor constitute a partnership. But I want to make it plainer. In a given partnership A B C and D unite for their mutual benefit. A puts in one hundred dollars, B puts in two hundred dollars, C puts in five hundred and D puts in one thousand. The gain is ten percent. on the capital employed. Each man shares proportionately to the capital put in. Does justice demand that A shall have as much of the profits as D? He has an equal right with D to his own share, if he does not get it he is wronged.

"You would destroy all wealth there," says objector. Why certainly not. I can see no good reason why some men should not become wealthy. Wealth is certainly not necessarily a crime any more than poverty is a virtue. A rich man may be a good man, and a poor man may be wicked. But all who attain riches ought to be willing to answer two questions, "How did you get your wealth?" and "what use are you making of it?" All who heed the word of God know very well what to do if blessed with wealth, the instructions are plain enough. But where is the class whose united labors have built up the colossal fortunes in the world? How about their proportionate share? Has it been honestly paid to them? If so why this universal clamor for that of which they have been defrauded? It is not an exceptional case of an individual wrong that has been perpetrated, but the vast army of the world's active laborers who have banded together as one man demanding their just dues, their rightful wages, kept back by fraud, their hard earned money used to create interest on watered or fraudulent capital.

The last proposition submitted by the labor organizations proposes a "world" league. Will this startling movement constitute the world's army under the control of the "man of sin," the "Anti-Christ," the world's Godless and Christless ruler? How many recruits could now be found that would be eligible to membership with this atheistic leader? Twenty millions of Spiritualists stand ready to answer the roll call of the leader. Has not Spiritualism declared that they have scanned the vast universe and found no place for a God, have no use for a God, for they need no God, and unite with that other "fool" that said in his heart "there is no God."

But the inquiry may be made, Why cannot concessions be made by both capital and labor that will harmonize their interests?

1. Capital fears to grant concessions lest a dangerous precedent be established. A ten per cent. increase may be speedily followed by a twenty per cent. demand.

2. Labor or the laborer is becoming more and more intelligent, and as his intelligence advances his ambition to secure a higher position in society naturally grows, and seeing trusts formed by capitalists, and the advantages united capital has over labor, the laborer looks to the formation of a trust that will not only control capital, but every thing else.

Here the picture grows dark for capitalists are rendered powerless to do any thing, for capital like blood must circulate or death ensues. Then vast sums will be hoarded in vaults to rust or lose its value. Capital being withdrawn, labor the essential handmaid of capital, is powerless to manage the great industrial enterprises, and by the incorporation into its ranks of the worst elements in human society, becomes a vast mob of ungovernable creatures. Humanity shudders at the picture, and like Lochiel when warned by the seer of the bloody field of Culloden, told the seer to "shut out the sight by covering his face with his mantle," but dreadful as is the picture given by the prophet, we cannot, we dare not refuse to look upon it, for

'Tis prophetic light gives us mystical lore,
And coming events cast their shadows before.
Though dark and despairing our sight we may seal,
But man cannot cover what God would reveal.

Yes, when the time comes when human passions like a terrible volcano break forth, well may the world's wealthy men weep and howl, cast the gold and silver into the street to try to pacify a tumultuous mob made desperate by hunger and unjust treatment.

But dark and gloomy as the cloud is, it has a silver lining, and let us heed the apostle's kind injunction to be patient and have our hearts established, for like the husbandman that sees the in seasons events, signs of the coming fruits, so these signs indicate Christ's coming. Let us be ready.

J. F. WAGONER.

Report.

On Jan. 21st, we took the train for Sac City, to hold a few meetings. This is the point where Bro. Crowe was stationed a few years ago. Bro. Stevens met me at the train and took me to his home where we spent part of the day. Then with Sister Stevens as pilot we started out to hunt up the brethren and make short calls on each one, and get ready for the meeting in the evening. As we have no church of our own and could not get one of any other denomination, the brethren thought best to hold the meetings in their homes and as they all have large residences we got along very comfortably indeed. On Thursday evening, the 21st, we spoke to a very attentive audience of 25 to 30, also each night the balance of the week, and on Sunday we spoke twice, in the afternoon and evening. On Sunday afternoon the Baptist minister came and listened to our discourse on "The Blood of Christ." As we had succeeded in arousing some interest we thought best to continue the meetings awhile longer and I communicated with Bro. Almus Adams, of Omaha, Neb. and expected him to come and help us; but as he had promised to give a couple of lectures in the Baptist church at Omaha, he could not come until the last of the week, so we thought best to have him help us in an effort at Eagle Grove also, and arranged for a meeting to begin there Feb. 2, but on Jan. 31, the day he was to come he was taken down with a severe attack of LaGrippe. Thus we were left to do the best we could alone. We remembered that Jesus said, A prophet is not without honor except in his own country and among his own kindred. We postponed the Eagle Grove meeting until later, when we could get him to come and help us.

The brethren at Sac City are very much in need of a church building which they no doubt will have as soon as they are sure of regular preaching. We tried to impress them with the fact that in nine years at Eagle Grove we have paid for a $1000,00 church, and have had preaching a fair share of the time and have kept up a Sunday School continually and had only 5 or 6 to start with and most of them were women, only goes to show what can be accomplished if our hearts are in the work. The Sunday School I believe, has been the bond that has held the church together and kept up the interest in the work, the seed has been sown beside all waters and we know God will give the increase. If the brethren at Eagle Grove succeed in saving themselves and their own children they have accomplished a great work indeed. Brethren do you care whether your own family is saved or not? How can we feel that we have done our duty in spreading the gospel unless we make an effort and a sacrifice on our part. While at Sac City we met several of our Advent brothers and sisters and preached three nights in Bro. Gordon's home. Oh, if we could only have the faith that works by love, so that there would be no need to be divided into denominations, just all members of the Body of Christ, working together for the soon coming kingdom. What a glorious condition it would be.

We left Sac City with the best of feeling among our brethren, and we think that all realize as never before that we must have the unity of the spirit to accomplish the work we ought to do as members of the Body of Christ. $42.00 was subscribed towards the evangelist fund and five of the brethren subscribed for THE RESTITUTION.

We expect to start a meeting at New Hartford about the middle of February, as we thought best to begin after the other churches had closed their revival meetings. We expect Bro. Lindsay of Ill. to help us in this effort, as we are helping him at the present time in a series of meetings at Plum River and he has promised to help us back. We are wondering if the brethren in Illinois are going to give him sufficient support to enable him to continue in the work he has started. If this should reach the eye of any Illinois brother, let me say, do you realize what it means to give up a position that pays you $1200.00 when you are right in the prime of life and have to lay aside enough in the next ten or fifteen years to keep you in old age. Bro. Lindsay is right in the prime of life, and in a condition to preach the gospel better now than any other time in his life if he can devote the best of his time and talent to the cause, can you not afford to give him as good support as the world? Let these things sink down into your heart and as he sows unto you spiritual things, remember it is only just and right that he should reap of your carnal things. Brethren let us as never before work for unity of spirit, and a faith that works by love, knowing that this is the only thing that amounts to anything.

Pray for our feeble efforts, and may God keep us from the evil that is in the world. Yours, in Christ Jesus.

O. J. ALLARD.

Our Stake in Asia.

Our interests in the East and our influence there have never been so great as they are to-day. We are most conveniently situated, geographically, among the commercial nations, to supply Asiatic needs, and we also have most of those products for which a war would increase the demand. The only way, indeed, in which it would be possible to figure out a series of events ahead which might involve us in a general war, would be by supposing Russia and her allies to declare foodstuffs contraband of war, to injure England—a step against which our protest might be so earnest as to lead to action. Without considering any circumstances so serious and remote, it is easy to see how far closer we are to all the complications of Asia than we were eight or ten years ago. Taking the Philippines from Spain was one step, our watchful and determined attitude during the secretaryship of Mr. Hay has been another, the vast general expansion of our commerce has worked in the same direction, and the approach of the Isthmian Canal promises an enormous and sudden increase of Asiatic trade upon its completion. Our history in the future, as a power circling the globe with all the relations which commerce makes necessary, promises to resemble the history of England heretofore. This expansion means more money spent on warships, but, if we are to think the matter out in dollars, the cost in naval insurance, so to speak, will be but a fraction of profits from increased trade. It means also somewhat more possibility of our participation in any general war, and also of our having on our own account the little wars with weaker peoples which expansion usually implies. The reason that the anti-expansionists have had so little hearing in this country is not so much an overpowering sentiment in favor of expanding interests as it is the instinct which tells us that, however the advantages and dangers may be weighed, the process is made inevitable by the natural movements of commerce, and it is better to see that we move with intelligence than to oppose motion altogether.—Collier's Weekly.

Placid Indifference of the Korean.

While Japan and Russia dispute as to their respective rights in and to Korea, Korea as a nation looks on with absolute indifference. Of its 12,000,000 inhabitants, it is doubtful if more than a few hundred thousand have ever heard of the dispute. Certainly the two hundred thousand in Seoul display no interest in it. They pursue the even tenor of their way as though nothing whatever was going on that concerned them in the least. But this is the way the Korean takes everything.

Seoul has telephones and telegraphs: American missionaries have established one school and two hospitals there; Americans have also extended their little street railway to the river-port of Riobg-Sun, a distance of three miles, and are enlarging their electric plant so that it may be used for lighting: the Seoul-Fusean railway is being pushed rapidly along by the Japanese, and the French are making slow progress with the Seoul-Wiju line. All this, like the portents of war, leave the Korean absolutely untouched.

At present Korea's relations with both Japan and Russia are on the most friendly basis so far as any one can see. The only question actually pending between the Government of Emporer Yi and these two powers is the opening of Wiju and Yongampo to foreign trade. Russia opposes this, and Japan, the United States, and Great Britian demand it. No one in Seoul knows what the Korean Government thinks about it. Li Keun-thaik is supposed to be the dominating native influence, and there is no doubt that he is decidedly pro-Russian. He supported M. Pavlow, the Russian representative, in the Yongampo matter, and the Japanese claim that he has made a secret agreement with Russia to turn over the Korean army to Admiral Alexieff in the event of war.—Collier's Weekly.

Do You Hit?

A certain European writer discussing the question of artillery practice, says, "The artillery must in the first place hit, in the second place hit, in the third place hit." This seems to be a very good direction for those who make use of the armor of righteousness, and who go forth to fight the good fight of faith, and proclaim the Word of God in the ears of a perishing world. They are called to a warfare. They are not to entangle themselves with the affairs of the world, that they may please him who has called them to be soldiers. They are to take to themselves the whole armor of God; and among the weapons of their warfare they are to include the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God; and when they are thus equipped they are to be bold and manful, strong and steadfast, and they are to hit!

Christians are not called out merely for dress parade; their weapons are not for show and shine; they are engaged in real conflict with the powers of darkness, and deception, and evil, and sin, and it is their business to make every blow tell for the glory of God and the good of men. They are to cast down high thoughts, they are to bring men into subjection to the will of God. They are to use that Word which is as a "fire and hammer," to break in pieces the flinty rock, to melt hard hearts, to subdue stubborn wills, and to bring the souls of men back to their allegiance to their Maker.

The work of Christians is real warfare rather than a pompous pageant. The powers of darkness are all around them; the air is thick with lies, and falsehoods, and deceptions; men are drifting on in the darkness and going down to death unsaved and unwarned: and it is the business of the Christian soldier, standing as he does in the front of the battle, and meeting thousands and ten thousands of foes, to put them to flight by the Word of Truth, by the power of God, by the armor of righteousness on the right hand and on the left. He is likely to hurt men's feelings: what of it? He is liable to disturb men's slumbers: so be it. He is to do the will of God, and having done all this, to stand, knowing that while the world passeth away, and the lust thereof he that doeth the will of God abideth forever.—H. L. H.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money so t loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, FEB. 17, 1904. NUMBER 7.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christian King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Wait Patiently for Him.

God doth not bid thee wait
To disappoint at last;
A golden promise fair and great,
In precept-mould is cast.
Soon shall the morning gild
The dark horizon-rim,
Thy heart's fond vow shall be fulfilled,
"Wait patiently for him."

The weary waiting tire a
And test the stiffest souls
Low pleading whispered claims,
Dust and the chamel-cells.
Trust him to tune thy voice
To blend with seraphim;
His "Wait" shall issue in "Rejoice!"
"Wait patiently for him."

He doth not bid thee wait,
Like drift wood on the wave,
For fickle chance or fixed fate
To ruin or to save.
Thine eyes shall surely see,
No distant hope or dim,
The Lord thy God arise for thee;
"Wait patiently for him."

Communicated.

If By any Means. Phil. iii. 11.

It is thought by nearly all the leaders of the public mind in the so called Orthodox churches, that Paul's clearly expressed hope is found in the first chapter of this Philippian letter. That this hope which cheered and comforted him in his bonds was, that his soul would leave the body at death and go to be with Christ at the right hand of the Father in heaven. It is an easy matter to show one thing from the words on which this notion is based, i. e., such a hope is not clearly expressed by the language employed, and I will go further and say that such a hope is not even ambiguously expressed.

If Paul entertained the popular modern hope it is unaccountable that he no where in all his epistles stated it in plain terms, about which there could be no dispute, except by rank spiritualizes who have not a whit of regard for the laws of language, and the meaning of words. That he did not thus state it makes it logically sure that he cherished no such hope. He would, certainly, have been as plain touching such hope as are those today who promulgate it. In sermons, in lectures, in books of every description, in thousands of hymns, and on monuments above the dead, it is read and heard in the plain vernacular of the people, with no room to mistake as to what is sought to be expressed.

Another fact in connection with what I have already stated is: In the numberless mentions of death in the Bible, the popular hope finds no expression in clear terms.

This ought to be sufficient to raise a doubt in the mind, and set those who hold the common view to re-investigating the subject in dispute. The enquiry, prosecuted with an earnest desire to know the truth, cannot fail to land the honest mind on the side of Paul's plainly stated hope, namely, the resurrection of the dead, or from among the dead (Diaglott), the thing to which he wished to attain by any and every means in his power. He did not want to fail to reach the goal; and like the fleet-footed athletes in the Grecian games he pressed along the line, or race course, with his eye fixed on the prize to be awarded by the righteous Judge.

If by any means I might attain unto the resurrection from among the dead. Phil. iii. 11. Nothing, in the estimation of the Apostle, in the matter of labor, sacrifice and suffering, was too much to undergo in view of that resurrection which was to be the special privilege of believers in Christ; and which would introduce such into the enjoyment of the exceeding riches of God's grace in his kindness to his faithful servants. Eph. ii. 7. It was not the bare fact of this resurrection that cheered and buoyed up the mind of Paul in his hard experiences of his ministerial life, but the resurrection state, which embraces the sum of all future good.

The way he talks here shows most conclusively that his was not a divided hope, but the one hope of the gospel (Eph. iv. 4) based upon the one faith (iv. 5), in the one risen Lord. In fact, if he had cherished the hope that death would introduce him into the ineffable bliss of heaven as theologians teach and poets sing, the resurrection from among the dead would not have been with him the object of such deep and solemn concern as to call forth all his energies of body and mind in laboring, in traveling, in suffering; in perils among the nations, and among his own countrymen, that he might fit himself—make himself by the grace of God worthy of that special resurrection, the subjects of which cannot die, being children or sons of God, and equal unto the angels. Luke xx. 36. All that he expected to reap in reward for his self-sacrifices and his uncompromising devotion to the truth was focussed, in perspective, upon the event, so often mentioned in all his epistles, the coming of the Lord and the resurrection of the righteous dead.

Amid all the trials and perplexities of his eventful life in the faith, his gaze was intently fixed on the issue. He was looking for "that blessed hope, the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior, Jesus Christ." Titus ii. 13.

This hope is not centered on something to be bestowed on the immortal soul at death(?) In Paul's view there was no pledge nor promise of this. And the immortality of the soul was no part of his creed. Neither Paul nor any other inspired writer, had dreamed of Bishop Pierson's view of getting eternal life by installments. "Partial life eternal in the interval between death and the second coming of the Lord, and perfectional eternal life at his advent." According to Pierson's arrangement all that is embraced in the promises would come to the believer in two installments. This theory is not supported by any Scriptural proof. Paul says nothing concerning attaining unto partial eternal life at death, nor anything else in the shape of reward. What advantage to him or any one if there was to be no resurrection? Then those that had fallen asleep in Christ are perished. In case the dead rise not the Apostle could say "Let us eat and drink for tomorrow we die." This would end all.

Now if Paul's had been the popular hope of today, he would not have written in the strain of this third chapter of the Philippian letter. Going to heaven at death would have been his theme—very naturally under the stress of all he had to bear.

Who today, holding the common view, and suffering persecution as was he, and a martyr's death a few years ahead as a certain doom, would put such stress on the resurrection of the dead, believing this to be but the raising up of a tenement of clay, a house in no wise necessary to, either the existence or wellbeing of the soul; an organization that, according to Butler, is no part of one's self. The thoughts of such, in the main, and very likely altogether, would be of the rapturous joy and bliss of the soul separate from the body, entering on the heavenly state. Any allusion to the resurrection would be accidental. The difference between Paul and the advocates of the popular hope is so apparent that it seems they ought to see it themselves.

Adam Clarke, the great Methodist commentator, saw what little importance was attached to the doctrine of the resurrection in religious literature and in sermons, and remarked that in Paul's writings it is emphasized and insisted on as all important.

During the whole fifty years since I embraced the truth on the nature of man I have observed this discrepancy between inspired writers and the professed representatives of Bible teaching. In all cases where it was fitting to allude to death and the reward, the engrossing thought was the intermediate state, and whatever the imagination could connect with it. The soul was the man proper; so there was little or no concern about the physical organization which death lays in ruins. And why need there be any concern about the old garments laid aside by the hand of death? In the estimation of the followers of Plato the body is of little worth, and this only for a few years. Some going still further affirm that the body hinders and impedes the exercise of the soul's powers, and localizes its movements. So the poet sung

Death knocks off our chains, breaks up our cell,
And gives us with our God to dwell.

Preacher and poet agree on this point. Quite a good many now, unable to see of what use the body could be to the soul at any time in the after life, reject the notion that the body will be raised. These are consistent at least, for if the body can be of no use to the soul, but rather a detriment; and the latter possessing in itself every attribute of a perfect man, every capacity for enjoyment, and for usefulness, may I say, then why raise or rebuild the body?

Those who deny that the body will be raised, and those believing that it will be raised as a tenement or house in which the soul may dwell as a man dwells in a house, or wears his garment, are alike wrong. Both classes start out with wrong premises. Both contradict the Bible on the nature of man, and found their theories on a false definition of death.

It is suggested that these theorists go back and read carefully Gen. ii. 7, paying attention to the laws of language as they read. They are also invited to consider the penalty threatened before the fall, and the result of its complete execution after the fall. A consideration of what the serpent said will help to strengthen conviction as to where the truth lay.

I will close by relating some points:

1. Paul would not have written as he did if he had entertained the popular view of the nature of man.

2. None holding the popular view of the nature of man, to my knowledge have emphasized and insisted on the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead, as he did.

3. If he had held the doctrine of the nature of man, held almost universally by the so-called Christian world, he would have written it in plain terms somewhere in his thirteen epistles.

4. Those who hold the popular view speak and write it in terms so plain that there can be no mistake as to what they mean. Could not Paul have done the same? He did not; so it is safe to believe he did not hold such a view.

JOHN L. WINCE.

Table Talk.

BLESSED ARE THEY THAT MOURN.

The chapter in which these words are found states that when Jesus saw the multitude he went up into the mountain. When his disciples came unto him he taught them, saying—"Blessed are they that mourn, for they shall be comforted." These words were addressed to those who believed in him, and not to the multitude. So to the same class are the words in this article addressed.

Our "little flock" has been caused to mourn the loss of a worthy member of the body of Christ. One whose voice has ever been raised to proclaim the gospel of the Lord Jesus Christ, and whose acts have ever been in harmony with the life of our blessed Master. To so live is to be an overcomer, and when Jesus shall come to receive a crown of life, and reign during the ages to come.

What a blessed promise we find in the thought that we shall be one of the rulers in the kingdom of God. How anxious men are to have a part as rulers in the nations of the earth, but when spoken to about the future rulership they treat it as an idle tale. To mourn is to express grief or sorrow. Being in a state of grief. It precedes comfort. To sorrow for the unfortunate is natural, and to the extent we relieve their wants we are comforted. To extend the hand of relief to the worthy poor, is the duty of all of God's children. In this we find consolation. God causeth his rain to fall upon the just and unjust alike. He has given us this goodly earth that we may plant, cultivate and garner up against the winter of want. From our abundance we should help the poor, as Jesus fed the multitude. The Apostle says "If thine enemy hunger feed him; if he thirst give him drink." In this we imitate the example of him who gave himself that we might be comforted, and that all might have life.

Our Lord's life was one of grief. He was despised and rejected of men; a man of sorrow, and acquainted with grief. Surely he hath borne our griefs and carried our sorrows. If we believe [illegible] the above statements can we expect that our way through life will always be smooth, and we have no sorrow? If we do we deceive ourselves and come short of our blessed privilege of suffering with Christ, that we may reign with him.

Jesus said to his disciples, John xiv. "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God; believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am, there ye may be also."

Amid the sorrows and afflictions incident to this life we have the blessed consolation that Christ will come again and take his worthy ones unto himself. He was so anxious that we should believe this, that two angels stood by at his ascension and said—"This same Jesus that is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." We are further taught that the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God. And the dead in Christ shall rise first. Then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air; and so shall we ever be with the Lord. Wherefore comfort one another with these words.

Yes these words are comforting. For a few years of afflictions and disappointments in this life we shall forever be with the Lord. To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, as I am overcome and sit down with my Father in his throne. He that overcometh, the same shall be clothed in white raiment, and I will not blot out his name out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and before his angels. and he that overcometh, and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations.

Why need we cite more proofs of the comforts that will come to those who mourn? We sorrow not as those who have no hope, but have that blessed assurance that when Jesus shall come we shall be with him.

May we strive to overcome the trials of this life, that we may enter into the better one, is the prayer of your brother.

D. C. ROBISON.

On Sunday, Jan. 10, at the Lord's table the 24th Psalm was read by our Brother Crawford, in an earnest and impressive manner, and some appropriate remarks were made by the sisters. On Sunday Jan. 17 Sister Crawford read to us the first ten verses of Rom. v. The theme, justification by faith, that great standard measurement of adoption into the family of God. Stirring remarks followed by several of the household, and on Sunday Jan. 24, it was for Sister Moore to read Matt. v. 1-12. The blessed promises and assurance were read with impression by Sister Ella Knowls, Sister Moore not present. The burden of the 5th and 9th verses were brought out in earnest and suitable remarks. Indeed the whole day, the morning, the table, and the evening services, were much blessed to the little flock, and we have good reason to believe added to the interest that some are now manifesting in the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ.

May God find some good soil on which to give the increase.

P. NEILL.

Editor Restitution:

I hope others will remember your needs during this season of good cheer, and relieve your pressing necessities so that our dear RESTITUTION may have your entire time and thought free from the cares of providing for daily bread. I shall be only too glad when I can aid in the general welfare of our grand and glorious cause in a substantial way. I am confident that men and means will be furnished to carry the good work on regardless of [illegible] today of the multitudes of other faiths "no faiths" for they have no solid foundations; but being popular they increase in number and on account of numbers they are ignorantly confident they are of the right faith, and seemingly honest, they go along indifferently when we tell them they are not of the faith and doctrine of God's Word, satisfied and happy, but not honest enough to investigate and brave enough to stand by their convictions. According to the revelations of our God our faith is firmly founded on the promises, and like the rock of Gibralter it is immovable, it is of God and will stand all tests and taunts of the multitudes. I was for years an honest but ignorant Methodist. I could not make the teachings of the church and the teachings of the little I knew of God's Word agree. I honestly read God's Word through from Genesis to Revelation, that I might know the truth. I found I was not of the Methodist faith. I did a great deal of talking among my business friends and they decided I was crazy, and told me so. I found that I could not agree with either protestant or catholic, and I began to think I was crazy sure enough. I oftimes laughed to myself, seeing the strange position I had gotten into. I would read any and everything given me by my friends. Nothing agreed with my honest convictions of the teachings of God's Word. Finally I heard of THE RESTITUTION, I sent 25 cts in stamps, and the first paper received and the first article on the first page convinced me for the first time that there were other crazy people, and that I was not alone in my faith, and for twenty odd years now I have happily and boldly talked "Restitution," and regardless of all mistakes that I may make in life I shall glory in the Restitution faith, the faith of Abraham, Isaac, Jacob and David, eternally founded on the promises of God, and with his oath attached I know this faith is right, though I may get over so wrong, my God help me, keep me and fill me with thy spirit that I may not sin unto death. Oh for thy glory and for Jesus' sake direct my paths, my thoughts, my hands, my words and my acts. Keep me in perfect peace together with all who fear and trust thee. It is so strange that so many intelligent, good-meaning people are so spiritually blind. They do not seem to be able to take in the truth and discern the differences between truth and error. The dear old gospel truths are so simple and so plain, and so easily understood by the simple-minded that it would seem that an educated mind might easily understand, but I must admit that in most cases worldly education seems a hindrance and the cause of so many isms and divisions of faiths. God tells us that "the wages of sin is death." That is easily understood by the simple-minded, but worldly educators say, "Yes, that is so," and add "death means eternal life in torment," "A death that never dies" "where the worm dieth not and the fire is not quenched." This is an educated idea taught as God's truth. Is it true? Listen to what God says: "The wages of sin is death." Cant you discern the difference here between God's truth, his own words and the false faith? Why not believe God? Do you not know that in Adam's disbelieving God he sinned and his death was the result? Adam believed the words of that old serpent, the devil, "Thou shalt not surely die." Adam believed this satanic lie instead of believing God, and he reaped the wages of sin, death. The immortal-soul theory is only a theory. It is not God's truth. Its foundation is "Thou shalt not surely die." Man has no immortal soul according to God's Word, for it says "the dead know not any thing" and in the day that a man dies "his very thoughts perish." The only hope for the dead is by a resurrection from the dead and this is the promise through our Lord Jesus, who hath brought life and immortality to light through his own death and resurrection, in the which he has become the first fruits into immortal life [illegible] new creation that will inhabit this earth. Afterward they that are his at his coming, and they shall then be heirs and joint heirs with him of the kingdom and his kingdom will destroy all other earthly kingdoms, and it shall stand. This and more on this line of truth are the teachings of God's Word against an apostatising world. Praise the Lord, the gift of God is eternal, immortal life to all obedient, believing people, who implicitly trust him. Jesus is the way, the truth and the life. Repent and be baptized every one of you, that your sins may be blotted out when the times of refreshing shall come from his presence "for the heavens must retain him until the time of the restitution of all things spoken of by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began." Then, he is coming with his holy angels, taking vengeance of all who disobey and believe not God. Behold the day cometh that shall burn as an oven and the disbelieving wicked shall be burned up. They shall become ashes, says Malachi. Then, my friend where will their immortal souls be? Can immortality become ashes? God's Word sets before a world of dying mortals eternal life and eternal death, for our choosing, and all men make and take their choice, and will receive their reward, life or death. Who is it that wants the reward of death? To go out into the blackness of darkness to be destroyed. To be a castaway. To be annihilated.

Unbelievers, turn quickly, repent and be baptized. "Turn ye," says the Almighty, "for why will ye die?" "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me," says Jesus, "for my yoke is easy and my burden is light." "I and my Father are one. My Father has given me all power in heaven and in earth, and my Father through my blood is now reconciled toward you. Be ye reconciled toward my Father. Turn from your wicked ways and ye shall live, and all the wickedness that; you have committed shall not be accounted unto you, and ye shall live. For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life."

The invitation is world-wide. Whosoever will may come. Ho, every one that thirsteth, come without money and without price. Praise the Lord, the gift of eternal life is free. Simeon of old saw the Christ, took him in his arms and blessed God and said, "Lord now lettest thy servant depart in peace; for mine eyes have seen thy salvation, which thou hast prepared before the face of all people. A Light to lighten the Gentiles and the glory of thy people Israel." "Praise the Lord oh my soul, and all that is in me praise his holy name. So long as I have my being I will praise the Lord. Praise ye the Lord all ye people. Praise him, praise him; for his mercy endureth forever."

B. Y. FRETWELL & WIFE.

"Some people see nothing in a rainbow but an arch of tints and colors spanning the earth. Beautiful! Yes. But not half so beautiful to them as to those who see it, also, to be the assurance of the faithfulness of God, and of that time when love divine shall crown this world of ours with peace. So hope lays hold of everything, and holds it up that the glory of God may shine through it."

"The young person who would win true success must have a purpose strong enough to resist the currents of conventionalism which would bear him straight away from his serious vocation."

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

Marcus A. Hanna, the well known United States Senator of Ohio, died at Washington, Feb. 15th, aged 67 years.

We have arranged to supply our readers with a War Atlas, containing maps of the war center adjacent to the Yellow Sea, Japan, Russia, Pacific Ocean, etc. and with statistical tables of useful information, enabling one to understand the situation as the war progresses. The maps are colored, and it is substantially bound. Sent post paid for 25 cents. Send for one and keep posted.

The question is raised by certain men, whom, in the absence of a better name we will call "Josephites", regarding the authenticity of the first chapters of Matthew and Luke. Their theory is weak if it can be shown that these chapters are genuine and true. If they are spurious, then they may have some implied ground to stand on and hold up their theory. Brother Joblin has gone to a great deal of labor and pains to write out from every source that is available, all that the translators have to say regarding this subject. We design giving this in a series of numbers commencing with our first issue in March, and occupying space in four issues. We design printing a number of extra papers with this article, and will send them to who ever wishes them for five cents for the set—just to cover cost of paper and postage. In order to secure these papers it will be necessary to send in your orders now for as many sets as you want, as we will print only a limited number unless the call will justify the issue of more copies. If you send stamps send only the one or two cent denominations. Inasmuch as these "Josephites" are pressing their theory upon all who will give them ear, and are trying to proselyte all they can, it stands our brethren in hand to be posted on this subject, and these articles will give all there is to be found on the question. Send now for as many extra copies as you can use.

The War Situation.

To attempt to give all the war news would take the large part of a daily paper, so we can give but a summing up. Since our last issue there has been fierce fighting. The naval part is of course first, and the Japanese have been victorious so far. They seem to out-class the Russians in this branch of the service. The aim seems to crush or shut in the Russian fleet at Port Arthur before any reinforcements can reach them, and in this effort they have been successful. This fleet is either at the bottom of the sea or in the inner harbor, and the vessels from other ports are being sunk as fast as they are found. The Japanese have possession of all the ports of Corea, and are landing troops as fast as they can, with the view of getting possession of the Yalu River region. They have destroyed the Russian railroad bridges, and torn up the tracks in some places. There is a report that an attempt to land troops near Port Arthur was repulsed by the Russians with heavy loss. However, it is predicted in London that the Japanese will capture Port Arthur by the end of this week, but that is all guesswork. Russia has called 600,000 more troops to the colors, and is making all preparations for a prolonged conflict.

The most significant move in the situation was made by the United States through Secretary Hay. A note was prepared and sent to all the nations, providing for the limitation of the conflict to a certain area, and for the maintainance of the integrity of the Chinese Empire. Inasmuch as the war was started for the purpose of forcing Russia to stop her progress on Chinese territory, this looked like a move to favor Japan. However, it is maintained that it was solely for the purpose of guaranteeing that neither combattant should assume to take Chinese territory, no matter what the outcome of the present conflict. This would leave China no excuse for taking part in the war at this time, and so rid the minds of some who are terror-stricken at thought of the "yellow peril." Germany especially was leaning toward Russia, in view of what might happen should Japan be victorious and unite with China in driving back the Russians, as they then might take up the cry of "Asia for the Asiatics," and all foreigners be cast out. Secretary Hay's effort was to prevent such a result. It will be hard for Russia to agree to this, but she may do so for the time being, as her policy has been to gradually assimilate, rather than go to war. We can only wait and see how it will work out. One thing is plain—Nothing will be done without the United States, and in most cases she goes first.

The British government accepted Secretary Hay's note, and now if the integrity of China means that Russia must abandon Manchuria, then England must recall her little expedition into Thibet.

Again, England fearing to be drawn in, has signified to Denmark that her forts at the entrance to the Baltic should be in condition to resist capture by Russia, which she fears would be done were England and Russia to be at war. Denmark replies that all the necessary precautions will at once be taken.

With German feeling pronounced in favor of Russia, we see France drifting away. It was openly proposed in the French chambers that the existing alliance with Russia be abrogated. The selfish interests of nations is what affects them, the same as in individuals. Taken all in all, we may look for many complications, that will involve all the great powers of Europe, and if it does come it is not possible for our own country to keep out. Let us wait and watch.

The Sultan must necessarily be active when others are, so he is planing more trouble in the Balkans, and hostilities may break out in that region any time.

Selections.

Opportunity of Seed Sowing.

An opportunity is a convenience or fitness of time for the doing of any act. It is said that in the life-time of every person there comes an opportunity to rise to wealth or distinction. But the opportunity must be taken advantage of to be of value.

There are opportunities to do good continually, with us all; these we shall be held accountable for. We are exhorted: "In the morning sow thy seed, and in the evening withhold not thy hand: for thou knowest not whether shall prosper this or that;" and also to "sow beside all waters."

As therefore we have opportunity let us do good unto all men, especially unto them who are of the household of faith. But it is of the special opportunities that I wish to speak.

There came into the life of Abraham Lincoln an opportunity, and he, being willing and ready to take advantage of it, signed the emancipation proclamation and freed millions of human beings from slavery. Moses took advantage of an opportunity and saved the whole Israelitish nation. Opportunities improved have made the greatest men and women of the world.

It is possible sometimes to make an opportunity, but usually the greatest good is accomplished through the opportunities presented to us. The farmer takes advantage of weather conditions in sowing his seed. He first plows the ground, to soften it, and by every process known to him fits it for the reception of the seed, and when he has done his part, if the seed is good, he may reasonably expect a bountiful harvest, for he has taken advantage of the opportunities as they were presented.

Opportunities come often unexpectedly, and we are led to say, it is the unexpected that happens; but then is the time to act, and the right acting, or the right word spoken—the right seed sown at the right time—will bring a rich return.

Men and women, and even children, the world over, have opportunities to do wonderful things, and gain great names. But we should be looking for opportunities to sow seeds of truth—present truth—even as Jesus our Master did. He was ever on the alert that he might take advantage of every opportunity that came to him, and that alertness was the one great reason of his success. He was at all times ready to do his Father's will. But we must first, as he did, have the love for it.

The more Christ-like we are the more opportunities will open to us to be useful; and the better we fill our place the larger our place will grow; and as our place expands our abilities will enlarge and therefore our sphere of usefulness will be greater, and our sense of satisfaction and joy will be commensurate with our growth in grace.

Our Lord's mission was one of salvation, and to be successful he must prove himself to be of higher origin than fallen humanity; and he did. See him on the banks of Galilee feeding the four thousand with seven loaves; and again, feeding five thousand people with five loaves and two fishes. These multitudes had followed him away from their homes, were tired and hungry. The opportunity was before him and he enlarged the bread and fishes to meet the demands of the occasion. These were opportunities which proved him to that people, and proves him today to us, to be more than human and just what was claimed for him.

Again at the grave of Lazarus he spoke, "and he that was dead came forth." This was his life work. These were object lessons—opportunities used to the glory of his Father, which forever stamped him to be none other than the only begotten Son of God.

His opportunities for sowing the good seed were at the beginning of this dispensation. He sowed present truth. Our opportunities are at the close of the dispensation, and we must sow present truth seed. As Jesus was responsible for his opportunities, so also are we. We cannot turn these things off lightly and be justified, for we are responsible for the opportunities as they come to us individually, and how much we are responsible depends upon our ability and our opportunity; for it has been well said, that "ability and opportunity measure our responsibility." Every one has some of both, and therefore every one is responsible. He to whom we are responsible knows our abilities, and we can not deceive him if we would.

We have opportunities to sow seed at home, at work, in the prayer-meeting, for which we are responsible. One little word for Jesus sometimes has worked out more than long sermons beautifully written and expressed.

I am endeavoring by the grace of God to sow seed, praying it may fall on good ground and produce the very best result possible; but whenever and wherever you sow, take heed to the exhortation of the apostle (1 Pet. iii: 15): "But sanctify the Lord God in your hearts: and be ready always to give an answer to every man that asketh you a reason of the hope that is in you, with meekness and fear."—Edward P. Cooper in Herald of Life.

On the Eve of War in Japan.

Yokohama, Jan. 12, 1904—Neither in peace nor in war is Japan like other nations. Never were a people so full of feeling as are the Japanese to-day, and yet never could a stranger detect the slightest evidence of any public demonstration of war sentiment. To them patriotism is a religion and a religion so deep that it gives no outward sign. Seldom has a nation of forty-five millions been so animated by one thought or so united and eager for action, and yet so apparently unmoved. There are no cheering crowds about the bulletin boards, nor do cheers attend the regiments as they start away from their homes. There is absolutely none of the pomp and circumstance of war, and yet war is in every one's thought. In exceeding quiet Japan is preparing, is, indeed, already amply prepared, for the fray, and yet is making no fuss about it. Tokio streets are full of soldiers, but the only signs that war impends are the crowded photographers' shops and the parting groups at the railway stations who are bidding their friends a joyfull farewell, with never a tear upon one of their faces. Japan is keeping its pent-up feeling to show it when the time for it comes, and that will be when the bullets are flying.

The standing army numbers about one hundred and sixty thousand. After these come the first and second reserves, all of whom have been with the colors. Then there is the great body of policemen, the smallest village not being without members of the force, the whole of which is under strict military organization. Furthermore, there is a vast body of young men who have received their training in the numberless military schools of the Empire. All these are available before a single man is drawn from the population as such. From this it is plain that the nation is not handicapped, as is America in such an emergency, by the necessity of drilling raw troops.

In an even higher state of efficiency is the navy, which in quality ranks with the best in the world. No more inspiring or significant spectacle ever greeted my eyes than at the Emperor's review of his fleet at Kobe last spring. The ships of the Imperial procession passed slowly up and down the long lines of stately battleships and cruisers there gathered, as the bulwark of an island nation which forty years ago knew nothing but an old junk.

As to the outcome of the encounter with the Russian fleet, which will doubtless be the opening feature of the great struggle, little can be hazarded in the way of prediction based upon the number and weight of the two navies. Inasmuch as in these regards they are almost equally matched; but in the prime factors of personnel and efficiency it is safe to say that Russia's force upon the Asiatic waters would have to be fifty per cent greater than that of Japan in order to win the fight. The Japanese are a sailor as well as a soldier nation, and while Russia has yet to prove her power upon the seas, there having yet been no manifestation of it in all her history, Japan has already shown her fighting quality there.—Arthur May Knapp, Special Correspondent at Yokohama, in Collier's Weekly.

The Son of God Cometh.

"For yourselves know perfectly that the day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night."—1 Thess. v: 2.

God calls us to wake. He speaks in his word loudly and clearly. None can mistake the call. He speaks gently, but with power. Solemn and fearful is the call of God. Then heed it. Awake! Awake! The Son of God cometh in the clouds of heaven! Awake to pray.

The church is in danger; the nations are in danger; the world is in danger.)

Dangers beset it on all sides. The time is short! Therefore wake up to labor. There is much to be done. The world is in danger! We ought to be at work—all hands and all hearts. The work is perishing. There are hundreds of millions abroad; there are millions at our own door, perishing in misery and sin. Awake to labor! Awake to pray!

Awake to watch! He cometh shortly. It has been predicted by the apostles. Awake Awake and watch! The Son of God cometh!

Wisdom of Seirach.

Chapter 33 (36 Apocrypha).

1. Have mercy on us, O God, thou sole Lord of all.

2. And look upon us and cast fear of thee upon all the nations.

3. Lift up thy hand over all alien nations, and let them see thy able rule.

4. Even as in their sight thou hast been sanctified in us, so in our sight mayest thou have been magnified in them.

5. And may they have fully known thee even as we have fully known that there is no God (Disposer) except thee, O Lord.

6. Renew signs, and give other wonders.

7. Glorify hand and right arm.

8. Awake anger, and pour out wrath.

9. Take away an adversary and crush an enemy.

10. Haste an appointed time and remember oath-taking, and may thy great doings have been discoursed.

11. In wrath of fire may the one who is saving himself have been devoured, and may those who are afflicting thy laity have found loss.

12. Crush the heads of rulers of enemies, who say there is no one except of us.

13. Lead together all the tribes of Jakoob (30—25 apoc) a luminous and good heart will meditate over the deliencies of her kinds of food.

Chapter 34 (31 apoc.)

1. Wakefulness for wealth consumeth one's flesh, and over-anxiety for it causeth sleep to stand away.

2. The over-anxiety of wakefulness will deprive one of a nap, and slumber will sleep off deep debility.

3. A rich man hath toiled wearily in his gathering together of utilities, and in his interval of rest he filleth himself with the delicate-refinements thereof.

4. A poor man hath toiled wearily in the inferiority of his livelihood, and in his interval of rest he hath come to be in want.

5. The one who loveth gold will not have been justified, and he who pursueth after corruption will have been filled.

6. Many have been given up to smiting for the sake of gold, and their loss hath occurred to their face.

7. A stick of stumbling is there for those who sacrifice unto it, and every headless person will be taken with it.

8. Blessed-happy is the rich man who hath been found blameless, and who hath not gone his way after gold.

9. Who is he, and we will account him blessed-happy? For he hath caused wonders with his laity.

10. Who hath been tested with it (gold) and been found perfect? Let him even be for a boast.

11. Who hath been able to evade and hath not evaded? And to do evil and hath not done it?

11. His good things will have been stayed up and a church will discourse his acts of mercy.

12. Hast thou sat down to a great table do not bring thy throat unto it, and do not say many things are upon it.

13. Remember that a wicked eye is a bad thing; what hath been generated more wicked than an eye? Because of it tears will flow from every face.

14. If thou shouldst not look upon it do not extend thy hand to it, and do not get co-tribulation with it in the finger-bowl.

15. Think the things of thy neighbor thyself, and in regard to any matter think the thing through.

16. Eat the things set beside and do not make thyself offensive with chewing.

17. Stop first for the chastening-instruction, and do not be greedy lest perchance thou stumble.

18. And if thou art seated in the midst of many more do not extend thy hand before them.

19. The little is enough for an instructed man and upon his bed he doth not breath heavily.

20. A sleep of good health is upon temperately measured bowels.

20. He hath arisen at dawn and his soul is with him. The pain of wakefulness and cholera and turning are with a man of insatiate appetite.

21. And if thou be constrained by delicacies arise in the midst of the courses and rest.

22. Hearken unto me child, and do not despise me, and at last thou wilt find my words, and in all thy employments thou wilt become skilful, and no weakness shalt thou meet.

23. Gloriously will lips invoke a blessing upon bread, and the testimony of his beauty is reliable.

24. A city will spread murmurings against a wicked one for bread, and the testimony of his wickedness is minutely accurate.

25 Do not show thyself manly with wine; for the wine hath destroyed many.

26. A furnace testeth the hardness of steel with a diping-bath; even so wine the hearts of the haughty with fighting.

27. Wine for a man is like to life, if one drink it in its true measure; what life is there in inferior wine? Even it hath promoted men's rejoicing.

28. Gladness of heart and rejoicing of soul is wine drank sufficiently strong in due season.

29. Bitterness of soul is much wine drunk in strife and contention.

30. Drunkenness increaseth the passion of a senseless person unto smiting, diminishing strength and promoting wounds.

31. At a symposium of wine do not reprove thy neighbor, and do not despise him in his rejoicing. Do not speak a word of reproach to him, and do not trouble him with a demand.

Comment.

The first 13 verses of the 33d chapter consist of a wonderfully significant votive prayer which still looks forward to a great and promised fulfilment, in the "restoration of all things as spoken by the mouth of all the prophets since there was an animate-age." Read it in the light of this exegesis.

The ethics of the 34th chapter are up to date and standard ethics even now. The table-manners are still the best table manners of true gentility, and what is said of wine and the temperate use of it is sustained by the conclusions of this twentieth century scientific investigation prohibition claims to the contrary notwithstanding. The invoking of a blessing upon every repast is Christian and "eat whatever is placed beside thee with thanksgiving, asking no questions for conscience sake" forcibly reminds us of Paul's specific instruction on this same subject.

ANOTHER OFFER.

There is a general waking up among our people everywhere. Our public speakers are all busy, and calls are in excess of their ability to attend them. Many places want preaching at the same time, but must wait their turn. This shows a decided interest, and a desire among our brethren to sound out the Word to the yet unsaved. All seem to realize that the night is far spent, that the time to work is short.

Brothers and Sisters, our work is not well done, and is not ready for acceptance of God, unless we have done all we can—our very utmost. We cannot admit that it is our duty to do anything at all for the advancement of the Master's cause, without conceding it is our duty to do all we can—to make a sacrifice even.

Preachers of other denominations as well as our own, know and say that the best workers in a community are those who take and read their Church paper, and keep informed as to what is being done in the various departments of the work, and are thus interested in pushing along the car of truth.

The Managers of The Restitution are endeavoring to so conduct the paper that it will be a fit aid to the Evangelist in his work. We are trying to keep it clear from that contention that leads to mischief and strife. This is done by having certain well-defined truths which are taught in God's Word plainly, as a basis of belief, and by publishing articles that accord with these declared principles. Other outside subjects might be "investigated" as long as life and pencil and paper lasts, and no decision ever be reached, but we do not consider this a profitable work to engage in, hence do not ask for contributions on such subjects, and do not want them. Such are usually but the "opinion" of a man, and are often based on a mere inference at best.

This paper aims to teach the truth of the Bible, and the same is declared and believed in by our Church. We therefore believe it is a fit missionary to be sent out to the unsaved and lost of the human family. In order to make it possible for our friends to do more of this missionary work than ever before, we make this offer:

Any one sending us $10.00 may select 18 names of those not now subscribers, to whom we will send the paper for the year 1904 This makes a trifle over one-half regular price if taken in lots of $10.00 worth. You and the office practically go halves in scattering the truth of the gospel to your neighbors and friends. You who have money think of this. For $100 you can preach to an audience of 180 people over 200 sermons the coming year. Can you do better with that amount of money? You have a minister come to your neighborhood perhaps once a month, giving you two or may be three discourses each time—possibly 30 a year. When he is coming you invite your neighbors in to hear him. Suppose those neighbors have had The Restitution in their homes each week when the preacher was not there, and have read the articles, and are interested to hear more. Does not this increase largely the chances of the preacher being able to speak the very words that will start your friend on the way to the kingdom? Did you ever think of this matter? Will you not take it under consideration? We feel sure if you do you will not hesitate to go half partner with us in this work.

Who will send $10, $20, $50, $100 for this work? The best time to start it is now. Select your names and send at once, so they will get the rest of this year and all of next.

Poetry.

Watchman! What of the Night?

Say, watchman, what of the night?
Do the dews of the morning fall?
Have the orient skies a border of light,
Like the fringe of a funeral pall?

"The night is fast waning on high,
And soon shall the darkness flee,
And the morn shall spread o'er the blushing sky,
And bright shall its glories be."

But, watchman, what of the night?
When sorrow and pain are mine,
And the pleasures of life, so sweet and bright,
No longer around me shine?

"That night of sorrow thy soul
May surely prepare to meet,
But away shall the clouds of thy heaviness roll,
And the morning of joy be sweet."

Notes by the Way.

The work being finished at Hanson, Indian Territory, Bro. Turner accompanied me to the train, to begin my journey to Oak Lodge, Indian Territory, where I had my next appointment. The Church at this place I found to be an Advent Christian Church. It was somewhat of a puzzle to me as to how I came to receive a call from an Adventist Christian Church. The person writing for me to come was a Capt. Bowman. When he wrote for me to come, he thought he was writing for a regular Adventist preacher. He was not a RESTITUTION reader, but that of an Adventist paper called The Hope. He said that he saw my notice that I was going South in the aforesaid paper. I told him that I had not placed any notice in that paper. That a notice in that paper would not do me any good, because I had no affiliation with much that was taught by that paper. It appears to me that my notice really was in that paper; but as to who placed it there, I know not, or for what purpose it was thus placed, I cannot imagine. It did serve a good purpose, however, it gave me an opportunity to a series of meetings to place before those Adventists, the straight gospel of the kingdom, in which is found the doctrine of the age to come, which is so despised by the sect of Adventists. Captain Bowman claims that he always did believe in the aforesaid doctrine. I found his wife, however, who is a Choctaw Indian woman, thoroughly loyal to the sect of the Wm. Miller Adventists.

Passing by this parenthetical digression, I come to where I bid Bro. Turner good bye at the Hanson depot. As the train drew up at the station, Bro. Luman, the President of our Arkansas Conference appeared on the train platform, and I was introduced to him by Bro. Turner. He had just come up from Webb City, Arkansas, to form an acquaintance with me. He then accompanied me to Oak Lodge. I was much pleased with him as a genial gentleman, a good speaker, a Bible student, and also an obedient believer of the gospel of the kingdom. At the first service, on Sunday morning, there were present several Advent preachers, (some of whom came from a distance) and also a Baptist preacher. Some of these preachers gave me the credit of going deeper into the subject presented, than they had ever heard before. The audience grew larger as time advanced, and close attention was given all the way through. When the time to leave them had arrived, much regret was expressed, and strong requests were pressed upon me to return at some future time.

The Indian Territory is in a wild and undeveloped condition. It has no local government, except that of the Indians, and there are five of such governments, the Cherokees, Choctaws, Chickasaws, Seminoles and Creeks. These Indian governments run schools for the Indian children, but the white man has none. White children can go to these schools on the payment of a tax of a dollar a month to the Indian nation which runs the school. The U. S. government forbids any language to be taught in these schools, except that of the English. Each of these Indian nations speak a different language.

Each Indian, young or old, male or female, is entitled to an allotment of land worth some over $1,000. This includes all mixed bloods. Hence, white men became crazy to marry Indian women, and then his ambition is, to gather about him as many children as possible, because each child could have an allotment of over $1,000 worth of land, and he could have the use of it, until the children became of age. In some cases families have a mixture of Indian, negro and white, which forms an undesirable mixture.

The Indians have a peculiar ball game. Each Indian provides himself with two sticks, at one end it is shaped like a spoon. To get ready for the game, each Indian must strip to the waist, and then procure some animal's tail, it may be the tail of a horse, a cow, a wolf, a fox, a wild cat, a mule, or any other that he may take a fancy to wear. Having procured these animal tails, he must fasten them to his person, so that they may hang in the place where tails are usually designed to grow. Thus equipped, he takes his spoon-shaped sticks, a ball is then placed between the spoons of the sticks, the Indian having the ball between his sticks, starts on a run to touch a pole set up at a distance. The other Indians in the game, run after him, and try to jostle against him, or butt him with their heads, in order to make him drop his ball, then there is a scramble for the ball. The ball must be picked up with the sticks, and not touched with the hands. They have much fun and sport seen in each one of them endeavoring to pick up the ball with his sticks, while his neighbor is trying to butt him off, in order that he, himself might get the ball. It is something like our white man's foot ball, which is fully as rude as that of the uncultivated Indian.

While I was at Oak Lodge I took dinner with an Indian, who is the speaker of the Indian House of Representatives, of the Choctaw nation. His wife is a white woman, a member of the Advent Christian Church at Oak Lodge, where I preached.

Coming back again to the conclusion of my meetings at Oak Lodge, I will say, that Captain Bowman then conveyed me by carriage to Ward, Indian Territory, to commence services at that place. Sister Green's son met me at the post office, and conveyed me to the home of his mother, by whom I was heartily welcomed. I opened services on Sunday morning, and continued them on Sunday night, at which time I closed the services at that place, because the church could not be heated, on account of the open and ruinous condition of the building. All out of doors would have to be warmed, before such a structure could be heated.

Most of the dwellings in this Territory are very rude uncomfortable log huts, or box shanties. There is a reason why such structures are built in this country, and that is none but Cherokees, Choctaws, Chickasaws or Creeks can own a foot of ground in this country. If white men work farms in the Territory, he has to lease his land from the Indians, consequently he builds only the rudest cheap hovels, oftentimes they are hardly suitable for hog pens.

As to public improvements, there are none at all. No taxes are collected, consequently nothing is expended. Everything exists exactly as nature left it. If any one desires to study nature, all he has to do is to travel over the Indian Territory. If he should desire to see men living in the wild state, visit the mountains, and there he will find the full-blooded red man living as his nature dictates, even as the wild beast which he hunts.

There are strange freaks in color in families of mixed Indian and white bloods. I saw three sisters, one of them was as dark as a full blood, she had luxuriant hair, black as a coal, large shining black eyes, while the other sister was the same except a shade or two lighter in color, but the younger one was so white, that her face showed freckles.

On the Monday, after closing the meetings at Ward, a farm wagon load of us started for Cartersville, which is the name of the post office. The place is commonly known as "Hog Town," in fact, some living not far from there, did not know it by the post office name. In fact, as far as I could see, every town is a hog town, the hog often forms a large share of the inhabitants of these settlements. At one place, where I was preaching, the hogs slept under the church, and kicked up such a hog-racket as to disturb the meeting.

The hog is the main article of food in this country. They eat about the whole hog except the hair. I have seen the lungs and liver stewed together, boiled hog's heart is also relished, the entrails (or bowels) is considered a fine dish; and also hog's brains is much relished, and of the blood they make puddings, so that you will observe that nothing of the hog is lost.

Before entering on this digression, I was describing a farm wagon trip from Ward to Cartersville. On our way thither we passed through a town, the post office name is Bokosha, but the common name is "Shake Rag." If I should describe the clothing worn by the poor whites, they are truly "shake rags," so you see these names are truly suggestive of some peculiarity of the place to which it attaches.

If due time we arrived at Cartersville, and meetings at this writing are now in progress, which I will report at another time.

Of course, many things of interest on these trips I cannot relate, it would be too much to write out; but, if I shall hold evangelical services at your place, or meet you in your several Conferences, I can tell them to you personally, and give you much information. I expect to get home in the Spring time. Applications for services the coming season may be made now by sending them to my home address. If possible, I will give first applications the preference as to point of time.

I find the Church of God in Christ Jesus a more numerous people than I was aware of. There is one peculiarity about them, and that is, they are a scattered people, they are found everywhere, even out here in the red man's country. There are large opportunities for preaching the gospel to the poor at this place, providing the preacher can preach for nothing, and pay his own expenses.

After I get through at this place, I go to Carnegie, Oklahoma, to preach the grand old gospel of the coming kingdom, as a message of life. God has His witnesses there also, blessed be his holy name. After my visit there I expect to tell you more about it in my next "Notes by the Way." From Oklahoma I shall visit several points in Texas, Louisiana, and possibly Alabama, and on my return trip several points in Missouri.

In my travels I am acquiring information with regard the strength, and social status of the Household of Faith, and I trust my reports will give the reader a better and also a wider conception as to what our people really are, far away from your own borders. I also trust that you will be encouraged to contend more earnestly for the faith once delivered unto the saints. Allow no compromises of the faith with any one, not excepting Sabbatarian Josephites, because those heresies undermine the fundamental principles of the Blessed Hope. We have half-breed Indians in this Southwestern country, but I am happy to say that I have not found any of those theological half-breeds here.

It does seem to me, considering the eventful times through which we are now passing, that the Household of Faith ought to present a more aggressive front all along the line. Many believers in the second coming of Christ are being led astray by the teaching of Russellism, which affirms that the Lord is now "here" and "there," and is now "in the secret chambers," invisible secret presence, they signally fail to obey the Lord's command, "believe it not." There is great need of personal care lest the angelic reapers should leave us behind, when they reap the first fruits of the harvest on account of not being ripe enough to be harvested.

Dear ones in Christ press forward with all the vigor of your beings.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.

Self Examination.

To examine is to inspect carefully with a view to discover truth or the real state of a thing. When such examination is conducted with a view to "self," it is to ascertain the truth or the real state of self. Self examination is enjoined by the apostle Paul in 2. Cor. xiii: 5. It is with a view to see "whether ye be in the faith." There is such a thing as being "in the faith" (Acts xiv: 22), and one of being not in the faith. Without faith it is not possible to please God. Heb. xi: 6. God has submitted "the faith of the gospel" to us. Phil. i: 27. Hence there is, as Paul says elsewhere, "one faith." Eph. iv: 4. We are to be in this faith not merely in theory. Our faith is to be more than intellectual assent to the propositions set forth in the gospel—though this is necessary—, but our faith is to be one of works. "In Christ Jesus neither circumcision availeth anything, nor uncircumcision; but faith which worketh by love." Gal. v: 6. So neither circumcision (the religion of the Jew) nor uncircumcision (the religion of the Gentile) has any saving qualities, but faith; and the apostle was careful to specify what kind of faith would avail: that "which worketh." The motive of this work must be "love." Love is greater than either faith or hope. Love is the mainspring that must move our faith to action. This love is the reciprocal affection of the mind toward God who first loved us. This love consists of more than good resolutions or even words; its presence will be manifested by "works"—good works. Eph. ii: 10. By such works faith is made perfect, as James so aptly puts it. Jas. ii: 22-26.

This examination is to be along these lines, and is a personal matter. "Examine yourselves." It seems easier to examine another than self. More effort is required in self examination than in the examination of others. Another feature than tends to make self examination so unpleasant is the fact that it might disclose a very unsatisfactory state of self. There is a feeling among the sick against a thorough examination by a competent physician. Men often have reasons to fear the worst, and they would like to postpone the dreadful revelation of their true condition as long as possible. The questions which we should press home to ourselves are these: Do my works prove before God that I am in the faith? Why do I claim to be a Christian? Do I love the truth for the truth's sake? "Let a man examine himself." 1. Cor. xi: 28. What is this examination for? To see "whether ye be in the faith." But what if not in the faith? Get right with God. Don't give up if you find that you are not what you ought to be. When you are examined by a physician, and find that you are suffering from any serious malady, you ask, "Is there anything that can be done to cure or at least give relief?" And you are perfectly willing to follow minutely all the given directions. So with this examination. If you find that you have not the same confident trust in God which you had years ago, find what is the cause of this defection, and remedy it. If your faith is not working as it ought to be, get up courage, and get to work. If you have lost your first love, sit down quietly before God and think deeply of "this great love wherewith he loved us" (Eph. ii: 4), that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on him should not perish, but have everlasting life. John iii: 16.

If you find upon a thorough examination that you are in the faith, be assured that Christ is in you by his spirit and character. Then, as we sing, "Keep right on believing."

The Bereans Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

A Happy New Year's greeting,
Dear Bereans, one and all.
May the year be crowned with mercies,
And God's blessings on you all.

May you ever follow the pattern,
Of those noble ones of old,
Who searched the Scriptures daily,
To find what the prophets foretold.

May you continue faithful,
A firm, united band,
Help spread the glorious gospel
All over our fair land.

M. F. T.

We are very glad indeed to hear from the Dixon Society and think that if the different societies from time to time would send in a report of their meetings and work, that it would be not only of the greatest interest but also very encouraging. We are pleased to be able to tell of the organization of a new Berean Society at Keltner. They start with 18 members. With such a beginning and working with the zeal of the Lord—the results should be glorious.

Dear Bereans:

Let me take this opportunity of wishing you all a Happy New Year, and may this coming year be a prosperous one to our little band of workers. I trust this may be brought about by every one of the members putting forth his or her best efforts.

As I believe that no report has been given of our Dixon Society of Bereans perhaps you would be pleased to hear from us. We hold a meeting on Friday evening of each week at the home of one of our members, and although we have but eight members, have an average attendance of thirteen. Our lessons are taken from the Berean Booklets with occasionally an outside lesson by request. Thanksgiving week we planned a surprise on one of the sisters of the church, and after holding a short thanksgiving service, we spent the remainder of the evening socially.

If you would serve the Master well,
Heed well his written word.
No other sentiments so pure
As his were ever heard.

OLIVE DREW.

HEARING AND DOING.

I believe it applies to Christ in practice. 1st, hearing the Word, then doing it. 2nd, we must have conduct agreeing with the will of God. 3rd, conduct pursued with the greatest meekness and forbearance. 4th, perseverance to the end of life, not only to make religion our business at certain seasons, or upon occasions, but the work of our lives.

After hearing God's Word we should be obedient to it by looking and studying into those things that will give us the only true happiness here in this world. In order to be a true Christian we must persevere in the service of God with great diligence, and search the Scriptures, for in them we have eternal life. No one can serve two masters, we cannot serve God and mammon. There is need of watchfulness and prayer in order to escape the dreadful evils that come upon the ungodly, and that we may be accounted worthy to stand before the Son of Man.

There is need of putting on the whole armor of God. Without earnest labor there is no ascending the hill of Zion and so no arriving at the Heavenly City, the New Jerusalem. It is very necessary we forget the things that are behind, and reach forth to the things that are before, pressing toward the prize of the high calling of God in Christ our Lord, in order to obtain that prize.

In studying the subject one great thought has impressed me, it is slothfulness in the service of God, for in Matt. xxv. 30, we find: "And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness, there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth." We should not shirk our duties but be patient in the trials we have to endure, and take advantage of every opportunity presented to us to work in God's vineyard. Oh! what are these little duties and trials compared to the grandeur that will be revealed in us? Since we have taken the armor of God upon us we should walk in newness of life, having new dispositions, new conversations, new practices, and continue in these things to the end of our lives.

LILLIE FULSON.

Dear Bereans:

Through our columns, I wish to thank you for my beautiful new Bible, your Christmas gift to me. I shall prize it very highly, the Book, which next to the Savior whom it reveals, is God's best gift to man.

It was John Ruskin who said, "Make it your first daily business to understand some portion of the Bible, and your business the rest of the day to obey what you understand." This is good advice to follow.

With best wishes for the New Year.

ANNA E. DREW.

ISAIAH IX. 6—7.

This prediction was made about 740 B. C. and in this prophecy we learn that a noted personage was to be born into the world. The prophet predicts his birth and sonship, and says that "His name shall be called Wonderful, Counsellor, the Mighty God," and then he speaks of his wonderful reign of peace and prosperity, and he declares it to be "upon the throne of David," then concludes with positive assurance that "he will order it and establish it forever," and then clinches it with the assurance and pledge that "the zeal of the Lord of Hosts will perform this."

The prophet had full confidence in the Word of the Lord, that came to him. He believed with all his heart that Almighty God would have this prophecy carried out and filled to the very letter.

We turn to the New Testament and what do we behold? Luke ii. 1-11. The angel of the Lord. And he says, "For unto you is born this day in the City of David, a Savior, which is Christ the Lord."

We find then that the child was born according to the prophecy, and in the 3rd chapter of St. John 14th and 16th verses, we learn that the 85th was given, and that by God himself. "The zeal of the Lord of hosts will perform this." The Lord of Hosts is behind the rest of this prophecy, and just as sure as the first half of the prophecy met a literal fulfillment, just so sure and certain will the rest be fulfilled. "And the government shall be upon his shoulder." Now, to what government does the prophet refer? He says, "Upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom."

This language is so plain and positive that we cannot be mistaken. It is the throne and kingdom of David, and his reign is to be one of peace and prosperity upon that throne.

Again, he is to "order it and establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever." You see from the time the Lord takes the throne there is to be no break in the governmental rule of the kingdom. The same rule is to continue forever. This alone would exclude the church from being the kingdom, for when the Lord takes the throne of his father David, the church will then have finished her mission on the plane of the flesh.

Perhaps it might be well to raise the question, Where was David's throne and kingdom? 1 Kings ii. 11. David reigned in Hebron seven years and in Jerusalem thirty-three years. His throne then was in Jerusalem.

12th verse. "Then sat Solomon upon the throne of David his father." We are taught by many who presume to know, and they say that David went to heaven at death. We will refer this matter to St. John iii. 13, where Jesus himself says. "No man hath ascended up to heaven." Again, we will invite you to the language of Peter on the day of Pentecost when he was first endowed with power from on high. Acts ii. 29. He says "Men and brethren let me freely speak unto you of the Patriarch David, for he is both dead and buried, and his sepulchre is with us unto this day." 34th verse "For David is not ascended into the heavens." We learn from this that David positively did not go to heaven, but the throne of David is to be exalted when the Lord of glory takes it and reigns in Mount Zion forever.

Peter says in the 30th verse, "Therefore being a prophet and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him, that of the fruit of his loins according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne." He was raised up for that special purpose, to sit on David's throne.

Again, we have the same fact confirmed by an angel from heaven. Luke i. 31. 32. 33. "And he said, Behold thou shalt bring forth a Son, and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever, and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

Now we have the words of prophecy from Isaiah, with the full assurance from God himself that the Christ shall reign on the throne of his father David which was in Jerusalem. Then we come on down to about the close of the Jewish dispensation and we find this Child of promise is born into the world. The angel from heaven reiterates the same promise, and says that "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David." Then we pass on down to pentecost and in Peter's memorable sermon of the Christian dispensation he declares that "God swore with an oath to David that of the fruit of his loins according to the flesh; he would raise up Christ to sit on David's throne."

Now who can doubt such an array of positive testimony sealed by the oath of God himself?

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth N. J.

Come Ye Apart.

MARK VI. 31.

Have you and I today
Stood silent as with Christ, apart from joy or fear
Of life, to see by faith his face?
To look, if but a moment, at its grace,
And grow, by brief companionship, more true,
More nerved to lead, to dare, to do
For him at any cost? Have we today
Found time, in thought, our hand to lay
In his, and thus compare
His will with ours, and wear
The impress of his wish? Be sure
Such contact will endure
Throughout the day; will help us walk erect
Through storm and flood; detect
Within the hidden life, sin's dross, its stain;
Revive a thought of love for him again
Sturdy the steps which waver; help us see
The footpath meant for you and me.

Selections.

Support the Weak.

Superior advantages imply superior responsibilities. Blessed is the man or woman who recognizes this fact and feels keenly the obligation. Moses was much a man. Who was Moses? He was born in slavery, as all Hebrews in his generation were. He was born under the cruel edict of the Egyptian tyrant, which doomed all male children of the Hebrews to immediate destruction. But the good providence of God shielded him from this edict, gave him a home in the house of Pharaoh, and provided for him an education which qualified him to become a chief actor in the stirring events of his day.

Moses might have congratulated himself on his good fortune, and contented himself with a few words of sympathy with his less fortunate kindred. But he felt stirring within him a sense of the obligation which superior advantages involve. He chooses rather to suffer afflictions with the weak than to enjoy the emoluments and pleasures which his fortunate position placed before him. He heard the bitter cry of his kindred. He pitied them, and laid aside the glory with which the good providence of God had crowned him, and took his place by the side of the weak who needed him most. Jesus is another example. No language can do justice to the pity of the Lord for those who are weak. Though he was rich, yet for our sakes he became poor, that we through his poverty might be made rich.

The doctrine of the Gospel on this subject is clear and strong: "We that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak." This is not a law of nature. The law of nature is the opposite of this. The law of nature is expressed in the modern scientific formula, "The survival of the fittest," which means the survival of the strongest.

But there is another law. It is written in the Gospel. Here it is: "Support the weak." "We that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak, and not to please ourselves." That is a new law, a law of grace. It is the law of love. Here is the hope of the sick, the ignorant, the weak, the lost. There is hope in the Gospel for those whom the world tramples under foot and destroys.—Christian Advocate.

The Uplifted Gaze.

Have we thought how significant and full of instruction is the earliest attitude of the church as presented in the opening chapter of the Acts: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven?" In a single graphic sentence is thus indicated the primitive uplook of Christianity; and this question, with what immediately follows, is uttered, not so much for rebuke, as for interpretation. The great High Priest has just passed within the veil, and the cloud-curtain has shut him out of sight. And, as the Hebrew congregation, upon the great day of atonement, looked steadfastly upon the receding form of Aaron as he disappeared within the veil, and continued looking long after he was out of sight, waiting for his reappearance: so exactly did these men of Galilee, though they knew not what they did. And the angels were sent to declare to them the meaning of their action: "This same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." This is the earliest post-ascension announcement of that gospel of hope which, at the first, began to be spoken by the Lord himself—"If I go.....I will come again"—which is now confirmed unto us by his angels, and is henceforth to be reiterated by apostle and seer, till from the last page of Revelation, it shall be heard sounding forth its "Surely I come quickly."

The second coming of Christ is the crowning event of redemption; and the belief of it constitutes the crowning article of an evangelical creed. For we hold that the excellence of faith is according to the proportion of the Lord's redemptive work which that faith embraces. Some accept merely the earthly life of Christ, knowing him only after the flesh; and the religion of such is rarely more than a cold, external morality. Others receive his vicarious death and resurrection, but seem not to have strength as yet to follow him into the heavens; such may be able to rejoice in their justification without knowing much of walking in the glorified life of Christ. Blessed are they, who believing all that has gone before—life, death and resurrection—can joyfully add this confession also; "We have a great High Priest who is passed through the heavens;" and thrice blessed they who can join to this confession still another: "From whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ."—A. J. Gordon.

The Curse of Our Times.

The land has been sown stealthily with the vile literature of lust. The very souls of our youth of both sexes have been polluted with impure print. The devil has defiled the very thought and imagination of the young, and corrupted the springs of life with leprous papers and obscene books. The seeds of salaciousness have been secretly scattered in thousands of Christian homes. Clean papers have been considered in many cases too expensive. Corrupt reading has been clandestinely put in the place of the pure family paper that has been dropped to save a pittance.

This Satanic seed-sowing has ripened into a horrible hell-harvest. The very slime of the pit of perdition is sweeping into the privacies of the holiest homes.

Where are the pastors who should be the faithful censors of the press? One watchful writer says of the floods of fiction, "Here are portrayed in the glamour of heroism the sensuality, vice and crime of human monsters of depravity. Bad fiction is the surest weapon to destroy the mind and the character. Many a life has been turned into tragedy, deep and dark; many a promising career has been blighted, many a fair one sent soiled and broken down the black decline of eternal failure, by the poisoned pen of so-called realism and 'Frenchiness' in literature. The stories of wild adventure, of hair-breadth escapes, of reckless, dare-devil wickedness, of cowboy uncouthness, and of 'blood and thunder' variety in general, placed before the public in the proverbial 'yellow-backed' dime novel, have been among the most potent agencies for this destruction."—Vanguard.

Is it Nothing to You?

An old man sat upon a marble staircase, a staircase that went nowhere, just up into the air. It rested upon beautiful marble pillars, and stones lying in great heaps of ruin. For acres nothing to be seen but ruin and desolation—beautiful columns and great stones exquisitely carved and in some places overlaid with gold, now broken, dimmed by smoke, and cracked by flames.

The old man was very sorrowful, his head bent in grief and his breast heaving with anguish. The sorrow of that beautiful city over the ruin of her temple seemed personified in the aged minister.

"Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by?" he cried, stretching out his hands to the careless people wandering among the ruins. "Behold, and see if there be any sorrow like unto my sorrow."

"Is it nothing to you, all ye that pass by?" How often those words follow me! We see the ruins of magnificent lives all about us: drunkenness, murder, deceit, and all kinds of evil are bringing desolation to our very doors. Noble men, for whom Christ died, are falling every day.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

I Only Ask.

I only ask, O blessed Lord, that thou
Wouldst smile on me;
I care not if upon no other face
A smile I see.

I only ask that I thy gentle voice
May ever hear;
It matters not if other lips should speak
No words of cheer.

I only ask that in the paths I tread
Thy hand in my guide;
Sandy Till with through earth's companionless and Should I journey by side.

I only ask within my soul thy love
To fully know;
Happy though human hearts should never on me
Their love bestow.

The Full Cup.

Pius X. may not be the last Pope, and yet it is not impossible that before a successor is chosen, the Judge of quick and dead will have called his household to give an account of their stewardship).

"In such an hour as ye think not the Son of Man cometh," is the forewarning of the Judge himself. To be forewarned is to be forearmed. We apparently have no way of determining the year, day or hour when the Lord will summon his own from among the dead and living. I have often thought, that possibly in the types and shadows of the old Scriptures, there might be something that would enable us to fix definitely the year of the advent But thus far no one has been able to make the discovery.

All the prophetic dates and periods when closely scrutinized come short of definite time. Their time is definite enough with reference to the things to which they are applied, but their application must be duly considered.

Bible chronology is a very complex subject, full of difficult problems, that cannot be arithmetically solved to a certainty. Many able and scholarly minds have made the effort to count accurately the years of Adam's children, but after reading all they have to say, we are really no wiser than we were before, save perhaps becoming more conscious of the difficulties and perplexities encountered.

The times of the Gentiles, how long? Who has ever been able to answer the question? Most prophetic writers say 2520 years, but the evidence offered to sustain this position, is by no means free from uncertainty. Israel's seven times punishment, may not have reference to time at all, but to the intensity and completeness of their tribulation.

The most satisfactory measurement I can find is the 2300 period of Dan. viii. 13. But even here the learned critic and translator stands at the gate to challenge your faith and confidence, for no one appears to know whether 2200, 2300 or 2400 is correct. When scholars differ and disagree, what can we do but wait for more light. Current events that are now crowding each other along to make history will doubtless help the critics as well as others out of the difficulty. The 1260 years of papal supremacy ending in A. D. 1870 when the pope was deprived of civil power is a fine illustration as to how events are the best interpreters of prophetic periods and measurements.

As a sign of the times in which we are living the end of this period is very encouraging, and invigorates faith with a new supply of vital energy. It does not however give us any light as to the time when resurrection of dead ones shall transpire. The 1290 years allotted to the "abomination of desolation" is also indefinite so far as fixing the date of the Lord's return. No doubt it measures the time determined upon the Moslem desolation of Israel's land, even though recovery of the land and holy city be delayed for a time. Great changes in the way of shaping the future history and destiny of a desolate country and a down trodden people require time. The wilderness is not made to blossom as the rose in one day, or one year. Recovery and restitution has its beginning, almost imperceptible at first, but nevertheless providentially circumstances will become more and more manifest, and more favorable in working out the desired end. The prophet was informed of another period of 1335 years, at the expiration of which he was assured of standing in his lot, or inheritance. This last measuring line instead of coming short of the advent extends beyond. Daniel must be raised from the dead before he can stand in his lot. Resurrection therefore takes place before the end of 1335 years, but how long before, is a secret not revealed, but for all that we know much longer than we realize. As I have said before great changes involving the destiny of vast numbers do not occur in a moment. If the foregoing periods have a common beginning the 1290 run out in 1900, and the 1335 come to an end in 1945, so that we have already entered the remaining 45 years, and possibly much nearer the waking up of dead ones than we think. From the days of Adam to the present time, a vast multitude of God's saints have fallen asleep in death. Their coming forth from the invisible death state and their assembling in the presence of the righteous Judge can hardly be the work of a day. There will certainly be some order and arrangement in the way of organization and preparation, which in accordance with Scriptural precedents in other things, will not be done in haste. Just think of an innumerable company of people called out from every age and generation, from every nation and tongue, all strangers to each other, standing in the presence of him who is ready to reward every one as his work shall be. It almost baffles human conception to contemplate an event of such magnitude, and everlasting results for weal or woe. [illegible] revealed events with a natural point of view faith is ready to stagger and fall under the burden of believed testimony. The skeptic is ready to say you are dreaming and mentally bewildered in imagining what you cannot seriously believe. The Apostle Paul however appears to have seriously believed what is inconceivable to the natural man, for concerning the Lord's return and resurrection of dead ones he writes, "Now we beseech you brethren by the coming of our Lord Jesus Christ, and our gathering together unto him." 2 Thes. ii. 1. The ecclesia at Thessalonica had become agitated in mind, thinking that the Lord's return, and the assembling of his people was imminent or just at hand. They were mistaken not in the event itself, but in the time of its occurrence.

Our knowledge of the Creator's power, and the varied agencies at his command is so limited, and our feebleness in every way so apparent, that we should never presume to measure the possibilities of divine power. We therefore believe the testimony, because for many reasons we think it believable. The example of children in whom it is written there was no faith, is unworthy of imitation. They could not see how three millions of people with their herds and flocks could find bread and water in a wilderness of drifting sand; and hence their complaint to Moses that he had brought them into the desert to perish. Their confidence and faith extended as far as they could see, and no farther. Believing first and seeing afterward is the order of God. If we could see with the eye all that Jehovah has purposed and promised, there would be no such thing as the exercise of faith in things unseen, and what would be more unfortunate still, no such thing as perfected character. Our trust and confidence in the Creator's Word is tested and strengthened by believing what he says, creating within us an affectionate desire to know his will, and an earnest disposition to be obedient and submissive to all that he requires of us, for all his precepts are pure and good.

In concluding this article permit me to say, that there are many things transpiring to indicate that the cup of the Gentiles is full, even to the brim. The inconstant and restless condition of the world socially, religiously and politically foreshadows an approaching upheaval of discordant elements that makes even the worldly wise to fear and tremble. Peace and prosperity is the desire and ambition of the great and successful promoters of wealth, but how to allay and pacify the improvident and discontented who combine to make war on the rich is a question as yet unsettled. Man's mastery and control of nature's forces, has in no way improved the world morally. Selfish greed and criminal violence, with almost every form of wickedness and forbidden vice prevails in both high and low places. It is true that great progress has been made in the way of discovery, invention and the diffusion of knowledge, greatly stimulating human vanity and conceit, and at the same time making more and more visible the spiritual poverty that enfeebles the religious world morally.

If there are shining lights of intellectual and moral force, who seek the betterment of present conditions, they nevertheless come short of the divine purpose, and fail to purify and enable the human heart with divinely revealed thoughts, that spiritual wisdom from God above. It must not be forgotten that where there is one luminous body among men there are millions of dark ones, and darkness overcomes the light, and will continue to prevail until the Sun of righteousness shall arise.

May we not cherish the hope that within the coming 45 years this event will transpire? The all important question that comes home to every earnest and God-fearing man and woman is, am I morally fit for the Master's use? Shall I be a vessel of honor or dishonor?

GEO. MOYER.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. Good evening, your smiling faces indicate a happy frame of mind, what is it that makes you feel so joyous?

Class. The Blessed Hope, the anticipation of the good things to come, should make any believer feel happy. Besides all this, the study of God's Word in our class exercises is so delightful to us.

Teacher. What shall we study this evening?

George. I would like an investigation of

MATTHEW XXIV. 29.

Teacher. I will request Lucy to read the passage.

Lucy. It reads as follows: "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken."

Q. How many points does this passage enumerate?

A. Five.

Q. Please give them.

A. 1. The darkening of the sun.

2. The moon withdraws her light.

3. The stars shall fall from heaven.

4. The powers of the heavens shall be shaken.

5. The sign of the Son of Man in heaven.

Q When will these awe-inspiring occurrences take place?

A. "Immediately after the tribulation of those days."

Q What are we to understand by the words "immediately after?"

A. Some event, or events which succeeds a previous event, with but little or no intermission of time between them.

Q. In this passage what is this previous event?

A. Certain days of "tribulation."

Q Then before the succeeding events can take place, the previous event must be clearly shown, must it not?

A. Yes.

Teacher. Now Carrie, is it claimed that the darkening of the sun and moon has taken place?

Carrie. Yes, it is so claimed.

Q. By whom?

A. Adventists.

Q. At what date?

A. May 19, 1780.

Q. Did the stars fall also?

A. No.

Q. When do they claim that they did fall?

A. Nov. 13, 1833.

Q. When shall the stars fall?

A. "Immediately after the tribulation of those days," like the darkening of the sun and moon.

Q. What length of time elapsed between these two events?

A. Fifty-three years.

Q. Can you call that "immediately after?"

A. Hardly.

Q. What follows the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars?

A. "The sign of the Son of Man in heaven," and his "coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory."

Q. To whom will the sign and coming be visible?

A. "All the tribes (nations) of the earth."

Q. About how soon will the coming in glory take place after the darkening of the sun, etc.?

A. "This generation (which witnesseth the darkening of the sun, etc.) shall not pass till all these things be fulfilled."

Q. How many generations has passed since the alleged darkening of the sun in May 19, 1780?

A. More than two of them.

Q. Then that proves the Adventist sign false does it not?

A. Yes, most conclusively.

Teacher. Will Arlon please tell us some important event which they failed to note, which must necessarily make a failure of their signs?

Arlon. Yes. They omitted the previous event.

Q. What was that?

A. "Immediately after the tribulation of those days."

Q Upon what people should the tribulation come?

A. The people of Israel. "There shall be great distress in the land, (of Israel) and wrath upon this people (of Israel). And they (the people of Israel) shall fall by the edge of the sword, and shall be led away captive into all nations; and Jerusalem shall be trodden down of the Gentiles, until the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled. And there shall be signs in the sun, and in the moon and in the stars," etc.

Q. What event must precede the "signs in the sun, and in the moon, and in the stars?"

A. Jerusalem must cease to "be trodden down of the Gentiles."

Q. When will that event take place?

A. When "the times of the Gentiles be fulfilled."

Q. Are the times of the Gentiles fulfilled?

A. No.

Q. What makes you think so?

A. Because Israel still endures "days of tribulation," in Russian and other Northern powers, and Jerusalem is still "trodden down of the Gentiles."

Q When will the signs in the sun, moon and stars take place?

A. "Immediately after the tribulation of those days" upon Israel.

Q. Has Israel endured days of tribulation since May 19, 1780?

A. Yes. Many of them. The Adventists were very careless students to cite the event of May 19, 1780, as the fulfillment of Matt. xxiv. 29.

Teacher. We must be very careful, and note the fact that the people of Israel are pre-eminently the great sign nation to herald the incoming kingdom of God. Yours in Christ.

W. H. WILSON.

"Let us therefore fear, lest a promise being left us of entering into rest, any of you should seem to come short of it." Heb. iv. 1. Dear brother and sister in Christ, do you ever stop to think that you may be the one that has promised to his children if they are obedient to him; do you ever stop to consider the depth of Jesus' words when he says, "Many are called, but few are chosen." Matt. xxii. 14. We of the faith of Abraham, who have been called by the "gospel of the kingdom," and have put on Christ by "baptism," have we left the carnal nature in the watery grave, or did we bring it out with us? Oh, let us be careful, and look well to our own character building before we condemn our brother or sister for some fault we may see in them, you know that Jesus has said, "First cast out the beam from thine own eye, and then thou shalt see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye." Paul says, "Let us therefore fear, lest we fall short of that rest." Are we working to be classed with the "chosen few," are our works, "gold, silver and precious stones," or will they be classed as "hay, wood, or stubble?" This should be a question of great importance, to every one who has a desire to come in the "first resurrection."

Jesus says, "Two shall be in the field, one shall be taken and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill, one shall be taken and the other left." Why is one of them left? It is because their work has been of a destructible nature, while the one that is taken has worked out his or her "salvation with fear and trembling, looking unto the coming of the Lord." They have built "gold, silver and precious stones," and will have passed through the refiner's fire, and will be fitted to come in "The first resurrection to be kings and priests of God, and of Christ, and shall reign with him one thousand years. Blessed and holy is he who hath part in the first resurrection, for on such the second death hath no power."

Ah, dear brother and sister, it will be a fearful thing if we fail to have a part in that "better resurrection." Paul admonishes us to "Labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief. For the Word of God is powerful, and sharper than any two edged sword, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart."

In the third chapter of Revelations we find the language of our Savior recorded in these words, "Behold I come quickly; hold that fast which thou hast, that no man take thy crown." Him that overcometh will I make a pillar in the temple of my God, and he shall go no more out; and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the city of my God, which is new Jerusalem, which cometh down out of heaven from my God; and I will write upon him my new name." O, what a grand promise.

JOS. H. WILLIAMS.

If I Were Tom.

If I were Tom and had to work for a living, I'd keep two points in view—to serve my employer's interests and to make myself competent in some one thing. I'd be loyal to my employer, no matter what others might say of him. I'd try to feel that the business was my own, and I could give an extra half hour or an extra effort now and then without grudging. If I were left in charge of the office at certain hours, I'd guard it down to the last scrap of paper as jealously as a watch-dog. I'd be a boy that could be trusted with responsibility. If I had charge of a certain branch of work, I'd put my best wits into it to see how well I could do, how much I could improve. Instead of measuring myself and my work against my wages, I'd measure myself against the opportunity, and strive to make myself so indispensable that when a promotion was to be made or an outside offer came, I'd be sure of something better than luck on my side.

Then, too, I'd be honest through and through, no matter who might be dishonest—honest in the smallest things. And if I made a blunder I would correct it if I could, confess it frankly, and so be done with it forever not have it hanging over my head to make me afraid.

One thing more I'd do, for my own sake. I'd lay up a tiny fraction of my wages, just for the sake of having a little capital of my own, for an emergency, and to prove that I could get along without spending my last cent every week.—Jeannette N. Phillips.

ANOTHER OFFER.

There is a general waking up among our people everywhere. Our public speakers are all busy, and calls are in excess of their ability to attend them. Many places want preaching at the same time, but must wait their turn. This shows a decided interest, and a desire among our brethren to sound out the Word to the yet unsaved. All seem to realize that the night is far spent, that the time to work is short.

Brothers and Sisters, our work is not well done, and is not ready for acceptance of God, unless we have done all we can—our very utmost. We cannot admit that it is our duty to do anything at all for the advancement of the Master's cause, without conceding it is our duty to do all we can—to make a sacrifice even.

Preachers of other denominations as well as our own, know and say that the best workers in a community are those who take and read their Church paper, and keep informed as to what is being done in the various departments of the work, and are thus interested in pushing along the car of truth.

The Managers of THE RESTITUTION are endeavoring to so conduct the paper that it will be a fit aid to the Evangelist in his work. We are trying to keep it clear from that contention that leads to mischief and strife. This is done by having certain well-defined truths which are taught in God's Word plainly, as a basis of belief, and by publishing articles that accord with these declared principles. Other outside subjects might be investigated" as long as life and pencil and paper lasts, and no decision ever be reached, but we do not consider this a profitable work to engage in, hence do not ask for contributions on such subjects, and do not want them. Such are usually but the "opinion" of a man, and are often based on a mere inference at best.

This paper aims to teach the truth of the Bible, and the same is declared and believed in by our Church. We therefore believe it is a fit missionary to be sent out to the unsaved and lost of the human family. In order to make it possible for our friends to do more of this missionary work than ever before, we make this offer:

Any one sending us $10.00 may select 13 names of those not now subscribers, to whom we will send the paper for the year 1904. This makes a trifle over one-half regular price if taken in lots of $10.00 worth. You and the office practically go halves in scattering the truth of the gospel to your neighbors and friends. You who have money think of this. For $100 you can preach to an audience of 180 people over 200 sermons the coming year. Can you do better with that amount of money? You have a minister come to your neighborhood perhaps once a month, giving you two or may be three discourses each time—possibly 30 a year. When he is coming you invite your neighbors in to hear him. Suppose those neighbors have had THE RESTITUTION in their homes each week when the preacher was not there, and have read the articles, and are interested to hear more. Does not this increase largely the chances of the preacher being able to speak the very words that will start your friend on the way to the kingdom? Did you ever think of this matter? Will you not take it under consideration? We feel sure if you do you will not hesitate to go half partner with us in this work.

Who will send $10, $20, $50, $100 for this work? The best time to start it is now. Select your names and send at once, so they will get the rest of this year and all of next.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward us our works are.

Our War Atlas is all right, and the first invoice is going fast. Send for one and keep track of the movements of the contestants. A glance at the specially prepared maps show at once the places where the armies meet.

At last the Presbyterian Church of the United States and the Cumberland Presbyterian Church have agreed to unite forces. They have been divided since 1810, and this union adds the 200,000 members of the Cumberland branch to the main body.

Germany is showing great interest in the Far Eastern question. She has had for several years a port on the Yellow Sea, Kiaochau, with a few square miles of territory. She is now so afraid of the "Yellow Peril" that she has announced her intention of "policing" the entire district. If this means that she will police this part of China as England polices Egypt, or Russia polices Manchuria, it means she will occupy the territory and govern it. So frightened is the German Emperor at the supposed uprising of the Chinese that it is given out that should China strike a blow at Russia in aid of the Japs, Germany will at once take up arms for the Czar.

The War Situation.

There has been little definite news of fighting as yet, though the daily papers have many reports and rumors. The Japanese are still masters on the sea, and so far as any vessels that Russia now has that can be brought to the scene of action, she will remain master on the water. The ships at Vladivostok are not sufficient in strength to do successful battle with the Japanese, and provided they are able to leave that port can only harrass the enemy's merchant service until they meet the war vessels, when it is conceded they must follow the fate of other similar ships.

A significant rumor comes that the Czar and Sultan are trying to patch up an agreement to release the Black Sea fleet. This comes from the determination of the Sultan to renew as soon as is possible the war in Bulgaria, as he desires to punish his rebellious subjects. Last year he was doing this by simply killing all of them off. This manner was objected to by Russia and Austria, and there was a halt. Now that Russia is busy elsewhere the Sultan wishes to begin again, and wants a free hand to settle the matter as he pleases. This Russia hesitates to consent to, but as she wants her Black Sea fleet out, she may make concessions to the Porte, provided she is assured that some night the Turks will all be asleep along the Dardanelles and Bosphorus. With these ships loose, and provided they could be sailed to the Yellow Sea, the Japanese might be put to hard lines, as it is conceded that they are fine vessels. Of course this is only rumor, and there are many things to be considered. Other powers might object to this scheme.

Meanwhile Russia pushes all the troops she can over to the scene of conflict as fast as her one line of railroad will carry them. The service is poor, and the men suffer in the cold weather, with delays, lack of adequate supplies of food and clothing. An army arriving in such condition must necessarily have time to prepare for active service, but no time can be allowed to reasonable hopes, by may look for a poor showing by these men. Already there is report that 9,500 Russians have been killed in the Yalu region. No assault on Port Arthur is yet reported, as evidently the Japs are not going to throw men away in a foolhardy attempt. They will keep the port blockaded, and, meanwhile work round to the north, and cut off communications, then procede with the siege as they can.

There are many ugly rumors in diplomatic circles, and the whole world is feverish. Russia is extremely angry at England, and many look for a clash at any time. The British mission sent into Tibet rankles the Czar very much, and the mobilization of the British navy last week caused some stir. It has been shown that London is not well protected, and should a hostile fleet evade the Channel squadron and reach the Thames it would work sad havoc there. So additional fortifications are being erected, and guns placed that are of modern type. The arsenals and shipyards are working night and day, and England will be prepared for any event.

In retaliation Russia orders the mobilization of her Transcaucasian troops, and directs that they occupy the frontiers of Turkestan and Persia, ready to carry the war to India on short notice.

As is well known Russia and France are allied, but it is quite evident that the union is irksome to France, and any excuse will be used to break it off. Last week an incident happened that brought afresh to the French people the humiliation she received at the hands of Germany whereby Alsace and Lorraine were taken from her, and the cry went up that some time these provinces would be regained. Evidently there is no chance for friendship there. It is clear that the neutral nations are sure to sympathize with one or other of the contestants, and as Germany shows her sympathy for Russia, France must draw off the other way.

To show the way the wind blows a straw is thrown into the air. Reports are that the Czar personally is much aggrieved that war has started. He wished to avoid it, and reports of disasters to his fleets and armies naturally increases this feeling of depression. Emperor William has sent by special messenger a special note of hearty sympathy direct to the Czar, the closing words of which are "God is with us." This is taken to support the idea that Germany will side with Russia should any other nations be brought into the conflict.

The United States is actively working to keep the conflict confined to certain limits, guarantee the integrity of the Chinese Empire and so maintain the neutrality of China. This can be done if no other nations are brought in to the conflict, but in the event of a rupture between Russia and England, the zone of conflict would blaze along the whole Russian frontier in Asia, and speedily reach to the Baltic, and it would be then impossible to prevent all Europe from being embroiled.

We have arranged to supply our readers with a War Atlas, containing maps of the war center adjacent to the Yellow Sea, Japan, Russia, Pacific Ocean, etc. and with statistical tables of useful information, enabling one to understand the situation as the war progresses. The maps are colored, and it is substantially bound. Sent post paid for 25 cents. Send for one and keep posted.

The Thief on the Cross.

I have received a tract with the above heading and written by William Laing of Edinburgh, Scotland. The writer adheres to the commonly received interpretation, viz., that the Lord gave the thief an assurance of his personal salvation, when he, the Lord comes to reign on earth. The tract contains much redundant matter, not bearing on the matter in hand, but no new idea. He cites largely from learned men who seem to agree with him in the matter; and they build their judgment upon an old crotchet or quibble with regard to punctuation. They seem to think that they have a right in Scripture matters to place commas where they choose, which reminds me of twisting Scripture to suit preconceived ideas. The Lord's reply to the thief was, "Verily I say unto thee, Today shalt thou be with me in paradise." They claim that the comma here should be placed after "today," and not after "thee." So that the Lord's words to the thief would be, "This day I say unto thee that thou shalt be with me in paradise." The words "this day" here seem to me to be superfluous. But the Lord did not say so. The only way of examining a part of Scripture about which there are differences of opinion with regard to its real meaning is, to compare Scripture with Scripture. Mr. Laing and the learned authorities which he cites—doctors of divinity and masters of art, entirely ignore Matthew and Mark on the matter, and these cannot be at variance with Luke. While the Lord was on the cross we read that the chief priests, and scribes and elders mocked him, saying, "If he be the King of Israel, let him now come down from the cross, and we will believe him. He trusted in God let him deliver him now, if he will have him; for he said I am the Son of God. The thieves also, cast the same in his teeth." Matt. xxvii. 42-44. Here then the thieves which were crucified with him, not one of them, but both of them, joined with the chief priests and scribes in reviling and mocking the Lord. Mark says, "And they who were crucified with him, reviled him." xv. 32. To revile is to mock and to persecute. These are plain statements that cannot be gainsayed or ignored.

The thief's request then savors more of ironical sarcasm than honest sincerity. For if the thief's request were bonafide, he had then greater faith than any of the Lord's disciples or any other man, and would certainly have been taken notice of afterwards, but it is not. John takes no notice of the thief's repentance in his narration of the events at crucifixion. Neither does Paul mention the thief in his notice of the faithful in Heb. xi. The idea of the thief having all at once obtained such a strong faith when immediately before he was reviling the Lord is absurd. The thieves then in their last moments must have been indulging themselves in a little ironical mockery which is the most cutting and cruel mockery. If the thief's request was honest sincerity then Matthew and Mark were very unjust narrators, when they entirely ignored such a very important matter.

On page 3 of the tract Mr. Laing repudiates the idea that the Lord would make a promise to the thief at direct variance with his previous teaching at other times, and contrary to the apostolic deliverances; but strange to say, he makes the Lord do so; for his words to Nicodemus are, "Verily, verily, I say unto thee, except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." The word "Spirit" here is just another name for the life-giving Word of faith. The thief never was begotten by this Word, and then born of water; and consequently cannot enter into the kingdom of God. Again, the apostle says that without holiness, no man shall see the Lord. Where then was the thief's holiness? Certainly not in his criminal offences.

Let us now consider the thief's request, and the Lord's reply to it. The request was, "Lord remember me when thou comest into thy kingdom." I have heard such talk used in ironical derision by them who were no worse than a convicted thief. The reply was, "Verily I say unto thee, Today shalt thou be with me in the paradise." The Lord does not say to the thief, "Thy sins are forgiven," nor, "Thy faith hath saved thee." Neither does he say to the thief, "Thou shalt be with me in my kingdom."

Now the question is, What did the Lord mean by the term "the paradise?" Certainly not the paradise of God; for it is only to him that overcometh will it be given to eat of the tree of life there. According to lexicographers it is a Persian word, and was used by the Greeks to mean a piece of ground enclosed by a fence, a garden. Now if we turn to John's gospel, we read that the new sepulchre in which the Lord was buried that day on which he was crucified, was in a garden, or paradise, a burying ground or cemetery; for it is called the place of a skull. xix. 41. There was the Lord buried, that day on which he was crucified; and there too would the thief be buried; but not in the same sepulchre with the Lord. They had too to be buried before the day closed. Hence, the saying of the Lord to the thief, "Today shalt thou be with me in the paradise." Which was just answering a fool according to his folly. "I will mock when your fear cometh." On the the third day the Lord rose from the dead; but the thief had to remain there.

All sects of professing Christians, as far as I know, believe in the salvation of the thief; they have been taught so from their youth; and few perhaps have ever heard it called in question. It is hard for people to renounce a belief which they have held from their youth up. Few, few are able to put sympathies and anticipations aside, and receive a truth, for the simple reason that it is so. I have met Catholics to whom I have shown that the teaching of their Douay Bible was right, right opposed to the doctrine of their church. They had to tacitly admit it, they could not deny it, they said, "We have been born Catholics, and we will die Catholics."

They who hold tenaciously to the salvation of the thief, tell us that one of the thieves after reviling the Lord repented. But the Scriptures do not say so. This is just putting a meaning in the words in order to take it out again.

I cannot lay claim to originality for all that is advanced in the above, for much of it I heard nearly fifty years ago.

JAMES LAMB.

Dear Restitution:

The Church of God meeting in Hart's Hall, 1028 Gates Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., sends to all of like precious faith, best Christian love, and though perhaps a trifle late, wishes them a happy and prosperous New Year, with a prayer that their faith may increase, their knowledge of God's goodness grow, their good works expand, their charity unfold, their love ripen, their brotherly kindness improve, the spirit of God in them flourish and prayer develop so their influence will be extended and be a power for good in their several communities.

On December 27, the children of our Bible school, through their Christmas exercises, brought us one step nearer the divine throne, for their songs and recitations and readings taught us some things that adults cannot teach. Child-life in the abstract is innocent, trustful and pure, and when in its presence one is constantly reminded of the remark of the Great Teacher—"Suffer little children to come unto me, and forbid them not, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."

The programe as rendered by the children was full of interest and enjoyment.

The secretary's report showed a gain in membership of one for the year, that about one-half the sessions had an attendance of 100 per cent., that three of the scholars had a credit of 100 per cent. for attendance, that great interest had been displayed, that the spirit of God seemed to be manifest; outlined the mode of procedure, and ended by quoting the class motto—"Do justly; love mercy, walk humbly before thy God." "Looking for that blessed hope, the glorious appearing of our great God and Savior Jesus Christ."

The treasurer's report—which was written in a humorous vein, causing hearty laughter—showed collections $21.08, disbursements $21.00, balance .08.

When the time for distribution of gifts arrived Brother Benj. Macdonald stepped forward, and on behalf of the class, presented me, as the teacher, a framed photograph of the class in a group, in size 24x30 inches. The teacher was so fully taken by surprise that he was only able to say, I thank you, my dear children for this beautiful gift; still it will not be necessary for me to look upon this picture to make me think of you, for you all are, in love, engraved on my heart. Again I thank you.

The children received as gifts books, each scholar carrying home four. The children had thoughtfully provided candy in boxes for all present, thus making one grand love feast. It was indeed a day long to be remembered, and we pray our heavenly Father that he will give us freely of his spirit and grace, so that the children can be properly instructed in the knowledge of his Word and grow up to be bright and shining lights in the dark road of sin, leading many warfarers to repentance, and in the end receive that great crown of glory which is promised to all those who love his appearing.

An innovation of the Brooklyn Church this year was a Watch Night Service suggested by Sister Marion L. Donaldson, and held at the residence of our Brother William H. Donaldson, 455 Macon St. The idea to hold it in a residence was to make it more home like. In all we had an attendance of thirty-six, which when our scattered membership is considered, must be accounted very good.

The meeting was called to order at 9:30 and after a prayer and the singing of a hymn, Bro. Wm. H. Donaldson opened the exercises by giving an address on The Second Coming of our Lord and Savior, under the heads: When? Why? How? Purpose? To Whom? Other brethren following till about 11:00 o'clock when the past was brought to a close by the singing of a hymn in keeping with the subject. Then a general social meeting was held till a few minutes before midnight when Bro. Edwin S. Hardcastle was asked to lead in a prayer of thanksgiving to Almighty God for the mercies he had bestowed on us in the past and the hopes we expected to be realized in the future. During this prayer the clock struck the hour of midnight, announcing the death of the old year 1903 and the birth of the new year, 1904, and let us hope that with the old year any doubt we might have had went out with it, and a renewed spirit of faith, of love, and of progress in the work of the Master was born with the new, and should it please the everlasting Father to grant us our prayer before this year expires we shall see the King in his beauty come to take unto himself his own. "Come Lord Jesus, Come quickly."

The Watch Night meeting was such a success, I expect if should the Lord tarry it will be a regular meeting with us in the future, as for me I know of no better way to bring in the New Year than with praise and thanksgiving. Shortly after midnight we were invited to the dining room where the table was spread with sandwiches and cake and fruit, coffee and tea was served, and about 1:15 A. M. on New Year's day, after singing, "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," etc., those not connected with the household, left for their homes, each congratulating the other on seeing the birth of another year and under such favorable circumstances.

On the Sunday morning following, in open session of the church, a vote of thanks was given to Bro. and Sister Wm. H. Donaldson, for their untiring energy, their unselfish devotion, their ardent zeal and Christian love in the supplying of their home and the refreshments to the church. Bro. Donaldson remarked, "Give it all to Sister Donaldson, she's the one deserving it," and with this the matter was closed for this time.

ALEX D. DONALDSON.

Navies of the World.

Of vessels, battleships, cruisers, and scouts of over 1,000 tons now in commission in the world's navies Great Britian has 201, aggregating 1,516,000 tons displacement; France, 98, aggregating 576,000 tons displacement; Germany, 79, aggregating 388,000 tons; Russia, 43, aggregating 315,000 tons; United States, 35, aggregating [illegible] Italy, 33, aggregating 259,000 tons; Japan, 31, aggregating 208,000 tons. But if the naval vessels now in course of building in the world's shipyards were completed the tonnage of the United States would be more than doubled and she would occupy third place instead of fifth, with France still second and with England's power only three times as great as ours.

In Liverpool, England, about one-seventh of its inhabitants are found in its chapels or churches, in the morning service, but with one exception, the number is much smaller in the evening. The Bishop of London states that in that city only one in eighty of the working men attend church.

Religion is not the conception of God, but the love of him. It is not the abstract idea of right, but the practical doing of right. It is not the absolute formula of truth. The substance is more than the shadow.—Austin Garver.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

The Black Hills.

The Black Hills, in the southwest part of the State of South Dakota, produces one-third of the gold found in the United States, and is said to be the richest one hundred square miles in the world. A new booklet on the Black Hills has been issued by the North-Western Line, with a fine detailed map of this wonderful region. Send four cents in stamps for copy of the booklet. W. B. Kniskern, P. T. M., Chicago, Ill.—Mar. 26.

Be Patient.

Be patient! Never mind if the rain has spoiled your plans. Put on a cheery face and see if you cannot have a sunshiny day indoors, if not out. If your work is harder than you thought it would be, and you are hindered by unexpected difficulties, don't be impatient, but set about it cheerfully and patiently to find out where the trouble lies. Don't loose your temper and scold and fret and fume. You will not get on a bit faster, and you will only make yourself and everyone about you more uncomfortable than ever. It may not be very pleasant to have an accident just as you getting along nicely with your work, but it is a great deal more unpleasant to hear scolding and angry words over the mishap.

There are very few things in our every day life that are worth losing patience over. Most of the worries and annoyances that fret us so are over in a moment and leave no trace on the record of the day? But the spirit that lets itself be ruffled by these trifles, the temper that flashes out in hasty words, the impatience that will not wait until the momentary trouble is past, all these leave their mark on the heart and face and voice. Just as plainly as the little black types print the news in the columns of a newspaper, so do these little things, day after day, print themselves in the lines and curves of your face. Have you not sometimes said of some dear old lady, "what a patient face she has." But that look was not put on all at once; it was written there, line by line, character by character; perhaps through bitter suffering that would make these little troubles seem, oh, so trivial; perhaps by many disappointments, but always by daily and hourly exercise of patience, in the tiniest things as well as in great ones.

Do you ever think that these little trials are meant as a sort of practice for the great troubles of life? Trouble—real trouble, I mean—comes to all of us. If we waste our strength and patience on trifles, how shall we have strength to endure the hard things that come to us only too soon?

A little child that has never played and run and jumped, has very little strength. It takes steady exercise to develope the muscle of which you boys are so proud, and make the body strong and symmetrical.

So if you do not exercise that power in your character which helps you to bear annoyances patiently, when the really great troubles come you will find you have no strength to endure them. So remember that God, who knows just what children need to make them strong and useful men and women, let us use these petty vexations as a preparation for the hard things that lie before us. If we school ourselves in our childhood to be patient and brave, we shall find it easy to be so as we grow older. The muscles grow stronger and harder, you know, with use: but if we will not try to learn to be patient, we shall some day find, oh, such great need of all the patience and endurance that we can muster; and then, what if we find that we have thrown away all the training that God meant for us, and that we are like the little invalid child, whose weak limbs refuse to carry him when the road grows a little steep or rough.

Many Jews in China.

"There are 5,000,000 Jews in China who speak the language fluently and who wear cues and strictly adhere to all the ordinary customs and dress of the natives." Such was the remarkable statement of Joseph Sose, a well known Western contractor, who has just completed a trip around the world.

"When I arrived at Shanghai," he continued, "I made the acquaintance of a Chinese Jew of high standing. He rather startled me when he said that the Jews came to China 3,000 years ago, and their religion had been handed down through the ages.

They have adopted, he said, all the Chinese customs, and speak the language as fluently. If not more so, than they do the Hebrew. This old gentleman introduced me to many Jews, and as they all spoke the Hebrew language, I had no difficulty in conversing with them. I was shown a number of synagogues, and learned that the ritual is similar to that used by the Jews all over the world. Saturday is a holiday with them, and they observe all the other Jewish holidays. The Jew is more honored in China than he is in any other country in the world. In fact, the Chinese who are heathens are more quickly converted to their religion than they are to Christianity. If a Jew has a complaint to make, he is given every consideration by the government."

Poetry.

God's Eternal Goodness.

I dimly guess from blessings known
Of greater out of sight,
And with the chastened Psalmist, own
His judgments, too, are right.

I long for household voices gone,
For vanished smiles I long,
But God hath led my dear ones on,
And leaves do me wrong.

I know not what the future hath
Of marvel or surprise,
Assured alone that life and death
His mercy underlies.

And so beside the silent sea
I wait the muffled oar;
No harm from him can come to me
On ocean or on shore.

I know not where his islands lift
Their fronded palms in air;
I only know I cannot drift
Beyond his love and care.

The Signs of Our Lord's Return.

They are given by the Master himself in Matt. xxiv., Mark xiii. and Luke xxi.; given expressly for the purpose of enlightening his servants as to the time of his return, and although volumes have been written in explanation of his words still the mass of readers have no clear conception of the import of our Lord's words. Without doubt the darkening of the sun, moon, and falling of the stars are the immediate signs of his approach. Now the question, Have watchers seen the signs that indicate his near coming or have they not? I unhesitatingly answer without fear of successful contradiction that they have not. And for the following reasons, First, Because the time indicated in the record, for the signs have not yet come. Matthew says, Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened. And Luke says, But in those days, after that tribulation, the sun shall be darkened. What are the days here referred to, and the tribulation? Luke gives the answer, xxi. 22, For these be the days of vengeance, that all things which are written may be fulfilled. The days of Israel's down treading; the days when he was to receive double for all his sins; the days of the rich man's torment in hell as foretold by the prophet Isaiah. Chap. v. And the horrors of Kishineff proves that the days of tribulation and dispersion are not yet come to an end. Therefore the time for the darkening of the sun has not yet come. In a Sabbatarian exposition of the 24th chapter of Matt. by James White, he refers to Dan. ix. 26-27, and says, Here is a clear prophecy of the destruction of Jerusalem by the Roman armies. Our Lord referred his disciples to the book of Daniel, and taught them to read and understand, and when they saw what was there predicted take place, they must make their escape. Ver. 21, For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be. Now, Lo and behold, he says, We take the position that the tribulation here mentioned is the tribulation of the church of Jesus Christ, and not that of the Jews at the destruction of Jerusalem. Why take such an unreasonable position ignoring the force of the word "then" and the whole context? The reason is evident when we read farther in his exposition. It being written that "Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heaven shall be shaken. And then shall appear the sign of the Son of Man in heaven." In order to sustain the position that the dark day of May 19, 1780 was a sign of the Lord's coming it was necessary to show that it occurred in the days spoken of by Christ, and after the tribulation of the days. Hence the necessity of the Elder taking the position that the "tribulation" was on the Christians and not the Jews. Therefore he selects the 1260 years of Papal persecution which did not commence until some 500 years after the destruction of Jerusalem; as the "tribulation" spoken of by our Lord. It is one of the most plain cases of handling the Word deceitfully that is on record. The 1260 days ended according to the Sabbatarian position in A. D. 1798, eighteen years after the dark day of 1780. The shortening of the days being caused by the Reformation.

The reader will notice that in the days spoken of in Matt. xxiv. that not only was the sun to be darkened, but the stars were to fall, which according to the Adventist view did not take place until A. D. 1833, 88 years after the ending of the days, selected by the Sabbatarians, rendering their position untenable after being taken at such a sacrifice of truth and reason. If we submit to be led by the teaching of the Bible we shall have no trouble in understanding the signs of the Master's return. Said signs being in the sun, moon and stars. In Gen. xxxvii. 9 Joseph says, The sun and the moon and the eleven stars made obeisance to me.....and his father rebuked him, saying, Shall I and thy mother and thy brethren.....bow down ourselves to the earth to thee? Nevertheless when they went into Egypt to buy bread in the time of famine, they did bow down to Joseph. The same symbolism is used when Babylon was conquered by the Medes and Persians. And when we come to the account of the same event in the Revelation of John in Patmos, we find the "earthquake, the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars" under the opening of the sixth seal preceded and followed by symbols, which is proof positive that the phenomena is symbolic, and not literal. Those wishing to examine the Bible on this point will do well to examine Gen. xxxvii. 9; xli. 6; xliii. 28; Isa. xiii. 10; Micah iii. 6; Matt. xxiv. 29; Mark xiii. 24; Luke xxi. 25; Acts ii. 20. If we examine the metallic image of Daniel ii. 43, we find that we are in the time when the clay mixes with the iron, or in other words, when the common people are taking interest in the affairs of the government, and are demanding that they be consulted in the affairs of state. These conditions exist more or less in all the countries of the world; and when the war between capital and labor and kindred questions, assumes such proportions as to threaten to overturn the ruling powers of the earth, then will the Gentile sun and moon be darkened and their political and ecclesiastical stars fall to the earth. Then will come the time of trouble "such as never was since there was a nation." Dan. xii. 1. These conditions will produce the "great earthquake" of (Rev. vi. 12) which causes the darkening of the sun and moon, and the falling of the stars—the political and ecclesiastical stars. The earth is fast filling up the picture given by Christ when he compared it to the days of Noah. "Corrupt.....and filled with violence. Gen. vi. 11. What we see now are the forerunners, the premonitions, the hand writing on the wall which indicates the approach of the time when [illegible] shall precede the setting up of the kingdom of God. The nations of the earth will demonstrate their inability to govern the people, or mankind will show themselves unfit for self government—then will come deliverance by the establishment of the kingdom.

GEO. FRANCIS.

The Devil and Satan.

Do the Scriptures teach that there is a personal being, (not human) called the devil and Satan? I answer, yes; as the following quotations will positively prove. In respect to the original words for devil and Satan Cruden says: "Devil comes from the Greek work Diabolos, which signifies a calumniator or accuser, hence he is called the accuser of the brethren in Rev. xii. 9, 10. Satan, Sathan or Sathanas. This is a mere Hebrew word and signifies an adversary, an accuser, an enemy." With these introductory remarks I will proceed with the testimony proving the correctness of the above position. The first testimony you will find in the book of Job i. 6 to 12, Now there was a day when the sons of God came to present themselves before the Lord and Satan came also among them. And the Lord said unto Satan, Whence comest thou? And Satan answered the Lord and said, From going to and fro in the earth, and from walking up and down in it. And the Lord said unto Satan, Hast thou considered my servant Job that there is none like him in all the earth, a perfect and upright man, one that feareth God and escheweth evil? Then Satan answered the Lord and said, Doth Job fear God for naught, hast not thou made a hedge about him and about all that he hath on every side? Thou hast blest the work of his hands, and his substance is increased in the land. But put forth thine hand now and touch all that he hath and he will curse thee to thy face. And the Lord said unto Satan, Behold all that he hath is in thy power, only upon himself put not forth thine hand. So Satan went forth from the presence of the Lord. The above quotation with what is said in chapter ii. 1 to 7 prove as positively the personality of Satan as they do the personality of God. I would also refer to Rev. iii. 1, 2, which is in perfect harmony with the quotations from the book of Job.

We will pass on to the temptation of Jesus as recorded in Matthew, Mark and Luke. A circumstance which could not have taken place literally without a personality on both sides. According to Paul as stated in 2 Cor. xi. 13 to 15 Satan is capable of presenting himself quite favorably. He says he is transformed into an angel of light.

Paul in Eph. vi. 11 says, 'Put on the whole armor of God that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil. An important exhortation indeed. The devil is one thing and his wiles another. And the Bible says both him and his works will be destroyed. In 1 Pet. v. 8, 9, he is represented as going about seeking whom he may devour.

And James says, iv. 7, 8, that we must resist him and draw nigh to God. These quotations also prove to my mind his personality as positively as they prove the personality of God to whom we are to draw nigh.

Again in 2 Tim. ii. 24, we read, "And the servant of the Lord must not strive, but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves, if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledgement of the truth that they may recover themselves out of the snare of the devil who are taken captive by him at his will. In this quotation the devil is said to have a will, which denotes a personality. In John viii. 44, Jesus said to certain Jews: They were of their father the devil, and his lust they would, that he was a murderer from the beginning and abode not in the truth.

Again, Paul represented a certain opposer as a child of the devil, an enemy of righteousness. Paul also in 2 Thes. ii. 9 speaking of the man of sin, said his works would be after the manner of Satan with all power and lying wonders.

Jude also said that Satan disputed with Michael about the body of Moses, which proves that two personalities were talking together. Jesus told Peter that Satan desired to have him that he might sift him as wheat, which is additional proof of his personality. A person is one thing and his works another. His works represent his character. The following quotations prove the destruction of the devil and all his works which will be fully accomplished at the judgment. Please read Heb. ii. 14, 15; 1 John iii. 8; Rev. xx.

In conclusion I would say that the words devil and Satan like some other words in the Bible, do not always mean the same. The meaning of such words be determined by the connection or context. That the above words are used in a secondary or accommodated sense no sane person will deny, but that they also are used in a literal sense, no person who believes the Bible ought to deny. God's truth will remain when error goes down, never to raise up again. Yours for the truth and nothing but the truth.

To the Illinois Brethren

The time has come for us to decide whether we will have a summer Bible school again in connection with our annual conference or not. The enrollment at our school last summer was 28 with an attendance throughout of 21. The brethren are invited to write me. This applies particularly to Bereans, but generally to all. If you have spoken personally to me about it, just act in the matter as if you had not spoken, for I forget so easily. One good sister spoke in appreciation of the school said she knew of two whom she would assist if we had the school this summer, but because I failed at the time to make a note of it, I have forgotten who it was. In replying to this simply say whether you wish to have it or not and what can be done by way of attendance from your locality. Any replying who were in attendance last summer are also requested to suggest any changes that might prove favorable. If the school is held, a general announcement will be published in a short time. Please write now.

S. J. LENDSAY, Evangelist.

Notice.

To the Brethren in Iowa:

I have decided to take up the Lord's work in Iowa, for several months at least and am ready to respond to all calls for meetings, funerals, weddings, or any other calls pertaining to the work of a minister of the gospel.

Address me at Fort Dodge, Iowa, L. Box 86.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres Iowa Con.

Extracts from Letters.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I am still rejoicing in Christ Jesus, for whom I am looking to come and take his waiting ones' home. May God's blessing be upon all of his people everywhere. I am, as ever, his child in Jesus.

MARTHA A. WAYSHIRE.

Household of the One Faith:

I have much enjoyed reading your letters. It is a love feast. We had a real treat on Jan. 21. Bro. R. S. Dwiggins from Ontario, Cal., came and preached for us. Bro. R. O. Steffa and family, also C. E. Hatch and family came over from Pomona, and we had a good all day meeting at our house which I enjoyed very much. I believe we are living in the last days spoken of in 2 Tim. iii. Let us study to show ourselves approved and ever be watching for our King. Yours.

S. J. LANPHEAR.

Dear brothers and sisters:

We are alone here in the faith of life only through Christ at his coming. In John viii. I find that Jesus spake to the scribes and pharisees these words, "I am the Light of the world, he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life. Then said Jesus again unto them, I go my way and ye shall seek me and shall die in your sins. Whither I go ye cannot come. Then said the Jews, Will he kill himself because he saith, Whither I go ye cannot come? And he said unto them, Ye are from beneath, I am from above. Ye are of this world, I am not of this world. They understood not that he spake to them of the Father. They said unto him, Abraham is our Father. Jesus saith unto them, If ye were Abraham's children ye would do the works of Abraham. He that is of God heareth God's words. Ye therefore, hear them not because ye are not of God. Verily, verily, I say unto you, If a man keep my saying he shall never see death. Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day. And he saw it and was glad.' I would ask the brothers and sisters to pray that all my sins be blotted out of the book of remembrance.

Your Sister in Christ.

JULIA STRICKLEY.

To the household of faith:

Several have written us to know where we were, and what we were doing? Why, bless your hearts, we are at our little home in Dutton, trying to keep warm. But I tell you wood and coal are suffering in the attempt, for with the thermometer below zero by the week it takes some exertion on part of both of us to keep from freezing. We are both in usual health, but it has been so extremely cold, railroad traffic so delayed—we only kept up our home appointment. But (D. V.) as soon as it warms up we will be about the work which is awaiting us. We are reading and watching the signs of hastening with much interest.

M. A. WOODWARD.

Editor Restitution:

As my time is almost up for the dear old paper, I will send for 1904. I love it as it is such a help in explaining that blessed Book that tells us what to do to be saved. I was given a present to get a new dress but I send for THE RESTITUTION. I love to read the love feast. I am trying, in my weak way, to meet you all in the blessed kingdom when Jesus comes. Pray for me that I may walk in that straight and narrow way.

MRS. M. E. DANIELS.

Dear Brother Underwood:

I have taken THE RESTITUTION from the first, when Bro. Marsh was in the good work. I am past 75 and hope to read the glad tidings for many years.

Your Brother, in hope of the soon coming kingdom.

JESSE M. SMITH.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Getting Things Mixed.

The confusion of tongues at Babel was not greater than the confusion of tongues at the present time. Especially is this true in relation to some of the skeptics and church members of these days. There are men who act and argue on the principle that everybody inside of a church is a saint, and every one outside of it is a sinner. The fact is there are men in the church who are infidels, sinners, and reprobates at heart; while there are men outside of the church who are Christians in aim and life, if not also in theory and opinion. There are church members that have been trained up under worldly and wicked influences, who are selfish, and mean and contemptible; while there are men outside of all churches who were brought up by praying mothers and godly fathers, who though repelled from the ranks of nominal christendom are yet in truth more Christian-like in some aspects of their character, than many of those who claim to bear the name of Christ.

We heard of a man who in consequence of indorsing the notes of a friend was suddenly reduced from affluence to poverty. In one day his wealth was taken from him, and he was thrown into bankruptcy. When the business was transacted he gave up everything, and said to his wife, "You go and search the drawers, and see that there is not a penny left; I will not perjure myself, if I have to take my family and go to the poor-house." He made a full disclosure of his assets, handed everything to the creditors, and was obliged to get credit for the first pint of milk which they bought afterwards for the baby to drink. That man had the name of being an unbeliever. Now how far shall we have to go to find another man who, so far from holding himself bound to pay debts contracted by others, would repudiate his own honest obligations, and settle with his creditors by paying them ten or twenty per cent. of their claims; robbing the poor and wronging the honest people who had confided in him, and conveying his property to his wife or his friends, eluding the claims of justice and law, and still remaining a member "in good and regular standing" in some professedly Christian church and calling himself a Christian, while other men who have more truth and honesty in one of their little fingers than such a man has in his whole body, are nevertheless counted as reprobates and infidels?

What is the conclusion? Simply this: Things are a good deal mixed in this world. There are men who are practicing Christianity under the name of infidelity, and there are those who are practicing infidelity under the garb of Christianity.

In these days of deception labels go for nothing; the only way to get at the facts in a given case is to open every parcel, and inspect every article separately. It will not answer to ticket a man an infidel because he calls himself so. The teachings of a godly mother and the prayers of a faithful father and the words of the living God treasured in the mind in childhood's hours, may exercise an influence which is none the less real because it is unrecognized and unacknowledged.

May the Lord deliver his Church from the curse of infidels and scoundrels within it pale, and gather in the honest men who, though in the mists of doubt and darkness and uncertainty, yet fear God and work righteousness and are accepted with him.—H. L. H.

Russia's Ambition.

Macedonia, Mesopotamia, and Manchuria are the three key words to Russian diplomacy. The political ideal that Russia has cherished for many decades is the dream of obtaining undisputed water-ways to the Southern Seas. Great as is Russia territorially, she can now hardly send a ship to sea except down the Baltic, whose shores frown with German, Swedish and Danish forts, and whose entrance is an easily defensible strait three miles wide. It is true that Russia possesses a haven of her own in the Pacific, Vladivostork, but that port is frozen up part of the year. It has become, therefore, of great importance to Russia, to secure the somewhat better privileges of the port of Newchwang, on the warmer Yellow Sea, and to hold other ports in Manchuria, and it is her particular desire to pre empt either Fusan or Masampho in Southern Korea, For those ports Manchuria is the natural territorial background.

Mesopotamia stands in a similar defensive and extensive relation to the Persian Gulf. Russia thinks she can manipulate Persia, but has encountered in Great Britain an obstinate foe to her maritime programme in the Persian Gulf. The late tour of Lord Curzon in the Persian Gulf—whose flagship was accompanied by several warships—as interpreted by significant utterances in the British press, has made it evident that England has not the slightest intention of relinquishing any advantages already possessed by her in the Gulf.

Macedonia in its present disturbed condition may seem to lie open for a Russian advance even to the shores of the Bosphorus. But again British diplomacy blocks the pathway of Russian aspiration, and the Russian war-ships in the Black Sea remain bottled up in that rather insignificant sheet of water. The shores of the Black Sea to-day are, however, dotted with arsenals and food depots, which some-how some day are intended to work into the scheme of a general Russian advance. Just at present Manchuria seems the biggest word in the Russian diplomacy, and the opposition to be encountered in that quarter, from Japan alone. Russian military men affect to despise. These maritime ambitions of Russia may sooner or later involve her in a war into which other Powers may eventually be drawn. Russia—whose sign has been a bear, but which now gives some indications of desiring to adopt as her symbol a whale—a land tried power at sea; and if she precipitates a war over the issue of additional ports, will be running vast risks in pursuit of a somewhat doubtful prize.—Zion Herald.

"Here Am I; Send Me."

Christian, is this the desire of your heart? Do you fully realize what it means to be sent and used by the Lord?

Some one has said, "A bar of iron of five dollars' value, in its natural state, made into horse shoes is worth twelve dollars; into needles three hundred and fifty dollars; into penknife blades three thousand; and into balance wheels for watches two hundred and fifty thousand dollars. Man in his natural state is of little worth, but melted, pounded, straightened, chastened, afflicted, persecuted, tormented, if he submissively and patiently accepts of all, becomes valuable and useful proportionate with the suffering and discipline endured. So pray 'make me useful' means put me through these trying processes."

To be sent and used by the Lord "is worth all it costs, and it costs all you have." Beloved, are you willing for the Lord to send you? If so, remember, that to be victorious over all these things and glorify God, you must throw yourself into God's service with all your energy and might; with a determination that will defy everything.

"Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might; for there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom, in the grave, whither thou goest." Then the love and the faith will come that will enable you to say, "I can do all things through Christ which strengtheneth me." Also, "In all these things we are more than conquerors through him that loved us." Jesus said, "In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer; I have overcome the world."

Time is short, "That thou dost, do quickly."

Bible and Archaeology.

Roseburg, Or., Feb. 3.—The fires of Hades have burned with unsteady light in past ages, and have cast only a fitful glare upon the human pathway. But the shadows are dissolving. The 20th century sees the fires of genius burn with brighter flame, and the darkness of night is turning to the light of day.

Tribes and nations with their civilizations, have come and gone, and many of them have long been shrouded in the mists of doubt or fable, but the X-ray of investigation is bringing up many lost truths. When Dr. Schliemann explored the site of Troy of mythology he found beneath the dust of centuries the foundations of Troy, a veritable city, and so confirmed the existence of that ancient city with its culture, its struggles, and its heroes. Homer's Iliad is thereby proven to be founded upon solid facts.

In a similar way the devout scientist has been delving into the rubbish of millenniums. In Bible lands the pick and shovel have laid bare foundations of old civilizations of which we read in Scripture. As modern archaeology has proven Homer's Iliad to rest upon a basis of facts, likewise the Bible in its historical statements is proving to be authentic. Attempts have been made to destroy confidence in the Bible as our moral and religious guide, by throwing discredit upon its historical statements. It has been declared wholly improbable that Abraham traveled from Ur of the Chaldees to Palestine, as the distance was too great, and that Palestine was unknown to the Chaldeans at that early period. But the times were not so primitive as some imagine. It is now known that a high state of civilization had for centuries existed in Egypt, Assyria and Babylonia. An expedition from Babylonia to Palestine was recorded on the monuments 1600 years before the days of Abraham. The journey of the patriarch has been eclipsed in these latar times by Boone, who penetrated the wilds of Kentucky through a howling wilderness, and amid dangers from savage foes. The journey of Abraham does not compare with the undertaking of Lewis and Clark a century ago, when they faced terrors of the great desert, the rugged mountains, the pathless forests, and the wily redman, that they might give this great Northwest to the civilized world.

Some of the higher critics have ridiculed the story in Genesis xiv, which describes the campaign of four kings, from Babylonia, against the five kings of the West. They assume the distance was too great, and the country unknown to the invaders. It appears, however, that four campaigns of Sargon, a king who reigned about 2000 years before this event mentioned in Genesis, have been traced among the ancient records. He led his victorious troops from the distant East into the Mediterranean country, and in his last campaign erected a statue of himself upon the shore of the great sea. Sargon's son, whose name signified "King of the four quarters of the world," succeeded him to the throne. He extended his kingdom far beyond the limits of Babylonia. An inscription with his portrait has been found in Mesopotamia, and an alabaster vase with inscriptions telling of his conquest of Sinai have been discovered. The objections offered to the story of Genesis xiv therefore prove to be groundless.

The four kings mentioned in this chapter were Amraphel, king of Shinar, Arioch of Ellasar, Chedorlaomer of Elam, and Tidal of Goiim. Bricks found in the ruins of Babylonia, and now in the British Museum are stamped with the inscription, "Arioch, King of Ellasar." One of his inscriptions has been translated as follows: "To the god Nin-Girsu, his king Arioch, the shepard of the possessions of Nipur, the executor of the orders of the holy tree of Eridu, the shepard of Ur and the temple, King of Ellasar, King of Sumer and Acead, on the day when the great gods, Ann, Bel and Ea gave into my hands the ancient city of Erech, I built the temple, the abode of his pleasure for the preservation of my life." That ancient King was religious, and like modern royalty bore many titles, Professor Pinches found a tablet describing the wars of Amraphel. In this description appear the names of Arioch, Tidal and Chedorlaomer. So, the supposed romance of Genesis xiv proves to be a sober fact.

An ancient library of baked clay tablets has been found at Tel-el-Amarna, 170 miles south of Cairo. It contained a letter from Ohed Tob, a vassal king, to the Egyptian Pharaoh because he has been appointed to his office, not by Pharaoh, but by "the power of the Great King," whose temple was on Mount Moriah. It states that it was not from "his father or his mother that he inherited his kingly office. He was King of Jerusalem because he was priest of his god. This case is parallel with that of Melchizedek, whom Scripture declared to be "without father, without mother, without descent." Melchizedek, the priest-king, was one of a succession which claimed appointment from God. The name Melchizedek has been found on some of the clay tablets. He can no longer be looked upon as a myth of the Bible.

Amraphel whose Assyrian name was Hammurabi, was a powerful king. He reigned 55 years. During 43 years he exhibited great energy in promoting public enterprises and constructing temples, canals and granaries. Post roads and commercial highways crossed his domain, courts of justice were established, elaborate codes of laws were in existence, and he introduced a well-defined system of taxation. One of the tablets record a very suggestive incident. It seems a prisoner was tried and found guilty of some offense and a fine of 400 ounces of gold was imposed upon him. The king, however, very graciously remitted the fine. We might think the prisoner highly elated over this, but the record further states that they retained 328 ounces of the gold for legal and servant's expenses. It reminds us of Jesus' words when he said, "Agree with thine adversary quickly, lest haply the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison. Verily thou shalt by no means come out thence, till thou have paid the last farthing."

Bribery is not a new thing under the sun. Amraphel sent an order to an officer: "Thus saith Amraphel, one hath reported unto me saying, bribery hath taken place in Burgur-gurri (the town of metalworkers) and the man who took the bribe and the witnesses are here. Now, this same one (Sumaa) I am despatching unto thee. When thou shalt behold this tablet thou shalt examine the matter, and if bribery hath taken place set a seal upon the money, or whatsoever was offered as a bribe, and cause it to be brought to me. And the man who took the bribe and the witness thou shalt send unto me." The code of laws in force during his reign has been unearthed. It was written in Babylonian script. The monument on which it was written is a block of stone nine feet by seven and has a rounded top. It is written on both sides. The king is represented as standing before the god Shamash, who is seated, and is handing the king the roll of the law. The code contains 282 distinct laws. It is 800 years older than the Mosaic code, and more elaborate. An awful severity pervades the code of Amraphel. In it the rights of the strong are more pronounced than those of the weak. But the Mosaic code is kindlier in spirit and shows a higher type of morality and more humane regard for life. The Amraphel code is civil, while the Mosaic is religious. The former are the laws of a tyrant guided by a high principle, while the latter contain the laws of a democratic people ruled by an exalted idea of justice.

Assyrian records mention Ahab as being first king of Samaria. This is in agreement with 1 Kings xvi: 28. Other kings identified are Ahaz, Hiram, Hezekiah, Manasseh and Ben-Hadad. An obelisk in the British Museum bears the name of Jehu, an Israelitish king 895 B. C. The inscription reads: "Tribute of Jehu, silver, gold, lead, wood, royal treasure I received." Shalmaneser was the conquering king. In one of the records left by Nebuchadnezzar is mention of his campaign in Egypt, of which Jeremiah and Ezekiel prophesied (Ezek. xxix: 19). References to this campaign have also been found in the Egyptian monuments. The Babylonians swept northern Egypt, Amasis, the Pharaoh, having slain Pharaoh Hophra, whose miserable end was foretold by Jeremiah (xiv: 30). The names of Joseph and Jacob have been discovered. It seems in course of time those heroes of Hebrew history were canonized and their names given the cities Joseph-el and Jacob-el. The names of Shem and Ham, the sons of Noah, have also been deciphered. The name of the first king of the dynasty signifies "Shem is my father." An epic poem found in Arabia describes the journey of Nimrod to the Isle of the Blessed, the abode of Noah, his ancestor. Thus, from the voiceless past are arising mute witnesses to confirm the Bible as authentic in matters of history and worthy our confidence.—George H. Bennett, in Oregonian.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Two trains a day Chicago to California, Oregon and Washington- Chicago, Union Pacific & North-Western Line.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise," "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Hope.

"For we are saved by the hope."

O beacon shining forth afar,
O light serene, O guiding star,
To that eternal harbor where
Is rest unchangeable and fair.
We hail thee, bless thee, steer by thee,
Unmindful of the stormy sea.

By no dark passing cloud obscured
Never by the fatal winds allured,
Unshaken by the shocks of time,
Steadfast, immovable, sublime—
The glory floods the Port of Life
And lifts us from the billow's strife.

For us, for those in ages gone,
Thy quiet beams have ever shone;
Through mighty purposes of old,
Pointing the promised rest,
Until the tempests are no more
And we have reached the wondrous shore.

—W. I. Crockett.

Communicated.

Dear Restitution:

Everything indicates that we are in the very last days of Gentile times. Indeed I am inclined to think that Gentile times have run out and that we are now in the lapping over period between the ending of the times of the Gentiles and the commencement of the millennium age, like it was in the days of John the Baptist when six months time intervened between the closing of the Jewish age and the commencement of the Christian era.

These things being true we ought to give earnest heed to the words of Jesus when he says, "Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh." Matt. xxv. 13. "What I say unto you I say unto all. Watch." Mark xiii. 37. Paul says, "Let us watch and be sober." 1 Thes. v. 4. John the Revelator says, "Blessed is he that watcheth." Rev. xvi. 15. The reason for the watchfulness is the coming of the Son of Man. Joseph A. Seiss, pastor of a Lutheran Church in Philadelphia, in his book on the ten virgins, says, "Preachers seldom urge their people to watch for the coming of the Son of Man. Death is the event to which they refer."

It is not enough that we embrace all the doctrines of Christianity, we must receive them in their revealed connection in the Scriptures. The Christian church is contemplated as ever continuing until Christ comes and grace ends in glory. Death never once appears upon the whole length of the way, except as here and there as a shadow to which no attention is paid. It is the appearing of Jesus that we are to watch for. What an important thing it would be to the people of the world if all the preachers of all the churches were as near right upon the question of the second advent of Jesus as this man is. But alas, the most of them are ignorant of the prophecies relating to his coming. How many will deny him when he comes the second time as the Jews did when he came the first time. Let us examine ourselves carefully and see if are in the faith. Are we sure we understand all the prophecies relating to his coming and relating to what takes place at the time of his coming and soon thereafter. Do we fully believe and understand all the prophecies and all the teaching relating to the restitution of all things spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began. Are we absolutely certain that we are not occupying places similar to the five foolish virgins. They were baptized believers and are therefore called virgins. They were Adventists who had fallen asleep while they were awaiting the coming of the Master. They heard the cry, "Behold the Bridegroom cometh, go ye out to meet him," and waked out of their sleep and started to meet their Lord, but their lamps went out, and they were left in darkness. Shall we be able to do what they failed to do? Have we sufficient knowledge of the prophecies to enable us to understand God's plans relating to the restitution and kindred questions. How can we ask our heavenly Father to make us members of the bride of Jesus unless we are fitted by education in the things concerning the kingdom to be set up and the work of restitution to make us helpful and useful members of the bride.

The marriage relation is a sacred relation, God has made it so. The loving Father who has an only Son will be exceedingly careful what woman he selects for a bride for his Son. Not only the son's happiness, but his usefulness as a member of society, and as a worker in the vineyard of the Lord, depends upon the selection. He must have one who will [illegible] qualifications of a good and helpful wife. Will not our heavenly Father act with as much zeal, good sense and judgment in the selection of a bride for his only Begotten Son, as a human father would exercise. My well beloved reader, do not let us make any mistake in this matter. We may know enough and have done enough to insure us the reward of eternal life. Our name may be written in the Book of Life, that is one of the requirement of those who would become a member of the bride, but that alone is not enough. There are at least three things required of those who would become members of the bride of Christ, viz: first, They must hear the gospel, believe it, repent of their sins and be baptized into Christ, and thus get their names written in the Book of Life. The bride is selected or elected from among those whose names are written in the Lamb's Book of Life. They are taken from those who are members of God's family. They are the second Eve and will become the wife of God's only begotten Son.

Second, They must have a wedding garment on. What is the wedding garment? The answer is found in Rev. xix. 8 as follows, "To her was granted that she should be arrayed in fine linen clean and white, for the fine linen is the righteousness of the saints." How can we obtain this wedding garment? By living pure, clean, righteous lives. The foolish virgins had both the foregoing qualifications, but they lacked the third, which consists in a thorough knowledge of the prophecies which foretell the work to be accomplished by Jesus and his bride when he comes, and during the ages beyond. We cannot be prepared to perform the duties which the bride will be called upon to perform, unless we know what the work is that is to be accomplished. There is only one possible source of information from which we can draw light on this important question. It must come from the prophecies. The work to be done is in the future.

If it is conceded that there will be no restitution, as some people claim, then the bride will not have anything to do, in such a case every one who had heard the gospel, believed it, repented of their sins and been baptized would possess the necessary qualifications to fit them to become members of the bride. If the whole duty of the bride simply consisted in accepting eternal life, at the hands of our Creator and thus be taken away to meet the Lord in the air and go with him to heaven and remain there for a long time, singing hallelujahs, with nothing to do, no duty to perform, no obligation resting upon them, then truly all preparation would be useless and unnecessary. If this is all, why, oh why, were the foolish virgins left out? Are we relying on such a condition of things? No, a thousand times no.

We know full well that there is a great work to be performed and that Jesus and his bride must perform that work, if it is ever done. All nations are to be brought into subjugation to the King of kings. The gospel is to be preached to all nations, kindred and tongues, and the wild animals are to become tame and gentle. Jesus cannot become the universal Monarch of the world, without bringing the nations into subjection to himself. Our heavenly Father caused the prophet Daniel, on three different occasions, to testify of the setting up of Christ's kingdom and of the four universal empires which should precede it. First, when he told the dream of Nebuchadnezzar and the interpretation thereof. Dan. ii. 31. Second, eight years later when he caused Daniel to have a dream relating to the same matter. Third, still two years later when he caused Daniel to have another dream relating thereto. Then God waited six hundred and forty years, apparently studying the matter over, and fearing that there might be some one or more who would not be informed upon this very important question, he therefore called to John, when he was [illegible] the lonely Isle of Patmos, and directed him to repeat the [illegible] once, why has our heavenly Father taken so much trouble and such care, to have it put down in the divine record no less than four times? The prophet Daniel, by the direction of our heavenly Father said, "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed, and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand forever." Dan. ii. 44. All governments are to be brought into subjection to King Jesus, whose queen will be the saints. "Behold one like the Son of Man came and there was given him dominion and glory and a kingdom, that all people, nations and languages should serve him." Dan. vii. 13. Jesus is to be King, but the saints are to share in his glory and responsibility. The prophet says of them, "But the saints of the Most High shall take the kingdom and possess the kingdom forever, even forever, and ever." Dan. vii. 18. Why does Jesus and the saints take the kingdom? The prophet says, "That all people, nations and languages should serve him."

When will all the people of every nation and every language serve him? After he takes the kingdom. When will Jesus take the kingdom? "In the days of these kings." What is God's purpose in causing all people of all nations, and all the persons who speak all the different languages in the world to serve and obey the King of kings and Lord of lords? There is only one source from which we can get the information which will answer this question. In the Book of books we will find it. James answered saying, Simeon hath declared how God at first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name, and to this agree the words of the prophet, as it is written. After this I will return and will build again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down, that the residue of men might seek after the Lord." Acts xv. 13-17. God has but one purpose in bringing people into the world. That purpose is that he may present to each person his plan of salvation, give to every one an opportunity of obeying and confer eternal life upon all who accept the plan, and comply with the conditions.

Prior to the time of the second advent of the Savior, a certain number will have been taken out, who will be made immortal at the appearing of the Savior and who will then become his bride and be united with him in marriage, and will assist him in carrying out and discharging all the duties assigned to them jointly.

Among these duties will be the rebuilding of the tabernacle of David, that the residue of men may seek after the Lord.

Who are the residue? During the ages that have passed, part of the human family have had the gospel and those who were so disposed, have sought after the Lord. Subtract those who have had the gospel from the whole number of Adam's descendants and all that remain will constitute the residue. "Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world." Acts xv. 18. Yes, God understands his plans, he knows how it is all to be brought about, and how it will all end.

"That was the true light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world." John i. 9. Will this "true light" shine into the heart of "every man that cometh into the world?" The only answer that I can give is to say that the divine record says it will. Thank God for such a Savior.

I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth. Rom. i. 16. Yes, it is the power of God to salvation to every one that believeth. That which is the power of God is not weak and likely to fail, but it is strong and mighty for the accomplishment of that which it is intended to accomplish.

Why is Jesus waiting at the right hand of the Father all these years? It is that his bride may be prepared. He has given his wife to make herself ready. [illegible] the multitude are heard to rejoice? Rev. xix. 6. It is because the time for "the marriage is come." Why are the multitude interested in this marriage? It is because the great work of converting the world and restoring all things as foretold in the prophecies cannot be entered upon until after this marriage.

After this marriage "the mountain of the Lord's house shall be established in the top of the mountains and all nations shall flow unto it." Is. ii. 2.

After this marriage the "nations shall beat the swords into plowshares and their spears into pruning hooks, nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more." Isa. ii. 4.

After this marriage Jesus will rebuild David's throne and establish it forever. Is. ix. 7. After this marriage Jesus shall establish peace and good will among all people, even the wild and vicious animals and venomous snakes and reptiles shall become tame and gentle. They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain, for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea." Is. xi. 9.

After this marriage Jesus "shall reign in Mount Zion, and in Jerusalem gloriously." Is. xxiv. 23.

After this marriage, "He will swallow up death in victory, and the Lord God will wipe away tears from off all faces. Is. xxv. 8. What a glorious promise.

After this marriage "the eyes of the blind shall be opened, and the ears of the deaf shall be unstopped. The lame shall leap and the tongue of the dumb sing." Is. xxxv. 5.

After this marriage the ransomed of the Lord shall return and come to Zion with songs and everlasting joy upon their heads and sorrow and sighing shall flee away." Is. xxxv. 10.

After this marriage, "all the ends of the earth shall see the salvation of God." Is. lii. 10.

After this marriage "instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree." Is. lv 13.

After this marriage the poor Jew shall receive such a blessing as shall cause a shout of thanks to go up to heaven that will resound throughout the world. "A little one shall become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation." Is. lx. 22. Read the entire chapter.

After this marriage the time will come when "they shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain." Is. lxv. 25.

Shall I continue these quotations from the blessed Book of God showing what great blessings shall come to all people, and to old mother earth after Jesus comes with his bride? Truly enough has been said to make our hearts glad. Let us believe it with all the power of our being, and return to Rev. xix. and join the great multitude in shouting allelujahs to the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus will come very soon; everything indicates it. May God help each one to be ready when he comes is the prayer of your humble brother.

Dogmatism.

Dogma is a noun derived from the Greek verb dokseo, to think, and is defined as "a settled opinion; a principle, maxim, or tenet: a doctrinal notion, particularly in matters of faith and philosophy." To be dogmatical is to be positive in entertaining and especially promulgating a settled opinion in such matters of faith.

Dogmatism may be kept within reasonable bounds, or it may become overbearing, arrogant, and offensive. Hence the necessity of keeping within proper limits. It is not wrong but right to have "a settled opinion, a principle" in matters of faith, and to be positive in stating such principle or conviction. There is a growing tendency at the present time to avoid what is styled dogmatism. In fact, if we were to follow all the advice which is so generally and generously offered along this line, we should be driven hopelessly and helplessly about upon the sea of uncertainty, until we should have no faith to keep, no doctrine to announce. One of old declared, "I believed, therefore have I spoken." Ps. cxvi: 10. And Paul the apostle to the Gentiles takes up the refrain, "We also believe, and therefore speak." 2. Cor. iv: 13. What the psalmist "believed," and "spoke" was not an uncertain and undefinable quantity, but something definite, comprehensible, and worthy of utterance. One with authority had spoken His mind, and demanded not only attention, but credence—faith. Since God had a right to speak authoritively to man, He could rightfully demand that the men should put faith in His declarations, and they should be quite as specific in promulgating them as He was in giving revelations. Such an attitude is decried as reprehensible "dogmatism." Such is the tendency of the times we live in.

Positive and definite affirmation of truths clearly revealed in God's Word does not come under the head of censurable dogmatism. There can be no doubt to the intelligent student of God's holy Word that "the meek shall inherit the earth." Matth. v: 5; Ps. xxxvii: 11, 22, 29, 34. This is not a matter of human deduction or inference, but is positively stated in so many words. This being so, we have a right to affirm confidently that such shall be the case. As to the time when this "inheritance" shall come into the possession of "the meek," other Scriptures give light, but the passages cited show clearly that it is not a present possession. "Shall inherit" does not mean "do now inherit." The Scriptures positively say that man was formed of the dust of the ground. Gen. ii: 7; 1. Cor. xv: 47. Therefore we have a perfect right to affirm dogmatically that such is the case. Man is a "mortal" being (Job iv: 17), and we are not only justified in saying, but the facts in the case require that we affirm, that he is mortal. This is a clearly revealed truth. "The wages of sin is death" (Rom vi: 23), is a maxim whose truthfulness pervades the entire volume of the Bible, and we may feel justified in announcing this truth with all the positiveness at our command. Likewise the following statement from the same source, "But the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Not simply, "The wages of sin was death (in the past), but "is death"—a rule which is in force as much to-day as it ever was. There is not, and in the nature of the case can not be, any deviation in God's moral government from this rule. "The end of those things (whereof ye are now ashamed) is death. But now being free from sin, ye have your fruit unto holiness, and the end everlasting life." Rom. vi: 21, 22. "Sin" (Lawlessness. R. V. 1. John. iii: 4) finds its "end," its termination, its final outcome, in the "death" of the sinner ("If ye live after the flesh, ye shall die." Rom. viii: 13. "They which commit such things are worthy of death." 1: 32), while being "made free from sin" through "hearty obedience" (c. vi: 17, 18) results in holiness, "and the end everlasting life." Rom. vi. 21. Why, Paul? "For the wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." The "death" here mentioned is to the sinner who receives it as "the wages of sin;" the "eternal life" is the gift of God to the one made free from sin and living in holiness, his members being "instruments of righteousness unto God." Rom. vi. 18, 19. Is it wrong to be dogmatical on this point? Not if our dogmatism remains within the declared intention of God as to these matters.

"The saints shall judge the world," says Paul, and asks the Corinthians if they do not "know" this fact. Such "knowledge" could not possibly have been arrived at by these idolatrous people (c. xii: 2) through human deduction.

Some "preaching" was required, and this had been faithfully done by Paul and others. See 1. Cor. i: 21; ii: 1-7. In this "preaching" the speakers had left nothing undone to bring to the hearers the above-mentioned knowledge of the judgment of "the world" and who is to actively participate in its execution. Hence the propriety of the apostle's appeal to their knowledge of this fact. Inasmuch, then, as we have been plainly told, in just so many words, that "the saints shall judge the world;" why should we be blamed for having "a settled opinion, a principle," on the subject?

So with the promise of everlasting possession of the land of Canaan made to Abraham, Christ, and the Church. Gen. xv: 13; Gal. iii: 16, 27-29. Why not "believe" that promise as clear-cut as it was made, and when believing and trusting God for its fulfillment, why not "speak" of it for mutual strengthening of the faith and encouragement, as well as to win others? Why not?

Jesus taught "as one having authority, and not as the Scribes." Matth. vii: 29. He was dogmatical in a marked degree. "The people were astonished at his doctrine," because, unlike the flimsy speculations and deductions of the Scribes, He had something definite to say and said it like a man who understands his doctrine and himself. We are not to be ashamed of Christ and His words. Those words are "the words of everlasting life." John vi: 68. Those words must be repeated in the ears of men in order that they may hear them and avail themselves of that everlasting life of which they speak. This requires a certain amount of dogmatism—positive statement of those words of Jesus.

This is not written in defensive of harsh and unkind treatment of those who may differ with us. "The servant of the Lord must not strive; but be gentle unto all men, apt to teach, patient, in meekness instructing those that oppose themselves; if God peradventure will give them repentance to the acknowledging of the truth." 2. Tim. ii: 24, 25. We should not forget in our zeal for the truth, to manifest the spirit of Christ in promulgating the truth. Such a course will be uncompromising with error, and at the same time full of a gentle, Christlike spirit.

To the Illinois Brethren

The time has come for us to decide whether we will have a summer Bible school again in connection with our annual conference or not. The enrollment at our school last summer was 28 with an attendance throughout of 21. The brethren are invited to write me. This applies particularly to Bereans, but generally to all. If you have spoken personally to me about it, just act in the matter as if you had not spoken, for I forget so easily. One good sister speaking in appreciation of the school said she knew of two whom she would assist if we had the school this summer, but because I failed at the time to make a note of it, I have forgotten who it was. In replying to this simply say whether you wish to have it or not and what can be done by way of attendance from your locality. Any replying who were in attendance last summer are also requested to suggest any changes that might prove favorable. If the school is held, a general announcement will be published in a short time. Please write now.

S. J. LIKENAY, Evangelist.

WE have arranged to supply our readers with a War Atlas, containing maps of the war center adjacent to the Yellow Sea, Japan, Russia, Pacific Ocean, etc. and with statistical tables of useful information, enabling one to understand the situation as the war progresses. The maps are colored, and it is substantially bound. Sent post paid for 25 cents. Send for one and keep posted.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAR. 2, 1904. NUMBER 9.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

We have been unable to get started on the articles written by Bro. Joblin this week, and will have to delay the first part till our next issue. Let all who want extras send in now, so as to be sure and get them.

OUR War Atlas is all right, and the first invoice is going fast. Send for one and keep track of the movements of the contestants. A glance at the specially prepared maps show at once the places where the armies meet.

No doubt most of our readers know that John Alexander Dowie is in Australia in the interest of his Zion City enterprise. His reception has not been such as to suit him exactly. At Sydney he was mobed and had to flee for his life, and now at Melbourne the same is given him. He seems to have miscalculated his strength in returning to a place where he was known years ago.

THE War news this week is a repetition of last week. The Japanese ships steam up within range of the guns at Port Arthur, and after bombarding a few hours quietly retire. In these assaults the Russians have lost some more of their smaller vessels, being afraid to come out and fight with the warships, if they have any that are able to fight. Some damage has been done by the Japanese shells. Reports would indicate that the Japanese had the port of Vladivostock also blockaded. On the land latest reports say the Japanese have cut off the approach to Port Arthur, and are preparing to lay siege to the place. Large forces have been landed but just their position is kept secret as much as possible. Japanese troops hold Corea south of Ping Yang, their forces stretching across from sea to sea. Russians are said to be hurrying to get possession of the Yalu river region. There has been some skirmishing between advance lines, but no battle of consequence. Corea has joined with Japan, and her army is out to fight the Russians. So far the European nations have kept clear of the affair, but the open expression of sympathy may lead to some act that will call for explanation, and we need not be surprised if others are mixed in. It is an interesting study to watch the signs that indicate what side the nations are likely to be on. So far Germany is strongly for Russia, and England is as strongly for Japan. All precautions are being taken by the powers to be ready if drawn into the war. Meanwhile there is talk of the stronger nations uniting and forcing the combatants to make peace.

Selections.

The Balkan Situation.

The Balkans are known variously as the cockpit, the powder magazine, and the dirty rinsings of Europe. They seem once again about to justify these epithets.

Politically, "the Balkans" comprise the four nominally independent kingdoms and princedoms of Servia, Bulgaria, Roumania, and Montenegro; the northern part of European Turkey (Macedonia and Albania), and the Austrian provinces of Bosnia and Herzegovina.

Ethnically there is no Balkan people. The inhabitants of these territories are the heterogenous remnants of many races who at different times have dwelt in or passed over the south-eastern corner of Europe. There are Slavs, Greeks, Gypsies, Serbs, Bulgars, Jews, Turks, Albanians. These various races do not occupy different, well defined sections of the Balkans, but are scattered broadcast over the whole region. Next to a Bulgarian village will lie a Greek one, on the other side a town of Mussulmans, while the Rumanian gypsy begs and steals indiscriminately from all.

The Turks have been misruling Macedonia most shockingly. The misrule caused a rebellion of the Bulgars in Macedonia, who constitute a large and perhaps predominant element of the population. The rebellion was almost openly fostered by Bulgaria. The Turk would have liked to reply by making war on that kingdom, which is nominally a vassal state, but the European powers, and especially Russia, told him to do no such thing. The powers were afraid to trust any one of their number to quiet Macedonia, so the task was intrusted to Russia and Austria jointly. They were to reorganize the police in the disturbed Turkish provinces and thus remove the cause of the rebellion. This was last summer.

The sultan managed to prevent the Russian and Austrian commissioners from doing much of anything, and reform in Macedonia marched with leaden feet. Now come the Japanese war and Russia's preoccupation in Manchuria. The sultan becomes defiant, practically announces he will chastise Bulgaria for its insolence and treachery, and mobilizes his troops on its frontiers. Bulgaria responds by a counter mobilization on the other side of the frontier. Such is the present situation.

If the powers kept their hands off Turkey would undoubtedly, after a war of atrocities unparalleled in Europe for centuries, defeat Bulgaria and occupy that country. But the only certain thing in the whole chaotic situation is that the powers will not keep their hands off. They will not permit the Turk to extend his system in Europe. It may be that all four of the little Balkan independencies will be drawn into the struggle. In that case they are likely to wind up as dependencies or provinces of some bigger nation, which would not be a world calamity, since Servia, Bulgaria, Roumania, and Montenegro are no better than they ought to be. Austria is now administering two former Turkish provinces—Bosnia and Herzegovina—and administering them well. They were formerly given over to slaughter, pillage, and persecution, but they are now lands of plenty and peace. If Austria is assigned the task of deodorizing and disinfecting another slice of the Balkan territory her past performances warrant the hope that she will do it well. Broadly speaking, any settlement that leaves the Turk in Europe will be but temporary, for as long as he remains west of the Bosphorus the Balkan question will live.—Tribune.

To Push Tibet Expedition.

Lord Hardwicke, undersecretary for India, in the house of lords replying to the request of Lord Reay (liberal) for further information regarding the British mission to Tibet, said the government was determined to insist on a final settlement regarding carrying out the terms of the convention of 1890.

The Tibetians had refused to have intercourse with Great Britain, but the result of their continual intercourse with Russia had been to inspire the Tibetans with the feeling that they had Russia behind them and therefore they need not fear the British. This situation the Indian government and his majesty's government could not tolerate for a moment. While Lord Hardwicke refused to pledge the government regarding the limit of Col. Younghusband's advance into Tibet, he said the mission was friendly and Col. Younghusband would do nothing to provoke hostilities.

Fighters of the Far East.

In the war with China the standard food of each Japanese soldier was two pounds of rice and five ounces of meat mixed with greens each day. While on the march, when the commissariat was not always perfect, the men ate boiled rice and pickled plums or passed a day on a gruel of rice mixed with Indian corn. When spoils were taken, however, they had meat three times a day. If Americans or Europeans had to make such a campaign it was calculated at the time that half their number would be lost from change of climate, food and habitation. Japanese being more or less similiar to Chinese and Koreans in race, food and habits, the effect was not so disastrous, and the deaths from ordinary [illegible] only at the rate of 2 9 per cent.

Japan has many veterans in the [illegible] who fought in the war of 1894, [illegible] to whom the rigors of the Korean and Manchurian winter are familiar. In the report of the surgeon-general of the Japanese field hospitals some interesting details were given. The soldiers, besides being furnished with ordinary winter clothes, such as they would wear in the milder climate of Japan, were provided with a thick fur hood, a thick fur-lined overcoat, a flannel undershirt, knit nap-lined trousers, paper undershirts and drawers, thick nap-lined gloves and an additional blanket, while during the severest part of the winter a larger blanket, was supplied to each to wear or lie upon.

Russians have taken remarkable secret precautions for the provisioning of their troops. At intervals of about a quarter of a mile along the greater part of the entire length of the Siberian railway stores of concentrated proteid food have been buried on each side of the line; each deposite being [illegible] to maintain a company [illegible] 200 men for a week. The position of these provisions is not known to the sergents or captains, but only to the commandants, who have the information in cipher. They are under the strictest orders to resort to these supplies only when it is absolutely unavoidable.

Denmark's Measures Warlike.

Replying to an interpellation in the lower house of the Danish parliament the premier, Prof. Deuntzer explained the necessity for preparations to assure the complete neutrality of Denmark during the Russo-Japanese war. In order adequately to secure the sea defense of Copenhagen, he said, reserve men had been called out, the forts had been equipped with searchlights and electric cables, the submarine mine stations had been manned. Four torpedo boats had been cleared for action, repairs to the warships were being hastened, various improvements in the materials of the navy, especially torpedoes, were being made and two redoubts were being built at Saltholm island, where the requisite searchlights would be installed.

The cost of these preparations would total about $50,000, besides the pay of the men called to the colors. In the event of its being necessary to call out more men and make other extraordinary defensive preparations the government would do what was necessary, relying on the assent of parliament.

If Jesus Should Come.

What would we wish to do if we were perfectly sure that Christ were coming tomorow? That question asked honestly and answered frankly shows certain weak spots in our lives. The chances are that the time would seem all too short for righting certain little wrongs, for healing wounds of long standing, for speaking words that have risen to our lips countless times, for accomplishing the small kindnesses which we have kept postponing from one day to another. Perhaps some day we receive word that a dear friend who had been long absent is coming home again. Every morning as we wake we say to ourselves. "Perhaps he will come to-day." And when night falls without his appearing, we comfort ourselves with the thought, "Perhaps he will come to-morrow."

With hopeful anticipation we should look forward to the Master's coming. Anxious to see whether or not we are prepared, is what might be expected of a paid servant. Fear and shrinking are more fitting for a slave. But the one who is looking forward to meet the friend he loves, seemingly sees the hours pass and waits with happy confidence for the morrow. Christ sends no warning of his coming. His arrival will be a surprise, pleasant or unpleasant according to the preparation. If day after day we are doing our best, we shall be glad to welcome him at any hour. But if we are counting on setting our house in order just in time to be ready for him, the chances are a thousand to one that we shall be found in the midst of impurity and disorder, and shall stand shamed and humiliated before him, without a single excuse to offer for our lack of preparation.

If asked what a man should chiefly look to for the power that is to sustain him under trials and enable him to confront his inevitable affliction, I must point him to something which in a well-known hymn is called "the old, old story," told in an old, old teaching, which is the greatest and best ever given to mankind.—W. E. Gladstone.

The Will of Peter the Great of Russia.

Peter the Great, the fourth Sovereign of the house of Romanoff, was the first Czar who assumed the title of Emperor and Autocrat of all the Russians. "He died in 1725, in the fifty-second year of his age, after a reign of thirty-six years. During that time he had raised that country from a state of barbarism, to a degree of military strength and political importance which placed her on a level with the first powers of Europe." He was a strange compound of vices and virtues. A few years ago the London Times gave a translation of his will, which we lay before our readers.

THE WILL.

1. The Russian nation must be constantly on a war-footing, to keep the soldiers warlike and in good condition. No rest must be allowed except for the purpose of relieving the State finances, recruiting the army, or biding the favorable moment for attack. By these means peace is made subservient to war, and war to peace, in the interest of aggrandizement and in[illegible] prospects [illegible].

2. Every possible means must be used to invite the most cultivated European States, commanders in war and philosophers in peace, to enable the Russian nation to participate in the advantages of other countries without losing any of its own.

3. No opportunity must be lost of taking part in the affairs and disputes of Europe—especially in those of Germany, which, from its vicinity, is one of the most direct interest to us.

4. Poland must be divided by keeping up constant jealousies and confusions there. The authorities must be gained over with money, and the Assemblies corrupted, so as to influence the election of the kings. We must get up a party of our own there, and Russian troops into the country, and let them sojurn there so long that they may ultimately find some pretext for remaining there forever. Should the neighboring states make difficulties, we must appease them for the moment by allowing them a share of the territory until we can safely resume what we have thus given away.

5. We must take away as much territory as possible from Sweden, and contrive that they shall attack us first, so as to give us a pretext for their subjugation. With this object in view, we must keep Sweden in opposition to Denmark, and Denmark to Sweden, and sedulously foster their mutual jealousies.

6. The consorts of the Russian princes must always be chosen from among the German princesses, in order to multiply our family alliances with the Germans, and so unite our interests with theirs: and thus by consolidating our influence in Germany, to cause it to attach itself to our policy.

7. We must be careful to keep up our commercial alliance with England, for she is the Power which has most need of our products for her navy, and at the same time may be of the greatest service to us in the developement of our own. We must export wood, and other articles, in exchange for her gold, and establish permanent connections between her merchants and seamen and our own.

8. We must keep steadily extending our frontiers, northward along the Baltic, and southward along the shores of the Black Sea.

9. We must progress as much as possible in the direction of Constantinople and India. He who can once get possession of these places, is the real ruler of the world. With this view, we must provoke constant quarrels—at one time with Turkey, and at another with Persia. We must establish wharves and docks in the Euxine, and by degrees make ourselves masters of that sea, as well as of the Baltic, which is a doubly important element in the success of our plan. We must hasten the downfall of Persia, push on into the Persian Gulf if possible, re-establish the ancient commercial intercourse with the Levant through Syria, and force our way into the Indies, which are the storehouses of the world. Once there, we can dispense with English gold.

10. Moreover, we must take pains to establish and maintain an intimate union with Austria, apparently countenancing her schemes for future aggrandizement in Germany, and all the while secretly rousing the jealousy of the minor states against her. By this way we must bring it to pass that one or the other party will seek the aid of Russia: and thus we shall exercise a sort of protectorate over the country, which will pave the way for future supremacy.

11. We must make the House of Austria interested in the expulsion of the Turks from Europe, and we must neutralize its jealousy at the capture of Constantinople, either by pre-occupying it with a war with the old European States, or by allowing it a share of the spoil, which we can afterwards resume at our leisure.

12. We must collect around our House, as round a centre, all the detached sections of Greeks which are scattered abroad in Hungary, Turkey and South Poland. We must make them look to us for support, and then, by establishing beforehand a sort of ecclesiastical supremacy, we shall pave the way for universal sovereignty.

13. When Sweden is ours, Persia vanquished, Poland subjugated, Turkey conquered, and when our armies are united, and the Euxine and the Baltic are in the possession of our ships, then we must make separate and secret overtures: first to the court of Versailles, and then to that of Vienna, to share with them the dominion of the world. If either of them accept our propositions—which is certain to happen if their ambition and self-interest are properly worked upon—we must make use of one to annihilate the other; this done we have only to destroy the remaining one by finding a pretext for a quarrel, the issue of which cannot be doubtful, as Russia will then be already in the absolute possession of the East, and of the best part of Europe.

14. Should the improbable case happen of both refusing the propositions of Russia, then our policy will be to set one against the other, and make them tear each other to pieces. Russia must then watch for and seize the favorable moment, and pour her already assembled hosts into Germany; while two immense fleets laden with Asiatic hordes and conveyed by the armed squadrons of the Euxine and the Baltic, set sail simultaneously from the sea of Azoff and the harbor of Archangel; sweeping along the Mediterranean and the Atlantic, they will overrun France on the one side, while Germany is overpowered on the other. When these countries are fully conquered, the rest of Europe must fall easily and without a struggle, under our yoke. Thus Europe can, and must be subjugated.

Keep Tender.

It is the very cream of Christian holiness to keep the heart full of tenderness, that lowly compassionate, love which seeks to be just like Jesus. In a world like this, where we meet with treacherous, cruel, selfish, and proud people on every hand, and where we are so frequently disappointed in our fellow creatures, it is very easy to imbibe a spirit of harshness, or bitterness, or a little tinge of resentment, almost imperceptible. But the least degree of retaliation or severity will harden the affections, and give a coldness and toughness to the inner life.

It is not wise to reflect on the cruelty and unkindness of others, for keeping the meanness of other people in our minds, it will soon settle down upon our hearts, and then we will soon have the same evil tempers that we condemn in others. Getting sanctified, and professing the cleansing power of Christ, is not sufficient; but we must at any cost constantly surrender our own rights, our feelings, our dignity, and keep ourselves in the humble attitude of "resisting not evil," of not speaking against those that despise us, and keep where we can "bear all things, hope all things, and endure all things." Tenderness of the spirit is the essence of true saintliness, and the inward private marks of a Christ-life.

So let us beware of envy, or grudge, or unkindness, or else the fountains of religion will be poisoned. We cannot keep full of tender love by accident but must make it a matter of constant prayer, and cultivate daily gentle and loving thoughts, which are very acceptable to God.

Worry.

The eternal life is serene. It is not careworn, nor knows it any forboding of future ill. Can we not take to ourselves its large spirit of serenity and cheer? For only the serene soul is strong. Every moment of worry weakens the soul for its daily combat. Worry is an infirmity; there is no virtue in it. Worry is spiritual near-sightedness; a fumbling way of looking at little things and of magnifying their value. True spiritual vision sweeps the universe.

The highest achievement comes by surrender. This is an exalted and difficult truth, but one which has been proved in the experience of every choice soul. When we give up self and earthly pleasure and our own lower desires and rights, we enter into the lofty heritage of those who are great enough to deny and master self.

Obituary.

Died at the home of his eldest son, Jefferson, near Rochester, Ind., Feb. 22, 1904, James Bryan. Funeral services were held at the Church of God, in Argos, of which congregation he had been a member for about fifteen years. Bro. Bryan was born to William and Mary Bryan, in Burlington Co., N. J., July 17, 1827. He was married to Elizabeth Aldarfer on Nov. 18, 1852. To this union eleven children were born, all of whom, excepting the youngest son, grew to manhood and womanhood. Of these ten the youngest daughter died about five years ago. Sister Bryan, wife of the deceased died July 20, 1902. There remain of their family six sons, three daughters, forty-five grand children, and two great grand children.

Few bequeath a better name to their posterity and neighbors than did he. May the name be righteously guarded and continued to succeeding generations. He was placed to rest beside her with whom he labored, awaiting the due time who the Resurrection and the Life may call.

F. L. AUSTIN.

Died at the home of her son in Hobart, Indiana, Feb. 20, 1904, Mary Bird, aged 78 years, 2 months and 6 days. The deceased was born in Holmes County, Ohio. Came with her parents to Kosciusko County, Indiana, in 1845. Was married to George K. McLaren Oct. 14, 1847. To this union were born seven children, two of whom, Mrs. Alice Hammond of Tyro, Ohio, and W. H. McLaren of Hobart, Indiana. After her marriage she lived in Pierceton up to the death of her husband which occurred in 1878. After which she made her home with her daughter at Tyro until stricken with paralysis in the fall of 1902, when she was taken to Hobart where she was lovingly cared for by both son and daughter until her death. The funeral was held at Pierceton, conducted by the writer. Interment in the Ryerson cemetery. She united with the Christian church at the age of sixteen. Some time during the seventies when the Church of God was organized in Pierceton she met and worshiped with this body until her removal. She was a good wife, affectionate mother, faithful friend, and consistent Christian. She found nothing to fret over in her last lingering illness. When asked by her daughter if she would like to work some more she replied, "I have done enough, my work is done." There is now but a meager remnant left of the pioneers of Indiana, and the few that remain feel and, as one after another drop from the ranks.

"Silently the shades of evening
Gather round our lonely door;
Silently they bring before us
Faces we shall see no more."
In this fleeting and fitful life.

JOHN L. WINGE.

Elizabeth Renner, nee Swope, was born in Maryland, Washington Co., Aug. 19, 1830; aged 73 years, 6 mo., 4 days. Moved with her mother Apr. 1873, to Mount Morris, Ogle Co., Ill.; resided there 6 years, then moved to Plum River with her mother and step father and sister. Elizabeth Renner embraced the precious truth in 1854. She was married to Simon P. Renner, Dec. 21, 1854, and to this union was born two girls and three boys. Adeline died in 1856, Harriet Renner in 1874, Joseph Franklin in 1867, Charles Edward in 1894, George Oscar, born Dec. 16, 1868, and the only child living. Sister Elizabeth Renner embraced the precious truth of the Abrahamic faith, trying to live a Christian life in peace and harmony with all whom she came in contact with.

She leaves a mother over 94 years of age, a husband and many friends and relatives to mourn her loss. Her funeral services were held in the new church at East Plum River, on the 25th, conducted by Bro. O. J. Allard. We laid her to rest beside her four children. There is gone one more of the early band of pioneer disciples of the Lord Jesus. Her labor is ended and she rests, awaiting the angels call to life. May the morning soon dawn, and may she with the faithful living ones meet their Lord and ever remain with him.

She had moved to Lanark to take care of her aged mother, who is a cripple from a recent fall. Although she was ill for four weeks with heart and lung trouble she tried to relieve every call from her mother. May she rest in peace.

Poetry.

There's Only One.

Whom have I in heaven but thee? and there is none upon earth that I desire beside thee.—Psa. lxxiii. 25.

There's only One on whose dear arm
We safely lay our thoughts to rest;
There's only One who knows the depth
Of sorrow in each stricken breast.

There's only One whose pity falls
Like dew upon the wounded heart;
There's only One who never stirs,
Though enemy and friend depart.

There's only One, when none are by,
To wipe away the falling tear;
There's only One to heal the wound,
And stay the weak one's timid fear.

There's only One who understands
And enters into all we feel;
There's only One who views each spring,
And each perplexing wheel in wheel.

There's only One who can support,
And who sufficient grace can give
To bear up under every grief,
And spotless in this world to live.

O blessed Jesus, Friend of friends!
Come, hide us 'neath thy sheltering arms;
And while amid this evil world,
Keep us from all its guilt and harm.

Thou art the One, the only One,
For whom no love too warm can flow;
Thou art the One, the only One,
In whom there's perfect rest below.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. Good evening, fellow-students of Holy Scripture, may our hearts warm within us as we shall together engage in the delightful exercise of searching the sacred pages as for hidden treasure.

I have a letter from Bro. Cameron, from Edinburgh, Scotland, asking for information. I will read a portion of his epistle.

"Dear Brother in Christ:

If you will excuse me troubling you, I desire a little information. You mention in RESTITUTION, Jan. 20, 1904, page 1, column 3, near foot, 'A certain Seventh Day Josephite Adventist.' I wish to know the meaning of 'Josephite,' and whether it applies to one section of the Seventh Day Adventists only, or to the entire body of them?" We have two questions presented to us. First,

I WISH TO KNOW THE MEANING OF JOSEPHITE.

Now, Bro. Lud, what do you think?

Lud. They are modern Ebionites.

Q. What did the original Ebionites believe concerning Jesus?

A. They taught that he was the begotten son of Joseph, in place of his being "the ONLY begotten Son of God," as says the Scripture. Modern Ebionites (better known as "Josephites,") teach the same doctrine.

Q. What ancient writer first mentions these Ebionites?

A. Irenæus is said to be the first to mention them.

Q. Did he recognize them as Christians?

A. No. They were entirely distinct from those known as Christians.

Q. In what way were they distinct from true Christians?

A. They sought to make Scripture conform to their doctrines, in place of making their doctrines bend to the Scriptures.

Q. If they could not make it bend, what did they do with the Scriptures?

A. Discard them, call them "spurious."

Q. Can you give a sample?

A. Yes. They could not make the first two chapters of Matthew and Luke bend to their teaching, that he was the natural son of Joseph, and so the easiest thing to do, was to denounce these Scriptures as spurious.

Q. What authority have we for this?

A. The declaration of Irenæus.

Q. Did they reject other portions of Holy Scripture?

A. Yes. A large portion of the New Testament, all the epistles of Paul, and delighted in denouncing him as an apostate from the law.

Teacher. I will request Albert to tell us the name of some other ancient writer which Josephites quote as omitting the first two chapters of Matthew, etc.?

Albert. They quote Marcion.

Q. Did Marcion reject other portions of God's Word beside portions of Matthew and Luke.

A. Yes. Roberts says, "He not only omits the first two chapters of Luke; he omits also the account of John the Baptist, the baptism of Christ, and his visit to Nazareth. He also omits part of chapter viii. 19; x. 21; xi. part of verse 20, and all of verses 30, 31, 32, 49, 50, 51; xii. 6, 28, part of verses 8, 30, 32; xiii. 1 5; altered verse 20, omitted from 29 to end of chapter; xv. 11 32; xvii. part of 10-12; whole of verse 13; whole of xvii. 31-33; xix. 30-43; xx. from 9-18; also 37, 38; xxi 18, 21, 22; xxii. 16, 35, 37, 50, 51; xxiii. 43; xxiii. 43; xxiv. 2, 6, 7, and verse 25 altered." To my mind this is about as good an authority as it would be to quote Robert Ingersol as an authority in support of a Bible doctrine, and yet, this is just what our modern Ebionites (Josephites) do.

Q. Do the Josephites of today resort to mutilating God's Word in order to sustain their teaching that Jesus was the natural begotten son of Joseph?

A. They do.

Q. Please give a sample.

A. I will quote from G. M. Myers, as published in The Christian Inquirer, of December, 1903, page 10, he says:

"You will see that the compilation of our four canonical gospels did not take place till from A. D. 100-140, written long after the death of the last apostle, therefore our position is that none of them are inspired, at least as to wording, and in all probability not as to idea." So we see that modern Ebionites (Josephites) are very much like their infidel forefathers. This modern Ebionite does not refrain from laying his hand upon Holy Scripture, he would cast doubt upon the inspiration of the whole of the four canonical gospels, in order to sustain his blasphemous heresy. Sensible people must see that a doctrine which requires the rejection of all Scripture which contradicts the aforesaid doctrine, must of necessity be the rankest kind of heresy, and its teachers rank heretics.

Teacher. I know the aforesaid G. M. Myers has quoted proof-texts from the book of Luke, in a written debate he recently held. Don't you think Carrie, that he might accept the gospel of Luke as being inspired, seeing that he quoted from it to prove his points?

Carrie. No, he does not. On the same page of The Christian Inquirer as that quoted by Albert, the editor says: "Both disputants hold to the inspiration of the 1st and 2nd chapters of Luke." Mr. Myers replied as for himself, "We wish to say that this is a mistake, we do not so hold."

On the next column he says: "We do not regard any of the book of Luke as being inspired."

Q. Does this modern Ebionite Myers, speak in contempt of any other portion of God's Word?

A. He does.

Q. What portion?

A. Portions of Matthew which speak of Jesus as being the begotten Son of God.

Q. Were the ancient Ebionites (or Josephites) regarded as sound in the faith?

A. No.

Q. Why not?

A. Because of their infidelity to portions of God's Word.

Q. Can we have fellowship with modern Ebionites (Josephites), who brand portions of holy Scripture as spurious?

A. We cannot regard any person as a Christian, sound in the faith, which regards "none of them (the four canonical gospels) as inspired," as intimated in the quotion from Mr. Myers, as given above.

Q. Are men of infidel tendencies safe preachers to employ as evangelists?

A. I should say not?

Teacher. I think the quotation from Mr. Myers, will show Bro. Cameron that a Sabbatarian Josephite, is one who teaches the human paternity of Jesus, and also one who holds very loose ideas with regard to the inspiration of our four canonical gospels.

In the next place Bro. Cameron wishes to know whether the term "Josephites" "applies to one section of the Seventh Day Adventists only, or to the entire body of them?" Arloa, Will you please answer?

Arloa. It does not apply to the Seventh Day Adventist sect at all.

Q. Are ALL Josephites believers in the Seventh Day Sabbath?

A. No, not by any means.

Q. Does it apply to some of them?

A. Yes, Mr. Myers is a believer in and teaches that Jesus was the begotten son of Joseph, and also teaches that the Seventh Day Sabbath should be observed. Mr. Myers along with one or two others calling themselves evangelists, seek every opportunity to make proselytes among the Household of Faith, to this two-fold heresy, and in warning believers to beware of them, the term, "Josephite Seventh Day Adventist" is used, because that distinguishes them from Seventh Day believers who do not believe in the human paternity of Jesus, and also from other Josephites who do not observe the Seventh Day Sabbath, as Mr. Myers, and some of his dupes do.

Teacher. Will George please inform us as to whose seed Jesus would be, were he the natural son of Joseph?

A. The seed of Jehoiakim, called in the New Testament, Jechonias?

Q. How so?

A. Because Joseph was of the seed of Jechonias, and if Jesus was his natural son, he would of course be the seed of Jechonias.

Q. If Jesus was the natural seed of Jehoiakim, would it affect his heirship to David's throne?

A. Yes.

Q. Please explain?

A. See Jeremiah xxii. 30, speaking of Jehoiakim, says: "For no man of his seed shall prosper, sitting upon the throne of David, and ruling any more in Judah." If he were the natural son of Joseph, he would be of the seed of Jehoiakim, and God has cut off all his seed to a seat upon David's throne.

Q. Have we any other Scripture which speaks of the seed of Jehoiakim being barred from David's throne?

A. Yes. See Jer. xxxvi. 30: "Thus saith the Lord of Jehoiakim king of Judah, he shall have none to sit upon the throne of David." The natural heirship of Jesus to David's throne, must come through his mother.

Teacher. Seeing that Josephitism strikes at the fundamental principles of the gospel, I would seriously warn the household of faith not to in any way have anything to do with Josephite evangelists, no matter who they may be.

Yours in the blessed hope.

W. H. WILSON.

"When the Son of Man cometh will he find faith on the earth?" W. N. Rice, Professor in Wesleyan University has published a book called "Christian faith in an age of Science," and the Literary Digest has some remarks and extracts from it that are instructive as showing the drift of Wesleyan University lore and what we may expect from the coming deluge of divinity students of such an institution. The following extracts will illustrate.

"It is evident in general," says M. Rice, "that we have in the book of Genesis nothing that approaches the character of reliable history till about the time of Abraham." Again he says, "The man who believes that God would change his plan in obedience to prayer must be possessed of sublime hardihood, if I could fancy that God would abdicate the throne of the universe in my behalf I would not accept the tremendous responsibility." Prof. Rice again says, "There is surely no sufficient ground for believing that the prophet (Jonah) was swallowed by a sea monster, kept alive for three days in the alimentary canal of that creature and subsequently discharged alive upon the shore." While he thinks some miracles may be accepted, "such as that of the resurrection of Jesus," as might be expected of one holding a position in a nominally Christian institution he avers that such conclusions "involve the abandonment of no essential doctrine of Christianity."

Now to begin with the last of these points first, we might ask how it comes about that the Savior himself testified that "as Jonah was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." According to this statement just as the former is true so the latter. The last part hangs to the first part, the first being a fraud or myth, the last also is the same. But to these so-called scientific professors logical consistency is not necessary where any "scientific" theory has to be maintained. And then the position that God's Messiah occupies in their minds is a very dubious one and more of a compromise to popular scruples than genuine conviction. Jesus is to them merely a philanthropic teacher of a high grade of morals and ethics. As to his position as the dispenser of eternal life to all that come unto God by him, they think they have eternal life in their "immortal souls" and there is no necessity for further anxiety on that score.

As to the act of prayer, the abdication of the God of the universe in favor of his creatures and so forth, it may be replied that it is apparent to the student of practical and applied science, that in the realm of nature the Father of all has given over the control of the physical elements and powers of earth to a great extent to the diminutive creature in his image, and we are in part little creators working with his tools. In this age of steam and electricity it is necessary to specify the myriad ways we do this from cultivating a pot flower or a cabbage patch to wireless telegraphy on the ocean racer. Our control is still crude perhaps, but day by day as knowledge [illegible] is firmer and our [illegible] of the "subdued" [illegible] of our mastery of the [illegible] powers were a hundred fold [illegible] it is it need not be said [illegible] Creator has abdicated in our [illegible]. And as in the material so in the spiritual. Even the Savior teaches that prayer is unnecessary as a directive or appeal for divine aid, for saying, "Your heavenly Father knoweth [illegible] before you ask it," but the point gained is the submission of the will to the divine guidance, bringing the spirit into sympathy with the divine spirit, the weak entering into the circle of eternal power, the erring brought to the perception of the good, the true and the pure. The Father has nothing to learn, nothing to gain, the benefit is all ours.

There is no religious subject less understood than that of prayer, no religious act more fully prostituted "in the synagogues and at the corners of the streets." No meek soul desires to run creation, nevertheless the fact remains that if such an one feels for instance the lack of wisdom, "let him ask of God," and it will not be necessary [illegible] Almighty to abdicate his throne to keep his promise. I don't think as to the story of Abraham being the first reliable history in Genesis that is quite a concession. Not long since it was the "scientific" fashion to mythify even Abraham, it is so yet in some of the inner circles, and it might be added, the little narrow circles, that have not given much thought to any thing outside these limited lines of study. And even the best of them have a lot to learn yet in science and a heap to do. They have not found the missing link yet, nor bred any new species that will not breed back. They have not discovered the source of life, nor balanced a whirling globe round an attracting center by gravity. In fact they have not done anything but talk, that is those that do talk for publication and a living. On the other hand those practical scientists that do something don't have much time to do much talking.

PSALM XXIV.

Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord, or who shall stand in his holy place? He that hath clean hands and a pure heart; he that hath clean hands shall grow stronger and stronger; therefore hath the Lord recompensed me according to my righteousness, according to the cleanness of my hands in his eye sight; the priests were commanded to wash their hands many times. The command was, Be ye clean to bear the vessels of the Lord so we to do the Lord's work must have clean hands, not just clean with an outward application of water. But as the Apostle Paul says, Holy hands. "I will therefore that men pray every where, lifting up holy hands." This is what is meant by clean hands, holy hands that are ready to do the Lord's work, that will not be defiled by sin. Who shall ascend into the hill of the Lord? He that hath clean hands, and a pure heart; blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God. If we are pure in heart we shall be like him and see him as he is, and every man that hath this hope in him, purifieth himself even as he is pure. If we can keep our hearts pure then we can be like Jesus, for his heart was pure, his hands clean, and only pure words passed his lips. The commandments of the Lord are pure, and Jesus kept them all; he is our example of all that is pure and holy. May we strive to be like him. Let the words of my mouth and the meditations of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord, my strength and my Redeemer.

Extracts from Letters.

Dear Restitution:

As I was just reading the letters in our good old paper which so much cheers me on my lonely way, I could not help but think, Where are all the Michigan letters we used to see? Only two or three as yet, and thought although late I would write a few words too. How my heart goes out to the young that have just started in the Christian life, especially the isolated ones that have no church home to help them or work with. Nothing but what the world holds out to them. How they need an encouraging word or look or letter from those older and more experienced sometimes to help them. Some may think if they have obeyed the gospel by being baptized that that is all there is to do, they are sure of being saved, when that is only the beginning, by making them ready to work out their own salvation with fear and trembling, for they can look to Christ, our Mediator for help and strength to keep their minds constantly upon him like the man that was commanded by the king to carry a vessel even full of oil through the streets of a city without spilling a drop under penalty of death if he did. The king asked him if he saw any of the sights or things going on around him as he passed through? He said he did not because he had to keep his eyes and mind on the oil all the time. Just so, dear ones, have we to keep our minds upon Christ all the time. He has died that we might have life through him, if we seek for it, and if we do that we will have no time or eyes for worldly pleasures and amusements for if we follow the world and its ways we can never be overcomers. We should strive hard to overcome our own selves and the world, for that is our life work here.

A lover of truth.

E. L. CRONK.

Editor Restitution:

We like to get THE RESTITUTION and read the good news and sermons in it, as we dont get to go to church very often on account of bad weather and poor health. We trust that the good work will go on. We want to be ready when the Master comes to meet the faithful ones in the kingdom.

Oh ye whose eyes are open,
To the glorious light of day,
Consider how the darkness falls,
Upon the blind man's way.

Your Brother and Sister,

R. H. & M. V. BATY.

Editor Restitution:

I am thankful to my heavenly Father that it is as well with me though I am perhaps a cripple for life. It makes me rejoice to see so many writing in THE RESTITUTION, all speaking of the same blessed hope of the kingdom to come. Blessed hope! How many have the hope that good Paul had when he stood before King Agrippa? "See the nations are angry and thy wrath has come." How few are lifting up their eyes for their redemption draweth nigh. What are you all doing? Are you sowing the good seed of the kingdom? Wake up! Let your light shine. The professed Christian has turned his ears from the truth and gone to fables. They are inviting their hearers to go with them to heaven when they have no invitation to go there themselves. "The meek shall inherit the earth." "Where I go, ye cannot come." So says our blessed Redeemer.

Yours in the blessed hope.

B. R. GLINKENBEARD.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I thought I would write a few lines to the love feast, but I am a little late. I am still trying in my weak way to serve the Master and be ready to meet him when he comes. Brothers and Sisters, I see so many good letters in our paper. It makes my heart rejoice. And so many good meetings. I am so glad that Bro. Wilson is having such a good time on his trip. I am glad for the brothers and sisters that do have meetings as we are not having any now. I see that a dear brother wrote such a good letter in THE RESTITUTION, and I dont remember of ever reading any of his letters before. He says:—"Praise the Lord, and praise his holy name." I say, Amen, to it.

From a Sister, in the Abrahamic Faith.

MRS. R. C. ELLIOTT.

Household of the One Faith:

Where are all isolated ones today, scattered far and near. Only through the pages of our dear home paper can we silently converse with each one on the different subjects of our faith and only hope and in the professing Christian world of today we see and find very little anxiety concerning the future hope or second coming of Christ. There is a universal indifference to it, (even on this our greatest and bloodiest of wars, nations trembling on verge of a crisis, calamities everywhere.) They do not like to converse about it, it is a subject which would not help but think, Where are all the Michigan letters we used to see? Only two or three as yet, and thought although late I would write a few words too. How my heart goes out to the young that have just started in the Christian life, especially the isolated ones that have no church home to help them or work with. Nothing but what the world holds out to them. How they need an encouraging word or look or letter from those older and more experienced sometimes to help them. Some may think if they have obeyed the gospel by being baptized that that is all there is to do, they are sure of being saved, when that is only the beginning, by making them ready to work out their own salvation with fear and trembling, for they appearing, thrice happy they who love to dwell upon it in their inmost thoughts, it is only to such he will appear the second time unto salvation. Give heed to the message that speaks to thee out of the Bible. Learn the truth from its neglected pages, and casting thine errors and thoughtlessness behind thee, give all obedience to the heavenly requirements, and then let us wait with hope and faith for the coming of the Son of Man, that we may be accounted worthy when he makes up his jewels. May our conversation be in heaven from whence also we look for the Savior, our Lord and Christ. A great many say unto one another today, Where is the promise of his coming, since the fathers fell asleep, all things continue as they were from the beginning—of creation? Ah! but the day comes when this apathy shall be rudely dispelled; for as the Bible speaks, "As a snare shall it come upon all them that dwell on the face of the whole earth. As it was in the days of Noah so shall it be In the coming of the Son of Man." But bright will be the first ray of hope that helps lift the mantle of darkness that covers the whole earth, and in the hearts of men concerning the greatest theme of the restitution of all ages, that are to come.

Dear friends may you and I be accounted worthy to stand before the Lamb.

A Blast Against Tobacco.

The late Dr. Joseph Parker said regarding smoking; "I hate smoking. From one end to the other it is a nuisance. It ends in cancer, apoplexy, bad temper, bankruptcy and almost hydrophobia. It is an invention of the devil. It is the pasttime of perdition. No dog smokes. No bird pines for tobacco. The whole idea and practice of smoking must be condemned as atheistical, unmoral and infinitely detestable."

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Covenant.

Covenant is mutual agreement between two or more parties. Gen. xxi. 32. There is (1) a covenant of works, the terms whereof are, do and live; sin and die, Gen. ii. 17; Isa. i. 19, 20, which covenant was broken by our first parents against God, in eating the forbidden fruit, and the covenant being made with Adam as a public person, not only for himself but for his posterity, all mankind, descending from him by ordinary generation, sinned in him, and fell with him in their first transgression. Rom. v. 12-20. 2. The covenant of redemption, and salvation by grace, entered into by the sacred Three, in behalf of elect sinners, on whom grace and glory were settled forever in Christ, their covenant head. Psa. lxxxix. 3, 28; Eph. i. 3, 4; 2 Tim. i. 9.

This covenant is, (1) The fruit of the sovereign love and good will of God, John iii. 16; Col. i. 19; (2) Sure, Isa. lv. 3, (3) It is everlasting. Isa. lxi. 8; (4) Absolute, Jer. xxxii. 38, 40. (5) A covenant filled with all spiritual blessings to true believers in Christ. Eph. i. 5. (6) called new, Heb. viii. 6, 8, not in respect of its date, it being made from everlasting, but in the manner of its dispensation and manifestation. Not that it differed in substance from the old, for therein Christ was promised, his death and sufferings shadowed forth by the legal sacrifices; and such as were saved under the Old Testament, were so only by faith in the blood of the Messiah that was to come; Gal. iv. 3. Abraham believed God, and it was counted to him for righteousness; he believed in a special manner the promise of the covenant concerning Christ, in whom believers of all nations should be blessed. Gen. xii. 3. But this testament or covenant is called new, in regard of the manner of its dispensation; being ratified afresh by the blood and actual sufferings of Christ; being freed from those rites or ceremonies wherewith it formerly administered; as it contains a more full and clear revelation of the mysteries of religion, as it is attended with a larger measure of the gifts and grace of the Spirit; and as it is never to wax old or be abolished. (2) For circumcision, which was the sign or seal of the old covenant; Gen. xvii. 9, 13. (2) For the duties of the covenant. Psa. xxv. 14. He will shew them his covenant: he will reveal to them, and make them understand the duties, and bestow upon them the blessings of the covenant. (4) For the laws or conditions required of men by the covenant; of the precepts of God's will and man's duty. Psa. xxv. 10. (5) For the decalogue, or ten commandments, which contain the articles of the covenant. Deut. iv. 13. (6) For the law, religion, and people of the Jews, who were in covenant with God. Dan. xi. 28. (7) For the vow, promise, or engagement, whereby a man and woman mutually bind themselves to each other in marriage; and this is called the covenant of God, Prov. ii. 17, because God is the institutor of that society and mutual obligation; and because God is called to be the witness and judge of that solemn promise and covenant, and the avenger of the transgression of it.

ANOTHER OFFER.

There is a general waking up among our people everywhere. Our public speakers are all busy, and calls are in excess of their ability to attend them. Many places want preaching at the same time, but must wait their turn. This shows a decided interest, and a desire among our brethren to sound out the Word to the yet unsaved. All seem to realize that the night is far spent, that the time to work is short.

Brothers and Sisters, our work is not well done, and is not ready for acceptance of God, unless we have done all we can—our very utmost. We cannot admit that it is our duty to do anything at all for the advancement of the Master's cause, without conceding it is our duty to do all we can—to make a sacrifice even.

Preachers of other denominations as well as our own, know and say that the best workers in a community are those who take and read their Church paper, and keep informed as to what is being done in the various departments of the work, and are thus interested in pushing along the car of truth.

The Managers of THE RESTITUTION are endeavoring to so conduct the paper that it will be a fit aid to the Evangelist in his work. We are trying to keep it clear from that contention that leads to mischief and strife. This is done by having certain well-defined truths which are taught in God's Word plainly, as a basis of belief, and by publishing articles that accord with these declared principles. Other outside subjects might be "investigated" as long as ink and pencil and paper lasts, and no decision ever be reached, but we do not consider this a profitable work to engage in, hence do not ask for contributions on such subjects, and do not want them. Such are usually but the "opinion" of a man, and are often based on a mere inference at best.

This paper aims to teach the truth of the Bible, and the same is declared and believed in by our Church. We therefore believe it is a fit missionary to be sent out to the unsaved and lost of the human family. In order to make it possible for our friends to do more of this missionary work than ever before, we make this offer;

Any one sending us $10.00 may select 13 names of those not now subscribers, to whom we will send the paper for the year 1904. This makes a trifle over one-half regular price if taken in lots of $10.00 worth. You and the office practically go halves in scattering the truth of the gospel to your neighbors and friends. You who have money think of this. For $100 you can preach to an audience of 130 people over 200 sermons the coming year. Can you do better with that amount of money? You have a minister come to your neighborhood perhaps once a month, giving you two or may be three discourses each time—possibly 30 a year. When he is coming you invite your neighbors in to hear him. Suppose those neighbors have had THE RESTITUTION in their homes each week when the preacher was not there, and have read the articles, and are interested to hear more. Does not this increase largely the chances of the preacher being able to speak the very words that will start your friend on the way to the kingdom? Did you ever think of this matter? Will you not take it under consideration? We feel sure if you do you will not hesitate to go half partner with us in this work.

Who will send $10, $20, $50, $100 for this work? The best time to start it is now. Select your names and send at once, so they will get the rest of this year and all of next.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts, get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Ties of the Gospel.

TO MRS. H. THE K. BUSSELL.

Dearer than friendship, O sister mine,
Is the linking of hearts in a faith divine!
For strong and glad are the loves that bind,
Those blest ones in the Father's fold.

Oh bless of truth they are ever true,
With lives as bright as the sparkling dew.
"Strong in the Lord"—their strength to trust,
When the strength of earth is a reign of dust.

No yielding here when the fight is on,
Just close my steps till the victor's won
And crowned and pure with a shout of cheer,
As the word comes by [illegible] "the Lord is near."

O! [illegible] God, for these friends of ours,
[illegible] us in the trying hours,
And keep by that the Father, my sister dear,
[illegible] you both till the Lord appear.

Will the Wicked Live Forever?

Not a great while after my eyes opened to the teaching of the Bible on the kingdom of God on earth, the question forced itself to the front, "What will become of the wicked?" We could easily enough place the immortal souls of the wicked into the hell of theology, no matter where that hell might be located; but with a real kingdom, a divine government, established on the earth, in which the good will be rewarded and the evil punished, there was no place for the immortal souls we had theorized about, and a different settlement of the disposition of the wicked had to be reached. The wicked as well as the righteous are real and tangible beings. According to Prov. ii: 22, the class designated as "the wicked" are to be "cut off." That from which they are to be cut off is styled "the earth." By this "earth" is understood terra firma, the terraqueous globe which we inhabit. But let us keep our judgment in abeyance as to the meaning of the phrase "cut off." I have only cited this passage to show that the wicked will be on the earth at the time when they shall be cut off.

It is well that we should proceed to this discussion upon a platform that is broad enough for all phases of our subject. In the first place I wish to say, in the language of Job, "In whose hand (the Lord's hand) is the soul (life) of every thing." Job xii: 10. Therefore also the life of the wicked. It is in God's power to perpetuate the life of the wicked to endless duration, or to suddenly and forever terminate his being. In the language of Richard Watson, "Immortality is a gift dependent on the will of the Giver." Institutes, Vol. II, p. 82, 83. From the foregoing we are justified in laying down the following propositions:

1. If the wicked live forever, it will be because God wills that they shall.

2. If they do not, because He wills they shall not.

3. If the wicked live forever, wickedness will be perpetuated to eternity.

If wickedness finally ceases to be, it will be: Either because all will finally turn from wickedness to righteousness, so that in this sense there will be no more wicked; or because the existence of the finally wicked is terminated in their complete and final destruction.

We see from the foregoing that if the wicked live forever, God will be the Cause of endless wickedness, for it is in His power to either perpetuate or terminate the existence of the wicked.

To "live forever" is to live as long as He lives who says, "I lift up my hand to heaven, and say, I live forever." Deut. xxxii: 50. He is "the high and lofty One that inhabiteth eternity." Isa. lvii: 15. Can such things be affirmed of man? Not so. Adam, the first sinner, was driven out of the garden, "lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live forever, therefore the Lord sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken." Gen. iii: 22, 23. The quality to live as long as God lives, "forever," was not an essential part of Adam's nature, but is entirely within God's power. Had He chosen to allow Adam to partake of the tree of life, this would have perpetuated Adam's being, and with it, his sinfulness. But from God's moral antagonism to sin, He chooses to do otherwise with regard to Adam. He did not want to perpetuate sin, nor give endless being to the sinner, as such. This case, as the initial one of God's dealing with sin and the sinner, shows unmistakably God's attitude toward sin. In keeping with His character God can not and will not change in His hatred of sin.

As for the declared intention of God toward the ungodly, it is that "all the wicked will He destroy." Ps. cxlv: 20. Recourse has been had, in the discussion of this subject, to methods of toning down certain Scriptures dealing with the doom of the wicked, which must at once appear highly questionable. It is said that the "destruction" experienced by the wicked will be the judgment of God by which wickedness will be purged out of the wicked, while they themselves will go untouched. This would be a kind of purgatory from which the wicked will merge pure and holy. This is "destruction" modified to suit human fancy. Now let us look at it in the light of the word of God. "The Lord preserveth all them that love him: but all the wicked will he destroy." Ps. cxlv: 20. Two classes of people are here placed in contrast. "Them that love him," and "the wicked." Two different acts are executed upon the two classes named: One means preservation of the one class; while the other results in the destruction of the other. If the destruction of the one class means only the destruction of their wickedness, then by analogy, the preservation of the other means only the preservation of the virtues that may adhere to them. If, however, the class that love the Lord are themselves the subjects of the preservation here mentioned, reason requires that the other class themselves are the subjects of the destruction contemplated, and not merely their vices. If it be said, to save the theory, that the destruction is not necessarily final, let me remind the reader that in such a case we have no assurance that the preservation of those who love the Lord will be final. Fairness demands that we accord to the one the same duration that is required for the other.

Two widely differing processes are clearly taught in Scripture for the destruction of sin and the destruction of the sinner. "The body of sin," according to Paul, is to be "destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin." Rom. vi: 6. "Henceforth" has reference to the time following the destruction of the body of sin. And this no manifestly refers to the present life after being buried with Christ in baptism, that it needs no further argument. The whole line of the thought is based upon the apostle's proposition. "We are dead to sin by being baptized with Christ." This "body of sin" is the same as "the old man," elsewhere styled "the carnal mind." Rom. viii: 7. This is to "be destroyed." This body of sin is itself the subject of destruction. Now, on the other hand, we read of a certain class of persons "whose end is destruction." Phil. iii: 19. This destruction does not merely pertain to the enmity to the cross of Christ as manifested in those persons, but to the persons themselves. This is their "end."

Were the Bible to teach the final salvation of all men, it would have to be written over, for as we have received it, it does not teach that all will finally be saved by the "everlasting destruction from the presence of the Lord" denounced against those "who obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ." 2. Thess. i: 8, 9.

The method of treating Scripture above referred to does violence to the Word of God, and to the rules of sound interpretation of language as well. If there is one thing above others that is unmistakably taught and duly emphasised in the Bible, it is the fact that God is uncompromising in His opposition to sin, and that he will utterly destroy the finally sinful.

I have only taken a few cases out of the overwhelming amount of evidence showing the Divine principle of dealing with sin. These may suffice to show the principle. There is no deviation from this evidence in the testimony.

Reader, do you want to live forever? I trust you do. I do. God has made provision that we may if we will. Jesus says, "If any man eat of this bread (which originates in heaven), he shall live forever." John vi: 51. He shall "not die." v. 50. Eat of that bread. Partake of Christ by faith, for "believing ye shall have life through his name." John xx: 31.

Your brother,
A. H. ZILMER.

Good Words and Fair Speech.

There are certain parties who apparently are determined to fritter away their time, waste their strength, and exhaust their energy and ambition in creating and fostering confusion. Men of more than ordinary ability, and gifted with "enticing words," are able by a specious manner, and seeming reasonableness, to deceive the hearts of the guileless. Doubtless they will succeed in blinding some forever, and others will in course of time recover, and get out of the snare. I refer to the advocates of the Seventh Day Sabbath, also, that Jesus did not offer a sacrifice for sin, that there was no significance to the sacrifices under the law, as pointing to the Lamb of God, that beareth away the sin of the world. Coupled with the foregoing is the contention that Jesus could not have been a descendant of David if Joseph was not his father. While these men unsettle the minds of some, with plausible arguments based upon false premises, they nevertheless exhibit the weakness of their reasoning.

To illustrate, a paper recently came to hand in which the Editor says in commenting on Gal. iii, that the law was added to the decalogue because the people sinned in worshiping the golden calf at the foot of Mount Sinai. It would seem that any and every candid person of ordinary perception could see that the foregoing statement is a perversion of Paul's argument. The apostle did not say "the law" was added to the ten commandments, and what is more he did not mean anything of the kind. What he did say was this, God made a covenant with Abraham which he confirmed before in Christ, which the law given to Israel at Mount Sinai 430 years after could not disannul, but on account of wrong doings the law was added, until the promised Seed of the Abrahamic covenant should come. What then was the law added to? Answer, to the covenant of promise made to Abraham. Paul's argument is simply this, no man is justified or set right with God by the works of the law, but he is justified by faith in the things promised in the covenant. Keeping the seventh day is one of the works of the law, and the man who seeks justification by works of the law, is one who walks by sight, and not by faith, and deceives himself. The inheritance comes by promise—a free gift of God's favor to all who exercise faith. Why then serve the law? Why then seek to find efficacy in your own vain and futile effort to observe the law, and then only in part? Beware of what Paul terms "enticing words," and what Peter calls "feigned words." Whatever is, is right for some ulterior purpose, and possibly that purpose is to sift out, and make manifest those of an understanding heart, who are able to discriminate and determine what is true and false. The time has come when those who do understand should take a decided stand, and give stability and tone to their convictions, not be ever learning, and yet never able to come to a knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus. Why stand continually on the brink of uncertainty? When you have the means at hand to clear away all confusion. If some points are obscure wait and study the Word, and light will come. What is needed is first familiar acquaintance with the Scriptures which can be attained only by daily reading, and secondly, carefully noting the wording of the text, and its relation to the contextual teaching. In a word take the Word of God more and to men less. The apostle further says, "If the inheritance came by the law, it is no more of promise." The apostle is comparing the efficacy of works under the law, and faith in the gospel as declared to Abraham. The phrase "the law" includes the decalogue. No distinction is made between the ceremonial law, as some style the law and the ten commandments. Before accepting any man's reasoning examine his premises, and see whether his philosophising is resting on an assumption or on a plain "thus saith the Lord." The covenant of Sinai includes the decalogue, and its glory was eclipsed in darkness by the divine effulgence that shines forth in the face of Jesus Christ. Moses as a "servant in his house" disappears behind the scene, when the heir and builder of the house, anointed with Holy Spirit and power was made manifest as the embodiment of divine glory. The covenant of Sinai was faulty, and Jesus was quick to discern its faults, and when he proceeded to show up its weakness the ten commandments did not escape his critical mind. Beware of seeking to please God by an exhibition of human infirmity in a vain effort to observe the law of works.

Faithful.

"Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life." Rev. ii. 10. In what are we to be faithful? Answer, in the service of the Lord. Paul says in 2 Tim. iv. 7, 8, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, shall give me at that day; and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing." In the 24th chapter of Matt. Jesus tells his disciples of the condition of the world at the time of his coming, admonishes them to watch and be ready, and says in verse 45 and 46, "Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his Lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing."

Also in Matt. xxv. in the Lord's parable of the talents, verse 21, "His lord said unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things; enter thou into the joy of thy lord."

In Luke 16th chapter in the Lord's parable of the unjust steward, he says in verses 10 and 11, "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much; and he that is unjust in the least is unjust also in much. If therefore ye have not been faithful in the unrighteous mammon, who will commit to your trust the true riches."

Rev. xvii. 14, "These shall make war with the Lamb, and the Lamb shall overcome them; for he is Lord of lords, and King of kings; and they that are with him are called, and chosen, and faithful."

How long are they to be faithful? Our text says, "Unto death." Then does the reward come at death? Let us see, Paul says in the quotation above that he expected his crown at the "appearing of the Lord." The blessing to the "faithful servant" is at the "coming of the Lord." In Matt. xiv. our Savior in speaking of making a feast says verses 13, 14, "But when thou makest a feast, call the poor, the maimed, the lame, the blind. And thou shalt be blessed; for they cannot recompense thee; for thou shalt be recompensed at the resurrection of the just."

1 Peter v. 4, "And when the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

According then, to the foregoing, it is at the "appearing of the Lord," at the "coming of the Lord," at the "resurrection of the just, and the "appearing of the chief Shepherd," that we are to receive the crown of life. We are admonished by the Revelator to be faithful unto death, because that is the end of our life work. Our record is then made up, and whatever it may be, good or bad; we cannot change it when death overtakes us.

"And I heard a voice from heaven saying unto me, Write, Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; Yea, saith the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors; and their works do follow them."

What is the reward of faithfulness? "A crown of life," says our text. And Peter, in verse just quoted above, says, "a crown of glory that fadeth not away."

A crown of royalty is the highest position that can be obtained in human governments. "But the crown that decks the monarch is not the crown for me."

"But there's a crown prepared above,
For all who walk in Jesus' love,
O! that's the crown for me."

And Jesus will bring it with him when he comes.

The Christian life is compared to a race course, "Know ye not that they which run in a race run all, but one receiveth the prize? So, run that ye may obtain. And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible."

Also Heb. xii. 1-2, "Wherefore seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us. Looking unto Jesus the author and finisher of our faith; who for the joy that was set before him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God."

In the Olympian games, to which comparison is made, a number could and did enter the race, but only one could win the prize; not so the Christian race, the reward is to the faithful, and all who hold out faithful to the end of the race shall obtain the prize.

The Christian life is also likened to a warfare. "Fight the good fight of faith, lay hold on eternal life." 1 Tim. vi. 12. "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." Paul, 2 Tim. iv. 7. Ours is not a carnal warfare, and we do not require carnal weapons to fight in this war. Eph. vi. 10 to 18 tells us plainly the kind of enemy we have to contend with, and the kind of armor we need, both offensive and defensive. Taking as a comparison the Roman armor. Truth being the girdle, righteousness the breast plate, gospel of peace for the feet, faith the shield, salvation the helmet, and the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God; and Heb. iv. 12, tells us that the Word of God is a very sharp sword, and is even a "discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart."

No matter how well a soldier may be equipped, and how well he may be drilled, if he stands still on the approach of the enemy, and does not make use of his equipments and skill, he is sure to be taken captive; so with the soldier of Jesus Christ, if he does not make use of the armor he has put on, and the Sword of the Spirit placed in his hands, he is not a valiant soldier of the cross, and will be the conquered rather than conqueror. Let us then make good use of "the Sword of the Spirit and the armor of God," and as we read in Heb. xii. 1-2, "Wherefore, seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight, and the sin which so easily doth beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us. Looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith; who, for the joy that was set before him, endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God.

A little child was asked which of the beatitudes she would choose, if she could have but one of them. After reading them thoughtfully, she said she would choose the beatitude of a pure heart; for if she had this one, she would have all the others with it.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAR. 9, 1904. NUMBER 10.

The Restitution.

The RESTITUTION advocates the literal restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Table Talk.

SELF DENIAL.

There are many ways in which we can deny ourselves. I think we should deny ourselves every thing that is opposed to God's law, or that would hinder us in any way from serving him. We should deny worldly pleasure that has a tendency to draw us away from God's commandments. Some say, is there any harm in this or that? The better way is to say, is there any good in it? And if we see no benefit to be derived, shun it. We are taught that we should deny ungodliness and worldly lusts; we should live soberly, righteously and godly in this present world. Looking for that blessed hope, and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ, who gave himself for us that he might redeem us from all iniquity, and purify unto himself a peculiar people, zealous of good works. He is our example. He gave himself for us, that he might redeem us from all iniquity. Then if we have been redeemed, we should endeavor to follow the example of our Redeemer. To keep ourselves unspotted from the world, to be a peculiar people, zealous of good works, not peculiar in appearance or dress. But if we refrain from what the world calls pleasure we will be considered peculiar. Christ says he that taketh not his cross and followeth after me is not worthy of me. Then if we would be heirs with Christ, there is something for us to do. We must deny ourselves, take up our cross whatever it may be and follow what we know would be pleasing to God. And we must know what is required of us. We can make no excuse for being ignorant, for we have the Word of God. Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey; his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death or of obedience unto righteousness? Rom. vi: 16. Ye cannot serve sin, but be servants of righteousness unto life eternal in the kingdom of God. Let us not be desirous of vain glory, provoking one another, envying one another. If any one desires the glory or approbation of men, or are envious of some one that is more prosperous or in a higher position, let them remember that the glory of men is but vain glory. And let us deny ourselves this desire to be great in the sight of men, and study to be approved of God. For if we suffer we shall also reign with him. If we deny him he will also deny us, or if we are ashamed of Christ and his Word, of him shall the Son of Man be ashamed when he shall come in his glory, and in his Father's, and of the holy angels. Let us all deny ourselves, and stand approved by the Father, who will not deny us if we live soberly and honestly, looking for his appearing and kingdom.

Obituary.

It is with deep sorrow we write to announce the death of Sister Demarius Logdson. Demarius Wilson was born July 29, 1838 in Adams Co., Ill., was married to William Logdeon in Nov. 1873, died at her home near Ripley, Ill., Feb. 16, 1904. Some 45 years ago she was baptized into the all saving name of him who said, "Take my yoke upon you and learn of me for my yoke is easy and my burden is light." She leaves an aged husband, three brothers and one sister to mourn her loss, besides other relatives and friends. The funeral services were conducted by Bro. C. W. Hogan of Ripley, after which the body was laid to rest in the Wilson cemetery, near her old home. Amid the sorrows and afflictions in this life we have the blessed assurance that Christ will come again and take his worthy ones unto himself, for he has said, "I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also." May God comfort the bereaved ones,

A FRIEND.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

OUR War Atlas is all right, and the first invoice is going fast. Send for one and keep track of the movements of the contestants. A glance at the specially prepared maps show at once the places where the armies meet.

QUITE a number of articles have been received lately which will be given place in due time. We are glad to get them now, as some writers will be busy with other work soon, and so not able to write much. Do not be afraid of sending too many, as we will give them space as we can. In this issue we give the first part of Brother Joblin's article on the authenticity of the first chapters of Matthew and of Luke. We hope our brethren will give them careful study, and be fortified against the wiles of the designing men who are endeavoring to unsettle the faith of some.

THE war drags on with little change. Russia is proceeding with her task of transporting men to the scene; but it is slow work over the one line of railroad, and there will be no great battle for some weeks yet. Japan is not idle, but advancing her lines as fast as possible to interfere with Russian preparations. We can only wait and see how the troops of each will act when face to face. While this is going on Russia is much occupied nearer home. There is among the students and working classes a growing sentiment of revolution—the "absolutism" of the Czar is irksome to them. A rebellion in the Transcaucasus is probable. There is much disaffection in the army. The smoldering fires in the Balkans, the agitations of the Finns, and the outspoken plans of the Poles, are enough to occupy the attention of the government, and the London Spectator says concerning these troubles: "In the more patriotic and high-spirited circles of the Russian capital, it is frankly acknowledged that the condition of the exchequer, the state of the people, and the position of external affairs all point to the conclusion that no time could be less opportune for embarking in hostilities."

THE London Speaker, an organ of the Liberal party, in commenting on the situation in the near East says:

Turkey would gladly see her ancient enemy so entangled on the further side of Asia as to abandon all thought of reform, and suffer the Turk to go forward unheeded on his ancient way. Bulgaria would feel at once relieved from the main apprehension which has hitherto stayed her hand from striking in defense of her kinsmen in Macedonia. With army and navy both occupied with Korea, it is at least less probable that Russia would take the extreme and dreaded step of seizing the Bulgarian posts on the Black sea and declaring a suzerainty over the whole province. Thus it is that both sides look forward with hope to Russia's temporary disappearance from the Balkans. On the Bulgarian side the danger of war has immensely increased since last autumn. The elections gave the war party a strong majority in the Sobranje. The people know that the Turks have been found out. They know that English men who have visited Macedonia have revealed the truth of what has there been perpetrated, so that not even the British Prime Minister would dare to chatter about the balance of criminality now. If things go on as they are going, it is almost certain she will strike. And as for Turkey, from the first her desire, apart from the Sultan's will, has been for open war, and the winter has only increased the desire.

Are the First Chapters of Matthew and Luke Authentic?

Jesus said (Matt. xxiii. 15) that the Scribes, Pharisees and hypocrites traversed sea and land to make one proselyte.

Paul told the elders of Ephesus (Acts xx. 30) that "Among themselves men would arise speaking perverse things, to draw away disciples after them."

The same kind of men are doing the same kind of work, with the same energy, for the same purpose, now.

To make good their contention they mutilate the gospels of Matt. and Luke, and we deem it a duty to our God, to our readers, and to ourselves to present what evidence we have found of the authenticity of the first chapters of those gospels.

The statement is frequently made that previous to A. D. 175, no trace can be found of the gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke and John. But this has been refuted in the most direct manner by the evidence found in the writing of the early apologists for Christianity, but as these works are not obtainable by all, men of ability have culled out the most telling parts, so that all may be able, historically, to defend the books of the life of Jesus Christ.

From "The Gospels, their Age and Authorship" we find much helpful matter. Justin, the Martyr, furnishes abundant testimony to the existence of the gospels. He was born in Flavia, Neapolis, the ancient Sychem, sometime between 103 and 118 A. D. In his youth he devoted himself to the study of philosophy,—became a disciple of Zeno the Stoic, but soon left him with the bitterness of blighted hopes because his teacher could teach him scarcely anything about the Deity. He soon after met with an aged man who told him that in ages past there had appeared men called prophets, in whose writings were deposited the choicest treasures of infallible religious truth. This led Justin to a deep and earnest study of the Scriptures, which caused him to declare himself a believer in and follower of Christ. He was to examine matters for himself, and by his continuous travelling about he became acquainted with the opinions of all who adhered to the Christian faith at that time. He wrote two defenses of Christianity, one addressed to the Emperor Antonious Pius, another to Marcus Aurelius, also a supposed Dialogue with a Jew named Trypho, proving from the Old Testament that Jesus was the Christ. The date of the first apology must be between A. D. 140 and 150. And it is beyond controversy that the statements made by Justin expressly or incidently, respecting the history and teaching of correspond with singular exactness with the statements of the four gospels. This will be seen by the following extract from "Dr. Sanday's gospels in the Second Century," composed of extracts from Justin's writings:—

JESUS CHRIST,

"According to Justin, the Messiah was born without sin, of a virgin, who was descended from David, Jessee, Phares, Judah, Jacob, Isaac, and Abraham. To Mary it was announced by the angel Gabriel, that while yet a virgin, or of the Highest, should overshadow her, and she should conceive and bare a son, whose name she should call Jesus, because he should save his people from their sins....."The birthplace of the Messiah had been indicated by the prophecy of Micah v. 2, (Bethlehem, not the least among the princes of Judah) there he was born, as the Romans might learn from the census taken by Cyrenious the First Procurator of Judea. His life extended from Cyrenius to Pontius Pilate. So, in consequence of this, the first census, Joseph went up from Nazareth, where he dwelt to Bethlehem, whence he was as a member of the tribe of Judah, obliged to go. The parents of Jesus could find no lodging in Bethlehem, so it came to pass that he was born in a cave near the village and laid in a manger.

THE POWER OF GOD,

Later on, in the same book, there is an account of the closing scenes of the life of Jesus. "Justin relates most of the incidents of the crucifixion in details, in confirmation of which he refers to the acts of Pilate. He marks especially the fulfilment in various places of Psa. xxii. He has the piercing with nails, the casting of lots, and dividing of the garments, the sneers of the crowd, and their taunt, "He who raised the dead let him save himself;" also the cry, "My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?" And the last words, "Father, into thy hand I commend my spirit." The burial took place in the evening, the disciples all being scattered in accordance with Zech. xiii. 7.". Justin again gives the substance of the words of the angel to Mary, and says, "As they have taught who have written the history of all things concerning our Savior Jesus Christ."

We next offer in evidence the

MURATORIAN FRAGMENT.

The earliest known list of the books of the New Testament, is contained in a MS. called the Muratorian Canon, or Muratorian Fragment, because discovered by Muratori, the librarian of the Ambrosian collection at the commencement of the 17th century, and a most voluminous historical writer and compiler. He says this codex appears, from the character of the writing, to belong to the 8TH CENTURY.

The contents are very miscellaneous, consisting of various homilies and tracts which have been transcribed by very illiterate copyists. After giving the titles of some of these, Muratori proceeds:—"From the same codex I have culled a most ancient fragment relating to the canon of the divine Scriptures." He then proceeds to show that the date of the original from which the MS. was copied or translated must be the middle of the 2nd century. This is inferred from the following passage:—

"Hermas wrote the Shepherd very recently in our times, in the city of Rome, while his brother, Bishop Pius, occupied the chair of the Church of Rome." It is well known that Hermas lived about A. D. 150.

The fragment is a rude, illiterate translation of a Greek original, the author of which is not known. The errors of grammar and spelling are great and many. Every sentence abounds with blunders which show that the writer had vague ideas of Latin syntax and orthography; and yet its evidence is not the less trustworthy from its being a blundering and illiterate transcript or a rough and rustic translation of a Greek original. The peculiarity of its transmission in this form gives, if anything, a further weight to its testimony, as being some thing the genuineness of which is self-evident."

Though the fragment is full of errors, the sense of it is tolerably clear. It begins abruptly in the middle of a sentence. The following translation, for convenience of reference, is divided into paragraphs, though undivided in Latin:—

....."At which he was present and thus set them down. In the third place is the book of the gospel according to Luke. Luke was that physician, zealous of right, whom Paul took with him as a companion after the ascension of Christ. Luke wrote in his own name from report (as he did not see the Lord in the flesh), and he thus was able to trace his course. Thus he begins to speak from the nativity of John."

"The fourth gospel is that of John, one of the disciples. His fellow disciples and bishops exhorting him (to write it), he said 'Let us fast three days, and let us relate to each other what is revealed to either of us.' In the same night it was revealed to Andrew, one of the apostles, that John should describe all things in his own name. And thus, though various principles are taught in several books of the gospels, there is no difference to the faith of believers. In one general purpose all things are declared of the Nativity, the Passion, the Resurrection, the discourse with the disciples, and the two advents—the first when he was despised in his humility, the second when he will be glorious in his royal power. What wonder, then, that John so constantly asserts these things in his epistles, saying, 'What we have seen with our eyes, and our hands have touched, these we write unto you.' 1 John i. 7. (This contrast between John's narrative and that of Luke, derived from information from others, is very remarkable.)

"John professes himself to be not only a seer and hearer, but also a writer in order of all the wonderful things of the Lord.

"But the Acts of the Apostles are written in one book. Luke (writing) to the most excellent Theophilus, includes only those things which occurred in his own presence, as he shows by omitting the passion of Peter, and the departure of Paul from Rome for Spain.

"But the epistles of Paul—what they were, from what place directed, or for what cause, they themselves declare to those who are willing to understand."

The writer then enumerates Paul's writings: 1 The Corinthians, 2 Galatians, 3 The Romans, then he says at length. "Since the blessed Apostle Paul followed the rule of his predecessor John (as apostle) wrote only to seven churches by name in this order—firstly to the Corinthians, secondly to the Ephesians, thirdly to the Philippians, fourthly to the Collossians, fifthly to the Galatians, sixthly to the Thessalonians, seventhly to the Romans—(but he wrote two to the Corinthians and the Thessalonians, for purpose of correction), he showed there is only one church scattered throughout the world. For John in the Apocalypse, although he writes to seven churches, speaks to all.

But one to Philemon, and one to Titus, and two to Timothy, written from love and affection: are held sacred in the honor of the Catholic Church in the regulation of ecclesiastical discipline.

"It is reported that there is an epistle to the Laodiceans and another to the Alexandrians, forged in the name of Paul against the heresy of Macedon, and many others, which cannot be received in the Catholic Church, for gall may not be mingled with honey.

"An Epistle of Jude, and two of the above named John, are received in the Catholic Church

"And Wisdom, written by friends of Solomon in honor of it.

"And the Apocalypse of John and Peter we receive, which, however, some Christians object to have read in churches.

"The Pastor" indeed was written very lately by Hermas, while Bishop Pius occupied the chair of the Church of Rome, and thus it should be read. But it cannot be read in the church publicly to the people, neither among the prophets, of whom the number is complete; nor among the apostles, because of the limit of time.

"But of Arsinous, or Valentine, or Miltiades we receive nothing whatever.

"Those followers also of Marcion who have written a new book of Psalms,—together with Basilides, founder of the Asian Cataphrygians."

Here the Fragment ends abruptly.

We now offer an article taken from the Chicago Daily News, under the heading of the

"OLDEST FRAGMENT OF GOSPEL."

Boston, Mass., Feb. 27, 1902.—The Rev. Dr. Wm. C. Winslow of this city, vice-president of the Egyptian Exploration fund, to-day announced the discovery of a most valuable trophy among the large number of papyri recently received by Dr. Winslow for distribution among several universities, twenty-nine of which went to the University of Pennsylvania. It is the oldest fragment of the gospels of the world now in this country. Dr. Winslow states that the papyrus contains a large part of the 1st chapter of the gospel of St. Matthew. It was found at Oxyrhynchus, 140 miles south of Cairo, Egypt, near the famous "Logia," or "Sayings of Jesus," and its date is placed by some experts at A. D. 150, and by the editors of the Societies' publication at 50 or 60 years later.

This papyrus of St. Matthew belongs to the same class as the famous Sinaitic and Vatican codices, and of course is a remarkable corroboration of those texts and the accepted version. On an important doctrinal point it declares in common the exact language: Joseph, thou Son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary, thy wife, for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost." This papyrus is the oldest fragment of the gospel, or, indeed of the New Testament.

Mr. Winslow states that valuable papyri of Homer, Thucydides, and Euclid also are in the collection. The papyrus of Thucydides includes no less than chapters 80 to 41 of his 4th book, eight. It dates from the first century.

We next offer a paper read at the Free Church Congress, in Edinburgh, Scotland, in Jan. 1902, by Mrs. Lewis of Cambridge, England, entitled

THE SYRIAC MSS. ON MT. SINAI.

"The Convent of St. Catherine, on Mount Sinai, has been from the early centuries of our era a storehouse of sacred learning. It was only one of many similar institutions which flourished under the shadow of the group of mountains known as Horeb; and one can only conjecture that as these fell into decay, or were attacked by the fanatical Moslems, the literary treasures which each of them possessed were brought within the massive walls of St. Catherine for safety.

"I am not here to speak of the Greek Codex Sinaiticus, that great treasure of Biblical revisers, which was made known to the learned world by Constantine Tischendorf in 1844, but of the Syriac manuscripts, which I do not suppose that he looked at, which more than one great Semitic scholar after his time vainly tried to examine, whose seal Dr. Rendel Harris, in 1889, was the first to break, and of which I took a complete inventory in 1893.

"The first which merits your attention is the Apology of Aristides, discovered by Dr. Rendel Harris in 1889, and edited by him as the first number of the Cambridge series, Texts and Studies, in 1891. Many of you do not need to be reminded that Aristides was a philosopher of Athens, who in the year 125 A. D. read an apology or defense of Christianity before the heathen Emperor Hadrian. The apology contains two very striking points, both of which confute 19th century heresies.

1. It gives us a vivid picture of the corruption of the heathen religions, especially of the Greek by one who knew them at first hand; and not less eloquent is its testimony to the simple virtues of the early Christians.

"I record with gratitude that it was the inspiring influence of Dr. Harris' discovery and perusal of his book which prompted me to study the Syriac language, and so made it possible for me either to see or to recognize the fourth century Palimpsest of Syriac Gospels. The fact that it should have lain unread since the eighth century, when it was partially erased, that, written in the fourth century, it should represent a text which was current in the second, and yet, notwithstanding a few variants, that it should so closely agree with the universally received texts of the gospels, is in itself a striking witness to the fact that we possess the most important part of Holy Writ substantially in the form in which it was first delivered to the saints by its inspired authors."

We now offer translations from various authors, of the TRANSLATION OF LUKE I. 3.

IGNATIUS,

Bishop of the Syrian Antioch, who was martyred about A. D. 110. His literary remains contain a vivid picture of the condition of the Asiatic churches as to doctrine and discipline, and also prove that he was acquainted with most of the books in our canon.

POLYCARP,

the last of the apostolic fathers, was bishop of Smyrna, and is a most interesting personality, inasmuch as he belongs to the age that had seen the apostles, and is known to have been one of the small group of personal friends and disciples gathered round the aged apostle John at Epheus; at this period, virtually, the centre of Christendom. Besides John, Andrew and Philip also resided at Epheseus at this time.

IRENAEUS,

Bishop of Lyons, and one of the most celebrated theologians of the early church, tells us that Polycarp received his episcopate from the apostles, and speaks of his personal knowledge of the Bishop, and how he had related his intercourse with John and the rest who had seen the Lord. Of his writings only one letter (to the Philippians) is extant, and this contains many phrases from the New Testament, especially the first epistle of Peter. Ten of Paul's epistles are in some way or other alluded to, as also the Acts, 1 John iii. 8, and probably the gospels of Mark and Luke. In all there are between thirty and forty references to the New Testament. Polycarp was martyred about A. D. 155.

After the fall of Jerusalem, Asia Minor became the seat of Christian activity, and one of the most distinguished members of the School of Elders formed by the authority of the Apostle whom Jesus loved was PAPIAS.

He was a bishop of Hierapolis. He was the companion of Polycarp, a hearer of John, and was known personally to Andrew and Philip. About the year 130 he wrote a large work entitled, "An Exposition of the Oracles of the Lord," which does not now exist entirely. Some of the fragments are preserved by Eusebius and are intensely interesting and important. Therein Papias mentions by name seven of the Lord's disciples, and states the origin of the gospels of Matthew and Mark. So far as relates to Mark, he avers that Peter dictated everything that he remembered, "recording in order what was either said or done by Christ. For neither did he (Mark) hear the Lord, nor did he follow him." The next step brings us to the best known and greatest of all the Apologists. His extant writings are "Two Apologies," and a Dialogue with "Trypho," besides some fragments. In the first he gives an account of the Christian Assemblies and observances on the Sunday, and says that the "Memoirs of the Apostles," in which he found written "All things concerning Jesus Christ," and "Composed by the Apostles and those who followed them," were read. In all Justin's known works there are close upon 200 references to the FOUR GOSPELS, more or less verbally correct, besides coincidences of language with eight of the Pauline epistles, while the Book of Revelation he mentions by name. Justin was martyred about 148, and his writings afford us the first clear proof of the beginning of a New Testament Canon, inasmuch as the

JUSTIN MARTYR,

FOUR GOSPELS,

and certain of the apostolic writings were collected for the purpose of reading at the gatherings of the Primitive church, and formed the basis of comment and exhortation. A remarkable piece of collateral evidence is furnished by the writings of Marcion, a heretic, and the greatest of all gnostics. In his teachings and writings he rejected all of the New Testament, that was not Pauline. He, therefore, compiled for the use of his school and disciples what is known as

MARCION'S GOSPEL.

This was an adaption and mutilation of Luke's, which he treated with much freedom. It also included the Pauline epistles, except those to Timothy and Titus, also Hebrews, expurgated of all Jewish elements. The basis of his teachings was thus an abridged and edited collection of eleven apostolic documents. Marcion wrote his "gospel" about 140 A. D., and it is the first definite attempt to define a Christian Bible, though it is but a partisan and very inadequate production.

Take time and realize, when you are alone with God: Here am I now face to face with God to intercede for His servants. Do not think that you have no influence or that your prayer will not be missed. Your prayer and faith will make a difference.

There is plenty of hair-splitting as to what is intoxicating drink, and what is not. The safest way for one who has doubts about a certain drink is not to touch it, no matter who says it is "all right." Think of and practise this rule: "In case of doubt, don't."

Poetry.

Times of Refreshing.

From the Scriptures of truth this conclusion we draw,
That the wisdom of men nor the works of the law
Have the power to cleanse nor forgive nor to save,
Nor restore from the curse nor redeem from the grave,
By transgression man fell under sin and was lost,
And by sentence of death he returns unto dust.
Though he willingly chose the way of transgression,
Yet in Christ God offers future life and salvation.

Men are saved by their faith in the Crucified One,
When his love and his goodness to them are made known.
Saving faith comes by hearing the life-giving word,
And the mercy of God through the Savior conferred.
All who will may be saved by obedient faith,
And may gain life ascending through Christ and his grace.
For the gospel salvation to all is made free;
As they heed its injunctions their judgment will be.
Endless life is for those who the gospel accept,
But death is the portion of the soul who rejects;
For there's no other way that's revealed by the Lord
To redeem fallen men but through Christ and his word.

The heavens are the Lord's, but the earth hath he given
To the children of men as their home and their heaven.
Wicked rulers and nations thus far have borne sway,
And their reign has led down from the gold to the clay.
But the age for the world's promised blessing is near,
When the true light that lighteth all men shall appear.

God is now taking out from the world for his name
A faithful, tried people with the Savior to reign.
Soon those sleeping in Christ from the dead will arise,
And joining the living meet the Lord in the skies.
These elect ones with Christ shall forever abide,
And he'll honor and glorify them as his bride
As a body perfected the seed then will bless
All the nations of earth with the gospel of peace.
Then he comes to the earth with his chosen again,
And will over the nations commence his just reign.
All the powers of earth to an end shall be brought,
And their rule and authority soon come to naught.
All their glory and pride like the chaff pass away,
And Christ and his chosen in mercy bear sway.
When he speaks to the earth she uncovers her slain,
And they all hear his voice and to life rise again.
Christ will reign until all things to him are subdued,
And the foes of the earth from the curse is renewed.

These times of refreshing from the Lord now are near,
And the life-giving power is soon to appear.
Christ will banish the curse and perfection restore,
And the earth fill with gladness and beauty once more
Then sorrow and death and corruption will cease,
And the world shall be clothed in the garments of peace.
When he rules in the earth the glad tidings is heard,
And the world shall remember and turn to the Lord.
All nations shall worship the Lord then with fear,
And the kings join praise when his words they shall hear.
The Lord from Mt. Zion gives his law in that day.
And the people say, Come let us walk in his way.
Then the weapons of warfare and carnage shall cease,
And hatred and strife yield to love and to peace.

When the Spirit of grace rests on Israel again,
And they look upon him they in blindness have slain,
They will bitterly mourn and acknowledge their sin,
And gladly accept him as their long looked-for King.
Then their possession the Lord will restore,
And their numerous sins he'll remember no more,
Then the new covenant with Israel is made,
And his teachings of love are forever obeyed.

Jerusalem restored with the Lord as its Light,
Is the glory of earth and its joy and delight.
From this city redeemed living waters shall flow,
And the life-giving tree on its borders shall grow.
When the curse is removed this blessed city of love
Is enlarged and made one by the City above.
All honor and glory to the Lord now is given,
And his will on earth is done as in heaven.

The Argument of Kings.

Suddenly across the face of the world flares the torch of war. It is the argument of kings. Civilization knows no better way. The Hague conference and the international peace talks were preliminary voices only to the tremendous roar which is about to break.

Be it fate or accident, the feet of every nation point that way and the sword is ready. Madness of lust of power is no longer an individual blight. It is Morganism gone to seed in the breast of kings. The stake is for world supremacy—and the end is not in sight.

There's no controversy as to the success of a world-wide government when once established—indeed, in these days of rapid transit by sea and land, and lightning communication, it would be entirely possible. The chief point of dispute would be as to where the capitol should be located—whether in Berlin, London, St. Petersburg, Paris or Washington. Having settled that point, all else would be comparatively easy.

It was the foul spirit that whispered this to Russian czars. But the box of evils once opened, the little fiends hob about to the disquiet of all who wear the ermine. The proposition of a strict neutrality which shall limit the war to Russia and Japan reads and looks well at first glance, but the more one studies it, the more it seems to be weak of its own weight. In other words, there doesn't seem to be the shadow of a chance for anything of the sort, especially should the fortunes of war turn against Japan.

It would indeed be a spectacle for gods and men if the Sunflower Kingdom—that only a little time ago was a hermit—should suddenly bring the bear to his knees and as a trophy annex the whole Russian territory. Should the fortune of war turn the other way, and the Sunflower be in danger of being swallowed by that stealthy aggressive monster—Oh! Then the United States and England would find it very hard to keep still while the white horror strode over Korea and spoiled Japan and mastered the Pacific.

It goes without saying that long before such a thing would be possible both nations would be dipping in the broth, and the world-around bugle would sound.

In the light of his recent proclamation, it is hardly probable that President Roosevelt said that he hoped Col. Crisby would not run off to Japan with a regiment of "rough riders," because every Rough Rider would surely want to go! But the sentiment is not far from being the sentiment of the American people just now—for Japan's defeat might mean a death blow to trans-Pacific trade for which this whole Northwest has been reaching out. It might mean Siberian wheat for the far East instead of wheat from our wide prairies. It might mean a lot of things for which neither England nor the United States would stand.

Japan's defeat means much to England, against which nation Russia has watched and schemed. It means war over Thibet. It means the dividing of English forces and new maneuvers in India. So that in many ways it would be impossible for England to keep still while her secret enemy went from conquest to conquest in Asia.

However winsome the picture of world-wide peace, it's a long distance from here, and there's a belief abroad that such an ideal state is impossible until that great power of the North is chained to its own preserves.

It is claimed by some who pretend to know much about Russia that she is weak within, owing to the thousands of peasant folks who have no love for the government. While it is very true that the poor people have no reason for patriotism, it is equally true that vast numbers of them are at starvation's edge. They are mercilessly lorded over by those in authority, and if commanded to leave their miserable dwellings and line up before a field of bayonets, they would obey—knowing that it would mean death to disobey.

Of all the crowned heads of the Old World, the Czar of all the Russias is the one in whom there is the least to admire. It may stand to his credit centuries hence, that he brought about The Hague tribunal, but for the present, it appears that the tribunal was the string that pulled the head of the oracle while he tinkered with the springs.

Brotherly love must run mighty slow in his veins, spite of all his preaching, for he seems never to be moved by the privations of his own people; and it is characteristic of him, that in the dead of winter, and on the eve of war, there should occur in his palace the most brilliant entertainment known for years.

Japan is said to be able to command six hundred thousand men, and it's already in evidence that on the sea she is more than the equal of her foe. Now, this is a very large number of men, but the real tug will be on land. The national spirit which possesses them—the all-absorbing patriotism that sleeps and walks with them—augurs well in the outset, and is wanting in her opponent.

As this world-wide horror rises and takes shape, one sees that whether it creeps up on soft winds, or rides down on the chill blast of the North, the woe is the same. Black eye, blue eye, gray eye—low brow or high—white face or black—over all is the skull and cross-bones—and through all the red-line. Surely, as Gen. Sherman said, "War is hell!"

There is nothing like war, however, to waken women up. It will waken up the "little brown women" as it wakened our women in the sixties—and when the all-round conflagration breaks, as it seems sure to do, there will be great things doing everywhere—so that women will have no time for trivial affairs.

The prospect of universal war is quite enough to chill the stoutest heart—and only those who see in it the coming of that Kingdom that shall know no end—the Kingdom of peace and good will—the Kingdom of life unvexed by death—can view it with composure. If this be the outcome, then come, Lord Jesus, and come quickly! —Marion B. Baxter in Seattle Times.

The Darkening War Cloud.

Intelligent statesmen and first-class editors are settling down to a firm belief in what students of prophecy long ago declared was certain to come—a universal war for political and commercial supremacy in the defunct nations of the Orient, such as China and Turkey. These natural prophets are intelligently forecasting the inevitable results, in perfect harmony with the supernatural prophets of the divine Word. We believe the times now ripe for a breaking up of present base conditions and the ushering in of a better day for this sinning, suffering, sorrowing world. There are strong indications that since war has broken out between Russia and Japan it will soon draw other nations into the struggle and initiate the final breaking up process. The great national chess game is soon to remove the old landmarks, and mix the maps of earth with new boundary lines everywhere.

In spite of the fact that Russia poses as a Christian nation and dubs the Japanese people as "superficially civilized mediævals," the Christian world's sympathies will be with Japan in this struggle. In her tacit exclusion of the English language, no less than the English commerce, Russia has fearfully hindered the advancement of her millions of ignorant serfs; as every moralizing and enterprising agency and influence of earth are embedded in the bosom of the English language. Her opposition to true missionary effort is also a break on the wheels of national progress such as Japan is incapable of inflicting upon her people. In fact, Japan, as the child of the world's old age, has made more progress in the last twenty-five years than Russia has in a whole century.

Every atom of intelligent missionary sympathy in the Occident will be with Japan in her attempt to clip the claws of the Great White Bear, whose heart seems as cold to all moralizing influences as the frost laden atmosphere of his ice-bound home. Now that the cloudburst of war has actually come, there is little hope that the entire carving up of China and Turkey can be postponed any longer. The land-grabbing propensities of the dominating nations assure us of this. National destiny had decreed that the present strife between the Czar and the Mikado was inevitable sooner or later.

Much as true Christendom might desire to see the Russian Bear flayed at this time, fate has declared otherwise. She may be given a big backset, but she must be able to do strenuous battle with Great Britian at the close of the present epoch. The prophetic Scripture plainly reveal that England and Russia must yet fight a draw battle over the control of Chinese and Turkish possessions. Each desires to own Constantinople as one of the commercial sluice-gates of the east, and thereby control the wealth-producing commerce of the Mediterranean and Black Seas and thus hold the balance of power in the Orient. We mark Germany x; she is the unknown quantity in prophecy. She will doubtless straddle each issue as far as possible. The United States, Scandinavia and Japan will doubtless be allied with England in this greater war, while the latin nations headed by France will doubtless back the Bear in this awful struggle. This war between the frigid monarchy and the sunrise empire will merely initiate the general conflict. We are entering a reconstructionary period. Present conditions are doomed, but their death groans will prove the birth pangs of a better order.

Palestine, or Turkey in Asia, as the Lord's "sheepfold" where both Old and New Testament churches were born and where both will be buried, is to be the bone of contention for the Lion and the Bear, as representing English and Russian national Coats of Arms. The second coming of Jesus to earth in the midst of this carnage will settle the bloody business. By breaking up the existing order of government, abolishing all present conditions, and, as the Bible declares he will do, taking the government of earth on his own shoulders, he will destroy "the Lion and the Bear," as his prototype, David, the Israelitish king vanquished the lion and bear which came to molest his sheep-fold. Like David, who afterwards slew the uncircumcised giant who defied the armies of Israel and their God, Jesus will settle with the Satanic giant of sin who is typified in both beings and businesses by this Philistine. As David by the vanquishing of the lion, the bear and the giant won for himself a royal bride, a throne and crown and reigned in prosperity with all other nations tributary to Israel, so Jesus at his second coming, is said in the Bible to do. The glorified church typified by Michal Saul's royal daughter, will be his bride, and all the world will bring their treasures to his feet, while Satan and bad governments will be robbed of their power to oppress the people over the entire, redeemed earth.

We do not believe in the popular idea of "the end of the world," but with all intelligent Christians we do believe in the future restoration of the earth to its pristine grandeur and glory, and we trust that the "times of restitution of all things of which prophets is spoke", is much nearer than generally believed.—Thomas H. Nelson in Pentecost Herald.

The Present Truth.

"Wherefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though ye know them, and be established in the present truth." 2 Pet. i: 12.

All Bible truths are not present truth in all ages of the world. Noah taught present truth to antediluvians for one hundered and twenty years: the coming of a flood was present truth to them, but it is not so to us. Jonah's message to the Ninevites was present truth to them, and had the desired effect; but it does not apply to us now. When John came preaching baptism of the changing, his message was present truth to the Jews at that time; but it is simply history to us, manifesting God's dealings with that nation and people. All who believed the message "justified God, being baptized with the baptism of John." Luke vii: 29.

What then is present truth to us? Can it be anything else than the second personal coming of the Lord, to raise the dead, destroy his foes, and confer the boon of eternal life on his loving disciples? If Peter's words were true that the last days commenced almost 1900 years ago, where are we now on the stream of time? The gospel of the kingdom has belted the globe: what next impends?

Are we, like John, praying "Come, Lord Jesus; come quickly?" Are we, like the Thessalonian church, waiting "for God's Son from heaven, whom he raised from the dead, even Jesus?" Are we the true Israel of God by faith; joint heirs with Jesus who is to be King in Abraham's land? Can we be heirs of the kingdom without getting into the family of Abraham? Let us hear Paul: "There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female, for ye are all one in Christ Jesus." "For as many as have been baptized into Christ, have put on Christ." "And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii: 27-29.

Brethren and sisters are we ready for the Lord to come in his glory, and to receive him with acclamations of joy? —C. H. Cass, in Our Hope.

Bible Sunday.

From the Chicago Tribune of March 7, we clip the following concerning the British & American Bible Societies:—

In England and in many large cities of this country yesterday was celebrated as "Bible Sunday," being the 100th anniversary of the formation of the British and Foreign Bible society. The quiet, undemonstrative work of this society is startling when its results are put into cold type. Since 1804 it has distributed 180,982,740 Bibles, New Testaments, Gospels, and Psalters. And the American Bible society, formed in 1816 by Elias Boudinot of New Jersey, has kept pace with the activities of its predecessor, its issues to date aggregating 72,070,788 copies. Four times it has canvassed the entire United States to supply every family with a Bible.

The translation of the Scriptures into every living tongue is perhaps the most satisfactory illustration of the tremendous indirect influence exerted by the two societies. The earliest work of this kind was the printing of the gospel of St. Mark in the dialect of the Mohawk Indians. Over 370 different languages now appear on the list of biblical publications. In many instances the translators have rendered distinguished service to the valuable science of comparative philology by reducing to writing tongues which had previously only been spoken. A centennial fund of 250,000 guineas is being raised in England, and the American society needs financial aid to prevent the crippling of the work here. To neither appeal can modern civilization afford to turn a deaf ear.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of adding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

Notice.

To the Brethren in Iowa:

I have decided to take up the Lord's work in Iowa, for several months at least and am ready to respond to all calls for meetings, funerals, weddings, or any other calls pertaining to the work of a minister of the gospel.

Address me at Fort Dodge, Iowa, L Box 86.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres. Iowa Con.

The Black Hills.

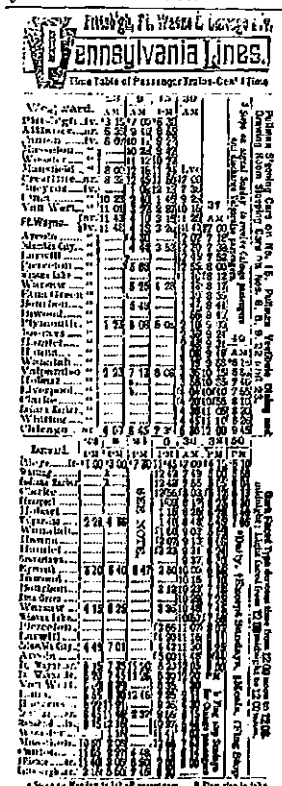
The Black Hills, in the southwest part of the State of South Dakota, produces one-third of the gold found, in the United States, and is said to be the richest one hundred square miles in the world. A new booklet on the Black Hills has been issued by the North-Western Line, with a fine detailed map of this wonderful region. Send four cents in stamps for copy of the booklet. W. B. Kniskern, P. T. M., Chicago, Ill.—Mar. 26.

Colonist Tickets to the West and Southwest.

March 1st and 15th special one way second class colonist tickets to Oklahoma and Indian Territories, Kansas, Missouri, Arkansas, Texas and New Mexico will be sold via Pennsylvania Lines. Ask the nearest Ticket Agent of those lines for particulars.—Mar. 15.

Home-Seekers' Excursions.

For full information about Home-Seekers' excursion fares to points in the West, Northwest, South and South west, apply to Ticket Agents of Pennsylvania Lines. Mar. 30.



ANOTHER OFFER.

There is a general waking up among our people everywhere. Our public speakers are all busy, and calls are in excess of their ability to attend them. Many places want preaching at the same time, but must wait their turn. This shows a decided interest, and a desire among our brethren to sound out the Word to the yet unsaved. All seem to realize that the night is far spent, that the time to work is short.

Brothers and Sisters, our work is not well done, and is not ready for acceptance of God, unless we have done all we can—our very utmost. We cannot admit that it is our duty to do anything at all for the advancement of the Master's cause, without conceding it is our duty to do all we can—to make a sacrifice even.

Preachers of other denominations as well as our own, know and say that the best workers in a community are those who take and read their Church paper, and keep informed as to what is being done in the various departments of the work, and are thus interested in pushing along the car of truth.

The Managers of THE RESTITUTION are endeavoring to so conduct the paper that it will be a fit aid to the Evangelist in his work. We are trying to keep it clear from that contention that leads to mischief and strife. This is done by having certain well-defined truths which are taught in God's Word plainly, as a basis of belief, and by publishing articles that accord with these declared principles. Other outside subjects might be "investigated" as long as life and pencil and paper lasts, and no decision ever be reached, but we do not consider this a profitable work to engage in, hence do not ask for contributions on such subjects, and do not want them. Such are usually but the "opinion" of a man, and are often based on a mere inference at best.

This paper aims to teach the truth of the Bible, and the same is declared and believed in by our Church. We therefore believe it is a fit missionary to be sent out to the unsaved and lost of the human family. In order to make it possible for our friends to do more of this missionary work than ever before, we make this offer:

Any one sending us $10.00 may select 13 names of those not now subscribers, to whom we will send the paper for the year 1904. This makes a trifle over one-half regular price if taken in lots of $10.00 worth. You and the office practically go halves in scattering the truth of the gospel to your neighbors and friends. You who have money think of this. For $100 you can preach to an audience of 180 people over 200 sermons the coming year. Can you do better with that amount of money? You have a minister come to your neighborhood perhaps once a month, giving you two or may be three discourses each time—possibly 30 a year. When he is coming you invite your neighbors in to hear him. Suppose those neighbors have had THE RESTITUTION in their homes each week when the preacher was not there, and have read the articles, and are interested to hear more. Does not this increase largely the chances of the preacher being able to speak the very words that will start your friend on the way to the kingdom? Did you ever think of this matter? Will you not take it under consideration? We feel sure if you do you will not hesitate to go half partner with us in this work.

Who will send $10, $20, $50, $100 for this work? The best time to start it is now. Select your names and send at once, so they will get the rest of this year and all of next.

The North-Western Line Russia-Japan Atlas.

Send ten cents in stamps for Russo-Japanese War Atlas issued by The Chicago & North-Western R'y. Three fine colored maps, each 14x20; bound in convenient form for reference. The Eastern situation shown in detail, with tables showing relative military and naval strength and financial resources of Russia and Japan.

A. H. Waggener, 22 Fifth Avenue, Chicago, Ills.—April 2.

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor.

The household of faith.

It would be well to keep always in remembrance the 4th verse of Jude. "For there are certain men crept in unawares, who were before of old ordained to this condemnation, ungodly men, turning the grace of our God into lasciviousness, and denying the only Lord God, and our Lord Jesus Christ."

If we receive the witness of men the witness of God is greater; for this is the witness of God which he hath testified of his Son. He that believeth on the Son of God hath the witness in himself; he that believeth not God hath made him a liar; because he believeth not the record that God gave of his Son. Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him and he in God. 2 Jno. 1. 10. "If there come any unto you, and bring not this doctrine, receive him not into your house, neither bid him God speed; for he that biddeth him God speed is partaker of his evil deeds."

I had the happy privilege of reading the little book called "Paternity of Jesus," by L. C. Thomas. It is just grand. All who are seeking after the truth aright will do well to read it. As my time is about up I will renew my subscription, please find enclosed for the same. Brothers and sisters all who have not looked up your account, please do so at once; for none of us can afford to do without the dear old paper, for it brings to us each week the very information we most desire to know. May our much esteemed Brother W. H. Wilson's life be spared that he may proclaim the grand old gospel of the kingdom and open the eyes of those who are likely to be deceived.

Your Sister in Christ.

ALICE UPDIKE.

Dear brethren:

I have been reading the 31st Chapter of Ezekiel for my lifetime and I never could understand it before, but I fully understand it now. The first part of the chapter speaks of putting hooks in Russia's jaws, and to my knowledge it has never been done according to prophecy. England drove her back about forty-eight years ago. If that had been the time the world would be ready for the battle of Armageddon now. After she is put back this time the two tribes of the Jewish nation will be established in the land of Canaan. Russia comes down to rob them and take the country, then all nations go to put her back, then will follow the battle of Armageddon. This is to the best of my understanding the meaning of the chapter. If any of the members can point out any better explanation of it, I should be glad to be corrected as I have read the Bible for the last 58 years, and I am always glad to be enlightened.

Yours in hope of the celestial city.

JAMES WALLACE.

Dear Restitution:

I think, or have an idea that I was the first one in Arkansas to subscribe for you, and have been a regular reader of your columns ever since, though my name has not been on your cover one-half the time that you have visited me.

About Jan. 1, 1868, I being a boy of 13, and loving to read anything pertaining to the Bible, found a portion of an old tract, the name of which I have forgotten, though it made me hungry for something like it. I began to search and enquire about its origin. My aunt who raised me told me she supposed my grandfather had brought it from Virginia, as it sounded like the preaching of Dr. John Thomas, who converted him from the Methodist Church, and made him a believer in the things concerning the kingdom of God. I being so interested my search then extended to Virginia, and aroused a search there. Finally a cousin wrote me that she had heard there was a paper published in Chicago, called THE RESTITUTION, though she had never seen a copy.

When I saw the word "restitution" I thought of the restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began. I thought of the glorious time when the wilderness and the solitary place should be made glad. When the desert should rejoice and blossom as the rose, and I could not wait to enquire longer, but sometime in the first part of 1871 wrote a letter and addressed it to "The Editor of THE RESTITUTION, Chicago, Ill.

Soon my heart was made glad by the receipt of two copies and away went my subscription, since which time I have watched its pages and it not say, I love its coming the best of any paper I ever read. Back somewhere, sometime in the seventies I cut from its pages a piece of poetry which goes like this:—

A is for Advocate, Alpha, Amen,
All titles of Jesus, the Savior of men.

It struck me with stronger force when I came to "L."

L is for Lamb, for Lord, and for Lion,
The Chief Galilean, the Ruler of Zion.

I gave it to a girl that was a pet of mine and in return she cut from its pages a long piece that starts off like this:—

Nations in tumultuous pride,
Heave like ocean's roaring tide,
When from scattered lands afar,
Sounds the voice of rumored war.

We both prized our poetry so highly that I can say they are both in my possession today.

I have made this too long. What about the beam in my eye? It is this. I have taken quite an interest in looking to see if the number in arrears were decreasing, and felt like telling the brethren they did not love the cause or they would renew at once. It wearied me so I had to speak to my wife about the negligence of those who know the truth, when she said, "I have been thinking it was time you was paying up yourself." "Me pay up! Why you know I would not let my time run over!" when the little girl said, "Papa, your label is marked Sep. 3." So here is $2.00 and I hope the beam is out. Brethren, look at your labels.

Your Brother, waiting and wishing for the kingdom.

W. P. RYLAND.

Dear Restitution:

Please find enclosed our subscription for the paper. We live twelve miles from a church of the one faith, and never hear any preaching of the Word in its purity except when we go to hear Brother Zilmer, at the new church near Hillisburg. My wife and I are getting old, yet we will try to work on till the Lord comes, which I think will not be long. We would be glad to meet all the brothers and sisters, but if we never meet them in this life we hope to meet all God's children in the age to come, in the earth made new, and also to meet Abraham, Isaac and Jacob and the saints of all ages in the kingdom of God, when the Lord comes to make up his Jewels, and to rule the world in righteousness.

Yours in hope of eternal life, when the Lord comes.

DR. J. THURMAN.

Household of the One Faith:

I have put off writing so long, but today I have been reading in our dear paper and the spirit struck me that I could not resist. O how long would we sleep if that spirit of God did not awake us. The time has come dear brothers and sisters that we should put on the whole armor of God, or we will be found lacking in that great day. Acts iii. 23, reads "and it shall be that every soul which shall not hearken to that prophet shall be utterly destroyed from among the people." Now dear ones, please read Jeremiah iii. 14. Let us be wise dear ones and see if we cant hear that prophets call, do not let us be a stumbling-block for others. We must go forth with Christ's last command which is love; for that is the whole law. Now we that pretend to be the saints have we fulfilled that command? Oh no, dear ones, let us go up a little higher, or we shall be found lacking. The day is far spent and we must awake, or our lamps will go out. My prayer is that we may awake that none may take our crown.

With kindest love to all the household of faith. Your Sister.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God:" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Paul's Last Imprisonment.

The second letter to Timothy was the last letter Paul ever wrote as far as we know; and was written at Rome and within prison walls. The materials for writing were in hand—parchment, pen and ink. If he was without these at the time of his incarceration, the few Christian friends who dared to visit him in his solitary confinement supplied him. The man of many stripes, and imprisonments more frequent than other apostles is a prisoner the second time at Rome. The first time he was brought there on the strength of his appeal from the provincial court at Cesarea, to the supreme court at Rome. The first time as a prisoner here he enjoyed a good deal of liberty; though fettered to a military guard he was permitted to preach the gospel in his own hired house; and for two whole years he received all that came unto him; preaching to them the kingdom of God and teaching those things which concern the Lord Jesus Christ, with all boldness, no man forbidding him. Acts xxviii. 30, 31.

Roman courts of that day were very tardy, so Paul remained two years in bonds after his arrival before his trial came off at the bar of Cesar, which of course resulted in his liberation. Luke does not mention the trial nor its successful termination, but tells he preached two whole years in his own hired house. His biographical sketch stops suddenly at this point, from which fact some students of Paul's history conclude that he was condemned and executed; thinking that the trial could not have terminated otherwise with Nero as supreme judge, and under the powerful influence of Popea, his intriguing and cruel wife, who was a proselyte to the Jewish faith, and only too willing to show the bitter enemies of Paul, the Jews, a favor. For four years they had been thirsting for his blood. The theory that he was executed at the end of the two years mentioned by Luke rests upon no proof in point of fact. It is but pure conjecture that Nero would decide the apostle's case adversely, after hearing his defense, showing in the most conclusive manner the falsity of the charges the Jews alleged against him. The decision of the provincial court was that he had done nothing worthy of death. On his appeal he was taken before the supreme court at Rome to face the same false charges. While there is no great amount of proof that he lived, traveled and preached the gospel for several years subsequent to the two years in which he preached at Rome fettered to a military guard, this proof is sufficient and satisfactory as showing that he was liberated, thus affording him the opportunity of carrying out his plainly stated purpose of visiting Spain. Spain was in mind as his destination, and in his passage thither he would stop at Rome. In his letter to the church at Rome he writes, "Whensoever, I take my journey into Spain, I will come to you; for I trust to see you in my journey, and to be brought on my way thitherward by you after I have in some measure satisfied my desire of your company." Rom. xv. 24. In the 28th verse he refers to his contemplated journey in these words, "When, therefore, I have finished this task, and have given to them in safety the fruit of this collection, I will come from thence, by you, into Spain." He was one of a committee to bear the collection, taken up by the Macedonian churches, to poor saints at Jerusalem. From thence he would depart on his trip to Spain. When he stated his purpose to perform this journey he was not aware of the fact that he would be carried to Rome in chains, and that his journey thither would be postponed two years. On his way to Jerusalem he and his company stopped many days at Cesarea. Here he was informed by a prophet named Agabus that the Jews at Jerusalem would bind him, and deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles. In the providence of God Paul reached Rome though his life was several times in peril at the hands of his own countrymen, and in perils on his sea voyage to the city where he was to be tried. So we may conclude he completed his journey and reached Spain under the direction of God's Spirit. Though the fact that Paul was a prisoner the second time at Rome is disputed in modern times, no doubt was entertained about it by the ancient church. In addition to what has already been stated, I will cite the testimony of Clement, a disciple of Paul, mentioned in Phil. iv. 3, who was afterward bishop of Rome. This author, writing from Rome to Corinth, expressly asserts that "Paul had preached the gospel in the East and in the West; that he had instructed the whole world (i. e. the Roman empire which was commonly so called) in righteousness; and that he had gone to the extremity of the West before his martyrdom. The extremity of the West would take in Spain, nor do I think he stopped short of the British Isles, for these in fact were the extremity of the West of that day. A portion of England being under the rule of the Cesars was comprehended under the term world as above explained. Paul's mission was to the nations; so reads his commission. The old historian Gildas mentions the fact that Paul preached on the spot where Glastonberry now stands. Eusebius an early church historian tells us, "After defending himself successfully, it is currently reported that the apostle again went forth to proclaim the gospel, and afterward came to Rome a second time, and was martyred under Nero." Chrysostom and Jerome writing about the same time testify to the fact as follows, "The former, Paul after his residence in Rome departed to Spain; the latter, Paul was dismissed by Nero, that he might preach Christ's gospel in the West." About five years is the time to be accounted for between the date of his acquittal and his appearing a second time in chains at Rome. In the letter to Titus the apostle writes, "When I shall send Artemas unto thee, or Tychicus, be diligent to come unto me to Nicopolis, for I have determined there to winter. This city was to be his headquarters during the approaching winter; from which he could go out on preaching tours in the surrounding country. The next we hear of him he is a prisoner. In giving his instructions to Timothy he exhorts him to "be not ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me his prisoner." 2 Tim. i. 8. In the second chapter he writes, "Remember that Jesus Christ of the seed of David was raised from the dead according to my gospel; wherein I suffer hardship as a malefactor unto bonds." This time not accused of questions touching Jewish law but under arrest for some pretended breach of Roman law. That he was apprehended at Nicopolis is quite probable. Who were the accusers here that clamored for his arrest we know not. They may have been his inveterate enemies, the Jews. It is human to wish the silence could be broken here, that we might learn something touching his apprehension at Nicopolis, and his conveyance to Rome as a prisoner. But little did he write touching his own trial. It is true he mentions the fact of his defense and leaves us to infer that he plead his own side of the case, instead of employing some able and eloquent pleader, if such could have been found for the defense. No doubt his plea was a straightforward statement of facts touching his life and preaching. If these involved a breach of Roman law, we may be sure he possessed the moral courage to plead guilty, feeling that he was not guilty in the light of God's law. At the time of Paul's trial it was unlawful to introduce a new religion among citizens of Rome. This may have been one charge against him. Several years had elapsed since Nero set fire to Rome, and who, when the indignation and alarm of the people were excited by a conflagration that reduced to ashes nearly half of the city, to avert the rage of the populace (he was accused of causing the fire) from himself charged the act upon the already hated Christians. Tacitus describes the success of this expedient and recites the sufferings of these innocent victims of his cruelty. "Some were crucified; some disguised in the skins of wild beasts were hunted to death by dogs; some were wrapped in robes saturated with inflammable materials, and set on fire at night that they might illuminate the circus of the vatican, and the gardens of Nero where this diabolical monster exhibited the the agonies of his victims to the public, and gloated over them himself, mixing among the spectators in the costume of a charioteer." The historian informs us that great multitudes perished in this manner. At the time the mere fact of professing Christianity was sufficient cause for their execution. Although at the date of Paul's trial the excitement of the people had calmed down, allowing of a decent regard for the forms of law; yet we can quite reasonably believe that Nero would lay against him the more serious charge of having instigated the Christians to fire Rome before he departed from the city the last time. If he was wicked enough to set the incendiary and then charge it against his own Christian subjects, and proceed to torture them in the manner he did as described by Tacitus, he was wicked enough to condemn Paul under this charge. Paul's Roman citizenship was no shield now against the judgment of so cruel a tyrant, whose heart by this time had become steeled against every appeal of both mercy and justice. To be continued under the heading of Paul's last days and last words.

JOHN L. WISER.

Will the Wicked Live Forever? No. 2.

Every figure of speech employed in the Scriptures to depict the doom of the wicked, denotes cessation of being. John the Baptist spoke of the One coming after him—Jesus—that "He will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire." Matth. iii: 12. In likening one class of people with "chaff," he is but following the well-known method of Old Testament writers of comparing the wicked with substances that are easily destroyed; such as "stubble" (Ps. lxxxiii: 13; Isa. xlvii: 14; Joel ii: 5; Mal. iv: 1), "chaff" (Ps. i: 5; Job xxi: 17, 18; Hos. xiii: 3), and other inflamable substances. When chaff becomes subject to fire that is unquenchable, the action of the fire is not to preserve the chaff, but to burn it up, to wholly consume the combustible portions of it. When so "burned up," it is no longer "chaff," but ashes. This is the illustration. What does it illustrate? Is it preservation to perpetuity? If so, with what figure of speech could one illustrate destruction? In the Old Testament, fire that shall not be quenched, or unquenchable fire, is mentioned, and was to be kindled in palaces and gates (Jer. xvii: 27), rage in a forest (Ezek. xx: 45-49), and prey upon the carcases of transgressors. Isa. lxvi: 24. These examples show in what way these figures of speech were used, and in what sense they were to be understood by those to whom they were addressed. Fire is never used as a preserving agent, but always as an element of destruction. Unquenchable fire, spoken of in connection with the punishment of the wicked (Mark ix: 44-48), is taken to prove beyond question the preservation to eternity of the wicked and an eternity of torment. However, there is nothing in the Savior's language that would even justify, not to mention demand, such a conclusion. The original term here employed—puri asbestos—is the same as that used in Matth. iii: 12. It would be difficult to conceive how this expression could mean to "burn up" the chaff, and mean everlasting torture when applied to the sinner. Before this could be possible, it must first be established that the sinner has any promise or prospect of living to perpetuity; and when this is done, it is time to discuss the conditions under which he will so live. "Life" is the thing at stake, according to our Savior's language. "Better" was it to an offending member, and it is "better into life" than to retain it and member, and "the whole body be cast into Gehenna." Matt. v: 29, 30. True, a member perishes in this operation, but life is saved: on the other hand, the member is saved, but the whole body is subject to destruction in Gehenna,—a most fitting comparison.

Besides the Scriptural use made of the phrase "unquenchable fire," I also append an extract from a passage in Eusebius' Ecclesiastical History where unquenchable fire is mentioned. The writer speaks of certain Christians in the third century who were "consumed,.....destroyed in parasbestos." H. E. Bk 6, c. 41. No one would argue from the unquenchable nature of the fire, that that "fire" is still burning and is torturing these Christians. The latter were, as the historian very properly says, "consumed, destroyed." This is the use to which the term "the unquenchable fire," was put during a period of time beginning about 700 B. C., and extending to A. D. 325, and the fire effected gates, palaces, trees, carcases, chaff, and living men.

There is another term employed by our Savior which is supposed to teach that the sinner will live forever: it is the "everlasting fire"—puros aionion. Matth. xxv: 41. But this passage, like the others examined, does not teach everlasting life for the sinner. Taking an example of the action of this kind of fire, we see that its subjects are "destroyed." I refer to Jude 6, 7, where it is said that the people of Sodom and Gomorrah are "undergoing the penalty of eternal fire"—puros aionion. According to the statement of Jesus, those persons are not writhing in endless torture, but the fire and brimstone which fell from heaven "destroyed them all." Luke xvii: 29. And if we will look up the original record of this transaction, we shall see that they were certainly destroyed. See Gen. xviii: 23-25, 28, 31, 32; xix: 24, 25, 29. The apostle Jude says those cities "are set for an example." And Peter, in like manner, says that God "condemned them with an overthrow, making them an example unto those that after should live ungodly." 2. Pet. ii: 6. If the condemnation of these "wicked" persons was just, so will be that of those ungodly of whose destruction they are an example. If they are suffering eternal torment, so will other ungodly. If those wicked were destroyed, so will those be that after live ungodly. Let the reader bear this in mind. God has not only raised up Christ as the First-fruit of them that slept, and thus "offered faith" of His ability to raise other dead (Acts xvii: 31), but has also given fair warning to all concerned, and an actual demonstration of his ability, that "all the wicked will he destroy." Ps. cxlv: 20. This is the present stage of the development of His plan. When are men to live ungodly to be warned by the "example" God has furnished in the destruction of the Sodomites? "After" the time of the wickedness of Sodom. Does that apply now? Now or never.

From the foregoing testimony it will be seen that those Sodomites are not now in conscious suffering. God "overthrew those cities, and all the plain, and all the inhabitants of the cities, and that which grew upon the ground." Gen. xviii: 25. If they are now conscious of suffering caused by this "eternal fire," so are the cities which they inhabited and that which grew upon the ground: but if houses and vegetation were destroyed, as the word says, so where the inhabitants. One common lot befel everything that came within reach of the fire. The fire, I take it, was real fire, and the subjects of its destruction were not the so-called "immortal souls" of those persons, but the persons themselves. The fire was not preservative but destructive. This is the result we come to when we accept the record as to the nature of man, and the effect of God's punitive justice. The wickedness of those ungodly persons has been terminated, and God is vindicated of the charge of perpetuating wickedness which must follow the view that wicked men will live forever because necessarily immortal.

A. H. ZELMER.

Blessed are the Meek.

The beatitudes in Matt. v. are the golden texts of that chapter. Therefore we have chosen to head this article in very precious to us. This text first awakened in our mind a desire to know more of that strange doctrine. The meek shall inherit the earth. Could it mean this, we said over and over. Does it not mean that the meek inherit the earth now? Yes, this is just what it does mean, we answered. But on further investigation we found that those who inherited a part of this earth now, do it from a moneyed consideration. No deed is considered valid without the above consideration. We had been taught that at death if meek, we would fly away beyond time and space as they sing. We did not know then that God had made this earth for man's future abode. Man was made of the dust of the earth. We are taught that the earth abideth forever. Also, "The righteous shall never be removed; but the wicked shall not inhabit the earth." Pro. x, 30. Evil doers shall be cut off; but those who wait upon the Lord, they shall inherit the earth. The righteous shall inherit the land (earth) and dwell therein for ever. Psa. xxxvii. 9, 29. These are very plain and need no comment.

God promised Abraham a land and an everlasting life to enjoy it. In Acts vii. the writer states in very plain language that God had not at that time given him so much as to set his foot on; yet he promised he would give it to him for a possession and to his seed after him, when as yet they had no child. In Heb. xi. By faith Abraham sojourned in the land of promise as in a strange country dwelling in tabernacles with Isaac and Jacob, the heirs with him of the same promise. These texts all prove that God promised Abraham an inheritance in a land not in heaven. Is it not strange that intelligent and well educated persons believe the doctrine of going to heaven at death? Search the Scriptures through and you can find no such a promise. What difference does it make whether we believe that we go or that God prepares this earth for our future home? It amounts to this, you state what is not true. The kingdom under the whole heavens is to be given to the saints of the Most High. In Rev. v. 10 we read, "And hath made us unto our God kings and priests; and we shall reign on the earth." 2 Peter iii. 13. Nevertheless we, according to his promise look for new heavens and a new earth, wherein dwelleth righteousness.

Hundreds of texts could be given in proof of our statement and not one to prove the opposite. If men believed that man is mortal there would be no difference of opinion. The idea of a real litoral kingdom on this earth over which Christ and his brethren will rule is entirely lost sight of. Could we but remember that our Savior taught the gospel of the kingdom of God, and sent his disciples out to preach the same it would save us much trouble. Not many Sundays ago we heard a Sunday school superintendent quote this text, "I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am there ye may be also." They leave out of their theology the doctrine of Christ's coming again. Why? Because they teach that they are going to him. They can find nothing for his coming again and yet hundreds of texts teach it very plainly.

We read the funeral orations in our daily papers of a great man, having gone to God, stepping from earth to heaven. While they are preaching his funeral his soul has gone to his reward. No need of a resurrection, therefore they do not preach it. Let us accept the apostle's admonition, "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of truth." 2 Tim. ii. 15.

HEIRS OF THE KINGDOM. JAS. ii. 5.

Hearken my beloved brethren, hath not God chosen the poor of this world rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom, which he hath promised to them that love him. Heirs of the kingdom, an heir is one who inherits. In Isaiah God gives the promise of a Son, who shall inherit the kingdom and throne of David for ever. In Luke ii. we find the fulfillment of this promise; the Son is born who is to inherit this promised kingdom, Christ the Lord. God says his Son whom he hath appointed heir of all things, he is now on his Father's throne until the times of restitution or restoration. Then he will take possession of his inheritance, the kingdom of God. But how do the brethren spoken of in James ii. 5, and how do we become heirs to this kingdom? Rom. viii. 14, Paul tells us, As many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God, and if children then heirs, heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ, if so be we suffer with him that we may be also glorified together. Faith in the promises of God makes us children of God, and faith in the gospel, and obedience by being baptized into Christ makes us Christ's, and if we be Christ's then are we Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. When we are redeemed by the blood of Christ we are no more servants, but sons and heirs with Jesus of that kingdom which David was King over—of the kingdom which was overturned, but which will soon be restored, which will be a glorious kingdom under the whole heaven, which shall be given to the people of the saints of the Most High, and which will be an everlasting kingdom. Those who accept Christ are no more strangers and foreigners but fellow citizens with the saints, and of the household of God, and are of the same Body partakers of his promise in Christ by the gospel. O the exceeding riches of the promises, how far above the riches and wealth of this world. Yes, an inheritance in that glorious kingdom cannot be compared to anything that wealth can buy. May the hope of eternal life keep us from all temptation, and may he grant you according to the riches of his glory that Christ may dwell in your hearts, and that we may all be rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom, heirs according to the promise. There is only one way to gain the promised inheritance. Not by works alone, but by faith and trust in the Word of truth, as taught by our Savior. He that overcometh shall inherit all things and I will be his God, and he shall be my son. Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called the sons of God, and that we with Jesus may inherit the glories of the promised inheritance and gain eternal life, heirs with Christ our King, glorious promise. Let our daily prayer be, Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as in heaven, and all the earth be filled with thy glory. Amen.

ELLA KNOWLES.

Self-sacrifice is the royal law of the new life. Because Christ 'laid down His life for us,' we ought to lay down our lives for the brethern.' This is a high, hard teaching, but it is the Lord's. We can never enter into the likeness of Jesus until we have learned how to surrender self, and how to deny self for the sake of men who may not be worthy, and for the sake of the Master who is surely worthy. The call of our Lord to-day, is for disciples who will literally lay down their lives for Him, through tedious and toilsome years. He needs servants whom he can send anywhere; upon whom He can lay large responsibilities as well as humble, obscure duties. The person through whom Christ can best express His mind to the world is one who is consumed by a passion for doing only the will of God.

The Restitution.

VOLUME LIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAR. 16, 1904. NUMBER 11.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Are the First Chapters of Matthew and Luke Authentic?

PART TWO.

The point at which we have arrived is, that within a century of the destruction of Jerusalem, the chief apostolic writings were familiarly known, —had been collected in several localities,—formed the basis of Christian teaching and belief,—were read in the churches, and generally accepted as authoritative, and inspired. Abundant evidence of this is found in the incorporation of the language of the New Testament in other writings, going back to the very days of the apostles themselves, and some of them we have stated. There are other fathers belonging to the age ending about A. D. 170, beside others of great importance in the second, third, and fourth centuries, some of whom must be mentioned. But the scene is, in a measure, shifted from Asia, to Europe and Africa. Foremost among the writers of this later period must be placed Tatian, Irenaeneus; Clement of Alexandria, Origen, and Tertullian.

TITIAN

was an Assyrian, a friend and disciple of Justin, and a public lecturer in the Greek schools. He held some very heretical views and formed a collection of the Christian Scriptures for the use of his Assyrian converts. His greatest work "The Diatessaron," has a very romantic history which we cannot relate now. The book had long been lost, and was only discovered some years ago, and then scholars learnt that it had been known in the west for 1,800 years. It has recently been published, and there is no suspicion breathed against its genuineness and extreme value. Eusebius calls it "A sort of connection and compilation, I know not how, of the gospels." This book is in part the first life of Christ ever written as a connected story, (date 160) and the whole of his facts were gathered from

THE FOUR GOSPELS.

Tatian had at this time broken away from the Orthodox Church, and could if he had chosen, compiled any narrative he liked, but he knew that the only authentic and trustworthy source of information was the Evangelists, and that he used their books speaks volumes.

IRANAEUS

as we have already said, was a friend of Polycarp. His principal work "Against Heresies," was probably written about 180, and in it he quotes very freely from the New Testament, with every regard for its authority.

Clement (165-220) and Origen (185-256) the latter the most learned and energetic theologian in the Church in the first three centuries, both acknowledge the authority and Divinity of the New Testament, and they both quote from nearly every book. Origen's testimony in particular is more complete than any of his predecessors.

TERTULLIAN

of the African (Carthage) Church, was born between 150 and 160 and in his "Treatise Against Marcion," sets forth his belief in the authority of most of the sacred books. He quotes from all except the four smaller epistles,—appeals to the historic tradition to show their authority, and declares they were in the keeping of organized societies, whose members, regarded them as the authoritative records of a Divine revelation, which was the law for their earthly conduct, and the foundation of their immortal hopes. Up to this time the Fathers had written in Greek,—the language of the New Testament;—but Tertullian wrote in Latin.

We have, then brought to a focus, from the writings of different periods, the fact that the churches of Rome, Asia Minor, Syria, Africa and Gaul accepted the New Testament as apostolical and inspired.

Down to the end of the third century there is an unbroken unanimity in all the Christian communities, and among the Bishops and Presbyters, concerning the genuineness, authority, and inspiration of at least the Gospels, the Acts, Thirteen Epistles of Paul, First Peter and First John.

It at length became necessary that the tradition established throughout the churches should receive some final sanction. Hitherto there had been no rigid definition, but now the Diocletian persecution (in 303-5) gave the impulse. An Imperial decree was issued for the destruction of the Christian Scriptures, all of them being named.

They were thus advertised, and their influence and superiority over all other Ecclesiastical writings made widely known. So it came about that by their very enemies the limits of the Canon was practically recognized.

EUSEBIUS.

the Ecclesiastical historian (264-340) the most famous scholar of the time, after Origen and Jerome, gives most valuable information on this subject. His Ecclesiastical History contains many extracts from writings which have long since disappeared relating to the New Testament Scriptures,—his special care being to place on record any quotation from, or reference to, and opinions concerning the books in dispute. For the purpose in view, his travels, learning and access to the libraries of the age, gave him peculiar opportunities for ascertaining the general customs and opinions of the Church in different places, and at different times, and in the result he enumerates and classes the books in use as (1) those that were acknowledged, (2) those that were disputed, and (3) those deemed spurious; the latter were the Apocryphal and heretical writings. The disputed Scriptures named by Eusebius are the Epistles of James, 2 Peter, 2nd and 3rd of John and Jude. The rest were acknowledged as authoritative and divine.

Differences of opinion existed about these shorter Epistles, but it was due more to their unimportance, than to any question of their authenticity or authorship—just as there was some debate about the Epistle to the Hebrews, because of its anonymity, and of the Book of Revelation on the supposition that some other John than the Apostle might have written it; but the debates respecting them only tended to produce such evidence as to finally set all questions at rest. So far as the Epistles just named are concerned, they seemed, on the whole, to have escaped observation, rather than met with unfavorable criticism. However, the held in A. D. 397, fixed the canon of the New Testament at its present limits. In doing this it did not anticipate, but simply followed its acceptance by the whole Christian Church. The question of the Apostolicity and Canonicity of the Sacred Writings was thus finally settled on the authority of the ancients. The importance of the subject must be our apology, for dealing with this subject at such length.

VERSIONS.

As the gospels spread, the need arose for the multiplication of copies of the New Testament, the more so as the Church in Africa and elsewhere did not use Greek. It came about, therefore, that a Latin version of the Greek Testament was made in North Africa about the middle of the second century. This is called the Old Latin Version, and it contained all the books save Hebrews, James and 2nd Peter. It is to Tertulian that we owe the earliest testimony to the existence and character of this version, and it agrees almost entirely with his canon. The Old Testament was included, the translation being from the Septuagint (Greek) and not from the Hebrew.

THE PESHITO.

Besides this there was another and earlier version in use by the Syrian Christians, called the Peshito, i. e., "Simple Version." This is one of the oldest and best copies of both the Testaments, and was produced early in the second century, and represents very nearly the language of the people among whom our Lord moved. It has always been accepted by all sections of the Syrian or Eastern church as authentic; and as far as regards its contents, so far as our New Testament is concerned, it did not contain 2nd Peter, 2nd and 3rd John, Jude and Revelation.

THE VULGATE.

"There is yet another Latin Version known as the Vulgate, i. e., "Common," the most important of all the copies of the Bible in relation to both the Old and New Testament Scriptures. The text was rapidly becoming corrupted and falling into disuse when Jerome the greatest Biblical scholar of the Latin Church revised the Old Latin Version. For twenty-one years (A. D. 383-404) he was engaged in the work, and during the succeeding thousand years every Bible issued in the vernacular owed much to his labors and learning. Jerome included in this version,

THE WHOLE OF THE NEW TESTAMENT AS WE KNOW IT.

"With this extremely important, and from a critical standpoint, exceptionally valuable version we leave this particular line of evidence with our readers, and glean in other fields.

"From J. Hawkins, an English writer of marked ability, we learn that the charge of forgery of the narratives of Christ's divine Paternity is made in the Unitarian New Testament. The fourth edition was published in London in 1847. It calls itself "an improved version with a correct text, and notes critical and explanatory. Published by the Unitarian Society for promoting Christian Knowledge, and the teaching of virtue." The question is whether this promoting is not subtraction of Christian knowledge. It is, at any rate, subtraction of some kind or other, either true or false. There can be no midway; the record is absolutely true as it stands, or it is absolutely false.

"The charge of falsity is a large indictment, but it is not a new one. The sum of the charges is, that an ancient writer Epiphanius, states that these chapters were lacking in the copies of two sects of Jewish Christians called Ebionites and Nazarines. He was a Bishop who lived 367 to 403 A. D. He compiled a list of heresies (eighty in number), and this his biographer calls "a work which strikingly shows his unfitness for being a historian. His credulity and want of honesty is excessive."

"Then the testimony of Marcion is appealed to. Marcion was the founder of the sect of the Marcionites. It is said by a biographer: "Marcion entirely rejected the Old Testament, and all of the New Testament, with the exception of a few epistles, and the gospel of Luke, which had to undergo certain changes from his hand. The first four chapters were omitted, and the fifth began with the words: "In the 15th year of Tiberius Ceasar, God came to Capernaum, a city of Galilee and spake on the Sabbath."

Marcion was a writer and leader who, like some modern writers, prepared a belief, and dictated what must be received and believed by his followers (and all others). Such works of benevolence fail, however, with all thinking men who still possess a spark of that spirit of inquiry into truth, which alone is the quality of an honest mind."

The "Ebionites and Nazarines," therefore, may be left in their native mist. As far as may be known of them they held that our Lord was a man who was distinguished from all other men for his legal piety, and was therefore pre-eminently a Jew, and was selected as Messiah on account of his superior Judaism. They denied, for this reason, his supernatural birth, yet not his resurrection.

"We are not told that the original gospel of Matthew and Luke did not contain the first two chapters of each, except upon the evidence of these above mentioned. No reasonable man, without prejudice, can accept the obliteration from any such source."

FACTS ARE STUBBORN THINGS.

There is sufficient evidence to show that the gospels were extant about 150 A. D.

It is a fact that the preachers of the new faith had to travel through strange countries, make converts, establish churches here and there,—then pass on to other countries and cities and do precisely the same work there, —and there would be no occasion for writing epistles until a vast amount of labor had resulted in churches being established that needed the instructions, and warnings, and encouragements sent to them. As Jesus lived thirty-three years, and John the last of the apostles lived some sixty-three years after the crucifixion, we find that in less than sixty years from Apostolic times some of the gospels can be proved to have been extant. And when we remember the arduous labors of those commissioned, the lack of postal facilities and the art of printing,—it is marvelous, or rather, it would have been marvelous for us to be able to trace the documents back so far, but for the directing hand of God. He is never taken by surprise. He knew what the little left-over remnant of the last days would need to silence ignorant and foolish men, and provide for us the means to do it.

Mr. H. L. Hastings in "Inspiration of the Bible" says infidels have the strongest ideas in regard to the conformity of the Scriptures, and quotes from an article in a Marlboro, Mass., paper written by one of that class, the statement that the Council of Nice, in the year 325 compiled the New Testament. They had a lot of gospels and epistles, genuine and spurious, and no one could distinguish between the two; so they put them all on the floor, and prayed that the good ones might get upon the communion table, and the bad ones stay on the floor; and that was the way the present New Testament was compiled."

Mr. Hastings continues:—"I have on one of my library shelves between twenty and thirty volumes, containing about twelve thousand pages of the writings of different Christian authors who wrote before A. D. 325, when the Council of Nice was held. Many of these books are full of Scripture. Those writers had the same books which we have; they quote the same passages which we quote; they quoted from the same gospels and epistles which we quote." He further states that Lord Hailes, of Scotland, having searched the writings of the Christian Fathers to the end of the third century, actually found the whole of the New Testament, with the exception of less than a dozen verses, scattered through their writings which are still extant.....The books of the New Testament were received from the Apostles who wrote them, and were carefully preserved, and publicly read in the churches of Christ long before the Council of Nice was held.

Paley in his Evidences pp. 171-173 says, "The writings of Origen contain enumerations of the books of Scripture, in which the four gospels and the Acts of the Apostles are distinctly and honorably specified, and in which no books appear beside what are now received. His works are dated A. D. 230.

"Athanasius, about a century later delivered a catalogue of the books of the New Testament in form, containing our Scriptures, and no others; of which he says, "In these alone the doctrine of religion is taught; let no man add to them, or take anything away from them."

"About twenty years after Athanasius, Cyril, bishop of Jerusalem, set forth a catalogue of the books of Scripture, publicly read at that time, in the Church of Jerusalem, exactly the same as ours, except that the "Revelation," is omitted.

"Within thirty years after the last date, that is, from the year 363 to near the conclusion of the fourth century, we have catalogues by Epiphanius, by Gregory Nazianzen, Philaster, bishop of Brescra, in Italy, by Amphilochius, bishop of Iconium, all as they are sometimes called, canon catalogues, (that is they admit no books into the number beside what we now receive) and all for every purpose of historic evidence, the same as ours.

Mr. Paley mentions also that the catalogues of Jerome, in Palestine, and that of St. Augustine in Africa, and Rufus, Presbyter of Aquileia; like all the preceding, were PERFECT and UNMIXED; and concludes with these remarkable words: "These are volumes which the Fathers have included in the canon, and out of which they would have us prove the doctrine of our faith."

THE CENSUS OF LUKE II. 1. 2.

An indictment against this passage is taken. It is objected that no taxation, registration or census of the Roman Empire took place at this time, because Roman historians make no mention of it. This may prove that no general census of the Empire took place. It being mentioned in connection with the pro-consul of Syria is a strong intimation that only Judea is meant, according to a mode of expression common among the Jews,—is for example, "All the land," instead of all the world. This would convey the right meaning. But there are some objections. Cyrenius, as Jews and Greeks called him, was by the Romans called, Pub. Sulp. Quirinius, was not till some years after this President of Syria, that office being filled by Saturnius; and further, by the testimony of Josephus, no taxation of Judea took place till eleven years later. When the Ethnarch Archelaus was deposed, and Judea annexed to Syria as a Roman Province, Dr. Hales in "Analysis of Chronology" says Herod the Great incurred the displeasure of Augustus, who wrote him a very sharp letter, to the effect that having hitherto treated him as a friend, he should now treat him as a subject, and therefore had to submit to all the injuries offered him, the chief of which was the degrading of his kingdom to a Roman Province. The date of this transaction coincides with that of the decree of enrollment mentioned by Luke. And we know that the whole nation took an oath to Cesar and the King jointly. And Roman usage required a return of persons, ages and properties to be made upon oath, under penalty of confiscation of the goods of delinquents. The reason for registration of ages was that among Syrians, males from fourteen years of age, and girls from twelve, until their 65th year, were subject to a capitation or poll tax by the Roman law. Cyrenius, a Roman Senator and Procurator was employed to make this enrollment. This we learn from the joint testimony of Justin Martyr, Julian the Apostate, and Eusebius. This was when Saturnius was President of Syria to whom it is attributed by Tertullian, and in the thirty-third year of Herod's reign, being the year of Christ's birth; Cyrenius, who Tacitus describes as an active soldier and right commissioner, was qualified for an employment so odious to Herod and his subjects; and probably came to execute the decree by an armed force. Without delay, therefore, as the evangelist relates, "All the inhabitants went to be enrolled, each in his native city." And the decree being peremptory, Joseph was obliged to proceed with Mary, to Bethlehem, notwithstanding her condition.

At this juncture, however, the census proceed no further than the first enrollment of persons in the Roman registers. And to these registers Tertullian and the early fathers often appeal for evidence of the lineal descent of Jesus from David, as foretold of the Christ. For Herod, having sent his trusty messenger, Nicholas of Damascus, to Rome, the latter managed to undeceive the Emperor, and modify his anger, in consequence of which Augustus was reconciled to Herod, and the actual operation of the decree was suspended. But eleven years afterwards it was carried into effect, upon the deposition and banishment of Archelaus, Herod's successor, for maladministration, by Augustus, at the strong complaint of the Jews, who, weary of the tyranny of the Herodian family, earnestly requested that Judea might be made a Roman province. On this occasion, the trusty Cyrenius was again sent with an armed force, and the rank of President of Syria, to confiscate the property of Archelaus, and to complete the census. It is now easy to see that it is to this final establishment of the assessment or taxing by Cyrenius as President of Syria that Luke alludes in the parenthetical remark in the present passage, which may, more correctly read thus, "It came to pass in those days (that is a few days before the Savior's birth,) that there went out a decree from Cesar Augustus, that all the land (of Judea, Idumea, Galilee, etc., under Herod's dominion) should be enrolled preparatory to a census, or taxing (the taxing itself was first made when Cyrenius was Governor of Syria), "And all went to be enrolled, every one to his own city." From Pictorial Bible.

OTHER EVIDENCES.

In a pamphlet published by those calling themselves Humanitarian Christadelphians, and reviewed in Fraternal Visitor by H. H. Horsman;" it is said on p. 14, that among the primitive Christians there existed some who were called Ebionites and Nazarines who were one and the same people, comprising all the Hebrew Christians who disbelieved the story of the miraculous nativity, receiving only the gospel of Matthew, their copy of which did not contain those chapters."

This writer is answered as follows: Dr. Marslis Michaelis, V. III. Part II., p. 138 shows that there have been 355 Greek manuscripts of the gospel collated, EVERY ONE OF WHICH contains the first two chapters of Matthew's gospel, except with the exception of the single codex Ebnerianus, and even this begins at the 18th verse of the first chapter; the very evidence wanted in this inquiry. Matters stand then in this way:—Every manuscript in existence contains the evidence the author rejects. He refuses it because the Ebionites rejected the doctrine taught in those chapters.

Think of it! If the Ebionites really possessed the only authentic gospel of Matthew, WHERE IS IT NOW? Has the God of Abraham allowed only the spurious gospel to reach us, and the veritable truth as it is in and of Jesus to be utterly lost?

But does our author know what he is talking about? Does he know that according to Jerome the Nazarines professed to believe in Christ the Son of God, born of the Virgin Mary. This expression is a strong indication that their gospel contained the first chapters.

Beausobre in his introduction to the New Testament, says, "These Nazarines, not entertaining as far as we can find any erroneous opinion concerning Jesus Christ, it is very probable that they have been confounded with the Ebionites, who did not appear till afterwards.

Quotations are still in existence from the gospel of the Ebionites, and from that of the Nazarines, though the gospels themselves have passed away; and those extracts show that these gospels differed from each other; —and—what is more important,—that they both differ from the genuine gospel of Matthew still in existence, and from the other three gospels.

Jerome, in referring to the gospel of the Nazarines, points out several instances of variation from the other existing gospels of Matthew, and two of the examples are from the second chapter. Our readers can make their own choice as to authority, Jerome, or our author. We prefer the former.

It is said above, that the Nazarines believed Jesus was born of a virgin, and that they surrender the Ebionites, and it may be fairly presumed, were nearer the truth than the latter Ebionites.

It is contended that there is an evidence of forgery in the fact that the name Immanuel is explained to mean God with us, because Matthew writing to Jews would not dream of doing so. Ans. But is our gospel translated from the Hebrew, or from the Greek? The latter, unquestionably! Then what is more natural than that this Greek copy should contain an explanation of a Hebrew name? Whether the Greek is the original or only a translation does not affect the question.

The pamphlet says the massacre of the children of Bethlehem is improbable. Some one may doubt our assertion, that objector has attacked that feature of the record—it may be deemed improbable, but it is a fact, all the same.

The grounds of improbability are: "Herod could easily have ascertained the house where the child was born." But of what use would that be a year or two afterwards? Secondly, "Josephus makes no mention of it." But we ask, Did nothing occur in Palestine about that time but what Josephus narrated?

Have we not the words of the prophet Jeremiah to fall back upon, "A voice was heard in Rama," etc.? Yes, but the reply made to that is, that we "are torturing the Old Testament for a prophecy." But in what does the "torture" consist, if these words fairly describe the condition of the locality and events referred to by Matthew?

Our author says Bethlehem was the home of Joseph and Mary, and that "No such expression is recorded in the Old Testament "He shall be called a Nazarine." True, and yet Galilee and Nazareth were held in very low esteem, as evidenced by the contemptuous question, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" And out of Galilee ariseth no prophet." Added to this there is the fact that about that time the Galileans were very turbulent, and attempted to throw off the Roman yoke. This gives significance to the expressions, "Thou art a Galilean." This man also was with Jesus of Galilee. The place of his youth thus gave him the designation "Nazarine," and tended to the accomplishment of the predictions "He was despised and rejected of men; a Man of sorrows and acquainted with grief;" and as one from whom men hide their face, he was despised and we esteemed him not." Is. liii. 3, R. V. And the events of the latter part of his life with the cries, "Not this man but Barnabas;" "we have no King but Cesar," ringing in our ears, derive much of their prediated bitterness from his relationship to Nazareth. The "Branch" referred to in Isaiah xi. is certainly Jesus, and the Hebrew word used here, "Nezer," is the one from which Nazareth is derived.

We see nothing of real force in these objections, because the external evidence is overwhelmingly in favor of the complete gospel as now extant; and, as what is urged against it are mere bubbles which vanish at the approach of the pen, it is not necessary at present to produce the internal evidence in its favor.

Our author says it is a matter of fact that "a large number of Christians separated the first two chapters (of Luke) from the rest of the gospels."....."These went under the denomination of MARCIONITES," ETC.

This is said after suggesting that some of the first copies might have been corrupted, and "supposing" that after the first four verses it originally "commenced with the third chapter" and speaks of the probability in favor of or against the supposition.

Poetry.

If Christ Should Come Today.

If Christ should come today!
If we could find him on the great highway
Or city street,
Oh, would we touch his garment's hem
Or kiss his feet?

If he should come today!
If th All-searching One should find us out
And call our name
Would we press forward toward the out-stretched hand,
Or sink in shame?

If he should come today!
The Prince of Peace, amidst the clang of war
And battle heat,
Oh, would we lay our weapons down
Before his feet?

If he should come today!
Above all honors and the paltry things
That men call great
[illegible], and have we kept the faith
In words?

Oh, poor, weak and blind!
[illegible] we made our petty gains,
Dispersed each year;
[illegible] we know not of [illegible] may appear.

[illegible] pitying Christ!
[illegible] to the weary road
[illegible] of sin;
[illegible] until his heart
Shall take [illegible] in.

Then come at morn or eve!
Win the [illegible] manhood, youth, or [illegible]
They wait full.
[illegible] with these thou'lt be well, since Christ
[illegible] all in all.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

OUR War Atlas is all right, and the first invoice is going fast. Send for one and keep track of the movements of the contestants. A glance at the specially prepared maps show at once the places where the armies meet.

THE man in power has many claimants on his favor, and comparatively few boons to bestow. The God of heaven has all power, and has all things in his gift, and only blames the solicitor for coming so seldom, or coming so late, or staying so short a time. He only wishes that his best gifts were more earnestly sought.

DURING the past week no action of importance has taken place in the far eastern conflict. The Japs are said to have bombarded Vladivostock, but were not answered back by the forts. One day there seems to have been a battle between torpedo boats, each side losing a boat. The land operations are still obscure. The Japanese are reported to have advanced their lines beyond the Yalu River into Manchuria, and other reports tell of skirmishes near Pingyang, a hundred miles south of the Yalu. The latest rumors say that Port Arthur has been so damaged by the Japanese bombardment, that the Russians are leaving the place. It is also given out that Dalney has been destroyed by Japanese shells. No doubt both sides are active, but plans are not given out.

Baptized.

We are glad to report that one more has been induced to forsake all and follow Christ, and cast in his lot with the household of faith. The joyful subject was our dear Brother John Hagelin, whom we assisted in putting on the sin-covering name. We judge him to be slightly on the shady side of fifty. When a young man in Sweden, he studied for the ministry of the Lutheran church. But he shrank from the responsibility of teaching some of the dogmas of that Body and turned his attention to mechanical pursuits.

We understand through all the intervening years he found no resting place for faith, till in the providence of God he lately had to work beside one of our brethren; intercourse with them caused the Book he had reverenced and read, to seem like a new Book dropped down from heaven to him. His early mental discipline was now of great service to him,—and in a few weeks of earnest investigation and instruction, he wanted to know what there was to hinder him from being baptized. As we welcomed him to a seat at the Lord's table our little earthen vessels were full to overflowing. Truly we sat together in heavenly places. In this great booming city where the mad rush for gold makes it difficult to speak to any one of the life to come,—it is but seldom we can find productive soil for the seed of the kingdom. But we do now and then find one to lay hold of the Blessed Hope set before us,—and this revives our spirits and enables us to struggle on.

It is our fervent prayer that our last babe in Christ may take plenty of the sincere milk of the Word, and soon be able to appropriate stronger meat, and grow up into him who is our living head in all things, that he may meet his Lord with joy.

Integrity.

"Till I die I will not remove mine integrity from me. My righteousness I hold fast and will not let it go, my heart shall not reproach me so long as I live." Job xxvii. 5, 6.

Sam Jones once said, "It takes 95 per cent back bone to be a Christian." I believe it takes the other 5 per cent and that means the whole person. It did in the case of Job. There he sat in his awful condition, racked with pain, his wife's reproaches ringing in his ears, he had taken time to tell her "she talked like one of the foolish women," and turned again to his agony. His three friends had left their homes that they might mourn with and comfort him. But the record says they sat for 7 days speechless before him in his misery. Then Job broke the silence, reproaching himself—cursing the day of his birth, until one of his friends reproved him, and each in turn gave their advice, counsel, reproaches. One moment telling him of his power among men, as comforter and counselor, his greatness and wisdom, then reproaching, blaming, until it seemed the man was crazed with their words, and their very presence was obnoxious to him and he could only exclaim, "Miserable comforters are ye all." Then as though grasping a ray of hope he sums up his life in a retrospective view, and bursts out with the words of our text, "Till I die I will not remove mine integrity from me," or my uprightness of character and soundness of moral principle. He knew he was right and no three friends or a dozen could cause him to swerve from that righteousness, or right doing. He could stand alone if necessary, but stand he would, for he adds, "My heart shall not reproach me so long as I live." Job had a conscience, and it was right because he directed it in God's ways at last. Conscience is a thing of education, and we must remember we may do many things conscientiously and be far from right, because we had not a Bible conscience; we should be very careful in this respect. Every age develops phases of what men call conscience. David with a good conscience prayed, "O Lord, let my enemies go swiftly down to hell." But how different the age that Christ came to develop. His admonition was "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you." Why? "That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven." "For if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your heavenly Father forgive you your trespasses."

I heard a person say, If my eternal life depends on my forgiving Mr. —— I shall lose it, for I cannot forgive him. Be careful, dear ones. Your conscience could not be trusted in this respect, for it is just opposite to God's injunction. If you have been wronged and it cannot be made right, remember poor human nature, and forgive, even as Christ forgave you—but keep your integrity. How much it means to be a true follower of Christ, and believe his gospel. It is a daily sacrifice, giving up self in numberless ways—perhaps the association of worldly friends, some coveted pleasure which is contrary to God's written will. But how well it will pay in the end to be true to the gospel, true to the church, ready to do our part always, one that can be depended on, and ready to say with Job "My righteousness I hold fast, and will not let it go."

It was an embarassing moment for the young man, who I well knew, when in company with a judge and two lawyers, he was asked to take a hand in a game of cards. He politely refused, and was accosted with, Mr. ——, you are company for neither man or beast—you neither drink, smoke, nor play cards. A blush mantled the young man's brow, and he said afterwards, if it were not for causing my mother pain, and grieving a dear friend, I would learn yet? Surely it was commendable in him to regard the dear mother's feelings, clinging to his integrity for her sake and the friend—but here was such a grand chance to have shown his righteousness and love for his Christian profession, by adding the words, I cannot do these things conscientiously and be a follower of Christ.

The very angels in heaven would have rejoiced at the rebuke, for the judge was a member of a church. It means a great deal to always maintain our integrity, especially to truth in these days. The Guide Book says "Come out from the world and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing, and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you, and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty."

What an honor to be so highly exalted—given a place which the nobles of earth would covet—but the requirements are, God's will obeyed. The call today is not for higher profession, but a much higher living. Let us be able to say with Job "Till I die I will not remove mine integrity from me."

The Outlook.

The inevitable has happened. The "tread worm has turned" upon the treader. In other words, Japan has broken off diplomatic negotiations with Russia, reserving her full freedom of action in other ways. So the long-expected, long-desired check to Russian conquest has come at last, and that from the latest convert to civilization, the latest addition to the number of the "Great Powers."

After long patience,—a patience which has been greatly abused by her opponent—Japan has turned on her antagonist, and has flung down "the gauge of battle"—though, as a matter of fact, Russia fired the first shot, and that at Chemulpo, which antedated by twelve hours or more the attack made by the Japanese at Port Arthur. In this conflict British sympathies are not with the European "Goliah" but with the Asiatic "David," with whom, in God's wonderful providence, we find ourselves allied—though having no present hand in this conflict.

How will the altered position of affairs in the Far East affect the position of affairs in the Near East? There seems common agreement among journalists that Russia—having so formidable an antagonist in the far east, will be compelled to concentrate attention and forces there, which will leave Bulgaria free to enter the lists against Turkey on behalf of Macedonia. This conviction appears to be shared by Turkey, which is making strenuous endeavours to be prepared for the inevitable conflict in Europe. For doubtless, if the recent springs of action could be revealed, it would be found that it was Russia's strong and threatening hand that prevented Bulgaria from last year espousing the cause of the Bulgarian Macedonians. It was not from want of will but from dread of the Northern Bear. Russian hostility to such action on Bulgaria's part still remains, but Russia having her hands so full further afield, cannot, of necessity, further restrain Bulgaria by force. Thus the latter is at liberty to listen to the claims of humanity and of blood kindred, which must bear fruit.

Russian dislike to Bulgarian action does not lie in any love for the Turk, but because the enlargement and aggrandisement of Bulgaria would interfere with Russia's plans of encroachment in the Near East. A Bulgaria extended to the Bosphorus would be a bitter pill for Russia to swallow. Yet would it be by far the best solution of a thorny question—with Greece extended to embrace Salonika in the Ægean Sea.

That Bulgaria and Turkey alike mean war no shrewd observer doubts. In such a conflict Greece, Servia, and Montenegro ought to be upon the side of Bulgaria, and, as its issue, what is now Turkish territory in Europe should be equitably divided between the four Balkan States.

Whilst Turkey remains in Europe these four States must remain weak and divided—because her policy is "Divide and Conquer," and she has ever fomented disagreement between Christian races for her own ends.

Is the "bag and baggage" policy really feasible? Only if God's time has come for the Turkish woe to be further overthrown. But has that time come? Such is our present hope and our strong conviction. This would be a long stride forward in prophetic realization.

What would follow? Turkey humbled and chastened, bankrupt in finance and seriously curtailed in area, population and prestige, would, probably, haste to make terms with the Czar for their repatriation in their own land of Palestine, as a tributary State. This would be done by Turkey from no affection for the Jew, but for the sake of the population, and the financial help and commerce it would bring to the remnant of the Turkish dominions.

Thus, without purchase, Judah would get her own again,—after long waiting—and become an Autonomous State, with a Jewish Prince (or President), a Jewish Flag, and a Jewish Polity.

Who can grudge such a result to this sorely tried and long oppressed people? In such a case, patriotic Jews would return from all lands to their own land—their Fatherland! One which is fairer in their than all other lands.

And what yet follows? A restored Jewish Temple on Mount Zion, with a revived Temple Service and its Levitical Priesthood. With the peculiar aptitude of the Jew for trade and commerce Jerusalem would, of necessity, become a commercial city, the entrepot of the West and the East.

Do you say that the writer is "a dreamer of dreams"? Remember that these things are written in the "sure word of prophecy," and that though we may be wrong in our interpretation of the times and seasons, we cannot err as to the fulfilment, because these stand upon the "sure word" of the living God.

So we may well take heart of grace, even in these solemn and threatening times, believing that, "through much tribulation" and bloodshed, the "Golden Age" is about to dawn on our distressed world and suffering humanity. That the "good time is coming" for which the best and holiest in Church and State have sighed and prayed. A deep, dark midnight lies immediately before us, but beyond that is the morn, and the "glory of a thousand years" of Millennial blessedness.—The Faith.

Where He Is.

"But man dieth and wasteth away; yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?"—Job xiv: 10.

God told Abram, "And thou shalt go to thy fathers in peace, thou shalt be buried in a good old age." See Genesis xv: 15. Joshua, in speaking of Abraham's fathers, says "they served other gods." Josh. xxiv: 2. One who serves other gods than Jehovah is an idolater. Paul affirms that "the unrighteous shall not inherit the kingdom of God;" and in the list of those shut out, mentions idolaters. 1 Cor. vi: 9, 10. The Alpha and Omega states that idolaters "shall have their part in the lake that burneth with fire and brimstone, which is the second death." Rev. xxi: 8. And Jesus says that "many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven." Matt. viii: 11.

Now if the theory that man goes to a place of reward or punishment according to his deed is correct, how are we to harmonize the above Scripture passages? As sure as God's promises are true, Abram and his fathers went to the same place at death. But since Abraham was "the friend of God," and his fathers were idolaters, where did they go? Were idolaters admitted into the kingdom? or was the friend of God consigned to the lake of fire and brimstone? Either is beyond belief. Then we are forced to conclude that there must be a temporary place shared in common by both righteous and wicked, and that to this place man at death goes.

Solomon says, "there is no work, nor device, nor knowledge, nor wisdom in the grave, whither thou goest." Eccl. ix: 10. Ezekiel records God's promise to open the grave of his people and bring them up out of their graves. Isaiah bids them that dwell in dust to awake and sing for the earth shall cast out her dead. Is. xxiv: 19. Daniel tells us, "many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt." Dan. xii: 2. Jesus also testifies "the hour is coming, in which all that are in the graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth: they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil unto the resurrection of damnation."

Thus we learn that dead men are in their graves, but shall some time rise out of them. It necessarily follows that death is a state of unconsciousness,' and that man is not naturally immortal; for no one would dream of conscious existence in the grave. Jesus, not death, is the Life giver, and the gift is bestowed "when he who is our life shall appear."—Sel.

The Strong Man.

It is singular that men should proclaim themselves strong when before them they see the wrecks on the shoals of intemperance and have not the mental strength to steer their lives in the safe channels of total abstinence. It looks as if they in their bacchanalian dreams were possessed of some demon for the time that led them on and on by easy stages until before a realization came to them they were gone, seldom if ever to be brought back to their natural selves in the condition that they once were. They may be able after the shock comes to abstain in future from drinking intoxicants, but even if they do the ill effects are apparent and felt in some of their physical organism, and the excesses of the father are oftentimes visited on the child and thereby handed down to their posterity.

After all it is the strong man that is the total abstainer. He is the one that can resist and avoid the nefarious treating habit. He is the one that can stand out and proclaim that he has a mind that can control his appetite. He is the one in view of these facts that can be depended upon in most any walk of life for the reason that first of all he can control himself, and it naturally follows that he who can control and retain his self respect is the one that certainly when all is said has the right to command and receive respect of others.

He is the one who can enjoy himself and bring pleasure to others without first dethroning his reason. He is the one that can do business with all classes without first seducing them over the bar and then loosening their purse strings. In other words, he is the man that can do business and reap success in the legitimate channels by appealing to men in their sober senses and in their better manhood and receiving the rewards of his labors from same men instead of those poor, softened fellows who have become victims of the drinker's wiles.

Our National Peril.

The open saloon has ever been and ever will be a curse to our race. There is not one noble aspiration in the human soul, not one heaven-born longing that it is not opposed to, not a pure desire that it does not tend to deaden. Between heaven and hell there is no institution so fraught with peril to the race of man as the open, legalized dram shop. No rugged morality can flourish, no highest type of Christian citizen can be cultivated under its influence. Down with the saloon, and forever down with it.—United Presbyterian.

No one ever comes into divine truth by listening to human opinions. The fountain head is the only source that will quench thirst of soul. Sincere seekers often say: "I hear so many conflicting opinions from good men that I know not what to believe." Yes, that is just the trouble: they are seeking truth from uncertain human teachers, who cannot all be right and may all be wrong. Go to God. Take His word. Read carefully what it says on the simple truths you need to know. Then ask Him what it means. Accept the plain statement just as it reads, upon God's authority, and you cannot go far wrong.

WE have arranged to supply our readers with a War Atlas, containing maps of the war center adjacent to the Yellow Sea, Japan, Russia, Pacific Ocean, etc. and with statistical tables of useful information, enabling one to understand the situation as the war progresses. The maps are colored, and it is substantially bound. Sent post paid for 25 cents. Send for one and keep posted.

The School of Life.

The whole of life may be regarded as a great school of experience, in which men and women are the pupils. As in a school, many of the lessons learned there must needs be taken on trust. We may not understand them, and may possibly think it hard that we have to learn them, especially where the teachers are trials, sorrows, temptations and difficulties; and yet we must not only accept their lessons, but recognize them as being divinely appointed.

To what extent have the pupils profited by their experience in the school of life? What advantage have they taken for their opportunities for learning? What have they gained in discipline of heart and mind?—how much in growth of wisdom, courage, self-control? Have they preserved their integrity amidst prosperity, and enjoyed life in temperance and moderation? or, has life been with a mere feast of selfishness, without care or thought for others? What have they learned from trial and adversity? Have they learned patience, submission and trust in God? Have they learned nothing but impatience, querulousness and discontent?

The results of experience are, of course, only to be achieved by living; and living is only a question of time.

The man of experience learns to rely on time as his helper. "Time and I against any two," was a maxim of Cardinal Mazarin. Time has been described as a beautifier and a consoler; but it is also a teacher. It is the food of experience, the soil of wisdom. It may be the friend or enemy of youth; and will set beside the old as a consoler or as a tormentor, according as it has been used or misused, and the past life has been well or ill spent.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donor request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

To the Illinois Brethren

The time has come for us to decide whether we will have a summer Bible school again in connection with our annual conference or not. The enrollment at our school last summer was 28 with an attendance throughout of 21. The brethren are invited to write me. This applies particularly to Bereans, but generally to all. If you have spoken personally to me about it, just set in the matter as if you had not spoken, for I forget so easily. One good sister speaking in appreciation of the school said she knew of two whom she would assist if we had the school this summer, but because I failed at the time to make a note of it, I have forgotten who it was. In replying to this simply say whether you wish to have it or not and what can be done by way of attendance from your locality. Any replying who were in attendance last summer are also requested to suggest any changes that might prove favorable. If the school is held, a general announcement will be published in a short time. Please write now.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. C. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Report of Meetings.

Report of meeting held at Union school house 6 miles southeast of Piqua, O., conducted by Bro. P. Neill, State Evangelist, conveyed to our place from Brush Creek, O, by Bro. Macy, meeting commencing Feb. 21, continued the following week. The attendance was good considering the rainy weather we had at that time. The attention given to the Word of God was very good as it was opened up so kindly and vividly by our brother, as he is an able man to rightly divide the Word of God. We were assisted in the singing by Bro. Howard Pearson and the young folks of this community. O may we each and every one take hold of the work whatever we find to do, and work with willing hands until our Master comes, that he may find us waiting, girded with the whole armor of God in our prayer.

MR. & MRS. N. S. WESTFALL.

Dear brothers and sisters.

It is very encouraging to me, and should be to each and every one of us, to know that the little flocks of the body of Christ, who are scattered here and there are laboring in the vineyard of the Lord, trying to spread the gospel of the kingdom, and to strengthen and build up those who have already laid hold upon those glad tidings. So I will just drop in the report of our meetings at Burr Oak, Ind., which began on Feb. 14, and closed March 6. They were conducted by Bro. F. L. Austin, who presented a line of thought beginning at God's creation, his kingdom, and where established, the chosen bride of Christ, and many more thoughts of radiant beauty, which time and space will not permit me to quote. But one thought of great importance that should ever linger in our minds and be made manifest in our hearts, is that we should closely follow the Christ life, by living day by day for others of our fellowmen in the extent that we die daily that they might come to a knowledge of the truth, whereby so doing we fit ourselves for his service in the kingdom to come. There were some who earnestly listened to the gospel teachings, but did not accept them as their guide, whom we hope and earnestly pray may yet decide to obey the blessed Word, and follow after righteousness regardless of what the world may say or do, and not stumble over others who through darkness have erred, and come short of being examples and lights for others to lighten their pathway. May God's rich blessings rest upon all who are thinking upon his name, that they may find strength in time of need is the prayer of one, waiting the glorious day of Christ's return.

In love,

LIZZIE WILHELM.

A new booklet on the Black Hills has been issued by the North-Western Line, with a fine detailed map of this wonderful region. Send four cents in stamps for copy of the booklet. W. B. Kniskern, P. T. M., Chicago, Ill.—Mar. 26.

ANOTHER OFFER.

There is a general waking up among our people everywhere. Our public speakers are all busy, and calls are in excess of their ability to attend them. Many places want preaching at the same time, but must wait their turn. This shows a decided interest, and a desire among our brethren to sound out the Word to the yet unsaved. All seem to realize that the night is far spent, that the time to work is short.

Brothers and Sisters, our work is not well done, and is not ready for acceptance of God, unless we have done all we can—our very utmost. We cannot admit that it is our duty to do anything at all for the advancement of the Master's cause, without conceding it is our duty to do all we can—to make a sacrifice even.

Preachers of other denominations as well as our own, know and say that the best workers in a community are those who take and read their Church paper, and keep informed as to what is being done in the various departments of the work, and are thus interested in pushing along the car of truth.

The Managers of THE RESTITUTION are endeavoring to so conduct the paper that it will be a fit aid to the Evangelist in his work. We are trying to keep it clear from that contention that leads to mischief and strife. This is done by having certain well-defined truths which are taught in God's Word plainly, as a basis of belief, and by publishing articles that accord with these declared principles. Other outside subjects might be "investigated" as long as life and pencil and paper lasts, and no decision ever be reached, but we do not consider this a profitable work to engage in, hence do not ask for contributions on such subjects, and do not want them. Such are usually but the "opinion" of a man, and are often based on a mere inference at best.

This paper aims to teach the truth of the Bible, and the same is declared and believed in by our Church. We therefore believe it is a fit missionary to be sent out to the unsaved and lost of the human family. In order to make it possible for our friends to do more of this missionary work than ever before, we make this offer:

Any one sending us $10.00 may select 13 names of those not now subscribers, to whom we will send the paper for the year 1904. This makes a trifle over one-half regular price if taken in lots of $10.00 worth. You and the office practically go halves in scattering the truth of the gospel to your neighbors and friends. You who have money think of this. For $100 you can preach to an audience of 130 people over 200 sermons the coming year. Can you do better with that amount of money? You have a minister come to your neighborhood perhaps once a month, giving you two or may be three discourses each time—possibly 30 a year. When he is coming you invite your neighbors in to hear him. Suppose those neighbors have had THE RESTITUTION in their homes each week when the preacher was not there, and have read the articles, and are interested to hear more. Does not this increase largely the chances of the preacher being able to speak the very words that will start your friend on the way to the kingdom? Did you ever think of this matter? Will you not take it under consideration? We feel sure if you do you will not hesitate to go half partner with us in this work.

Who will send $10, $20, $50, $100 for this work? The best time to start it is now. Select your names and send at once, so they will get the rest of this year and all of next.

The North-Western Line Russia-Japan Atlas.

Send ten cents in stamps for Russo-Japanese War Atlas issued by The Chicago & North-Western R'y. Three fine colored maps, each 14x20: bound in convenient form for reference. The Eastern situation shown in detail, with tables showing relative military and naval strength and financial resources of Russia and Japan.

A. H. Waggener, 22 Fifth Avenue, Chicago, Ills.—April 2.

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIII. Read PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAR. 23, 1904. NUMBER 12.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

The End of the Way.

My life is a wearisome journey,
I am sick with the dust and the heat,
The rays of the sun beat upon me,
The briers are wounding my feet;
But the city to which I am journeying,
Will more than my trials repay,
And the toils of the road will seem nothing
When I get to the end of the way.

There are so many hills to climb upward,
I am often longing for rest;
But he who appoints me my pathway
Knows just what is needful and best.
I know in his Word he has promised
That my strength shall be as my day;
And the toils of the road will seem nothing
When I get to the end of the way.

When the last feeble steps have been taken,
And the gates of the City appear,
And the beautiful songs of the saved ones
Float out to my listening ear;
When all that seems now so mysterious
Will be plain and clear as the day,
The toils of the road will seem nothing
When I get to the end of the way.

Cooling fountains are there for the thirsty;
There are cordials for those who are faint;
There are robes that are whiter and purer
Than any that fancy can paint.
Then I'll try to press hopefully onward,
Often thanking through each weary day,
All the toils of the road will seem nothing
When I get to the end of the way.

Paul's Last Days and Last Words.

When Paul wrote the second letter to Timothy he was in a prison cell in Rome, the capital city of the great Roman Empire, at the zenith of its power, as strong as iron, and as cruel and destructive as a wild beast. The thoughts we associate with modern prisons since the time of Howard, who did so much to ameliorate the condition of convict life, must not be associated with the prisons of ancient times, when it was thought that a prisoner for crime forfeited all rights. Paul's condition now is much worse than it was five years before when he was allowed the privilege of preaching the gospel in his own hired house; which was thronged daily by those curious to see and hear the notable prisoner preach, or anxious to learn the way of truth. At the date of this epistle one stage of his trial had been gone through with before Nero's senate. He writes, At my first defence no one took my part, (R. V.) but all men forsook me. 2 Tim. iv. 16. This goes to show the character of the times; that it was dangerous to take sides with Paul or to show him any sympathy. To do so required an amount of bravery that few men, even Christians, possessed. So the venerable apostle in the hour of his sorest need was almost utterly abandoned. No Christian stood by him in the court of justice. It was difficult and dangerous to seek his prison. Timothy, his own son in the gospel, and companion of his travels and labors is away yonder at Troas hundreds of miles distant. In the letter he urges him to come to him with all speed. There seems to have been some doubt in his mind touching Timothy's ability to stand the test in the hour of danger as the following words appear to imply: "Be not thou therefore ashamed of the testimony of our Lord, nor of me, his prisoner; but be thou partaker of the afflictions of the gospel according to the power of God. Chapter i. 8. These words would serve to nerve him for whatever perils he might have to face on the way, and after his arrival at Rome.

This letter abounds in instruction, admonition and warning applicable, in part, to Timothy, and in a large measure suited to the needs of the church under the conditions existing at that time when false doctrines were being introduced by self-constituted apostles and teachers, who had already proceeded so far as to deny the resurrection of the dead, saying, it was past already, by which the faith of some was overthrown. Chapter ii. 8. The apostle lays Timothy under the most solemn obligations to remind believers of the practicable and profitable things of which he wrote, and emphasized by his own close adherence to the truth in spite of all worldly considerations, and in the face of danger and death. What deep concern he feels for the welfare of the church and what importance he attaches to the truth of the gospel! It grieved him sorely to know that the truth was being corrupted by the introduction of the Gnosis of the East, and Science, falsely socalled, of the West; and in addition to these, Jewish fables were subverting the simple faith of these apostolically taught churches. The great apostle to the nations is not content to die without putting on record his deep concern for the purity of that system of truth which he had so zealously guarded during the whole of his ministerial life. To Timothy he writes, "Hold fast the form of sound words which thou hast heard of me." And to insure the transmission of this system of truth, unorrupted by error, to later generations he solemnly enjoins this young evangelist in these words: "The things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men who shall be able to teach others also." Chapter ii. 2. Out of the damp and uncomfortable prison cell these words came to the church, and through the few faithful men they have come to us with a solemnity, pathos and power imparted to them by the circumstances and scenes associated with the closing days of the apostle, and the termination of a ministry that had been of incalculable use to the church of all time.

It was "Paul the aged" and a prisoner of Jesus Christ (Phil. 9) who wrote or dictated this last of his letters. Not only age, but disease, abundant labors, frequent confinements in unhealthy prisons, the scourgings, and the care of all the churches had told heavily upon his frail constitution. It seems so inhuman that such as he should have been confined in a felon's cell and be doomed to the death of a malefactor. Enforced idleness at best to such a temperament was hard enough to bear, but the worse conditions of that old Mamertine prison would make confinement torture to both body and mind. Bare existence is possible under severe privation and discomfort. The chillness of the late autumn the apostle feels in the depths of his cell and this reminds him of the cloak he left at Troas with Carpus; so he urges Timothy to make haste and come to him shortly; (ver. 9) before winter and bring the cloak which would add to his comfort, when the cold weather set in. He had learned before to suffer want, but never perhaps, was so needy as now. In a few words he refers to several persons by name. The first is Demas who had forsaken him, and assigns as a reason for his conduct the love of this present world. The case of Demas is a sad one, whatever his love of the present world may imply, whether his desertion of the apostle in the hour of his sorest need was in consequence of fear caused by the danger confronting him in case he should sympathize with Paul or look after his welfare, or whether some worldly enterprise, engaging in which he could gain wealth and secure friends, tempted him to leave the city of Rome and go to Thessalonica, in either view he must be regarded as worthy of blame. Against Crescens and Titus he makes no charge of unfaithfulness or neglect of duty. The one may have gone to Dalmatia, and the other to Dalmatia under the direction of the apostle, to look after the cause of truth in these cities. That neither left him except by his consent. That the churches at these places needed their labors as that of Ephesus needed the labors of Tychius whom the apostle sent thither.

"Only Luke is with me." This faithful companion of his labors and travels is by his side to comfort him, and bestow on him whatever kindness the authorities would permit. "Alexander the coppersmith did me much evil; the Lord reward him according to his works." Quite likely the same Alexander mentioned in connection with Hymeneus as having made shipwreck of the faith. 1 Tim. i. 20.

This apostate was mean enough to charge the apostle with much evil. Timothy is warned against him in these words, "Be on thy guard against him, for he has been a great opponent of my arguments." Conybeare and Howson. This opposition was shown in court when the apostle made his defence. His former Christian companions might forsake him and apostates oppose him, and Roman authorities subject him to abuse, but there was one friend near him. "Nevertheless, the Lord Jesus stood by me and strengthened my heart, that by me the proclamation of the glad tidings might be accomplished in full measure; that all the Gentiles might hear." It is difficult in these civil times and so remote from the scenes of his trial, to fully appreciate the situation of the apostle, and to grasp in full measure the meaning of his words just quoted. He is arraigned before the bar of Nero, confessedly the wickedest Roman that ever wore the purple and bore the title of Cæsar. A council of twenty assessors, or judges of consular rank, grave and dignified in bearing, and courtly in dress face the prison: also senators chosen by lot to share in the proceedings. Ambassadors from every civilized country are here; and witnesses summoned from every land where the apostle has preached, and a vast throng of spectators, representatives of all nationalities and of every form of religion, filled the great basilica. In the presence of all these and surrounded by pomp and power, the aged and venerable prisoner is to make his defense by proclaiming the same gospel that he had proclaimed in the face of danger and death for thirty odd years. Will he quail now in the trying ordeal? Unaided human strength is not equal to the task. That heart which had felt depression many times before is faint and feeble. Supernatural aid is necessary. "The Lord Jesus stood with me," he says, "and strengthened my heart," inspires him with courage for this supreme occasion. Under the circumstances the defense of the venerable prisoner must have solemnly impressed many a heart in that audience, and the seed sown must have borne fruit somewhere. Though Paul was bound the gospel was not bound, and for him to die would result in magnifying Christ.

Dear Restitution:

The world rushes on in its mad career. The rapidity with which armies and navies are mobilized is only an indication of the rapidity with which King Jesus and the saints will act when the time comes to begin the work of bringing all nations into subtion to King Immanuel and the conversion of the twelve hundred million people in the world. Most of these people are in midnight heathenism, who must first be brought to state of civilization and be taught to govern themselves with justice and equity. The civil government which they must be instructed to establish and maintain must be so perfect that not only all individuals will be protected in their right to worship God in their own way and also in their right of "life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness," but the rights of the animals, the birds and the fishes must also be maintained, otherwise they will not and cannot become tame and gentle. The command to Adam and his children was to have dominion over them. Usually we conceive dominion to mean the power to compel obedience. That is not the meaning of the term when used by our heavenly Father in his instruction to Adam, relative to his treatment of the animals. To teach the people what they must do to obtain eternal life will be a comparatively easy matter, but to so instruct them in the principles of absolute right and justice and to so drill them in the observance of these principles, that they will at all times and under all circumstances observe them, is a very different proposition. The underlying principles upon which Jesus will erect and maintain his government will be justice, love and mercy. These will be made so prominent that the animal kingdom will come to recognize them and conduct themselves in accordance therewith. To give to each individual all the liberty he may need to make him happy, will not in any manner infringe upon the rights of any other person. Neither will it infringe upon the rights and privileges of any of the animals, birds or fishes. On the contrary, the rights of each individual person, each animal, each bird and each fish will be so fully understood and recognized, not only by the whole human family, but by each animal, each bird and each fish, that there will not be any conflict whatever. But all shall live together in such perfect love and unity that each will vie with the other in an effort to make all happy. God made them all to live together in peace and unity, each contributing to the happiness of the other, and also to the happiness of the whole. It was the devil who planted the seeds of enmity between them. God has never put one single discordant note in all the universe. He created all things in perfect harmony with each other. There was not a single discordant note in all the universe until Satan came and planted it. In the restitution, all the discords, together with their author, will be taken out of the world. Then will the most perfect unity pervade the whole earth and sea, as well as the whole universe of God. When this shall be brought about then truly will man be in the image of his Creator. Hasten the day, O our Father in heaven.

The Last Day.

The sun had just risen and one of its beams, smiling through the window, fell lovingly upon the pallid face of a sufferer, who had lingered many days with that dreadful disease consumption. The form was emaciated, but the eyes were bright as jewels. The father, who had been a patient watcher, stood by the head of the bed. "Papa," said the voice, now weakened to almost a whisper, "this is my last day." At the close of the day, as the evening shades were gathering, like a flower she folded her hands upon her breast and fell asleep in Jesus.

If the minister knew that next Sunday he would preach his last sermon, how full of love and timely warning it would be; such words of entreaty—prayers of mercy and deeds of kindness, yet it may be the last sermon.

If the men or women that to-day refuse the call of mercy, knew it to be their last one, they would not so cruelly turn Jesus away. Yet it will come.

Preachers will preach the last discourse, close their Bible the last time, leave the pulpit, having entered it the last time and made their last appeal.

Editors will write their last editorial, and lay down their pen, never to pick it up again. Their last day will arrive.

To the unsaved, God will call the last time; the last refusal will be made. The day is approaching; it may be to-day. And as I write it seems that I have never till now fully understood—to-day may be my last day.

God help us, if to-day should close our account with earthly life, that we may awake to a new day, in the resurrection morning, where last days never come.—Selected.

Keep To The Point.

There are persons who never can come to the point. They ramble in thought and in speech. They beat about hither and thither. They aim at nothing and hit it.

No person can expect to deal effectually with human minds, unless he can see points clearly, state them fairly, and prove them logically, and lead the minds of others to distinct conclusions concerning them.

There is perhaps no better way to learn how to make points, than to write them down, and after writing them go carefully over what is written, and see first, that it expresses the right idea, and second, expresses it in the best and most forcible manner. When they are thus clearly before the mind in writing, then they can usually be stated with sufficient force and clearness in extemporaneous speech.

A sermon without point produces very little effect, but ideas presented with clearness, distinctness, and the positiveness of well-grounded conviction, reach the intellect and linger in the memory of those that hear. If you are to speak, have something to say that is worth hearing. Make your points. Aim at a mark, and hit it.

God is Love.

These words are a superlative definition of divine perfection. They compound all the qualities of the divine nature and character in one sentence. Love is the power that moves the universe, that puts in motion all natural provisions, and perpetuates them for human use and blessing.

Humanity has ever exerted itself to develop love. Artists have ever endeavored to paint it, sculptors have attempted to chisel it, and poets have labored to compose it into song, while others have tried to blend it in sweet melodies with instrument and voice. But it yet remains, to the ceaseless, eternal ages, for God to exhibit its wonders. It will take the harps and voices of the redeemed hosts of God to execute its sweet melodies, and to display its qualities in their nature and being.

The command of God is, "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy life, and with all thy might." This is full of tender affection and sublime pathos; but this we cannot do with the animal love of our own nature; therefore God has condescended to transmit his love to us by the Holy Spirit, as a motive power in the prosecution of every Christian duty. The "earnest of the Spirit" is love, and having "sealed us" for eternal glory, God has put his love into our hearts, that we may "love" ourselves into the kingdom of God.

That the love of God should superabound in us as the prevailing principle of government is made apparent by the fact that we may possess the gifts of oratory, faith, knowledge, and the broadest philanthropy, as manifested in the abundance of our benevolent charities, and yet, being without love, we shall be sunk in the deepest spiritual poverty, and lose the kingdom of God at last.

The proof of the residence of God's love in the human heart is demonstrated in Christian obedience to the commands of God, which give stimulation and energy, and also guarantees them heavenly support, and divine association. "If a man love me, he will keep my words; and my father will love him, and we will come unto him, and make our abode with him"—Jesus. "For this is the love of God, that we keep his commandments; and his commandments are not grievous"—John.

Some would confine us to the decalogue, and especally to the fourth commandment, but all these may be strictly kept, and not a particle of love be the motive power. But if the love of God be in the heart, every moral precept contained in all God's commands will be lovingly obeyed. God's love, resident in the heart, binds Christian brethren in the true and filial bond of brotherly affection; for it will be the principle upon which our dealings with others turns; and while it does not palliate wrong, it deals with it in the tenderest way.

Love manifested to our brother is like the sunshine and the dew to the drooping flowers, for it gives him that courage and vivacity that the combined wealth of the world cannot purchase. It lends new vigor to his drooping spirit, and helps him to re-resolve to make Christian life a success.

Brotherly love is the blazing testimony of our Christian character; it will accomplish what argument can never effect by convincing the unsaved that Christianity is true; that its virtues are resident in the human heart to the complete transformation of human life. Love will bring an eternal sequel by its eternal perpetuation, for it is as enduring as God.

Faith must reach its ultimate design, and hope will be consummated in rapturous reality, but love will always be developing in eternal revelations: for "in the ages to come he will show the exceeding riches of his grace in his kindness (love) toward us through Jesus Christ."

The time is rapidly approaching when the sum of all lives will have been reached; when the judgment of God will have decided every destiny, and then will be the time when love will have its purest and highest development. "There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear; because fear hath torment." "And now, little children, abide in him; that when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming." "Herein is our love made perfect, that we may have boldness in the day of judgment." God is eternal love.—C. H. Shurtliff, in Crisis.

Let Us Quarrel Tomorrow.

My wife is one of the sweetest little women in the whole world and I am not considered peculiarly cranky, but sometimes differences would arise, beginning with the most trivial things, which however, being duly nursed, became of monumental proportions and often threatened the peace of the family. Of course, I was commonly the one to blame; in fact, as I look back on it now, I am sure I was always to blame, for I should have had the wisdom to give way on the non-essentials, and by a little restraint and gentle talk win my little wife over to my way of thinking. But, instead of that, I feared I should sacrifice my dignity (!) as head of the family, by yielding. So sometimes I went to business without my good-by kiss, and two people were miserable all day.

But my little wife had an inspiration (most women have when things come to the breaking point), and the next time our argument was drifting near the danger line, she turned aside the collision by this womanly suggestion, "Howard, dear, let's quarrel to-morrow!" This was a proposal for an armistice. What husband could refuse? "All right," I said, "we will put it off till to-morrow," and we laughed and talked of other things. But to-morrow did not come. Indeed, to-morrow never comes; it's always a day ahead; and if we can only keep our quarrels until then, there will be no more heart-broken little wives at home and fewer blue husbands at store or office.

"Let's quarrel to-morrow!"—N. H. Junior.

The Art of Letting Go.

It is just as important to let go as to hold on. Anything that cannot help us to get on and up in the world; anything that is a drag, a stumbling block or a hindrance, should be expunged from our memory. Many people seem to take a positive pleasure in recalling past misfortunes, sufferings, and failures. They dwell upon such experiences, and repaint the dark pictures until the mind becomes melancholy and sad. If they would only learn to drive them out, and banish their attempts to return, as they would banish a thief from the house, those painful thoughts would cease to demand entrance.

We want all we can get of sunshine, encouragement, and inspiration. Life is too short to dwell upon things which only hinder our growth. If we keep the mind filled with bright, hopeful pictures, and wholesome thoughts,—the things only which can help us on and up in the world—we shall make infinitely greater progress than by burying ourselves in glowing retrospection.

One of the first lessons in life is to learn to be absolute master of one's own mind, to clear it of its enemies, and to keep it clear. A well-trained mind will never harbor thoughts inimical to success of happiness. You have the ability to choose your mind's company; and you can call up at will any guest you please. Then why not choose the noblest and best?—Selected.

An employment, the satisfactory pursuit of which requires of a man that he shall be endowed with a retentive memory, quick at learning, lofty-minded, and graceful, is the friend and brother of truth, justice, fortitude, and temperance.—Plato.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

This issue and April 6, will be consecutive numbers, as there are five Wednesdays in this month.

There is little to say concerning the war. The same reports are made and then denied. All we know definitely is that the clash is coming nearer.

Our War Atlas is all right, and the first invoice is going fast. Send for one and keep track of the movements of the contestants. A glance at the specially prepared maps show at once the places where the armies meet.

Are the First Chapters of Matthew and Luke Authentic?

PART THREE.

What can we call this but speculation prompted by prejudice,—but it furnishes an opportunity to show further who MARCION was, and then our readers will be able to judge whether he may be regarded as an authority or not.

Irenaeus (i. i., c. 27) as quoted by Lardner in his "History of Heretics," gives an account of him, (Marcion) from which we extract the following: —"Marcion.....successor of Cerdon, added to his (Cerdon's) doctrine..... blaspheming him who is declared to be God by the law and the prophets, who, as he says, appears to be the author of evil, delighting in war, inconstant, and contrary to himself..... Jesus, he says, came from the Father .....into Judea in the time of Pontius Pilate.....He appeared in the form of a man.....Moreover, he (Marcion) mutilated the gospel according to Luke, striking out all that relates to our Lord's nativity, and taking away other things from our Lord's discourses, especially where he speaks of the Creator of this world as his Father; thus delivering to his disciples, not the gospel, but a scrap of it. In like manner he curtails the epistles of Paul, taking away those passages where the apostle plainly speaks of the Creator of the world as the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ. Lardner further states that of the New Testament, and these strangely curtailed and altered. He divided them into two parts.....the former contained only one of the four gospels, viz., that of Luke, and this mutilated, and altered, and even interpolated in a great variety of places. He would not allow it to be called the gospel of Luke, erasing the name of that evangelist from the beginning of his copy.....He began his gospel at the first verse of the third chapter, and read thus: "In the fifteenth year of Tiberias Cesar, God descended into Capernaum, a city of Galilee."

Turning to the notes of Marsh, the translator of Michaelis, we find him writing: "It has been very generally believed,.....that Marcion used Luke's gospel willfully corrupted.....But that Marcion used Luke's gospel at all is a position that has been taken for granted without the least proof.

MARCION HIMSELF

never pretended that it was the gospel of Luke, as Tertullian acknowledges.

The foregoing extracts are valuable as showing the character of the authority esteemed so highly by some in our day. We may fairly say there is no external evidence against the complete gospel of Luke as now extant.

Our readers can see that the only evidence produced by our writer was the fact that one party of early professing Christians did not believe the doctrine, though it has been shown the that Nazarine gospel did contain the account; and there is no sound reason for disputing either the authenticity or authority of the chapters in question. What a thing to offer in proof that the accounts of the nativity of Jesus in Matthew and Luke were not in the original New Testament! What a reason to offer for believing as he does, the Marcionite New Testament did not contain those chapters! How could we expect it to! Marcion knew what he wanted, and made it to suit himself, and had a right to do so. What have we to do with his New Testament. He does not seem to have made any claim to inspiration, and it is supremely ridiculous to see men in the twentieth century investing a man, who lived in the second century, with divine authority, and then compassing sea and land to make proselytes to the idea that Jesus was the natural son of Joseph, and without a speck of testimony for that idea, and mutilate the Word of the living God to do it. Are they ignorant of the fact that Marcion rejected the Old Testament altogether, and the four gospels,—and all the rest of the Pauline epistles, and the Hebrews greatly altered? If not ignorant of this, are they honest in keeping it back from the people among whom they are disseminating the deadly error?

LARDNER VOL. 9, P. 358,

furnishes an item in Marcion's history that should not be omitted, and furnishes proof from an enemy to the existence of the 4 gospels in his day, —he says:—"The celebrated heretic Marcion, lived in the beginning of the second century, when he had the best opportunity of discovering a forgery in the writings of the New Testament, if any such existed. He was excommunicated by the Church, and being greatly enraged thereat, had every disposition to say the worst he could about it. He travelled all the way from Sinope on the Black Sea, to Rome, and through Galatia, Bithynia, Asia Minor, Greece, and Italy, the countries where the apostles preached, and the churches to which they wrote, but never found any one to suggest the idea of forgery to him. He affirmed that the gospel of Matthew, the epistle to the Hebrews, those of James and Peter, and the whole of the Old Testament, were books only for Jews, and published a new and altered edition of the gospel of Luke and ten epistles of Paul for the use of his sect.

CELSUS

another enemy is a valuable witness in this case. He was an Epicurean philosopher of the second century who wrote a work against Christianity, entitled "The Word of Truth," in which he quotes passages from the New Testament, and so many of them, that from the fragments of his work which remain, we could gather all the principal facts of the birth, teaching, miracles, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ, if the New Testament should be lost.

When Paine quotes the New Testament to ridicule it, no man can deny that such a book was in existence at the time he wrote. If he takes the pains to write a book to confute it, it is self-evident that it is in circulation, and possesses influence. So Celsus' reply to the gospels, and his quotations from them are conclusive proofs that these books were generally circulated and believed, and held to be of authority while he wrote. Further, he shows every disposition to present every argument which could possibly damage the Christian cause. In fact our modern infidels have done little more than serve up his old objections. Nothing could have served his purpose better than to prove that the records of the history of Christ were forgeries of a late date. But he never intimates the least suspicion of such a thing; nor denies the miracles, but attributes them to magic. In order to show the downward course of those who mutilate the Word of God in order to maintain a theory we state that another pamphlet has been published since the one already noticed. It was issued by those adopting the pseudonym of "Disciples of Jesus of Nazareth." In it quite an advance has been made; not only are chapters rejected from the gospels of Matthew and Luke,—John's productions are found objectionable, and the epistle to the Hebrews is inconvenient; so, as a matter of course, they are swept to one side. "The new broom sweeps clean." It asks how it is that those who believe in the miraculous conception of Jesus, never, in dealing with John's gospel say anything of the external evidences. The answer is, If any [illegible] character they would have been boldly produced; but the truth is, the gospel bearing the name of John has been universally received by the Churches as his workmanship. We have already furnished evidences that take us within touch of John, the last of the apostles, and leave no room for forgery to obtain a footing amongst those who knew whether John had written such a gospel or not,—and come down to Jerome in the fourth century, proving conclusively that Matthew, Mark, Luke and John were the authors of the gospels, and ascribe fourteen epistles to Paul.

The summary statement of a writer in Kitto's Cyclopedia, is that during the lapse of ages up to the conclusion of the eighteenth century no one ever expressed a doubt respecting the genuineness of John's gospel, except one small sect, whose scepticism, however, was not based upon historical, but merely upon dogmatical grounds."

If John be rejected, then Matthew, Mark and Luke should be also: and in that case what becomes of the theory concerning the son of Joseph?

But the objector thinks there is a lack of harmony between it and the other three gospels. The first objection is that though the writers of the three preceding gospels acknowledged "Jesus as the Christ," "The Son of God" they never claimed for him a nature higher than the human,—the human child of human parents; whilst the fourth gospel presents us with the idea of the incarnation of a divine person.

This, it is remarked, is begging the whole question. It has been already shown that the preceding gospels allege the Sonship of Jesus to God, not to human parents, even in their use of the phrase "Son of God" as quoted above. And the gospel of John does not allege the incarnation of a divine person in any other sense than that conveyed by that of the other three.

The objector next says the Greek style is neither pure nor elegant, etc., his style argues a great want of those advantages which result from a learned education, and is considered the least correct writer of the New Testament."

Objector says Jesus is represented as carping, mystical, puzzling, enigmatical, and asserting in the fourth gospel, while he is simple, friendly, loving and clear in the three." No instance is quoted in proof so we simply deny the charges as untrue.

It is then asked, "Is it likely that a Galilean fisherman would have indulged in theosophical speculations, and a theological dialect such as is found in Philo?" Mr. Horsman replies, It depends on circumstances. If he had been a fisher of men for about forty years, and was placed in a position where Philo's teachings were corrupting those under his care, it is most likely that he would under the guidance of the Holy Spirit, convey to them right ideas regarding the subjects speculated upon by Philo, and would necessarily use some of his phraseology or terminology.

Another "enigma." "Is it likely if . . . Jesus taught . . . in parables, that there should not be a single parable in the whole book? Is it likely that no case of curing demoniacs should occur in this gospel?"

"Really, objector, I fail to see the point. If you ask is it likely that the gospel contains these or not, I reply, it is not a question of probability, but of fact; and you have but to examine the gospel in order to see. Perhaps you mean, is it likely that John would write a gospel without these items? In that case it would depend on the object he had in view. If he was writing something supplementary to other gospels, he would omit most of what they contained. And the evidence is to the effect that, 1 John did write a gospel; 2 the gospel we possess, bearing his name is the one he wrote; 3 it is supplementary to the other three, omitting many things recorded in them.

Then it is asked "Is it likely that the Baptist when in prison would have sent to Jesus to enquire if he were the Messiah to come, when he had declared, 'I saw the Spirit descending from heaven like a dove, and it abode upon him, and I knew him not,' but he has sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, 'Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending and remaining on him, the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost. And I saw and bare record that this is the Son of God.'

Yes, it is likely that the Baptist when in prison would send such a message. If the immediate disciples of Jesus did not understand that Jesus would die, even after being told by [illegible] would be the case, but expected Him then to "redeem Israel," this expectation would be very much stronger in the mind of one who knew he was the herald of the Messiah. And for him to be cast into prison while his Master was on the scene, was to bewilder in the highest degree. "The kingdom close at hand, and I in prison! What can it mean?" The record is "simple and clear." The situation is a perfectly natural one.

And now, reader, if you have been in any measure influenced by the good words and fair speeches of Marcionites you can see where you will land if you do not call a halt.

The following paragraph from the pamphlet of the "Disciples of Jesus of Nazareth," so-called, shows the writer to be a worthy disciple of the man who discarded the Old Testament entirely, all the four Gospels, and many other books composing the New Testament. It says:

"The resurrection of Lazarus must be dismissed as being entirely mythistoria and as having no foundation in fact."

"If we were in the habit of accepting or rejecting testimony at the bidding of any self-constituted authority, of course we should humbly dismiss the account. But the fact must be borne in mind that the unanimous consent of those in the earliest ages is, that the account was written by the Apostle John, and until all such evidence is 'dismissed' we are bound to accept the narrative."

The pamphlet next informs us that a suspicion of forgery is entertained because Jesus is represented in chap. xvii. 5, as speaking of himself in the third person, while in xi. 43 he says, "I thank thee that thou hast heard me."

In the next place the words, "My kingdom is not of this world" is said to be in violent opposition to Rev. xi. 15.'

Then it says, "But our Lord never said anything to Pilate about his kingdom."

Then it states that the fourth Gospel affirms that Jesus, bearing his cross, went forth, while Matthew, Mark and Luke state that they compelled Simon, a Cyrenian, to bear it, and then asks "which statement is inspired?"

It further states that if the account of the fourth Gospel be true, it is impossible that Christ should have eaten the Passover with his disciples, as he was crucified before it could be legally celebrated.

Then the objector cannot believe the record in chap. iv. which consists of his conversation with a woman of Sychar, a city of Samaria, because the Lord had forbidden the twelve to enter any city of Samaritans. Another statement is this, after referring to John xxi. 24, "We know that his testimony is true," and adds "Surely John would not have used these words had he been the author."

This is not all, by any means, but it must suffice to show an utter lack of faith in the Gospel of him who leaned on Jesus breast, and that it has been practically expunged from their New Testament. We have not appended answers to a number of these ordinary skeptical objections, and careless handling of history, as most of our readers do not need them, we hope.

GIBBON

In the 47th chapter of The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, says, 1 John iv. 1-3 was levelled against the growing error of the Docetes, who had obtained too much credit in the world. Many among the Gentile proselytes refused to believe that a celestial spirit an undivided portion of the first essence, had been personally united with a man of impure and contaminated flesh; and in their zeal for the Divinity they piously abjured the humanity of Christ. While his blood was still recent on Mount Calvary, the Docetes, a numerous sect of learned Asiatics, invented the fantastic system, which afterwards was propagated by the Marcionites, the Manicheans, and the various names of the Gnostic Heresy. They denied the truth and authenticity of the gospels, as far as they related the conception of Mary, the birth of Christ, and the thirty years that preceded the exercise of his ministry. He first appeared on the banks of the Jordan in the form of perfect manhood; but it was ONLY a form, not a substance. A human figure created by the hand of Omnipotence to imitate the faculties and actions of a man, and to impose a perpetual illusion on the senses of his friends and enemies. Articulate sounds vibrated on the ears of the disciples; but the image which was impressed on their optic nerve, eluded the more stubborn evidence of the touch, and they enjoyed the spiritual, not the corporeal presence of the Son of God."

AMERICAN MARCIONITES.

We recently received a copy of a paper published in this country in the interest of the error we oppose. Being indisposed at the time we only read part of one article, and laid it aside; but not before discovering that the writer taught that there was no necessity for the sacrificial death of Christ in behalf of our race. We regret that the paper has been lost track of, as we think it went on to say that it was not the purpose of God that he should have so suffered, but are not positive. What we do know, however, warrants us in giving out a note of warning to any who may have been favorably inclined toward this way. It shows what company they will be in if they embrace it, and where they are drifting to. But it is consistent, and not to be wondered at. If we believed Joseph to be the natural father of Jesus, we would say the same. The death of Joseph's son would avail nothing for us. In a word we have no Savior if Joseph was the father of Jesus: there was no necessity for his death. Joseph was a sinner, and had he been the father of Jesus, Jesus would have been a sinner too, and never would have been raised.

IN CONCLUSION

We would say to our readers,—the Disciples of Marcion ask you to believe 1. That the promise of the woman's seed in Gen. iii. 15 has no reference to the World's Redeemer, although it was predicted some 3000 years later that a virgin should conceive, and Mat. i. 22, 23 proves its literal fulfillment by the nativity of Jesus; as does also Luke i. 31-35, and Gal. iv. 4 declares that "God sent forth his Son, made of a woman," when the time to do so arrived.

2. You are asked by some of these zealots to believe, that although the importance of the Old Testament genealogical records cannot be questioned, it was not at all necessary to identify the rightful heir to David's throne, and he in whom all God's promises centered.

3. You are asked to believe by other leaders of Josephitism that the parts of the genealogies relating to the paternity of Jesus are forgeries, because Marcion's New Testament did not contain it; as if that was all that was lacking in it. This, in view of the historic facts is not honest.

Under adverse circumstances we have done what seemed to be duty, seeing no one else volunteered to do it. Out of a vast amount of historic evidence, we aimed to select a chain from apostolic times, so that every one may, in a measure, at least, be able to cope with modern skepticism.

Important News.

We clip the following items from the Crisis. They are written by A. G. Hales, the war correspondent of the London Daily News. Mr. Hales has been for some months in the Balkan regions, and now is on his way to the conflict in the far East. The reporter for the San Francisco Chronicle, who interviewed Mr. Hales says:

It is interesting to know that this close student of the wars of many years believes that out of the Russo-Japanese war will probably grow a war involving nearly the whole of the world. The European part of it, he thinks, is to centre about the trouble in the Balkans, but he looks also for trouble in another quarter of the globe.

I fear that the attitude of England will cause Russia to march upon India, and you can guess what the consequences will be. I do not believe that England was taken by surprise by the Russo-Japanese war, but that she has known it was coming and has been preparing for it. I am certain that the sending of Kitchner, whom I regard as the greatest soldier in the world, to India was for a very different purpose than appeared on the surface.

Macedonia, the buffer ground between Bulgaria and Turkey, was originally a part of Bulgaria. It was taken by the Turks twenty-seven years ago, and there at once commenced those Turkish outrages upon the Macedonians which have kept Bulgaria preparing for twenty-five years to strike a successful blow for Macedonia's freedom. The time for this has come in what must be veritably a death struggle with the Turks. There are more than 1,000,000 Bulgarians, a large number of whom were born in Macedonia and who love it as their own country. Bulgaria has seen the futility of striking while Russia was ready to interfere. With Russia embroiled with Japan, Bulgaria sees its opportunity. In my opinion the fighting which has been going on in the mountains for so many months will give way to a general attack in which the Bulgaria Government, which has winked at the fighting with the Turks, will openly march upon Constantinople in a determined plan to drive the Turks beyond the Bosphorus and out of Europe or to die in the struggle.

The Bulgarians know that this move will allow Russia to take a step which she has long desired to take, but they must concede the point. Within eight hours' steaming from the mouth of the Bosphorus is Borghus, on Bulgaria's Black Sea coast, and beyond that is the point of Varna. Having seized these two ports under the guise that the step was necessary to prevent them falling into Turkey's hands and menacing her own interests, Russia would establish arsenals and be in a position to control the mouth of the Bosphorus, giving her the long desired outlet to the Black Sea. The Bulgarians are only hoping that Russia may find it necessary and possible to get her Black Sea fleet out very soon, in which case the Bulgarians could go after the Turks with less fear that the ports of Borghus and Varna would fall into Russia's hands.

Austria, too, has a prize in sight which she has long wanted. It is the port of Salonica, owning which she would be able to control the trade of the White Sea. But France, and probably Germany, would object to the seizure of Salonica by Austria, and I believe they would interpose. Austria would not heed the warning, and thus, from the trouble in the Balkans, precipitated by the fact that Russia has her hands full with Japan, I see the way clear to several, if not all the European powers becoming involved in war. And aside from the matter of the seizure of Borghus and Varna and Salonica, concerning which Russia and Austria have long had a secret understanding, and the complications which might follow, the European governments would be divided in sympathy and in influence in the struggle between Bulgaria and Turkey.

If the Russian fleet gets out of the Black Sea the Bulgarians will be over the Turkish border as fast as feet can carry them. France wants to help Bulgaria. Russia is deeply in sympathy with Turkey; so is Germany, and next to the Sultan of Turkey the Kaiser is the best hated man in the Balkans.

The Bulgarians have an army of 260,000 trained men. They are schooled under officers who are chosen for their intelligence, their skill and their high character. When a man enters the Bulgarian army he knows that he renounces wine and women, with death as a penalty for forgetting himself. The discipline is the most rigorous among any soldiers of the world. It is a mistaken impression that they are robbers, and immoral. They seek the sympathy of the nations, and they know that they must deserve it if they get it. The Turkish soldiers are in marked contrast. They are lower than beasts in their outrages upon women and children of the Macedonian villages. They are ill clad, ill equipped, half-starved, and their pashas gobble all the pay that ever comes their way. During four months and a half that I fought with the Bulgarians in the mountains the Turks looted villages, committed barbarities upon the defenseless women and children, and slaughtered 36,000 of them.

The Bulgarian and Macedonian soldiers are well equipped with the best improved Mannlicher rifles. The week I left, a new installment of 80,000 of these was distributed. They also carry a sort of pocket bomb filled with dynamite and something else which they use very effectively in the close fighting in the mountains. The bomb was invented for this sort of work by their hero, Colonel Vinkoff.

I should like to see the United States and Great Britan move hand in hand when the crisis comes with Bulgaria and Turkey. The Bulgarian country is rich in agricultural and mineral possibilities, and friendly relations, if not part of the land, are well worth cultivating.

Poetry.

The Long Day.

"The path of the righteous is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." Prov. iv. 18.

Within her sunny porch a grandame sat,
Watching the flickering shadow of the leaves
Upon the path; methought I heard her sigh.
A sobbing breath, repressed, like one who grieves.

"Mother, what troubles you?" I gently said,
"You look so happy in your little home."
Lifting her eyes, she spoke, "My child, I pine
For the Long Day to come."

Her quaint, and words found echo in my heart.
How many of us in the world's wild hum
Find space to sign, as twilight shadows fall,
For the Long Day to come!

And it shall come and bring no weariness,
No pain, or tears, or partings in the home;
The former things shall fade and pass away
When the Long Day shall come.

A Josephite Error Corrected.

I have just received a letter from a brother, in which he says:

Dear Brother Wilson:

Just arrived home from South Bend this morning, and found two copies of O. M. Myers' new paper "The Independent," in the March number of which Myers places you, to use his own language, "under the burden of publishing a falsehood," if you do not bring forth "autograph letters" from your Uncle Benjamin Wilson disclaiming authorship of three letters which he publishes in his paper as coming from your Uncle.

In Dec. 2, 1903, in THE RESTITUTION I affirmed that my Uncle Benjamin Wilson did not write a certain article as a contribution for the magazine in which it appeared, with his name attached at the bottom in large capital letters, which indicates that the aforesaid paper was an original contribution for the magazine in which it was printed. The magazine should have given credit to the paper from which they copied it. That is all I intended to deny. As to whether he wrote it or not I did not know.

A sister in Austin, seeing the aforesaid article in the same magazine, was astonished and wrote to him about it, and received a reply. She told me that he denied ever having written any thing for that magazine. As to what I said I based on that. I now have the letter in my possession. I quote from it as follows:

1005 G. St. Sacramento, Cal.,
Dec. 24, 1899.

My dear sister nieces:

Your good letter and nice Christmas gift have been received, and I cannot do less than thank the givers for their kind remembrance of me. * * * Now a word or two as to what you saw in the Nazarine Messenger. I NEVER WROTE AN ARTICLE for that magazine. * * * The descent of the Spirit upon Jesus was his anointing, and the voice from heaven saying, 'This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased,' was a testimony to all who saw and heard, that God had chosen him to be the Savior of the world, according to promises and covenants he had made with Abraham and David, and the predictions of his holy prophets. How could I deny that God's voice proclaimed Jesus as his beloved Son, when so positively declared at his immersion? * * *

Jesus came in the line of Abraham and David according to the flesh, and therefore was a son of Abraham and of David, but he was the only begotten Son of God of a spiritual nature. * * *

This is all I have to say at present. Love to all my friends.

Yours for the truth.

B. WILSON."

The above are extracts from his autograph letter, and he confirms all that I intended to deny at that time: "I never wrote an article for that magazine." The Josephites have assumed the forgery matter. I never charged it, nor intended to charge it, because I knew nothing about it. The article appearing in the Messenger was a surprise to me, because I had always from childhood up known him to be an inveterate enemy to Josephitism, and when the sister reported to me that he had denied having written the paper for the Messenger, in which I saw it, I published his denial which appears in the extracts of his autograph letter as given above.

Mr. Myers in his reprint of the extract of Dec. 2, 1903, which I wrote for THE RESTITUTION, quotes me as saying: "I want to say that before he died he denied having written the aforesaid paper." That is not right, it should read, "He denied having written FOR the aforesaid paper," or magazine. I think you will find it in THE RESTITUTION "for the aforesaid paper," as that is what I meant, as quoted from my Uncle's autograph letter as given above. The way Mr. Myers has put it, makes me charge forgery which I never did, and do not now.

As to the letters he has given affidavits to, all I have to say is, that I never knew of their existence until I saw them in print. So that I have not, and do not charge any one with being forgerers of letters I did not know existed. Mr. Myers is a little too fast.

Mr. Myers on page 58, of his new paper, charges me with accusing himself and others with "forging and of giving publication to, and of circulating letters purporting to have been written by his Uncle." I could not charge forgery of letters I did not know had any existence.

I have not seen the letters sent to S. D. Fahrney. He never told me that he had the aforesaid letters in his possession.

My Uncle may have given expression to Josephite sentiment before his death, at a period of time when he was not responsible for what he did say. Josephites extracted those sentiments from him in his 84th year which I believe was the last year of his life, when he was sick. See letter on page 56 of Myer's paper to Mr. Robbins, he says: "Yours of March 12th received, but finds me very unwell, and at present incapable of writing anything as I would wish." On the same page in another letter he states his age as being "84."

Hence, these Josephites took advantage of his old age and sickness to extract from him what they did get, and gloat in trumpeting it abroad as his sentiments. If they had approached him when he was younger, and in the full possession of his mental vigor, he would have given them a severe scourging. In true sentiment he was no more a Josephite than he was a follower of the false prophet Dowie. In the weakness of his old age he became a defender of Dowie. This was attributable to the weakness of old age, and so was the expression of Josephite sentiments.

W. H. WILSON.

It is not the desire of the managers of this paper to write or publish personalities, but as an article written by Bro. W. H. Wilson and published in our issue of Dec. 2, 1903, has been laid hold of and garbled to make it say what it does not, it is due to Bro. Wilson to make his defense in the paper his statement appeared in.

Reference is made in the foregoing to what appears in a paper called The Independent, which was published some years ago by O. M. Myers, and after these years is now resurrected for the purpose of having a journal that "will not be bound by any creed, confession, or association whatever." Not even taking the Bible as its rule for faith and practice. The value of a religious publication whose Editor starts out with the above statement, which plainly declares he recognizes no authority "whatever," excluding thereby even the Word of God, will of course be patent to every one.

Now the matter between Bro. Wilson and O. M. Myers has been quite well set forth in the above "Correction," but one little point has been overlooked by Bro. Wilson which we take the liberty to mention. On page 58 of the March number of this above described Independent, is what purports to be a quotation from Bro. Wilson's article as published in our issue of Dec. 2, which can be referred to by any one interested. The quotation is quite lengthy and need not be repeated in full, and we will give but a single sentence as Bro. Wilson wrote it and as we published it: "I want to say that before he (Benjamin Wilson—Ed.) died he denied having written the aforesaid article, for the aforesaid paper." Now this is in strict accord with the statement of Bro. B. Wilson in his letter to his neices as given above. Myers gives it in his paper, page 58, "I want to say that before he died he denied having written the aforesaid paper." Just why Myers should leave out the four words in the quotation as indicated by italics, and so change the meaning of Bro. Wilson's words, we leave the reader to conjecture. To use his own words "The correction and an apology should be made by the Editor in his own paper."

Now, it appears that when 84 years old, during the last few months of his life, Bro. B. Wilson did write favoring this human paternity theory. He also denies to his neices writing for a certain periodical an article favoring the theory.

Again, in the latter part of his life he became a follower of such men as Dowie, Schlatter, etc. that their claims to supernatural, divine power were valid. No one has yet produced any writing of his, made in his vigorous manhood, that in any way sanctions any such ideas.

Question: Does any one wish to charge Bro. B. Wilson with dishonesty in within a few months writing contradictory statements? Picture to yourself an old man, almost ready for the silent grave. A man whose home life had suffered by the loss of those dear to him, left almost the last of his family. Troubled beyond the conception of many. Diseased in body—shall we say in mind as well?

We leave the subject with our readers, knowing full well what their decision will be. If Dowieites or Josephites can get any consolation from this source they are certainly welcome.

At this time, and asking the kind forbearance of our readers, we refer to "A Bit of History" that we gave in our issue of Jan. 6, 1904. It appears that this historical sketch did not suit O. M. Myers, and he states that we have done him "a great injustice," also that "the charge THE RESTITUTION Editor makes in his Jan. 6th issue is false in any and every particular as applied to us, and that he is responsible for this false application, is all we wish to say." Now, we will presume that Myers weighed well his words when writing the above, and his statement is that in "any and every particular" our short history is "false." Let us see about this, and see just who the falsifier is in this matter.

We first stated that the Bible Advocate of Jan. 6, 1903 contained a portrait of Myers and a write up of his life, and that it said he had become a Sabbath keeper, etc. If that is false are we to blame? We have the picture and the printing, and they are public property. Any one may see them.

Our next statement was, that we had a communication dated Sept. 25, 1903, signed by O. M. Myers, in which he says that in Dec. 1902 he placed his membership with the Stanberry, Mo., Church of Sabbath keepers. Is this false? We have the document to prove it, and can submit it to anyone familiar with Myers' handwriting.

We next stated that "our" Church does not hold to this doctrine, referring to the keeping of the 7th day Sabbath. This statement we repeat.

Next we stated that "our" Church never had any organization in Stanberry, Mo. We ask for proof of the falseness of this statement.

Our next statement was that an honest man would not be member of two different churches at the same time. We stand by this statement also till it is proven false.

We next indicated that as Myers had united with this other Church organization, giving him credit for honesty, he must have severed his connection with "our" Church. We are not able to detect anything "false" in this item. Can you?

We then stated that during the past year the Bible Advocate had contained articles and reports from his pen. We have some of the papers, and the office files at Stanberry will be easy to view, and will settle who the falsifier is on this score.

We next said that "to all appearances he has been recognized as one of their number," and we say yet that the indications did "point that way."

Going on we stated that this Church which Myers had joined held a General Conference at Stanberry, and their published report confirms this item.

The next part of our "history" was taken from the report of this conference, and indicated that the name of G. M. Myers was not submitted by the committee for ministerial credentials. That a resolution was introduced saying that some had come in among the body, and were "abusing the confidence imposed in them, by stirring up divisions among the churches, and distrust among the members," and that for this reason credentials be refused them. We stated that no names were given, any one could draw an inference, which might or might not be correct. If any one drew a wrong "inference" are we to blame? When we state ours we will know it is correct.

Then we said that the conference proceedings stated that later "G. M. Myers appeared in the conference and asked that his name be erased from the roll. The request was granted." On page 6 of the Independent Myers says that this is exactly what he did do, and what happened, so how we were "false" in this does not appear.

We are accused with having made false statements. We have given the items of our "Bit of history" and each can judge for himself as to what is truth and what false. However some [illegible] wrong [illegible] we can aid any one in [illegible] is that is doing this, it [illegible] so. For this purpose we will refer to the Independent for February. On page 32 Myers says, "In the late Stanbeury general conference a delegate from Michigan introduced a resolution acting against disturbant and troublesome characters coming among the churches, having direct reference to one Munger of Michigan. Without any information whatever, or any inquiry as to whom reference in the resolution was made, the Editor of THE RESTITUTION takes up this resolution and says it was introduced for, and passed to cover our case." As we have gone through with every item in our history as given in Jan. 6th issue, we leave this with our readers, and turn to page 5 of this same issue of Myers' paper, where he says "During our absence from the Sunday morning session Elder J. R. Goodenough, because we believe in the human paternity of Jesus, and therefore reject Mat. i. 18 to ii. 23—total 32 verses, as never having been written by Matthew, offered a resolution that our name be dropped from the ministerial list. This resolution was sustained by Elder Black, and then discussed in conference, and then voted on, upon which every delegate in conference voted against the motion, save the mover and the second." On page 6 he says further "It is due to say that these two brethren afterward came to us and apologized as to their action toward us."

Now it appears this way "to a man up a tree." A man in Michigan had been acting badly, and his case was settled by refusing to longer recognize him as a good minister. Myers had acted in such a manner that a brother offered a resolution to drop his name, and got a second to his motion. After discussion the motion was put, and only two men in the affirmative, the rest all the negative. Next Myers hears of the affair, and asks that his name be stricken from the roll. The conference report says just four little words—"The request was granted." A very solemn occasion indeed! We have a private letter from one who is eminently qualified to know the facts in the case, which says, "In the next session he requested his name dropped which was granted without a dissenting vote."

Just see what we have here. In Jan. 1903 a man comes into a church organization, his portrait and history is given in their official journal, he is recommended as a "strong advocate" of their doctrine, and "those desiring meetings in their vicinity should make arrangements to have him visit them." In less than one year he is made the subject of discussion in conference with a view to rejection. A vote to turn him out is lost nearly unanimously, showing that he must have had strong and staunch friends in the organization, who stood up manfully for him, and so managed as to give him full "vindication." The next day this man appeared before this same body, his case was so strong that even the small minority who had opposed him, were won over and "apologized" for their action. Yet this man, in order that two men might have "ease, and peace of conscience," says he wishes to withdraw from the conference. A vote is taken—not a voice is heard entreating him to remain with them—a good and valuable, a talented man is going to leave them. No one utters a cry, no one sheds a tear! The ballot is spread and unanimously his request is granted. The chapter is ended.

In the language we used Jan. 6th—"We can only draw an inference, which may or may not be correct."

We wish to apologize to our readers for writing the above. It is a most disagreeable duty, and our only excuse is that it was forced upon us.

Promising to not repeat such again we crave your kind forbearance.—ED.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

Russia's Soldiers.

The New York Press says concerning the war now in progress in the Far East:—

A United States naval officer of high military reputation gave The Press his opinion at the outbreak of the war that the Russian war-ships, guns and torpedoes would be of no value to the Czar, because his people do not "know how to use their tools." Since the Russians have so abundantly confirmed his judgment of their navy—blowing up their own ships on their own mines, firing into their own lines and generally doing more harm to themselves than to the enemy—it will be of interest to see if his views are also well founded as to the Russian army will be proved far inferior to its efficiency of thirty years ago, for the reason that the Russian in the ranks is not a thinking man or capable of independent action. In the old manner of fighting in mass one man was as good as another so long as he had a strong stomach for combat, since he could be directed and controlled by the officer standing near him, even flogged (literally with whips) into quick and soldierly action.

In the fighting line of today, however, the men of the ranks, strung out at great distances, in 'open formation,' taking ranges where the enemy cannot even be seen, and in turn being fired at by those they cannot see and whose position they cannot locate (thanks to smokeless powder) without intelligent deduction, must all be capable of independent action and thoughtful action or they will fail to perform any useful function in a battle. A submittern cannot be near all his men. He cannot give them commands except for general formation and maneuver unless by signal. If a soldier does not find the right range, there is no one to give it to him. If he is firing to the right when his enemy is to the left of him, no one will discover the fact for him. On the firing line today every man who carries a rifle, to be an efficient soldier, must be capable of self-command, his own sub-lieutenant, lieutenant and captain when necessary. And he must know something of the science of war, of which, the American officer declares, the Russian in the ranks, having an extremely low intelligence and absolutely no education (ninety-six per cent. of the Russians cannot read), is totally and densely ignorant.

However brave the Russian is, therefore—and the American officer concedes him the greatest amount of sheer animal courage—he is not expected by military men of the modern school of war to make much better use of his fighting tools on land than on sea. If this opinion should prove to be a fact in the land campaign which is now following the brilliant performances of the Japanese afloat, the Czar, with his hope of military ascendancy utterly crushed, will begin to think, no doubt, of educating his millions on millions of subjects who have never been permitted even to see a printed letter; and in such event the Russian war, terrific defeat though it should be, would come to be a blessing to the Russian people gaining this boon, and to the world.

There are ten things for which no one has ever yet been sorry. These are: For doing good to all; for speaking evil of none; for hearing before judging; for thinking before speaking; for holding an angry tongue; for being kind to the distressed; for asking pardon for all wrongs; for being patient toward everybody; for stopping the ears to a tale-bearer; for disbelieving most of the ill reports.

I feel like saying Amen to the divine program, and I am glad there is an absolute certainty about it. Some people seem to think there is a danger or a chance that God's plan will flash out.—A. C. Johnson.

Married.

Married on March 18, 1904, by the writer, at the home of Bro. Benjamin T. Woods, Mr. Vernon Lansbury and Miss Mary T. Woods, both of Moriah, Ill. Mr. Lansbury is a nice, industrious young man. Sister Mary is a member of the Church of God in Christ Jesus, and she is the president of the Berean class at Moriah. This young couple will move in their home close to the Restitution church at Moriah. We wish them a long happy life and trust that Mr. Lansbury will become obedient to the faith, and that they may live faithful to the vow they have taken. We are glad Sister Mary will still remain in our midst, as she is a good worker in the Sunday school. May the good Lord bless them, is our prayer in Jesus name.

Z. E. BRANT.

We have arranged to supply our readers with a War Atlas, containing maps of the war center adjacent to the Yellow Sea, Japan, Russia, Pacific Ocean, etc. and with statistical tables of useful information, enabling one to understand the situation as the war progresses. The maps are colored, and it is substantially bound. Sent post paid for 25 cents. Send for one and keep posted.

To the Illinois Brethren.

The time has come for us to decide whether we will have a summer Bible school again in connection with our annual conference or not. The enrollment at our school last summer was 28 with an attendance throughout of 21. The brethren are invited to write me. This applies particularly to Bereans, but generally to all. If you have spoken personally to me about it, just act in the matter as if you had not spoken, for I forget so easily. One good sister speaking in appreciation of the school said she knew of two whom she would insist if we had the school this summer, but because I failed at the time to make a note of it, I have forgotten who it was. In replying to this simply say whether you wish to have it or not, and what can be done by way of attendance from your locality. Any replying who were in attendance last summer are also requested to suggest any changes that might prove favorable. If the school is held, a general announcement will be published in a short time. Please write now.

S. J. LINDSAY, Evangelist.

Notice.

To the Brethren in Iowa:

I have decided to take up the Lord's work in Iowa, for several months at least and am ready to respond to all calls for meetings, funerals, weddings, or any other calls pertaining to the work of a minister of the gospel.

Address me at Fort Dodge, Iowa, L Box 86.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres. Iowa Con.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. Woodruff, Elizabeth, N. J.

Susan Harper was born in Fequier Co., Va., July 27, 1825; died at her home at Antioch, Ill., March 9, 1904, aged 78 years, 7 months and 11 days. Was united in marriage to Laban Tilton, Jan. 14, 1841. To this union were born 10 children, 5 boys and 5 girls, 2 died in infancy, 8 remaining, who with an aged father are left to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother. Many years ago she embraced what is known as the Christian or Disciple faith. She believed in the resurrection of the dead and that eternal life will be the reward of a well spent life. It may well be said of her, I was an hungered and ye gave me meat, and was thirsty and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger and ye took me in. No one was turned from her door who needed help. We laid her away in the cemetery at Washington Grove, Ill., to await the call of him who said, I am the resurrection and the life. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer (assisted by Rev. F. McCague pastor of the Christian church at Washington Grove) from 2 Cor. iv. 17, 18.

O. J. Allard.

Maria Antoinette Carr was born at Waterford, Elkhart Co., Ind., Oct. 22, 1846, and died at Inwood, Ind., Mar. 9, 1904. She was married to William Klingerman in 1862. Two children were born to them, of whom one, James Albertus, is living. She became a member of the Church of God at Inwood in 1900, of which she was a faithful and consistent member at the time of her decease. Her death was very sudden, and came almost without warning, being due to a stroke of paralysis. Her moments of consciousness were few, and she lived but a few hours afterward. Thus was life cut short. What a lesson of the uncertainty of life. "It is even a vapor, that appeareth for a little, and then vanisheth away." James iv. 14. We should be each moment ready to lay down life's burden, and at the same time be prepared to live always. The writer spoke words of comfort from 1 Thes. iv. 13-18, at the M. E. Church at Inwood, after which our sister was laid to rest in Oak Hill cemetery at Plymouth to sleep until the trumpet call to glory, honor and incorruption.

A. H. Zilmer.

Little Ethel, infant daughter of Rufus and Ida Overholt, died Thursday, March the 10th, 1904, of bronchitis. Always delicate, the addition of a severe cold was more than her little weak body could endure, and the enemy death claimed another victim, before 8 months had hardly been given of life. We believe the little ones will come again from the "land of the enemy," and tried to comfort the parents and friends with this assurance from God's Word. Funeral services from the home Sunday March 13th, conducted by

M. A. Woodward.

Mary Tuttle Garratt was born in Freetown, Courtland Co., N. Y., Feb. 10, 1838. When a young woman she came to Michigan, and at the age of 23 was married to Ebenezer Garrett of Jamestown, Ottawa Co., Mich., where they made their home until 1883, when they moved to Middleville, Mich., which continued their place of residence until about one year ago, when by reason of her malignant disease they made their home with their daughter in Grand Rapids, where she was most tenderly cared for by loving and solicitous friends. Surrounded by her sorrowing husband and four children, she passed away Mar. 4, 1904. The funeral services were conducted at Grand Rapids by B. W. Woodward of Dutton, and the interment at Mount Hope cemetery, Middleville.

Early in life she embraced the faith, uniting with the church. All her days were spent as a consistent Christian, cheerful dispositioned, industrious, forgiving, patient in her lingering illness, and among her last words an appeal to her Savior in whom she had ever trusted.

The Black Hills.

The Black Hills, in the southwest part of the State of South Dakota, produces one-third of the gold found in the United States, and is said to be the richest one hundred square miles in the world. A new booklet on the Black Hills has been issued by the North-Western Line, with a fine detailed map of this wonderful region. Send four cents in stamps for copy of the booklet. W. B. Kniskern, P. T. M., Chicago, Ill.—Mar. 26.

ANOTHER OFFER.

There is a general waking up among our people everywhere. Our public speakers are all busy, and calls are in excess of their ability to attend them. Many places want preaching at the same time, but must wait their turn. This shows a decided interest, and a desire among our brethren to sound out the Word to the yet unsaved. All seem to realize that the night is far spent, that the time to work is short.

Brothers and Sisters, our work is not well done, and is not ready for acceptance of God, unless we have done all we can—our very utmost. We cannot admit that it is our duty to do anything at all for the advancement of the Master's cause, without conceding it is our duty to do all we can—to make a sacrifice even.

Preachers of other denominations as well as our own, know and say that the best workers in a community are those who take and read their Church paper, and keep informed as to what is being done in the various departments of the work, and are thus interested in pushing along the car of truth.

The Managers of The Restitution are endeavoring to so conduct the paper that it will be a fit aid to the Evangelist in his work. We are trying to keep it clear from that contention that leads to mischief and strife. This is done by having certain well-defined truths which are taught in God's Word plainly, as a basis of belief, and by publishing articles that accord with these declared principles. Other outside subjects might be "investigated" as long as life and pencil and paper lasts, and no decision ever be reached, but we do not consider this a profitable work to engage in, hence do not ask for contributions on such subjects, and do not want them. Such are usually but the "opinion" of a man, and are often based on a mere inference at best.

This paper aims to teach the truth of the Bible, and the same is declared and believed in by our Church. We therefore believe it is a fit missionary to be sent out to the unsaved and lost of the human family. In order to make it possible for our friends to do more of this missionary work than ever before, we make this offer:

Any one sending us $10.00 may select 13 names of those not now subscribers, to whom we will send the paper for the year 1904. This makes a trifle over one-half regular price if taken in lots of $10.00 worth. You and the office practically go halves in scattering the truth of the gospel to your neighbors and friends. You who have money think of this. For $100 you can preach to an audience of 130 people over 200 sermons the coming year. Can you do better with that amount of money? You have a minister come to your neighborhood perhaps once a month, giving you two or may be three discourses each time—possibly 30 a year. When he is coming you invite your neighbors in to hear him. Suppose those neighbors have had The Restitution in their homes each week when the preacher was not there, and have read the articles, and are interested to hear more. Does not this increase largely the chances of the preacher being able to speak the very words that will start your friend on the way to the kingdom? Did you ever think of this matter? Will you not take it under consideration? We feel sure if you do you will not hesitate to go half partner with us in this work.

Who will send $10, $20, $50, $100 for this work? The best time to start it is now. Select your names and send at once, so they will get the rest of this year and all of next.

The North-Western Line Russia-Japan Atlas.

Send ten cents in stamps for Russo-Japanese War Atlas issued by The Chicago & North-Western R'y. Three fine colored maps, each 14x20; bound in convenient form for reference. The Eastern situation shown in detail, with tables showing relative military and naval strength and financial resources of Russia and Japan.

A. H. Waggener, 22 Fifth Avenue, Chicago, Ills.—April 2.

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind.'

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 924 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Rest.

When the weary at heart, and the laden with sin,
Have opened to Jesus the things that have been,
When all is forgiven, for all is confess'd,
In the blood of his cross they're in rest, blessed rest.

When in struggling for right, and in wrestling with wrong,
They have conquered (with many a moment and long,
Oh, then, 'tis a balm by its mother caress'd,
In the bosom of Jesus is rest, blessed rest.

When the home of our childhood is shadow'd and dim,
And the loved ones we cling to are gathered for him,
While we wrestle and weep on his sheltering breast,
Still, still Jesus only is rest, blessed rest.

But the shadows shall pass and the tears shall be dried,
And the light and the love shall forever abide;
Without cloud, without end, inexpressibly blest,
For the people of God there remaineth a rest.

The Pilot of Galilee.

"What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him" Matt. viii: 27.

In all ages of the world, there have been those who, by some means, possessed powers more than ordinary, performing things, seemingly, almost superhuman. If in the way of healing, like some in our day, who, by their strong magnetic powers, could perform cures that, because not understanding them fully and correctly, would seem almost divine, or like Simon Magus, Acts viii: 9 10-11. Who by his sorcery deceived the people of Samaria in so much that they considered him to possess the great power of God. Or the damsel, Acts xvi: 16, who possessed with a spirit of divination, brought her masters much gain by soothsaying.—Or the witch of Endor, 1 Sam. xxviii: 7,—or enchanter, or charmer, or consultor with familiar spirits, Deut. xviii: 10-11. But never before nor since, was there one like "Jesus of Nazareth" who possessed such unlimited superhuman power, that by word of command, the elements would obey him.—He is sleeping in the ship, the tempest rages so that His Disciples and the crew think they are going to perish in the storm, he is awakened and by word of command the raging wind ceases and the sea is calmed, which produces the exclamation of our text; "What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him."

Never was there one who could walk upon the water as upon terra firma. Matt. xiv: 25. Never one who could, without deception transform pure water into wine so completely that the Governor of the feast would pronounce it superior, John ii: 1-11. Never a healer who by a touch or a word could give sight to one who was blind from birth, John ix: 1-7. Or cause the lame to walk and leap who was a cripple from birth, Acts iii: 2. Never was one so possessed with magnetism that to even touch the hem of his garment in faith, one of years of suffering was healed. Mark v: 25. Never one who at word of command the evil spirits would obey, and demoniacs be restored to their right minds. Matt. i: 23. "And they were all amazed, in so much that they questioned among themselves, saying, what thing is this? What new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth he even the unclean spirits and they do obey him. Matt. i: 27. Never before was there one who could restore to life one who had gone into the death state. John xi: 38, Lu. vii: 11. Truly might they exclaim, "what manner of man is this."

Methinks that even in our day, with all its boasted scientists and deceptive spiritualists, and all that, should one appear in our midst who could by word of command cause the storm to cease and the sea to calm, we too would exclaim "what manner of man is this."

Should one appear today who could stay the hearse in the street and by a touch or a word restore the corpse to life, or stand at the open tomb and call one to life who had been dead so long that decomposition had taken place, we would certainly inquire with much anxiety, "what manner of man is this."

These miracles of healing and of resurrection power were not performed in darkened rooms, or veiled in any way; but were done in open day, unannounced and often in large assemblages; no effort at concealment, nor regards for the displeasure of those who were seeking to entrap him, but openly and always on the side of law, justice and mercy.

We have sometimes wished that more was recorded of the early life of Jesus, as to manner, habits and customs of his childhood and boyhood life, as compared to others of like age, of his educational training, etc. but sufficient is recorded to show that he possessed superior mental ability and knowledge, to even at the age of 12 years, confound and confuse learned men. Luke ii: 42. We have it also stated that, "The child grew and waxed strong in spirit, filled with wisdom and the grace of God was upon him, Lu. ii. 40. Also 52nd verse says, "And Jesus increased in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man." "And the child grew and waxed strong in spirit and was in the desert till the day of his showing unto Israel." Lu. i: 80.

The fact that so much has been recorded of the power, and goodness, wisdom and love of Jesus, the "Life giver," in his ministerial life, increases our faith and enables us to have more implicit confidence and reliance in him.

We feel that we have a "more sure foundation." We are so apt to lack in faith if our promises are from human source, but when the promise comes from the "All wise Father" through his beloved Son "who has partaken of the nature, and bore our griefs and sorrows" Isaiah liii: Matt. viii: 17, Heb. ix: 28, has come in such close touch with us, we can the better appreciate and realize and feel that his promises can and will be truly and literaly fulfilled. Not but that we have all faith and confidence in the power and goodness and will of the "all wise, all powerful and all loving Father," for it is from him that all wisdom, and love and power eminates. He is the source from whom Jesus himself received power. "This commandment have I received of my Father." John x: 18.

In his model prayer, Jesus attributes all power to his Father in Heaven. Matt. vi: 13. But the fact that he has "partaken of our natures" "was made flesh and dwelt among us" John i: 14. "Has borne our griefs and carried our sorrows" Isaiah liii: 4, "was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." Heb. iv: 16. Suffered the ignominious death of the Cross, was triumphantly raised from the dead, demonstrates the fact of his literal resurrection by infallible proofs. Walked and talked and ate with his Disciples after his resurrection and finally ascended to Heaven, the same real, literal, risen, Savior, but not before he had left some previous promises, among which was the one by the angels at His ascension, that in the same manner, as really, and literally return and receive to himself all his faithful ones, 1 Thess. iv: 16-17. These facts enable us to grasp his promises with implicit confidence.

Looking back then through the nineteen centuries, and reviewing his great life work on earth, his ministry, his suffering, his humiliation, his death and resurrection, his exaltation and revelation, we do not wonder that those who witnessed those miraculous things would look amazed and exclaim, "what manner of man is this."

And when he was come into his own country, he taught them in their synagogue, insomuch that they were astonished, and said, Whence hath this man this wisdom, and these mighty works? Is not this the carpenter's son? is not his mother called Mary? and his brethren, James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas? And his sisters, are they not all with us? Whence then has this man all these things? And they were offended in him. But Jesus said unto them, A prophet is not without honour, save in his own country, and in his own house. And he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief. Matt. xiii: 54-58.

The name Palestine is held sacred, because, first it is the land promised as an everlasting possession to God's chosen people, but secondly, and more particularly is it revered by the Christian world, because it was the theater of the earthly life of Jesus. The name Jerusalem sounds dear to every lover of Christ, because around and in it cluster so many of his mighty works, and where he suffered his humiliation and experienced his glorification. Galilee, sweet Galilee, how endearing and soul inspiring the name, because its shores have known the footprints of the Son of God, because on its placid waters walked the blessed Redeemer, because its turbulent waves have been quieted by the command of "The Pilot of Galilee."

Paul's Last Days and Last Words.—No. 1

The golden text—"I am now ready to be offered and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a (the R. V.) good fight, I have finished my course; I have kept the faith: hencefourth there is laid up for me a (the R. V.) crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day. and not to me only but unto all them also that love his appearing" vs. 6, 7, 8. These words, or their equivalent, no doubt, were embraced in the apostle's defense before Nero, and his hope of reward at the appearing of the righteous judge, as here set forth under the figure of bestowing a crown, was a part of the gospel which he proclaimed to the assembled Gentiles, and to all in that vast auditorium. And as, before Felix and Agrippa before, he reasoned of righteousness temperance and the judgment to come. The adulterous and debased Nero heard the message. heard the words, in the light of which his own foul character must have appeared all the more hideous to those of the Romans who were previously shocked by his vices.

The second stage of the apostle's trial will come off soon, and he has every reason to believe that Nero's sentence will be against him, that death will be his certain doom. Now that his work is done he retrospects his life in the ministry and resigns himself to the inevitable fate. He is ready to be offered— to die as a witness to the truth. "My departure" cannot be construed to mean going to heaven at the moment of his execution. He cherished no such hopes. His hope was the coming of the Lord and the resurrection of the dead; the one hope of the gospel, as he taught in all his epistles; ardently entertaining it himself, and urging it upon the church of his own time, and ours.

One commentator to illustrate analusis the Greek word in this place, translated departure, by reference to a ship loosing from one port and sailing away to another: so Paul's immortal soul soared away to heaven when he was beheaded. Conybeare and Howson say that "the sword of the headsman ended his long course of suffering, and released that heroic soul from that feeble body." But did Paul mean by analusis any thing other than death or dissolution of his mortal self? Surely not. In the nature of things he could not hope to be exempted from the common doom of the race—literal death, which he affirmed in the fifth chapter of his Roman letter "passed upon all men" in consequence of Adam's sin.

This would consign him to dust as it did our first parents. This is plain Scripture doctrine frequently repeated. Dying and returning to dust is most emphatically analusis or analysis. A fact that cannot be denied. It is only in the light of the literal death of man as a unit being that the resurrection can be of any consequence. It is this view of death, that alone can account for the stress this same apostle puts upon the rising again from the dead—making future life, and being, and reward, depend absolutely upon it. If no resurrection then nothing to be hoped for, and death ends all. Such is the apostle's conclusion when he says: "Let us eat and drink for tomorrow we die."

The commonly held opinion touching the meaning of the term "departure" in this connection is not borne out by what Paul says in reference to the crown of righteousness; and in addition to this his complete silence as to anything in the shape of reward falling due to him at the date of his death; the very hope that would have, naturally, found expression here in plain terms, had he held the common view, facing death as he was. He dropped not a hint of leaving "this clay tenement and going to heaven" the sentiment that almost universally escapes the lips of the dying in some form of words too plain to be misunderstood. The officiating minister too puts the hope of the saintly dead in language a child can understand; and friends of the deceased inscribe in epitaph on the monument that marks the spot of sepulture, the same sentiment in words that all can read. It must be that Paul was not spoiled by the Platonic philosophy. More than once this week, in papers falling into my hands, I have found in connection with notice of death—"He has gone to his reward," and similiar expressions. Paul, who knew well the history of man's creation, the penalty threatened and executed, and the barring of access to the tree of life, could not possibly have held the view of man's nature that is held today. The notion that death as a process separates man into two men; or three men; or separates the soul as the proper person from the body regarded simply as a house was no part of Paul's system of truth. From his standpoint he looked beyond the intermediate state [illegible] coming of the Lord for his crown.

"I have striven a good strife." The Greek is not restricted to a fight but includes any competitive contest. In this passage the apostle employs a figure drawn from the national games of the Greeks. His was a contest very different from that of the Grecian athletes, and the reward infinitely more than empty honors and a garland of leaves, the reward of the successful competitor in the games. In 1 Cor. ix: 24-26, he alludes to these games in a way to point a lesson: "Know you not that they which run in a race, all run, but one receiveth the prize; even so run that ye may obtain." And every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown, but we an incorruptible" How trifling as to real worth were the crowns awarded in these contests, and yet, these youthful Greeks were temperate in all things, and put themselves under severe discipline; living up to the strictest rules; so the Christian, who is striving for an incorruptible crown should be temperate in all things; committing no excesses nor debauches; having the appetites and passions under control. Paul in applying the rule to himself say, "I keep under my body and bring it into subjection last by any means after I have preached to others, I myself should be rejected." v 27

In these games many would run or compete but one would receive the prize: in the Christian race and contest all those whose conduct is in harmony with the law of the Spirit will receive a crown. The apostle exborts his Corinthian brethren to so run that they might obtain, and in his last words he includes others with himself as entitled to a crown, even all who love the appearing of the Lord. Paul's contest was no light affair: no child's play. The reader is relered to 2 Cor. ii chapter as presenting the character of the contest from which the apostle came off victor, winning the crown of righteousness to be bestowed at the coming of the Lord. I will omit any remarks that might be made on the "finished course," and thd "kept or guarded faith," and close this paper with a few thoughts on v 8—"Henceforth there is laid up for mea crown of righteousness which the Lord the righteousness judge, shall give me at that day." The crown to which Paul was entitled was laid up from the termination of his life, to await the day of coronation. "That day," is not the day of death but the day of the Lord's epiphany spoken of in v 1 as the day of judgment and the inauguration of his kingdom. Peter speaking of the crown says, "When the chief Shepherd shall appear, ye shall receive the (ii V.) crown of glory, that fadeth not away." 1 Pet. v: 4. With death confronting him the apostle cherishes the hope that had sustained and comforted him in all his painful experiences.

JOHN L. WIRE.

Report of Evangelist Work.

In answer to an invitation from the Church of God at Brush Creek, Miami Co., Ohio, my wife and I arrived at Kessler, Sunday morning. Owing to change of time of train, we could not get beyond Springfield Saturday night. We were met by our young Sister Clara Knife, and taken to the home of Bro. and Sister Geo. Knife. After greetings Sister Clara took us to the meeting house at Brush Creek, where we were warmly welcomed by the household of faith. I spoke briefly to the Church, after breaking bread in memory of our Lord who gave himself for us, and some encouraging words from Bros. Curtis and Lehman we were dismissed and taken by Bro. and Sister Lehman to their home, where we had the company of Sister Emma Neisley of Pleasant Hill, also met her brother and wife and others. We all spent the afternoon in much instructive conversation regarding things present and to come, pertaining to the gospel. We returned to the meeting house at 7:30 where we found a good audience.

On this point I may sum up by stating that the attendance was good at all meetings, and with very few exceptions, the attention was close and [illegible] We held meetings every night for two weeks, my wife doing half of the work. Here was much good seed sown, but,—What will the harvest be? Much as we enjoyed labouring—and we did labour to preach the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ.—Our chief enjoyment was in the home conversations, where we freely, and almost continuously, discussed heartfelt desires for a higher standard of every day life, for the daily working out of the nobler and sincere impulses gendered by the fine things of the glorious gospel, a deeper spirituality. We especially discussed, encouraged, and exhorted to the unwavering observance of our Lord's command," Not to forsake the assembling together" at least every first day, when at all possible. A careless observance of this—the one thing that all can do, under ordinary circumstances,—leads to more and more error.

We enjoyed these refreshing and upbuilding social talks, on various topics—more than we could in a public address,—at the homes of many of the brothers and sisters, with whom we had earnest talks on subjects of much importance to them, and hope that all concerned may be much benefited, even as we were. We also paid special visits to Sister Lehman—Mother of Bro. John Lehman—and found that to our old Sister, the promises of God through his son Jesus Christ were ever new, and to Sister Neisley, at Pleasant Hill, where we found a very interesting family, doing as the Bereans did, and our prayer is, that they may find, and believe, and obey the gospel of the Kingdom, and know the living and true God and Jesus Christ.

My wife went home Thursday Feb. 18th. I continued the meetings until Sunday morning, Feb. 21. After addressing the brethern, and partaking of the bread, and drinking of the cup in memory of him who shed his precious blood for us, who died and rose again. I bade those of like precious faith good by, with many affectionate exchanges of prayerful good wishes for present and eternal welfare, for future meeting here or in the Kingdom.

After dinner with Bro. Henry Knife and family, Bro. Estu Macy again took me to the Union School House, Piqua district, where I came under the kind care of Bro. and Sister Westfall. We held meetings there for a week. Weather and general circumstances were not quite favourable, had small to fair attendance, but we could not have wished for better attention, and some seemed much surprised with the words of truth. Several gave hearty invitations to visit at their homes. I responded to as many as time would permit, and with Bro. and Sister Westfall received a warm welcome, proving two things, namely, that the word of God to salvation, according to the gospel of the Kingdom, which I shunned not to declare.—was not offensive to them, and that Bro. and Sister Westfall,—though living according to the gospel—were esteemed by their neighbors.

At these meetings we had the pleasure of the company of sister Eidemiller and husband, and the agreeable company, and good help of Bro. Howard Pearson in playing the organ and singing, in which the young people of the audience heartily joined and added interest to the meetings.

Monday morning, Feb. 29 Bro. and Sister Westfall conveyed me to Piqua Station where we kindly and reluctantly said good by. By train I went to Bellefontaine, Logan Co., where I met Bro. and sister John Venable, brother of Sister Baxer of Salem Ohio. I had scarcely sat down in comfort before we were earnestly speaking of the coming and Kingdom of our Lord. Next day took me to see Sister Leidigh and found she also was rejoicing in hope of the glory of God.

Meetings had not been arranged there, but may be later. Wednesday morning, March 2, took me to Bro. Walter Bates near North Lewisburg. We were welcomed by Bro. Bales, and found a quiet kindly family, Bros. Frank and Walter Bales Jr. and Sister Jennie Bales, Bro. Venable returned home. We held meetings in the School House where we had almost the same conditions as at Union School. Held meetings from Wednesday to Sunday evening, [illegible] 15 days. The faithful [illegible] married to Bro. Geor[illegible] Miller died a year ago [illegible] daughter—Sister [illegible] for two weeks, and now [illegible] comes. I had much interesting and edifying talk with Bro. Walter Bates Sr. whom I found well informed and sound in the faith. A live church for public worship, and proclamation of the simple gospel could be formed here. Scarcely willing to part we said good by. Bro. Wm. Bates took me to N. Lewisburg where I stayed over night with Bro. and Sister Frank Bales, when we again had the company of Bros. Walter and Wm. Bales, and more of that cheering conversation of things to come, which God, who cannot lie has promised through Jesus Christ our Lord.

After dinner Bro. Frank Bales accompanied me to the station, and I was soon journeying swiftly to Springfield, where I had no trouble in finding Bro. and Sister Kauffman, and was heartily welcomed, I found them in love with God, his Son and the truth. It was my intention to stay a day or two and visit the brethren at their homes, but unusual circumstances upset my programme, and also spoiled a meeting on Wednesday night, at Bro. Kauffman's. I then decided to stay over Sunday, when I met nearly all the faithful in Springfield, at the little hall in Johnson's Building. The church here seems to be fully alive to the important fact, that "the coming of the Lord draweth nigh." They meet every Sunday, and break bread, which is acceptable to God. Bro. Howell is the speaker, and I was told speaks well. I did not hear him, but had the pleasure of his company at Bro. Kauffman's, Sunday evening.

There are many I met that I would like to mention by name and tell of their kindness of heart, and their pleasure in the rich and precious promises, but I think enough of detail is given to be a fair report of evangelist work for five weeks. I arrived home Monday morning, March 14, found all family well, and considerable interest in the gospel among several of our neighbors.

Now in conclusion, to the Church of God in Ohio, brethern kindly hear me. As State Evangelist I should have more work than I can do, but I have not. Let me pray you to meet every first day, give the Lord's portion freely, that I may be enabled to go to a town or city where there are no faithful, and hire a hall or other place suitable, and advertise, doing all well, yet economically, so that our light, the light of the Church of the living God, may shine among men, this work I know the Church can do. Brethren, beloved let us do it.

P. NEILL.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward us our works are.

Any one will confer a favor who can supply the address of D. J. Woodard, lately of Bayhill, Fla.

We give most of our space to our correspondents this issue. Others will follow as fast as possible.

From Sister Adams we learn that Brother J. B. Adams, of Hamburg, Iowa, died on March 9, 1904. We have no further particulars at hand, but hope to have for another issue. Sister Adams is now with her son at 6445 Jefferson ave, Chicago, Ill., and as she is 80 years old would be glad if some of the friends could call on her at above address. We trust some will do so soon.

The war in the far east has supplied no startling news since our last issue. There have been a few skirmishes as the Japanese have advanced toward the Yalu, and have met Russian outposts, who have retreated to where it is supposed larger forces are assembled. The armies must be only a few miles apart now, and there should be heavy fighting soon. From Tokio [illegible] that the forces [illegible] is not [illegible] dates that fighting is looked for soon.

The Bereans Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

"Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life." John v. 39.

When this was spoken not a word of the New Testament had been written. It was to the Old Testament that the Jews looked as their guide to eternal life, and although they would not accept Christ, he said that their very books, which they esteemed so highly, testified of him. If the Old Testament points to Christ, it is worthy of our careful study. "And the Scripture foreseeing that God would justify the heathen through faith, preached before the gospel unto Abraham, saying, In thee shall all nations be blessed." Gal. iii. 8. "Your father Abraham rejoiced to see my day; and he saw it and was glad." John viii. 50. "For unto us was the gospel preached, as well as unto them; but the Word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it." Heb. iv. 2.

The persons here referred to by them are the Israelites when on their journey from Egypt to the promised land, as will be seen by the Scripture connection. Paul says, "The gospel was preached unto us as well as unto them," putting them ahead and letting us have gospel afterward. Esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt. Even people in our age esteem satan's lie above the riches of Christ. We Bereans should be like those in Berea. "These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the Word with all readiness of mind, and searched the Scriptures daily, whether those things were so" Acts xvii. 11. "Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every Word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God." If we are to live by the Word of God, we certainly ought to use it daily, as daily nourishment is needed to keep us alive. "So I will worship toward the holy temple and praise thy name for thy loving kindness and for thy truth; for thou hast magnified thy Word above all thy name." We ought then to treat the Word of God with the profoundest reverence, and search its pages daily, that we may continually learn more of God.

"SEARCH THE SCRIPTURES."

Dear Bereans:

"Search the Scriptures; for in them ye think ye have eternal life; and they are they which testify of me." These Scriptures testify of Christ and are his commandments, and if we wish to do his commandments and learn of our eternal life we should search and obey the Scriptures, and to study them we must know what they are. The Scriptures are sacred writings and when we know them we know the power of them. "And that from a child thou hast known the Holy Scriptures which are able to make thee wise unto salvation, through faith which is in Christ Jesus." 2 Tim. iii. 15.

We know they are able to make us wise if we search and obey them. We also know the origin of the Scriptures. "All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness," and when we search the Scriptures and know Christ's commandments and know what the Scriptures are, their power and origin, then we should not be perverted. "For I testify unto every man that heareth the words of the prophecy of this book, if any man shall add unto these things, God shall add unto him the plagues that are written in this book, and if any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life, and out of the holy city, and from the things which are written in this book." Rev. xxii. 18. "He which testifieth these things saith Surely I come quickly. Amen, even so come, Lord Jesus."

"The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all. Amen."

THE CHRISTIAN ARMOR.

To be a soldier for God we must have the weapons he has prepared for us, which is the Word of God. See 2 Cor. x. 3-5. "For though we walk in the flesh, we do not war in the flesh; for the weapons of our warfare are not carnal, but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds. Casting down imaginations, and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ." 1 John v. 4. "For what is born of God overcometh the world; and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith." In order to overcome and gain the victory we must have faith. We must also have the shield of faith. Eph. vi. 16. "Above all taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked." We should also have on the breastplate of righteousness. Eph. vi. 14. "Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breastplate of righteousness." We must girt ourselves with the girdle of truth; for God's Word is truth. John xvii. 17. "Sanctify them through thy truth; thy Word is truth." For an helmet we have the hope of salvation. 1 Thess. v. 8. "But let us who are of the day, be sober, putting on the breastplate of faith and love and for an helmet the hope of salvation." We have for the sword the Word of God. Eph. vi. 17. "And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit which is the Word of God."

Yours in the blessed hope.

THE RESURRECTION.

I think that the most important topic of the Bible is the resurrection of Christ, because it points to something beyond this life, and Paul says, "If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable, but now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept. For as in Adam all die even so in Christ shall all be made alive."

In Gen. iii. 24, we find that in God's plan, when man disobeyed and he said man should die, he still withheld the tree of life that in some future time men might partake of it and receive eternal life. But in Heb. x. 20, we find that a new way has been prepared for us to inherit this gift, that is by Christ, a death and resurrection. We know there must be a resurrection or God's promise to Abraham can never be fulfilled. Paul gives other proofs. In Acts xxiv. 15, he tells us that he had hope toward God that there would be a resurrection of the just and the unjust. 1 Cor. xv. 13. But if there be no resurrection of the dead then is Christ not risen. 1 Cor. xv. 20. Else what shall they do which are baptized for the dead if the dead rise not at all? why are they then baptized for the dead? John vi. 47. Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that believeth on me hath everlasting life. John vi. 51. I am the living bread which came down from heaven; if any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever. The resurrection was foretold by the prophets. David says, My flesh also shall rest in hope, for thou will not leave my soul in hell, neither will thou suffer thine holy one to see corruption. Dan. xii. 2, says, And many of them that sleep in the dust shall awake, some to everlasting life and some to shame and everlasting contempt. Isa. xxv. 19, Thy dead men shall live, together with my dead body shall they arise. Awake and sing ye that dwell in the dust; for thy dew is as the dew of herbs, and the earth shall cast out the dead. A resurrection of the dead was made necessary because Paul tells us in 1 Corinthians that if we are not raised from the dead, we are false witnesses of God; because we have testified of God that he raised up Christ, whom he raised not up, if so be that the dead rise not.

Was Christ raised from the dead? Yes. Paul tells us he was seen by his apostles forty days, and spoke to them of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God. Acts ii. 32. Rom. vi. 11, But if the spirit of him who raised up Jesus from the dead dwell in you, he that raised up Christ from the dead shall also quicken your mortal bodies by his spirit that dwelleth in you.

This shows that God raised Christ from the dead, and that he will also raise us. Let us strive to be raised in the likeness of Christ. Paul tells us in Rom. vi. 4, 5, how we may obtain this.

Table Talk.

I have chosen for my subject, Love.

In looking over the attributes of the Christian character, I believe with Paul that Love is the greatest, just let us read 1 Cor. xiii: and we will readily see that without Love we are nothing. Paul says in the 1st verse "though I speak with the tongues of men and of angels, and have not love I am become as sounding brass or a tinkling cymbal." Again in the 2nd verse he says "though I have all faith so that I could remove mountains, and have not Love I am nothing." So on all through the chapter down to the last verse, where he seems to put the climax to his words, for he says "and now abideth faith, hope, love; but the greatest of these is Love."

I had an idea at one time that if I had faith in God the rest would be comparatively easy, and I still retain it in a measure; but I now feel that love is the greatest. Why should it not be? Is it not cause and effect; faith the beginning and love the end.

Brothers and Sisters, did you ever try to analyze this little word of four letters. I have been trying to do so: but I found that Paul had done it for us over 1800 years ago. Let us just see what he makes of it. First is—

Patience—"Love suffereth long."
Kindness—"is kind."
Humility—Love vaunteth not itself is not puffed up."
Courtesy—"Doth not behave itself unseemingly."
Unselfishness—"Seeketh not her own."
Good temper—"Is not easily provoked."
Guilelessness—"Thinketh no evil."
Sincerity—"rejoiceth not in iniquity; but rejoices in the truth."

We have then 9 of the most important of the Christian graces, and all growing out of that little word "Love." Is it any wonder then that Paul calls it the greatest thing in the world? Is it not the stature of the perfect man in Christ Jesus? And please, brothers and sisters, bear in mind that these 9 virtues pertain to our daily walk.

How much need we have to practice patience; to be calm, not in a hurry, ready to do our work when the summons comes; meantime wearing the ornament of a meek and quiet spirit.

Then comes kindness. I think patience is Love passive, and I like to think of kindness as Love active. Have you ever noticed, which of course you have, how much of Christ life was spent in merely doing kind things. Some one has said and truly; "The greatest thing a man can do for his Heavenly Father is to be kind to some of his other children. I often wonder why we are not kinder than we are. How much the world needs it? And if we are sealed servants of God Rev. 7-3 how incumbent upon us to let the world know it.

I will not stop to dwell on each of these Christian Graces; but I must not pass courtesy by. Love cannot behave itself unseemly. You may put the most untutored person in the highest society and if they have a reservoir of Love in their heart they will not behave themselves unseemly, they simply cannot do it. Carlysle said of Robert Burns that there was no truer Gentleman in Europe than the Ploughman Poet. It was because he loved everything—the mouse, the daisy, and all the things great and small that God had made. So with this simple passport he could mingle with any society, and enter courts and palaces from his little cottage on the banks of the Ayr.

Another one of those God given qualities is Good-temper, "Love is not easily provoked," I think if the time ever comes when I can I am not easily provoked I will feel ever so much nearer to the kingdom of God and his righteousness. The peculiar thing about good-temper is that we accept to look on it as a kind of harmless sin: but in reading the story of the prodigal son I could not help wondering which of two brothers was the worst. Of course every one is ready to say the prodigal was; but it is a question with me, whether the older brother's exhibition of bad temper was not of the two evils the worst. I seem to see him standing outside his father's door (for we are told that he was angry and would not go in) with a sullen and sulking countenance. I can imagine the effect on the father, the guests and last of all on the returned prodigal. Oh dear brothers and sisters let us see to it that we who are in the ark of safety keep a bright countenance and a brighter smile for the prodigals who are on the outside. Let practice our life work, which is to Love. Love every one, even our enemies. Let us try and fit all these things into our character. The world needs such characters, for life is not a playground; but a school and sin is the task master; let us then put on Love and say we love, because He first loved us.

Obituary.

William Swingley was born March 20, 1833, and died March 26, 1904, aged 71 years, 6 days.

His early life was spent in Washington Co., Md., from which locality he moved to Illinois in 1845. Here he remained with his father on the farm until he was 18 years of age, after which he spent 3 years learning the carpenter's trade.

Being skillful in the treatment of disease among horses, and being a lover of good horses, he early began to give his whole time and attention to veterinary surgery, which he followed as a business until within the last half dozen years, when failing health compelled him to retire from active business life. He was united in marriage with Mary E. Wagner, Dec. 8, 1853. To this union three children were born—Oscar W., Benjamin F., and Jacob G.—the last two named, together with their aged mother, surviving. He was laid away to his rest in the family cemetery at Silver Creek to await the judgment of that great day.

The Morning Prayer.

There is a freshness about the early morning which belongs to no other period of the day. The sun has a more kindly brightness and the air a fresh crispness which are lost largely as the day grows older. Upon awaking we throw open the window and let in the buoyant atmosphere of the new-born day. It fills our lungs, and brightens our eye, and makes us feel how good it is to live.

What the new-born day is to our physical nature, the morning prayer is to the life of the soul. It is opening the windows of the heart that the clear air of heaven may flow in. It re-invigorates the life within us, and turns our thoughts towards the One we love the most. It is a source of renewed strength, and gives a buoyancy to the spiritual step, and a clearness to the inner vision.

We could not live without the morning prayer. By it we take up again our proper position to eternal things. As the morning reminds us that we are members of a new home, holding relationship to its inmates, and duties toward those whom we love, so our morning prayer reminds us that we are members of God's family. We say "Our Father," and by so naming him proclaim our relationship we sustain to him. The morning prayer puts us in the right place, opening our eyes to the clear shining of his countenance upon us.

The morning prayer fits us for the duties of the day. As members of the home to which we belong, we look over such of the day's work as we can see. We arrange the order in which we will do certain things. Suggestions are made by loved ones, and before we leave the roof we call "home," our minds are prepared for the duties, and our hearts are fortified with a fund of love for their doing. At the morning prayer we tell our Father of our plans for the day, of the duties which devolve upon us, and of the contingencies which may arise in matters concerning which we have some doubt. In that subtle spiritual way so well known to the children of God, our Father suggests to us the way in which we should go, and we rise from our knee with our hearts flooded with the assurance that we are girt about with his love, and that wherever we be or whatever we do his thought and love will follow us. The fragrance of the morning prayer lingers with us throughout the day. A man cannot free himself from the farewell kiss of his wife and little one throughout his day of toil; they urge him to his best endeavor; in the moment of peril they close him in like a guardian angel. In like manner the fragrant protection of God's morning kiss upon the soul lingers with and fortifies it for its duties, be they ever so varied and exacting. His blessing rests upon us from our morning prayer, and quickens our homeward footsteps when the day is done, for we hunger for his immediate presence again.

British Interest in Macedonia.

There has been considerable agitation in Great Britain during the past few months in regard to the government's attitude toward the Macedonian revolution. Numerous public meetings have been held, and not a few of the notables of the empire, and especially of the church, have put up a strong plea for the oppressed Macedonians, and at the same time have severely criticized the government for its attitude of indifference.

Four leading bishops of the Church of England, in recent letters to the Times, virtually charge England with responsibility for the present practical handing of the people of Macedonia back into a worse condition than that which they formerly endured. This must be an unpleasant charge for British readers to ponder. The Bishop of Worcester went so far as to express his preference to see Russia in control at Constantinople, rather than that Armenia and the Balkan States should longer suffer the oppression and cruelty so long inflicted by the Turks.

This is probably radical ground for an honorable British subject, but it touches the vital point of the whole problem. In the light of nineteenth century history it must be conceded that the Turk is in Europe to-day because of England's protection. There have been several storm periods of treasured-up wrath which, to all appearance, would have dismembered the Turkish Empire, but in each instance England was on the ground to checkmate Russia, and the Turk was retained and Russia was held back.

It must be the verdict of unbiased students of history and of international politics, that so far as it is desirable and conducive to world-interests to check Russian ambition, Great Britain, more than any other nation, deserves the credit for its accomplishment. And so far as national backing and support is responsible for the present integrity of the Turkish Empire in Europe, and, indirectly, for the long chapter of horrors which have grown out of its later reign of fire and blood, the British government, more than all others, must face the responsibility.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

A Begger.

"A beggar! a beggar!" shouted half a dozen boys, as the best form of an old man, tottered toward them. He was a sad sight. His clothes were in tatters, his hat had lost its crown, and his poor feet were bare. "Please give me a few pennies to buy my dinner with," he said, holding out his trembling hand.

Dick Jones, who sat on the fence puffing a cigar, answered, "It's a shame to see a man begging. I never give to such. It's money thrown away. What brought you down so low, old man?"

Ah! Dick had asked the right question—a question that carried the beggar back to boyhood; and gathering courage and strength from the remembrance of his young life, he told a simple but true story:

"What brought me here? Yes, what did? I'll tell you just what will bring you, young man, where I am—idleness and the stump of a cigar, picked up after some great man. These made a beggar of an innocent boy. You won't believe me. None of the boys do. My parents were rich. They loved me, and said their boy should never work as his father had. They let me run in the streets; they waited on me; they gave me a horse and a dog and money. I saw ministers and congressmen smoking and chewing. I thought if these great men did it, surely boys might; and once when I was sick the doctor said, 'Tobacco won't hurt him.' I learned to love tobacco. That called for something stronger. I took wine and beer because smart men did. I got little jobs here and there, about theaters, saloons and taverns. Then I learned to drink whisky; and you know the rest. I'm old and poor and despised now. What brought me here did you ask? Idleness, tobacco, and whisky. Throw away that cigar, boy—throw it away. I've been over the road, I know."

Dick didn't believe the old man, and so he loafed, and puffed, and drank, and went over the same road at last. Poor Dick!

We have arranged to supply our readers with a War Atlas, containing maps of the war center adjacent to the Yellow Sea, Japan, Russia, Pacific Ocean, etc. and with statistical tables of useful information, enabling one to understand the situation as the war progresses. The April "Cosmopolitan" is strong in its distinguishing features—illustrated articles of timely interest and entertaining fiction. In the leading article, John Brisben Walker, the editor, discusses that question of momentous importance importance, "If Europe Should Go to War." Mr. Walker has analyzed the present unstable condition of European politics with searching thoroughness, and his conclusions are full of unusual and startling possibilities. Broughton Brandenburg contributes a beautifully illustrated descriptive article on Gibraltar and the life to be encountered there, under the title of "The Keeper of the Eastern Gate." The Russo-Japanese difficulties are not forgotten. Edwin Wildman, former United States consul at Hong Kong, describes "The Court of a Twentieth Century Mikado," and there is also a series of illustrations of Russian army types.

The Old Earth.

Old Mother Earth is wan and pale,
Her face is wrinkled sore;
Her locks are blanched, her heart is cold,
Her garments stiff with gore;
With furrowed brow and dim sad eyes,
With trembling steps and slow,
She marks the course that first she trod,
Six thousand years ago.

The Earth is old, the Earth is cold,
She shivers and complains;
How many winters fierce and chill
Have racked her limbs with pains!
Drear tempests, lightning, flood and flame
Have scarred her visage so,
That scarce we deem she shone so fair
Six thousand years ago!

Yet comely was the youthful Earth,
And lightly tripped along
To music from a starry choir,
Whose sweet celestial song
Through Nature's temple echoed wild,
And soft as streamlets flow,
Where sister spheres replied with her,
Six thousand years ago!

And many happy children there
Upon her breast reclined,
The young earth smiled with aspect fair,
The heavens were bright and kind;
The azure rope above her head
In love seems blending low;
Oh happy was the youthful Earth,
Six thousand years ago!

Alas! those children of the Earth
With hate began to burn,
And Murder stained her beauteous robes
And bade the young Earth mourn.
And ages, heavy ages, still
Have bowed with gathering woe
The form of her whose life was joy,
Six thousand years ago!

Old Earth! dear Earth! thy tender heart
Bewails thy chosen ones;
Thou look'st upon the myriad graves
That hide their gathered bones;
For them, by day and night, thy tears
Unceasingly must flow;
Death chilled the fountain heads of life
Six thousand years ago.

Old Earth! Old Earth! above thy head
The heavens are dark and chill,
The sun looks on thee coldly now,
The stars shine pale and still;
No more the heavenly symphonies
Through listening ether flow,
Which swelled upon creation's ear,
Six thousand years ago!

Weep not in bitter grief, O Earth!
Weep not in hopelessness!
From out the heavens "a still, small voice"
Whispers returning peace.
Thy tears are precious in the sight
Of One who marks their flow,
Who purposes of mercy formed,
Six thousand years ago!

Thy days of grief are numbered all,
Their sum will soon be told;
The joy of youth, the smile of God,
Will bless thee as of old;
[redacted] shed a [redacted] light
Upon thy [redacted],
Than beamed [redacted] morning hour
Six thousand [redacted] ago!

Thy chosen ones shall live again,
A countless, tearless throng,
To wake creation's voice anew,
And swell creation's song.
Go, Earth! go wipe thy falling tears,
Forget thy heavy woe;
Hope died not with thy first-born sons,
Six thousand years ago!

The Tower of Babel.

The Bible account of the Tower of Babel given in Gen. xi: 1-9, is as follows:

The whole earth at the time of the building of Babel's Tower, was of one language, and one speech.

And it came to pass as Nimrod, King of Babel, or Babylon, and all his mighty host journeyed from the east, that they found a plain in the land of Shinar, in the northwest of Chaldea; and they dwelt there.

And they said one to another. "Go, let us make brick and burn them thoroughly, to make them strong." So they had brick for stone, and slime had they for mortar.

And they said. "Go to, let us build us a city and a tower, whose top may reach unto heaven; and let us make us a name, lest we be scattered abroad upon the face of the whole earth."

And the Lord came down to see the city and the tower, which the children of men builded.

And the Lord said, "Behold, the people are one, and they have all one language; and this they begin to do; and now nothing will be restrained from them, which they have imagined to do, for they have imagined an impossible thing."

"Go to, let us go down, and there confound their language, that they may not understand one another's speech."

So the Lord scattered them abroad from thence upon the face of all the earth; and they left off to build the city.

Therefore is the name of it called Babel, meaning confusion; because the Lord did there confound or confuse the language of all the earth; and from thence did the Lord scatter them abroad upon the face of all the earth.

The size and shape of the Tower of Babel have just been determined by a Frenchman named De Mely, of the French Academy of Inscriptions, from an old Greek Manuscript.

According to these measurements chronicled by the old Greek scribes, the tower in its original proportions stood 219 feet above the level of the city of Babel or Babylon which was overthrown by the winds.

As examined by experts of the French Academy of Inscriptions, this old manuscript gives a good description of the tower, its base was a little over 50 miles from Babylon, laid in the sands of a desert plain, its outlines were square, 602 feet each way; and the ceiling of the ground floor was 75 feet high. Above this six stories towered one above the other, forming a sort of central tower, square in outline.

The top floor was the sanctuary, and was reached by a flight of 365 steps on the exterior of the tower. These 365 steps marked the days of the year, and of the number 365 were of silver and 60 were of gold, or every fifth one of gold. The seven stories were to represent the seven days of the week.

The age of this manuscript no recently uncovered points to the probability that these were the measurements of the tower as it was, long before King Nebuchadnezzar attempted its restoration.

The ark was supposed to be on the seventh floor, to be nearly as high as the ceiling, and to cover most of the floor space. The ruins of the tower as they exist to-day are supposed to be ruins of the restored structure as King Nebuchadnezzar left it.

These ruins as they are today, have as a base a huge, irregular mound, which rises abruptly from the desert sands. The ruins of the tower are on the crest of this mound, the extreme height of mound and ruins being 153 feet. Nearly all the bricks that have been excavated from this mound have borne in cuneiform characters the name of King Nebuchadnezzar.

This is manifest proof that the present ruins are of the tower as restored by this Babylonian King. On one of the bricks an inscription had been found telling that a former King, ages before, had started the structure, but had been compelled to abandon it.

Save for the Biblical account of the building of the Tower of Babel little is known of it. It has been said that each of the four angles of its corners had its apex pointing to a cardinal point of the compass.

Tradition says that this tower, through its seven stories, was colored and decorated in honor of the planets. The lower story was painted black, the hue representing Jupiter; then red for Mars; golden for the sun; then yellow in honor of Venus; blue for Mercury, and silver for the moon. In the azure blue chamber of the tower dedicated to Mercury, that effect was produced by vitrifying or converting into glass the brick that went into the walls.

One of the most interesting of the inscriptions in the ruins of the restored temple was that showing that King Nebuchadnezzar had completed the work of restoration in fifteen days. This is significant of the development of art in that age and also of the enormous number of men subject to the call of that monarch.

Immortal Breath.

There appear to be some who still believe that the breath of life, which God breathed into Adam's nostrils, is an immortal soul. I once heard a professor make the following statement in a religious meeting: "God being immortal, his breath must be immortal, from a principle in philosophy that a part is as the whole; and God's breath is a part of himself; therefore, when he breathed the breath of life into man's nostrils he breathed into him a part of himself; hence, man's breath is immortal; God's breath being a part of himself, so man's breath is a part of himself; hence, a part of man is immortal."

The professor assumed an unsound foundation for his superstructure, as we shall presently see. Suppose that God breathes our common air, as man and other animals do, and that it is a part of himself; then if all of God is immortal because a part of him is, why are not man and other animals all immortal because a part of them is? Solomon says, "They have all one breath." Eccl. iii: 19. If a part of man is a part of God, then all of man is a part of God, if "a part is as the whole." Again, if a part of God is a part of man, then all of God is a part of man, if a part is as the whole. If a part of man is a part of God and is sinful, then God is a sinner, and is going to reward or punish part of himself. If man is a part of God, then man is God. Spiritualists teach this.

If man's breath is a part of himself, and a part is as the whole, then man's breath is mortal, because a part of man is undisputably mortal. Then if man's breath is mortal, it is not a part of God, because he is immortal. 1 Tim. i: 17.

If God breathes the same kind of breath that man does, there is atmosphere in heaven where God's thrones; but "philosophy" teaches that our atmosphere is from 30 to 50 miles deep. If God breathes as a man, why not admit that there is a personal God? Ex. xxxiii: 17-23; Heb. i: 1-3. If the atmosphere which we breathe is immortal it is not necessarily intelligent and conscious. The hairs of our heads are parts of ourselves, but they neither reason nor think. If man's breath is his immortal soul, then there is but one immortal soul for all the men who live; for they all have one breath. Eccl. iii: 19.

If the soul of man is a part of God, then a part of God is mortal and is going to die; for "the soul that sinneth, it shall die." Ezek. xviii: 4, 20. If a part of God is mortal, then He is all mortal, if a part is as the whole; and if the soul that sinneth, it shall die," it is not a "never-dying soul." The breath is not a part of the man, because God "formed man of the dust of the ground." Neither is the breath of a man a part of God, because He created it at the time he "created the heaven and the earth." The woman had no immortal part, for she was taken out of Adam's side, which was mortal. If Adam had an immortal part it was in his nostrils.

Man's breath is not immortal, because it can be destroyed, or decomposed, and is found to be composed of Oxygen and Nitrogen,—twenty parts of the former to eighty parts of the latter in one hundred parts by volume. The oxygen is said to be the renovating principle.

If immortality is an attribute of the soul, the word "living" should not be used to qualify it. David said, "Behold the eye of the Lord is upon them that fear him, upon them that hope in his mercy, to deliver their soul from death and to keep them alive in famine. Psalm xxxiii: 18, 19. How would it do to apply the common phrase thus: "To deliver their 'never-dying' soul from death, and to keep them alive in famine?"

Married.

At the residence of the bride's father at Gladbrook, Iowa, March 9, 1904, O. J. Allard officiating, Mr. Clarence W. Carr, of Wessington,, So. D. and Miss Mabel I. Lincoln, of Gladbrook, Iowa.

The bride is a member of the Church of God at Gladbrook, and is held in high esteem by all who know her for her beautiful Christian character and zealous work for the faith once delivered to the saints.

The groom is a member of the 7th-Day Adventist Church, and a young man of sterling qualities, and a zealous Christian.

There were 45 guests to do honor to the occasion, and showed their esteem for the young people by the numerous presents which they brought. They start out with bright prospects, both having sought the Lord early in life. May God's blessing ever attend them through life, and may they so live as to gain the reward of eternal life in the kingdom of God.

O. J. Allard.

Low Fares to Washington, D. C.

April 10th, 11th and 12th, excursion tickets to Washington, D. C., account Knights of Columbus meeting, will be sold via Pennsylvania Lines. For particulars regarding fares, time of trains, etc., consult nearest Ticket Agent of those lines.—April 12.

The "Twentieth Century Home" is publishing a series of articles on simple eatables that may be prepared in a chafing-dish. One is surprised to learn what can be done with a few ingredients. Of course, these dishes may be made on a stove just as well, perhaps more conveniently. The April instalment discusses soups and meats.

W[redacted]T IS IT TO BELIEVE ON THE LORD JESUS CHRIST?

"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved." Acts xvi. 31.

There cannot be the least question with regard to salvation being fundamentally based upon a Scriptural belief in the Lord Jesus Christ, and the real question at issue in our investigation should be:

WHAT CONSTITUTES SUCH A BELIEF?

We must recognize an essential difference between a belief about the Lord Jesus Christ, and a belief in him. A person may entertain a belief about the Lord Jesus Christ, and at the same time have no personal interest in him.

Let me illustrate: In time now passed two men stood prominently before the religious world as teachers, one was Mr. Calvin, and the other Mr. Wesley. These two men taught opposite doctrines, the one contrary to the other: Each had followers who announced their belief in either one or the other. The one who believed in Calvin's teachings was called a Calvinist, and the one who approved of Mr. Wesley's teaching was known as a Wesleyan, or for instance, a Wesley Methodist. A man could not be a believer in Calvin, unless he should first have knowledge of Calvin's teaching. A Wesleyan may have knowledge about [redacted] and his teaching, and still not believe in him, be[redacted] convictions were that Calvin's teachings were [redacted]nce, to be a believer in Mr. Calvin, a person must

1st. Have knowledge of Mr. Calvin's teaching.

2nd. Approve of such teaching as being true.

Hence, a person cannot be a Christian, a follower of, or a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ unless he shall

First, have knowledge of the message which constituted the burden of his teaching while on earth.

Second. He must approve of such teaching as being true, and confirm such approval, by obeying the instructions contained in the said message required of all such believers, who then become believers in the Lord Jesus Christ.

A person may have knowledge of the said message, and approve of it as being true, and still not be a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ in a Scriptural sense, by reason of his not obeying the instructions required of all such believers contained in the said message. Such a person may be a believer about the Lord Jesus Christ, but not a be[redacted] in him.

The same conclusion can be arrived at by a Biblical study of the phrase:

"CHRIST THE LORD."

Many who profess to be believers in the Lord Jesus Christ, ignorantly suppose the phrase to be nothing than the personal name of a man, like Peter Jackson, etc. The angel said, "Thou shalt call his name Jesus," signifying Savior. "Christ the Lord," is an official appellation acquired by Jesus. The Analytical Concordance by Robert Young, L. L. D., says of the word "Christ (Christos, in the Greek) anointed. The official appellation of the long promised and long expected Savior, denoting his Kingly authority," etc.

"[redacted]" is of Saxon origin, and signifies monarch, ruler, gov[redacted]

From whom did Jesus acquire the official appellation, "Christ, the Lord?"

See Acts ii. 36: "Therefore, let all the house of Israel assuredly, that God hath made that same Jesus, whom ye have persecuted, both Lord and Christ."

The house of Israel were called upon to "know assuredly (positively, or certainly) that God had given him the above official appellation. Hence, an official appellation which Jesus had acquired from his Father, could not be his personal name.

Tidings of great joy is involved in that official title. See Luke ii. 9–11: "Fear not; for I bring you tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the City of David a Savior; which is Christ the Lord." Hence, the "good tidings of great joy," which will grow out of the above official appellation, will be the official exercise of the kingly powers, designated in the aforesaid title. Over what people will he exercise his kingly authority granted him as being the Christ?

See Matt. ii. 1, 2: "Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judea in the day of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the East to Jerusalem, saying, Where is he that was born (Christ the Lord) king of the Jews?" See verses 3, 4, "When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him. And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born." He now wanted to know where the king of the Jews should be born, and asked for that information, by using his official appellation, Christ. The answer to his question was, "In Bethlehem of Judea, . . . for out of thee shall come a Governor that shall rule my people Israel."

Q. Where is he that is born king of the Jews? Where shall the Christ be born?

Answer to both questions—Out of Bethlehem of Judea shall come the Governor that shall rule my people Israel.

Now we see clearly that the word Christ, as the official appellation of Jesus, signifies his kingly authority over the nation of Israel. This is further confirmed by Nathaniel, John i. 41-47, "Rabbi, thou art the King of Israel." See also Acts xvii. 1-7. Paul went into the synagogue, for three Sabbath days, and reasoned with them out of the Scriptures, affirming that "this Jesus whom I preach unto you, is the Christ," the King of Israel. This is just what the enemies of Paul understood by Paul's affirmation, that "this Jesus whom I preach unto you is Christ," will be seen by the charge made before the rulers of the city. "These all do contrary to the decrees of Cesar, saying that there is another king, one Jesus."

It is not possible to believe in Jesus as the Christ, and not have knowledge of his official appellation as the King of Israel.

Philip understood it in this way, see Acts viii. 5-12,—"Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them." "When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women."

This is all involved in the phrase "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ," apart from this way no one can possibly become a scriptural believer in the Lord Jesus Christ. It is to those who believe in the Lord Jesus Christ who are promised salvation. No one can possibly be a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ unless he first believes the message, the preaching of which brought Jesus to the cross, and that was his claim to be the King of Israel, or in other words, the proclamation of the gospel of the kingdom. See Heb. ii. 3, 4, "How shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation, which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him: God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Spirit." We have here three guide posts,

1. "Which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord."
2. "Confirmed unto us by them that heard him."
3. God's confirmation by signs, wonders, miracles, and gifts of the Holy Spirit.

In Acts x. and xi. we have the case of Peter sent to Cornelius to give him words of salvation, or "the great salvation." See Acts xi. 13, 14, "Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter, who shall tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved."

These "words," we shall presently see, is "the great salvation which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord." See Acts x. 36, 37, "That word I say ye know, which was published throughout all Judea." As to what was published throughout all Judea, and given by Peter to Cornelius as saving words, see Mat. ix. 35, "And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." This was the only word which was preached by Jesus throughout all Judea, and was none other than the gospel of the kingdom. Verse 37 says that it was that which "first began to be spoken by the Lord."

1. Began from Galilee as the place.
2. "After the baptism which John preached," as the time when he first began to preach it from Galilee.

In positive confirmation of this see Mark i. 14, "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God."

Jesus did not begin to preach until John was put in prison. His mission did not begin until John's was finished. Hence the "great salvation which at first began to be spoken by the Lord,"

1. First began at Galilee.
2. And not until John had completed his, which was when he was cast into prison.
3. And his saving words were none other than the gospel of the kingdom.

The gospel of the kingdom signifies the good news concerning the kingdom. What kingdom? See Luke i. 32, 33, "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David, and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." The good news (or gospel) of the kingdom relates specifically to the kingdom of Israel. When David sat on his throne he ruled over Israel. When Jesus sits on David's throne he also must reign over Israel, or it will not be David's throne.

"Where is he that was born King of the Jews?" Matt. ii. 1, 2. Out of Bethlehem "shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel." Matt. ii. 5, 6.

All bogus gospels leave the kingdom of Israel out.

Yours in defence of the Original Gospel,

W. H. Wilson.

Obituary.

The enemy death again visited our little band on March 4, 1904, and robbed us of our darling Willie, aged 11 yrs. 7 mos. and 20 days. God grant that our blessed Savior may soon come, and the trumpet sound to awake those sleeping in the graves, and change his living ones to meet him in the air. Then he comes to sit on David's throne, and rule this world a thousand years. After which the Holy City, New Jerusalem, comes down from God out of heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. I heard a great voice out of heaven saying, Behold the tabernacle of God is with men, and he will dwell with them, and they shall be his people; and God himself shall be with them, and be their God. God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain, for the former things are passed away. Rev. xxi. 3, 4.

Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Endsley.

Mrs. Catherine Miller, Felida, Wash., died Mar. 7, 1904, aged 70 yrs. and 15 days.

Sister Miller was married to Bro. Geor[redacted] In 1854. Bro. Miller died a year ago la[redacted] left a son and a daughter—Sister Scott[redacted] step-children, several grand children and one great grand child.

Her disease was cancer of the stomach, which gave her great suffering for months before her death, but when death came she passed away without a struggle. She went into death with a trusting prayer on her lips. She had obeyed God in baptism, was an earnest believer in the coming kingdom, and a faithful member of the Church of God. I stood by her bedside to watch the last struggle with the enemy. She fell asleep as peacefully as an infant slumbers. She had been planted in the likeness of Christ's death, and she will arise in the likeness of his resurrection.

A while before her death Sister Miller called her son and daughter to her bedside, and asked them to live as they should live in order to be ready. With parental love and anxiety she called the blessing of God upon them. What comfort to know that she was accepted of the Father and ready.

Brother and Sister Miller came to Washington with ox teams in the fall of 1862, having spent six months on the trip, and passing through many hardships, and running numerous risks of attacks from the Indians. They lived in Washington and Oregon up to their deaths, going through the hardships of pioneer life, that none can comprehend except those that have had its experiences.

The writer talked to a throng of the neighbors of the deceased, and gave many cheering promises of life gained through the resurrection. The services were held at Bro. Scott's farm, Felida, Wash.

W. L. Skeels.

Died at Crystal River, Florida, on Feb. 18, 1904, Sister Frances D. Willis, after a brief illness of hemorragic fever, aged nearly 72 years.

Sister Willis was born in Madison Co., Ala., and moved to Florida in 1882. She was married to Jackson Moon in 1852, and he being killed in the civil war, she afterward married Robert Hambrick, who died soon after the marriage. In 1894 she was married to R. T. Willis, who survives her.

When a girl she united with the Methodist Church, but in 1888 united with the Church of God, in which faith she lived till her death. She had no opportunity to hear any preaching of her faith, but the testimony of those near her is that her Bible and The Restitution were her constant companions.

The funeral services were conducted by the Methodist and Presbyterian ministers, after which she was laid to rest in the grave till the call is heard that will summon her forth to the new life. This information is taken from a notice and letter received from her neice, Mrs. A. S. Goodbrend.—Ed.

Later.—After above was in type we received from Bro. J. F. Wagoner a notice embodying the same information, excepting that he gives the date of her uniting with the Church of God as in 1880, when he was living in Florida. Bro. Wagoner says of her, "A lover of the truth, a constant reader of the Bible, and a consistent Christian, has been laid to rest to await the call of the Master."—Ed.

Poetry.

The Master's Work.

The hands that do God's work are patient hands,
And quick to toil, though folded oft in prayer;
They do the unseen work they understand
And find—no matter where.

The feet that follow his must be swift feet,
For time is all too short the way too long;
Perchance they will be bruised, but falter not,
For love shall make them strong.

The lips that speak God's Word must learn to wear
Silent and calm, although the pain be long;
And, loving as the Master, learn to share
The agony and wrong.

Selections.

Truth.

Let us seek for truth, that mighty helmet without which we can not battle in the world of strife and turmoil. And in these later days of deceit and falsehood, we must needs stop at times, and ask, what is truth? Many hands are raised with ready answers, but are they the answers that will stand the test of the final judgment? Not unless they are from the greatest book that the world has ever known, and penned by inspired authors. "Thy law is truth." Ps. cxix: 142. Thy word is true. Ps. cxix: 116. Can the lofty mind of the polished intellect improve upon that definition? Never. Then let truth be our watch word in every effort of our lives.

And we see the great mass of humanity seeking after a silver slippered religion in which they wish to trend with flowers. They wish to bask in the smiles and the approval of the on looking world, in the very face of the truth of which we are told in language of glittering gold that the friend of the world is the enemy of God.

As workers in the Master's vineyard we must never shirk our duty. We should walk to please God and accept him as our master. "His servants ye are whom you yield yourselves servants to obey." "Choose you this day whom you will serve." May the Lord hasten the day when we will have more men and women who will have the strength of purpose as did that good man of old, who can stand alone before a frowning majority and say, "Let others do as they will. As for me and my house we we will serve the Lord." "He has given us a banner to be displayed because of truth." Dear one[illegible] banner ever be displayed, [illegible]rld know which side we [illegible]t be known of all men [illegible]ent loose the fetters that [illegible] the ranks of the enemy, and are soldiers of the cross fighting for a prize, such as has never been gained by price or conquest. Knowing that if we obey the commands given us in the words of truth that the reward is sure. I believe that we are living in the very time that Isaiah tells us that "Truth is fallen in the streets." And the Christian ministry and laity to-day look on in contented silence. O! how our hearts should burn with shame to see God's truth fallen in the streets to be trodden under foot of man.

Laborers and co-workers with God, let us unfurl the banner of truth. When we speak let it be with energy and purpose, When we write let there flow such a strong undercurrent of love and consecration that the man of thought can read between the lines. "Buy the truth and sell it not" is a command that thrills our hearts as the most eloquent language from the most learned theologian fails to do.—Lizzie Graybill.

We should not forget that no one ever did anything of great value to others without cost. A quaint old proverb says: "One cannot have an omelette without breaking eggs." If we would do anything really worth while that will be a blessing in the world, we must put into it not merely easy efforts, languid sympathies, conventional good wishes, and courtesies that cost nothing,—we must put into it thought, time, patience, self-denial, sleepless nights, exhausting toil. There is a legend of an artist who had found a wonderful red, which no other artist could imitate. The secret of his color died with him; but after his death an old wound was discovered over his heart. This revealed the matchless hues of his pictures. The legend teaches that no great achievement can be made, no lofty attainment reached, nothing of much value to the world done, savent the cost of heart's blood. —J. J. Froude.

To the Illinois Brethren.

The time has come for us to decide whether we will have a summer Bible school again in connection with our annual conference or not. The enrollment at our school last summer was 28 with an attendance throughout of 21. The brethren are invited to write me. This applies particularly to Bereans, but generally to all. If you have spoken personally to me about it, just act in the matter as if you had not spoken, for I forget so easily. One good sister speaking in appreciation of the school said she knew of two whom she would assist if we had the school this summer, but because I failed at the time to make a note of it, I have forgotten who it was. In replying to this simply say whether you wish to have it or not and what can be done by way of attendance from your locality. Any replying who were in attendance last summer are also requested to suggest any changes that might prove favorable. If the school is held, a general announcement will be published in a short time. Please write now.

Our War Atlas is all right, and the first invoice is going fast. Send for one and keep track of the movements of the contestants. A glance at the specially prepared maps show at once the places where the armies meet.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a feast. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. IMPORTANT NOTICES

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail can tell almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable or exchanged to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Poetry.

Trusting.

I do not ask that God will always make
My pathway light:
I only pray that he will hold my hand
Throughout the night.
I do not hope to have the thorns removed
That pierce my feet;
I only ask to find his blessed arms
My sure retreat.

If he afflicts me, then in my distress
Withhold his hand:
If all his wisdom I cannot conceive
Or understand—
I do not think to always know his why
Or wherefore, here:
But sometime he will take my hand and make
His meaning clear.

If in his furnace he refines my heart,
To make it pure;
I only ask for grace to trust his love—
Strength to endure;
And if fierce storms beat round me,
And the heavens be overcast,
I know that he will give his weary one
Sweet peace at last.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. How thankful we should be that we are still permitted to assemble, and engage in the delightful study of the sacred Scriptures.

A correspondent recently wrote to me with regard to the gospel message. He seems to think that no one really comprehends what that message is, and he also was of the opinion that one hundred of our brethren could be selected, and that no two out of the hundred would write out the same items of faith as composing the elements of the gospel. Therefore, I will select as the topic for tonight's study,

IS THE GOSPEL AN HIDDEN OR A REVEALED MESSAGE?

Will Carrie please read Jesus' commission to his disciples?

Carrie. He said: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be condemned."

Q. What effect followed the acceptance or the rejection of the gospel message, as preached by them?

A. Salvation or condemnation.

Q. Could people be held accountable for either the acceptance or the rejection of a message which could not in fact be clearly and definitely stated, or made known.

A. They could not.

Q. Did Paul think it possible that the gospel could be made known?

A. He did. See Eph. vi. 19: "That utterance may be given unto me, that I may open my mouth boldly, to MAKE KNOWN the mystery of the gospel." That which is "made known," is revealed.

Q. Does a mystery which is revealed, always remain a mystery?

A. No, it then ceases to be a mystery, as soon as it is revealed, or made known.

Q. If no two persons out of a hundred brethren could agree as to the make up of the gospel, then the gospel must amount to nothing more than an OPINION, and we are told that one man's opinion is just as good as anothers.

A. Yes, that is the case. If the gospel amounts to nothing more than an opinion, and if one man's opinion is as good as another, then one man's gospel is on a par with another man's gospel, and as they say, "It don't matter so much as to what you believe as long as you are honest in it." According to this way of thinking of the matter, every man can be saved on the belief of his own gospel, yes, any kind of a gospel his fleshly mind may devise.

Teacher. Yes, my correspondent thought that on account of the uncertainty of knowing the make up of the gospel, we ought to exercise considerable charity with each other.

Now, Lud, did Paul teach that on account of the uncertainty of knowing the make up of the gospel, we should take the advice of my correspondent, and be very charitable with each other?

Lud. I should say not.

Q. Well, in what way did he (Paul) differ from our modern gospel guessers?

A. He did not believe in the multiplicity of gospels, nor did he believe that any man was at liberty to pervert the gospel to suit his own fancy, under the plea that the message is a hidden mystery.

Q. Well, what did he say about the matter?

A. He said just this: "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel: (why marvel Paul, seeing that the gospel is so obscurely stated, that we all have to guess as to its makeup? and) which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ.

Q. If we cannot definitely know what the true gospel is, how can we distinguish between the true and a perverted gospel? Would the contrast be apparent?

A. Well, if the gospel is so hid, that no two out of an hundred brethren would give the same items as to its makeup, then Paul need not "marvel" at the instability of professed Christians.

Q. If the gospel is an hidden riddle, ought people to be blamed for making wrong guesses of the riddle? What did Paul say about it?

A. He thought that if they preached anything but the true gospel, they just ought to to be cursed, it did not make one bit of difference, whether the preacher be a man or an angel, he ought to be cursed all the same, if he should attempt to substitute a perverted gospel in place of the true.

Q. Where do you find that language?

A. In Gal. i. 6–9.

Q. Would that be fair dealing if no two out of a hundred brethren could definitely settle down so as to positively know the difference between the true and a perverted gospel?

A. It would not. In that case it would be better to take the admonition of our correspondent, and have charity with them; seeing that we would be but mere gospel-guessers like the rest of them.

Q. Don't it seem passing strange to you that life and death, blessing and cursing, is suspended upon the belief and obedience of the true gospel, and yet it should at the same time be so obscurely revealed, and remain upon the page of inspiration as a dark enigma, yes, so completely hidden that no two out of an hundred brethren could solve it alike?

A. It would be strange indeed, if it were true, but happily it is not true. It is hid only to the unsaved, who are lost, who wont believe, even those who have allowed the darkness of this world to blind their minds. To their minds its an enigma, an unsolved proposition, and it is their own fault that light does not illuminate their minds.

Q. Have you proof of this?

A. Yes. See 2 Cor. iv. 3, 4.

Q. Is it possible for those who seek the true light to find it, and not be mistaken?

A. It is possible.

Q. What makes you think so?

A. Because God has commanded the true light to shine, and whatever he commands to be done, always comes to pass.

Q. Where is the command recorded?

A. In 2 Cor. iv. 6.

Q. Yes, that is all very well, but do the Scriptures affirm that the time of darkness is past, and that the real true light is now shining?

A. Why yes, of course it does, see 1 John ii. 8.

Q. Will you please read it?

A. Yes, I will. "The darkness is past, and the true light now shineth."

Teacher. Now, Albert, are there not a multiplicity of faiths and hopes in the world?

A. Yes, there are.

Q. Well, can we wonder at that, if the faith and hope of the gospel is so shrouded in mystery, that no two out of a hundred brethren can enumerate the same items as composing the faith and hope of the gospel from the Scriptures?

A. We could not wonder at it if such a statement were true.

Q. Is the statement true?

A. It is not true. "The true light now shineth."

Q. How many faiths and hopes can we find revealed in the Scriptures of truth?

A. Just one, and no more.

Q. Where do you find such a declaration?

A. In Eph. iv. 4, 5, 6.

Q. Will you please read it?

A. Yes, I will, "There is one body, and one Spirit, even as ye are called in one hope of your calling; one Lord, one faith, one baptism. One God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all."

Q. In what proposition is the one faith and hope found?

A. The one gospel.

Q. What evidence have you for that statement?

A. I refer you to Col. i. 22, 23. 24. I will read it. "To present you holy and unblameable and unreprovable in his sight. If ye continue in the faith grounded and settled, and be not moved away from the hope of the gospel, which ye have heard."

Q. Does it not sound strange for the Scripture to exhort us to "be not moved away from the hope of the gospel," if no two brethren out of a hundred could definitely ascertain what "the hope of the gospel consisted of?

A. Passing strange indeed, but that supposition is all a humanism, the Bible says we can know.

Q. Indeed, where do you find such a declaration?

A. I will read it to you from Eph. i. 18: "The eyes of your understanding being enlightened; that ye may know what is the hope of his calling, and what the riches of the glory of his inheritance in the saints." Now the declaration "ye may know what is the hope," etc., differs very strangely from the declaration that no two out of a hundred brethren would name the same items in the one hope of the gospel.

Q. How can we "know" it?

A. By "the eyes of your understanding being enlightened." It is also evident that those who think that we cannot definitely "known what is the hope," etc., need to have the eyes of their understanding enlightened.

Teacher. I will ask George to tell us what kind of power is centered in the gospel.

George. I will quote to you Rom. i. 16: "For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."

Q. To whom is it the power to effect salvation?

A. The believer of the gospel.

Q. Can those whose understandings have not been enlightened as to the make up of the gospel, believe it?

A. They cannot, on account of "Having the understanding darkened, being alienated from the life of God through the ignorance that is in them, because of the blindness of their heart." Eph. iv. 18.

Q. The gospel being "the power of God unto salvation," it must be what the Scriptures otherwise call the "great salvation." Can we really ascertain what that "great salvation" is, and have no misgivings about it?

A. It can be done by all those who will accept clear Bible statements as evidence.

Q. Will you please give us a brief outline study along this line?

A. With pleasure I will call attention to Heb. ii. 3: "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him; God also bearing witness, both with signs and wonders, and with divers miracles, etc."

Q. What points have we here?

A. 1st, The "great salvation" was that "which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord."

2. "Confirmed unto us by them that heard him."

3rd. Confirmed by God himself with "signs," "wonders," "gifts," etc.

Q. How would you handle those three points?

A. I would first find that "which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord," then I will have found the "great salvation;" and then, in place of no two in a hundred agreeing that we have found the "great salvation," every one in the hundred will see the same thing, providing God's Word is evidence to them. Next I would find the confirmation "by them that heard him." Next the confirmation by God himself, by means of "signs" and "wonders, etc." Then I will have found the "great salvation" doubly confirmed. That will remove the enigma.

Q. Well, please trace out that "which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord."

A. First I call attention to the case of Cornelius, who desired salvation, and he also was directed to the same "great salvation," which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord. In Acts xi. 12. 13, Peter says the Spirit bade him go with the messengers to the house of Cornelius. He says: "And the Spirit bade me go with them, nothing doubting. Moreover these six brethren accompanied me, and we entered into the man's house. And he showed us how he had seen an angel in his house, which stood and said unto him, Send men to Joppa, and call for Simon, whose surname is Peter. Who shall tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved."

The "words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved," was the "words," or "great salvation" which "first began to be spoken by the Lord."

Now see Acts x. 30-37, here we have the meeting of Peter and Cornelius. "And Cornelius said, Four days ago I was fasting until this hour; and at the ninth hour I prayed in my house, and, behold, a man stood before me in bright clothing. And said, Cornelius, thy prayer is heard, and thine alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God. Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter; he is lodged in the house of one Simon a tanner, by the sea side; who, when he cometh, shall speak unto thee. Immediately therefore I sent to thee; and thou hast well done that thou art come. Now therefore are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God." As to what was "commanded thee of God," or the "words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved," see Acts x. 37, and we will find those saving words, to be that "which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord." It reads as follows: "That Word, (saving words) I say, ye know, which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached."

Q. When did Jesus first begin to preach?

A. After John's mission was ended.

Q. When did that end?

A. When John was put in prison.

Q. When did Jesus preach the words whereby Cornelius and household should be saved?

A. "After the baptism which John preached." Acts x. 37.

Q. From what city?

A. "Began from Galilee after the baptism which John preached." v. 37.

Q. Now, what message did he preach as the "great salvation," beginning at the city of Galilee, as the place and "after the baptism which John preached," as the time?

A. See Mark i. 14, and you find not only the city and time, but the message also called the "great salvation which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord."

"Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God." This is the "great salvation" "which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord," how shall we escape if we neglect it? It is also the words whereby Cornelius and his household were to be saved.

Teacher. Our lesson is only about half finished, we will resume it where we left off at our next meeting.

Yours in the Blessed Hope,
W. H. WILSON.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, APR. 13, 1904. NUMBER 14.

The Lord's Return From Heaven.

"Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into Heaven? this same Jesus which is taken up from you into Heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into Heaven." Acts i: 11.

To the true disciple of Jesus, there is no subject that is of more thrilling interest than that of the second coming of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ; for with it is connected the resurrection of all the holy dead, and the changing from mortal to immortality of the living Saints; the establishment of God's everlasting Kingdom on the earth, which will subvert all earthly Kingdoms and Governments, with Jesus Christ as universal King. With it is connected the ending of all the sufferings, sorrows, sadness, heart-aches and sin with all its contaminating influences. No more will be heard the clarion note of war and the awful clash of arms in deadly conflict; no more will be heard the bitter wailing over departed friends; no more will be spoken the sad farewell; all will be peace, all will be joy, all will be happiness, in the jubilee millennial of our blessed Lord.

As to the manner of his coming, there is but one true Bible idea, which is suggested in the language of the Angel as quoted above, "in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Not secretly, at the death of each individual Christian, and taking only the immaterial invisible part, as many claim, but openly and visible to all, for "as the lightning cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west, so shall also, the coming of the Son of Man be." Matt. xxiv: 27-30. Behold he cometh; and every eye shall see him, and they also which pierced him, and all kindreds of the earth shall mourn because of him," Rev. i: 7. "And they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds, with power and great glory," Mark xiii: 26. "The Lord himself shall descend from Heaven, with a shout, with the voice of the arch-angel, and with the trump of God." 1 Thess. iv: 16.

Was he seen with the natural eye, by those Galileans standing by, to ascend into heaven, so will he be seen with the natural eye, by those living at the time of his coming to descend from heaven, was he seen to ascend into heaven in bodily form as a man, with the same identical body that was raised from the tomb, so will he be seen to descend in the same form and with the same body. "Thomas, reach thy finger, and behold my hands, and reach hither thy hand and thrust it into my side, and be not faithless, but believing John xx: 27. "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven."

"Thy dead men shall live together with my dead body shall they arise," etc. The same body of Jesus that was dead, and in the tomb, was resurrected, ascended into heaven, and has left the promised assurance, that, "in the Father's own good time" he will come again, and by his having "tasted death for every man" all the dead in Christ will share in the purchased redemption, and come forth from their graves, and the living saints will be changed from mortal to immortality and with the resurrected saints will ascend to meet their coming Lord and King. "I go to prepare a place for you, And if I go and prepare a place for you I will come again and receive you unto myself, that where I am there ye may be also."

He is compared as a nobleman going into a far country to receive for himself a kingdom and return, and we have abundant assurance, that when the time has fully come for him to "take the Kingdom and possess it" that he will come, "restore the throne of David that is fallen down," and "reign on Mount Zion in Jerusalem," for "the law shall go forth from Zion and the word of the Lord from Jerusalem," etc. and "he shall reign from sea to sea and from the rivers to the ends of the earth." "His Kingdom is an everlasting Kingdom and all people, nations and languages shall serve and obey him."

Having full faith and confidence, in all those promises, and that they will all be fulfilled, and too, that the time is near, very near, when we may expect their fulfillment, how important it is, that we be on our guard, watching, and always ready, "that that day may not come on us unawares."

E. K. BARNHILL.

COMING.

Therefore be ye also ready; for in such an hour as ye think not, the Son of Man cometh.
Matthew xxiv. 44.

He will come perhaps at morning,
When to simply live is sweet;
When the arm is strong, unwearied
By the noonday toil and heat:
When the quickened eye looks fearless
Up the shining heights of life,
And the eager soul is panting,
Yearning for some noble strife.

He will come perhaps at noontide,
When the pulse of life throbs high;
When the fruits of toil are ripening,
And the harvest time is nigh;
Then, through all the full-robed splendor
Of the sun's meridian blaze,
There may shine the strange new beauty
Of the Lord's transfigured face.

Or it may be in the evening—
Gray and sombre is the sky,
Clouds around the sunset gather,
Fast and dark the shadows lie,
When we long for rest and slumber
And some tender thoughts of home
Fill the heart with vague, sad yearning,
Then, perhaps, the Lord will come.

If he only finds us ready
In the morning's happy light,
In the strong and fiery noontide,
Or the coming of the night.—
If he only finds us waiting,
Listening for his sudden call,
Then his coming when we think not
Is the sweetest hope of all.

Obituary.

Sister Catharine (Ullom) Frazier died at the home of herson at Kunkle, Ohio, at the age of not quite 74 years. Interment took place at Asbury M. E. Chapel, two miles from her late home. She was a charter member of the Church of God at Dundee (now Roll), Ind., which was organized in November 1878. When her health permitted she was always in her place. Her husband died two years ago. She leaves four sons, besides many other relatives. Some time the last funeral procession shall wend its way to the place of the dead, for He having the keys of death and hades shall come and, as at Nain, say with irresistible voice, "Arise." That will mean endless life based upon a nature made incorruptible by the power of God. May the time for that happy change soon come.

A. H. ZIEMER.

Elizabeth Caroline Purviance was born in Giles Country, Tennessee, Dec. 14, 1821. When about eight years of age she moved with her parents to Indiana, where on March 13, 1844, she was married to John Crawford Lincoln. To this union was born five children—three daughters dying in infancy. Her eldest son William H. Lincoln died at Bakersfield Cal., May 4, 1897. In the fall of 1883, she with her husband and her youngest son moved to Tennessee, where her husband died Feb. 27, 1884. Since the death of her husband, she has made her home with her youngest child, F. M. Lincoln at Lawrenceburg, Tenn., and where she breathed her last March 1, 1904.

She early became a churchmember and lived a consistent christian life. She and her husband were long and prominently identified with the Church of God at Pleasant View in Warren Co., Ind., prior to their removal to Tenn. Her remains were brought to West Lebanon, Ind., for interment with her husband; and where she was laid to rest after a funeral service conducted by Rev. Porter of the Presbyterian church.

Notice.

To the Brethren in Iowa:

I have decided to take up the Lord's work in Iowa, for several months at least and am ready to respond to all calls for meetings, funerals, weddings, or any other calls pertaining to the work of a minister of the gospel.

Address me at Fort Dodge, Iowa, L Box 86.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres. Iowa Con.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

Can any one give us the present address of Frank Perry, late of Oleander, Cal.?

So many manuscripts are on hand that we give all space to them again this week. We thank all for these articles, and will give them place as soon as possible.

Some one sent a card asking for address to be changed from Adeline, Ill., to German Valley. No name was signed, and we can do nothing till it is given.

It would not be necessary for us to send out any statements or give notice of delinquency, if each would renew as their time expires. See to this please, as we need what is due.

There is much that might be said about the war, but little actual news. There have been no reports that are confirmed of any battles, though it is given out that two train loads of wounded Russians had been returned to their homes for care. The Japanese hold Corea, and the Russians evidently intend to let them make the advance. The recent treaty between England and France is thought by some to be a blow to the Franco-Russian alliance. The most serious item is that regarding the demand made by Russia that China withdraw her army from the Manchurian frontier. Since the war began, and even before Chinese neutrality was promised, the Chinese army was concentrated along the northern border of the empire. It has been claimed by Russia that this was a menace to her, and that it was the intention of China in case of Japanese success, to join forces and drive the Russians from Manchuria. Whether this be true or not no one knows, because "the heathen Chinee is peculiar." However, it is known that ever since the Boxer troubles, and the reorganization of the Chinese army, many Japanese officers have been with them giving instruction. It is now claimed that these officers are still there, and wield great influence over the common soldiers. Hence demand is made that the Chinese army retire to near the great wall, and that the Japanese officers be removed. It is not stated what Russia will do if this is not done, but the United States has joined in the demand. We will wait and see.

"Whom the Lord Shall Consume With the Spirit of his Mouth."

Reading an article last evening taken from correspondence of The Life of Faith, and re-published in Salvation, I thought at once of the above text, so marvelously is it being fulfilled in Italy, in these our days.

The writer says "last week a Roman Catholic priest sent me a religious paper published at Naples, with Ecclesiastical approval, and called La Croce. In it appears a very interesting article from a priest with reference to Jerome's gospel. I here translate a part of it. This priest says: 'The future of the Church rests on the pious use of the Sacred books and most particularly of the gospels. This belief is gaining ground both among our clergy and the laity. The church at present is in a condition to restore her strength. How can she seriously think to establish a religious sentiment, depressed indeed, but not extinguished in our people without placing in their hands for their spiritual quickening and nourishment those Sacred books that God condescended to inspire for our use? Soon all will be able to read, the workman, the cobbler, the scullion, and we must through our literature, seek to bring them back to Christ. Well, what book will the Church give to them? The Book made for man, and irresistible because divine.'"

Continuing, the correspondent of The Life of Faith, says: "Last week I received a very interesting letter from one of the missionaries connected with the St. Jerome Society, Rome. He writes: 'There is great hunger for the Word of God, both amongst our working classes and peasants, especially in the north of Italy. Some months since I went to a place near Novara in the North of Italy. On the Sunday I mounted the pulpit with the volume of the Holy Gospel and recommended it to the people. This was received with immense enthusiasm, and for some days following the people came to me anxious to buy the Gospels. The people cried out: 'This is the Lord's Book; we wish to buy the most beautiful volume, the one you have bound, and which costs 9 sous (4½ d.) Now these were poor, very poor peasants, and yet they were willing to spend 9 sous, instead of 1 for an unbound copy just because it was 'il Libro di Gesu.' (The Book of Jesus.) They bought nearly 350 copies.

I have had letters from north, south, east and west of Italy, Sicilia, Sardinia, etc., and the one cry is, 'Send us St. Jerome's Gospel.' I have been asked for more than 50,000 copies, representing 50,000 families.

I have long lists of priests and hope soon to send 50 copies to each."

I will quote no farther for this is enough to show how marvelously the language of Paul to the Thessalonian Church is being fulfilled in these our days. I need not stop to argue as to what power it is that is being "consumed," for we know it is the Papacy—something that was built upon the wicked, mystic doctrines of Gnosticism, that were already "working," or creeping insidiously into the church, even in Paul's day, and which was destined to exalt the Bishop of Rome as its head, and make of him a Prince, a Judge, a Law-giver, who was to be regarded by men as God, and obeyed and worshipped as such, by all kings and all nations,—just so soon as the hindering Roman Emperors were taken out of the way, or were removed from Rome to Constantinople.

We know that the same power was to continue as the head of the false or apostate church, until "destroyed by the brightness of Christ's coming,"—though its temporal rule over the kingdoms of earth was to be lost prior to that event.

Only a great stump, bound with bands of iron and brass, is left of the once mighty tree.

Daniel, Paul and John, not only predicted the final destruction of this power that desolated the earth, but they also intimated that a consuming destroying process would begin and go on for some time before the final consummation.

Daniel says (vii. 26), "They shall take away his dominion to consume and destroy it unto the end." And Paul (2 Thess. ii. 8) "Whom the Lord shall consume with the spirit of his mouth and destroy with the brightness of his coming." And John adds in Rev. xvii. 16, "The ten horns shall hate the whore, and shall make her desolate and naked, and shall eat her flesh and burn her with fire."

The very kings that once upheld the pope have been the very ones that have stripped him, of his temporal power and territorial possessions. The immense landed property belonging to the monks and nuns, have been confiscated, and turned over to the states wherein they were situated. Peter's pence no longer flows into the coffers of the Vatican as aforetime, while great pieces of the dominions are being broken off and are falling into Anglo-Saxon hands.

But the "consuming," to which I had reference, began back of all this, led up to it, and was the cause of it. To "consume by the spirit of his mouth," is to consume by his Word. Jesus says, "The words that I speak unto you, they are spirit and they are life." This consuming process began when the Bible was unchained by the Reformation, and it has been going on ever since. There is nothing that the Roman Catholic Church fears as it fears the Bible, when its devotees have the Bible put into their hands, they cease to be Catholics. They know well enough, that if they permit the free circulation of the Bible, their great political machine will fall to pieces and the power of Pope and priest be at an end. The papacy has therefore kept the Bible buried in a language that the people could not understand; has snatched it from the fearless ones and burned it; has declared that "whosever would be saved must renounce it," and that "no portion of the Word of God must be published in the sight of the Roman people," even on a tombstone! And no wonder the guilty Hierarchy has dreaded the Book that is destined to "consume" and "destroy" its power.

For 1260 years it has lorded it over "all kindreds and tongues and nations" and has forced "all that dwell upon the earth to worship at its feet" save those "whose names are written in the Book of life of the Lamb." And though its temporal power has been lost, never to be regained, it still holds almost unlimited sway over the hearts and consciences of more than two hundred millions of the human race, and through its subjects controls the press, defiles the literature, corrupts the morals, and leads the political parties of the world. But the fiat of the living God has gone forth against "the Man of Sin," and his religious jurisdiction must go, just as his temporal power has gone, and as his own subjects have been the tools used of God, to bring about his fall in the one case, so will they also be in the other. "They shall take away his dominion to consume and destroy it unto the end." They shall do it—"the ten horns," the kings and people of his, at-one-time-subject-kingdoms.

The article in La Croce is from the pen of a priest, and though, he does not stand out as Luther did, against the false doctrines and corrupt practices of the Roman Church, he understands that her "spiritual quickening and nourishment" can come only from the Word of God. His language at the close of his letter is remarkably like that of Erasmus and Tyndale, just before the giving of the Bible to the English people. We know in some small measure, what the "irresistible" Book, has wrought for England and her outlying colonies, and what a grand work Luther's Bible accomplished in Germany, and can easily predict the outcome of this movement in Italy, when "the workmen, the cobbler, the scullion" become "able to read," and all have the gospels in their homes,—not in the Latin language, but in their own familiar tongue.

The outcome will be the taking out of such a multitude in Italy for Christ that the throne of the Pope will be made more unstable than ever. Let the consuming process go on. We rejoice in it. It is a precursor of the coming of our Lord, and of the nearness of that blessed time when the iniquities of the Antichrist shall come to an end and when "that great city Babylon shall with violence be thrown down and shall be found no more at all."

"Allelulia; salvation and glory, and honor, and power, unto the Lord our God!"

Tormented Forever and Ever.

"And the devil that deceived them was cast into the lake of fire and brimstone, where the beast, and the false prophet are, and shall be tormented day and night forever and ever." Rev. xx: 10.

This passage is often used by our Orthodox friends as a finale on the penalty question. Their argument is not by any means conclusive, as the following reasons will show:—

1. The English words "for ever," in our Bible do not always point out endless duration; but often very small fractions of time, as in the case of Jonah, chap. ii: 6. "I went down to the bottom of the mountains; the earth with her bars was about me forever: Yet hast thou brought up my life from corruption, O Lord my God." The "forever" in this passage was past when the words were uttered, so could not be endless duration. By the most careless reading or the keenest scrutiny, we can only understand Jonah as referring to his three days confinement in the belly of the fish. Again,—

"And his master shall bore his ear through with an awl. And he shall serve him for ever." Ex. xxi: 6. This passage is the law of Israel concerning the slave who choose to abide with his master after he had offered him his freedom. Now we all know that it would be impossible for a slave to serve his master longer than his natural life time, hence we know that the "forever" in this instance refers only to a period just so long, and not to endless duration.

Once more—"None shall pass through it (The land of Idumea) for ever and ever." Isa xxxiv: 10. Do people now pass through Idumea? They do. Was Isaiah a true prophet? Not if "for ever and ever," means endless duration in this prophecy; for people pass through and live in this ancient land. But if he referred to a shorter period of time we can say he told the truth, and make harmony out of his language, and so we conclude that the terms "for ever and ever" in this passage refers to a definite age instead of endless duration, as some would contend. "In the mouth of two or three witnesses shall every word be established," so with the three above we consider our first proposition established.

2. The Greek words Aion, the root of Aionos, and Aionon; translated "ever," in our text, often point out only a limited period of time, as follows—"In this Aion." Translated in A. V. World, Matt. xii: 32. "This aion," signifies that there may have been, or will be other Aions besides "this," therefore we must conclude that "this Aion" is not endless.

Again—"And the care of this Aion." Matt. xiii. 22.

The harvest is the end of the Aion." Matt. xiii: 39.

"So shall it be at the end of this Aion." If these passages do not declare that an Aion can end, what language would declare such fact if fact it be? I can see none, therefore I conclude that Aion in the above passages does not refer to endless duration. Once more,—"On whom the ends of the Aionon have come." 1 Cor. x: 11. In this passage we have Aionon the plural of the word Aion, making it Aions and proving beyond cavil the fact that Aions can terminate, and are not always endless periods of time.

Lastly—"Not only in this Aion, but that which is to come." Eph. i: 21. This scripture brings to light two Aions, an absurdity if the word always means endless duration. Having now produced more than the sufficient number of witnesses to establish the second proposition, we leave for a third, which is the facts—As "Aion" and "forever," point out definite time, longer or shorter, in many passages of Scripture, we conclude our Text points out only a limited period of time. But, can we as clearly demonstrate this proposition as we have the above two? I think we can, and take the above facts as half proof, and endeavor now to bring out the other half. "The lake of fire," into which the beast, false prophet and devil are to be cast is called "the second death," see Rev. xx: 14 Comp Syric and Diag. But a lake of fire of itself could not in the most literal sense be a death—hence we conclude that it is the cause of "the second death"—That is, that what is termed "the second death," is brought about, by this lake of fire. We must not conclude that whatever is cast into this symbolic lake dies a second time, but dies to the life that now is and that which is to come: for death is cast into this lake for destruction, but death has never before been destroyed. Hades also is cast into the lake, but it gets its first destruction, and so will be with the three symbolic characters of our Text. Neither can it be a place of eternal torture: for death cannot be tortured, hades cannot, and the word death in Holy Writ never means torment, but as in the case of Adam cease to live—"Adam lived 930 years and he died." A false statement if Adam still lives, for he would have now been living instead of 930 years about six thousand and still not dead, such is the fruits of the serpentine lie—"ye shall not surely die but be as Gods" etc. Torment may bring death, but it is in no sense death itself. While the martyrs were tormented at the stake it could not be said they were dead; but as soon as life became extinct, and torment ceased by its extinction they could truthfully be said to be dead. So with the second death none are truly in it until life is taken from them by the torments of the lake of fire and brimstone which burns unto the Age of the Ages, but not eternally; for we read "The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." 1 Cor. xv: 26. Where is death to be destroyed? "And death and hades were cast into the lake of fire." Rev. xx: 14.

Then the lake of fire destroys death. Are the three symbolic beings (the beast, false prophet, devil) of our text enemies to God? The Apocalypse assures us they are. Are all of God's enemies to be destroyed? Let inspiration answer—"The Lord preserveth all them that love him, but all the wicked will He destroy."

If the Lord keeps those wicked systems, represented in our text, in existence eternally, for the purpose of torturing them, does he not as much preserve them as those who love him? And where is the antithesis? It seems to me there would be none; but when we understand that to destroy the wicked means doing with them what would be done with death, were it destroyed; we know it is to end their existence as living beings—Death could not be tormented, and could only be exterminated. Then as death is the last enemy that shall be destroyed, and as all the wicked will be destroyed we can only conclude that the powers of our text will have been destroyed before the time comes for the destruction of death. Another Text—"Yet a little while, and the wicked shall not be: yea, thou shalt diligently consider his place and it shall not be. Psa. xxxvii: 10. "To be" in the sense of this text is to exist "not be," not exist—but the beast, false prophet, and devil are wicked—therefore the time will come that they will not exist, and as a sequence not be endlessly tormented.

Again—"For as much then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he (Christ) also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is the devil—Gr. diabolus. Heb. ii: 14. This is a clear cut statement, diabolus is to be destroyed, not preserved in torment eternally. The fact now being settled that one of the trio of our text is to be destroyed leaves inference that the other two will share the same dreadful fate. How can we arrive at a definite conclusion on the fate of the beast, and false prophet? All admit that the beast at least is symbolic, and represents some political system, but if the beast represents such system may not the false prophet also represent another? And is not the evidence as much in favor of one of them representing some system as the other? It certainly is, and so we conclude that we are dealing with systems—governments in those symbols. Now arises the question who was the builder or author of those wicked systems? Are they not the works of diabolus—the devil? All will certainly agree that they are. What is it to become of diabolus' works? Hear inspiration—For this purpose was the Son of God manifested, that he might destroy the works of diabolus." 1 Jno, iii: 8. And so the only conclusion at which we can arrive is this:—The beast and false prophet—works of diabolus, are to be destroyed as well as all his other works. And then we will have a clean universe in which, sin, death, pain, sorrow, sighing, and diabolus are things of the past. With songs and everlasting joy in their stead. And every creature which is in heaven, and on the earth, and under the earth, and such as are in the sea, and all that are in them heard I saying, Blessing and honour, and power, be unto him that sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb for ever and ever."—Rev. v: 13.

Some one may ask—"If you limit the meaning of the words "forever and ever" in this passage, should you not do the same in all such passages, and thus do away with the endless life of the righteous? They forget that we have other terms applied to the righteous which show that he will exist eternally, such as—"Neither can they die any more," after the resurrection. See Lu. xx: 36. "So also is the resurrection of the dead. It is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption: it is sown in dishonour; it is raised in glory: it is sown in weakness; it is raised in power; it is sown a natural body; it is raised a spiritual body. There is a natural body, and there is a spiritual body. And so it is written, the first man Adam was made a living soul: the last Adam was made a quickening spirit.

Howbeit that was not first which is spiritual, but that which was natural, and afterward that which is spiritual. The first man is of the earth, earthy: the second man is the Lord from heaven. . . For this corruption must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. Then as the righteous cannot die, and are made death proof—"immortal"—we know they will have everlasting life in the fullest sense of the terms "aion" and "forever."

Again we are told—"God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten son; that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have eternal life." John. iii: 16. If the righteous do not always exist? "Except ye repent ye shall all likewise perish," (Lu. xiii: 1) is said of sinners hence we know their existence will terminate. "The wages of sin is death." Rom. vi: 20. If death means eternal life in torment, may not eternal life, mean death in unconsciousness? If to die is to live forever in misery: then to live must be to die forever in happiness. There is no way of evading those conclusions life is just as reasonably death as death is life in misery. In conclusion let me say that this is the only passage in Holy Writ where the words "for ever and ever" are connected with torment, and if we take it literally we would only have one beast, one false prophet and one diabolus, tortured eternally, and hence a poor argument to prove that all beasts, all false prophets, or all diaboluses, would be tortured eternally as long as they. Then besides beasts, and false prophets, we have thousands of transgressors of God's law, what is to become of them if not death the threatened penalty?

If we literalize, and say that there is to be a literal false prophet tortured for ever and ever—and say the words refer to endless time we must also literalize and argue that some beast will suffer as long. But why should God torment a poor beast who is not responsible for his acts? When we say the beast is figurative we admit the other two are also figures, or symbols, and hence do away with a literal false prophet suffering endlessly, so from any standpoint we look with a critical eye we can see only a small amount of torment in it. "God is love."

Love can not torment when there is no benefit derived from it. It can chastise, only for the good of the one chastised. But, what benefit could be derived from the eternal torment of even the devil? Would it make God any more happy? Would the songs of the ransomed resound more sweetly in the ears of the Lord of Sabaoth mingled with the cries of the damned? Would the Saints sing more sweetly while looking on the raging billows of fire, while its victims wailed, and gnashed their teeth in anguish, and some their brothers, sisters, mothers, fathers, sons, and daughters, howling for just one drop of water?

Who can believe such stuff? None but those who have a creed dug out of the debris of the dark ages, which they must stand by at all hazards, and their actions show that they don't seriously believe what they preach May the eyes of many be opened.

John J. Heckman.

Giving Thanks.

We do not praise God enough, either in the sanctuary or in our homes. The apostle's injunction is, "In everything give thanks!" Some have had a year of trials and bereavements; they need to be cheered up. Others are perplexed by mysterious providences; they need to be reminded that behind the clouds still reigns and shines the Infinite Love. If the year has brought to some full barns and large bank deposits, it is a good time to exhort to large consecration of "tithes for God's storehouse." Why should not every pulpit ring a loud peal of gratitude on one day in every year, and every sanctuary resound with a strong and full chorus of happy voices?—Theodore L. Cuyler.

"The Palace O' the King."

It's a bonnie, bonnie warl' we're livin' in the noo,
An' sunny is the lan' we often travel t' rough;
But in vain we look for something to which oor herts can cling,
For its beauty is as nuthing to the palace o' the King.

We like the gilded simmer, wi' its merry, merry tread,
An' we sigh when honey winter lays its beauties wi' the dead;
For though bonnie are the snowflak s, an' the down on Winter's wing,
It's fine to ken it dauma touch the palace o' the King.

Then, again, I've just been thinkin' that when a'thing here's awe bricht,
The sun in a' its grandeur, a' the mune wi' quiverin' licht,
The green i' the simmer, or the woodland i' the spring,
What mean it be up yonner i' the palace o' the King?

It's here we hae oor trials, and it's here that he prepares
A' us chosen for the raiment which the ransomed shine wears;
An' it's here that he wad hear us, 'mid oor tribulations, sing:
"We a trust oor trust wim reigneth i' the palace o' the King."

Though his palace is na jewel r, he has kingdoms here to low,
An' we are his ambassad rs, wherever wemay go;
We've a message to deliver, and we've lost nae time to bring,
To be leal an' loyal hearted i' the palace o' the King.

Oh! it's honor heaped on honor, that his courtiers should be ta'en
Frae the wand'rin race he died for i' this warl' o' sin an' pain,
An' it's fa'est love an' service that the Christian aye should bring
To the best of him who reigneth i' the palace o' the King.

The time for sawin' seed, it is wearin', wearin' done;
An' the time for winnin' souls will be over verra sune;
Then let us a' be active, if a fruitfu' sheaf we'd bring
To adorn the Royal table i' the palace o' the King.

An' let us trust him better than we've ever done afore,
For the King will feel his servants frae his everlasting store;
Let us keep a closer grip o' him, for the time is on the wing,
An' sune he'll come an' take us ine the palace o' the King.

It's ivory halls are bonnie upon which the rainbows shine,
An' its Eden bow'rs are trellised wi' a never-fadin' Vine;
An' the pearly gates o' Heaven do a glorious radiance fling
On the starry floor that shimmers in the palace o' the King.

Nae nicht shall be in heaven, an' nae desolation's scen,
An' nae tyrant hoofs shall trample i' the City o' the free;
There's an everlastin' daylight, an' a never-fadin' Spring,
Where the Lamb is a' the glory i' the palace o' the King.

There angels noo await us, o'er yonner at his gates,
Then let us a' be ready, for ye ken it's gettin' late;
Let our lamps be brichtly burnin'; let's raise our voice an' sing;
"Sune we'll meet to part nae mair, i' the palace o' the King."

The Age to Come.

The word millennium signifies 1000 years. As applied to the age or dispensation succeeding the present, there are many theories or beliefs. One theory is, that at the coming of Christ at the close of this age, the righteous dead will be brought to life, when they with the living righteous will ascend into heaven to remain 1000 years, and at the time of their ascent, the wicked of earth will all fall dead, and the earth become an empty and desolate void, in which Satan shall be confined; thus being virtually chained, because there will be none to deceive; and at the end of the 1000 years Satan shall be destroyed, when Christ with all the redeemed shall return to earth to make it their future eternal home.

Another theory is that at the coming of Christ the righteous living will be caught up to meet the Lord in the air, and the nations of earth will be destroyed in flaming fire at once, after which the Christ with his glorified saints will return to earth and set up the kingdom of God, and at once enter upon a glorious reign; presumably one righteous person reigning over another.

And yet another, that at the coming of the Lord all the righteous dead will be raised to life, when they in company with the living saints will be caught up to meet the Lord in the air, from whence they will return with their Lord to earth to establish a righteous government, which shall enter upon the task of subduing all the nations of earth, and cause them to be subservient to laws that will be just and equitable and thus be a blessing to all the families of the earth. This laudable effort will require 1000 years to bring in perfect peace and harmony, and restore the earth to its sinless condition that existed before the fall of man in the garden of Eden.

It seems to us that the last theory is correct, in that it has an abundance of Scriptural testimony to bear it out. God in his dealing with mankind, uses time in which to accomplish his purpose, and has never done violence to natural laws, unless it was to perform some miracle in which to manifest his power, and which has been fully made known without any further demonstration.

The covenant or promise that God made with Abraham, "In thee and thy seed shall all the families or nations be blessed," points forward to Christ as the seed. To him was "all power" given, and he takes out in this age from among the Gentiles a people for his name that are to be associated with him in blessing the nations of earth, and shares with them the power that was given him as the Seed. He tells us how or what we must do to be among the chosen ones, and also tells us when the time of obtaining this high estate shall end.

Those that hold to the second theory as above stated, employ 2 Thes. i. 8, 9 and Matt. xxv. 41 as the bulwark of their contention. They tenaciously hold to a literal application of the Scriptures referred to. I feel quite sure if all could agree on their rendering there would not be much trouble in harmonizing the different views. As well might we look for the language of Rev. i. 16 and xix. 15, 21 to be literal. A figurative use of 2 Thes. i. 8, 9, is in complete harmony with the promise made to Abraham as abundant testimony proves; while in a literal rendering there would be a very faint show for the nations to ever receive any blessing, for dead people cannot realize blessings or curses.

To clearly investigate this subject, a brief reference to the resurrection will properly be in order. There are those who hold that the resurrection of Christ was the 1st resurrection, and that at his coming the second will take place; but John the Revelator in Rev. xx. 4 shows there were none but righteous raised at the first resurrection, while Paul in 1 Thes. iv. 16, says that it is at the coming of Christ. While Daniel xii. 2 brings to view a mixed resurrection, which the revelator, evidently referring to the same, places it at or near the close of the 1000 years' reign of Christ or millennium. But to return to 2 Thes. i. 8, 9. It may be said that I take a bold stand to hold that the fire spoken of is not literal, or that the Word destroyed is of the same character as being applied to mankind at that time; for fire is a destroying element, and if it seizes hold of a living being, life will be destroyed.

The righteous at our Lord's coming are to be glorified and given power to rule and to judge. 1 Cor. vi. 2, 3. They will be exalted to a higher and more perfect plane of existence than any other class; and the joys that are to be their portion will be more exquisite, than mortality can possibly conceive. For Paul says, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man the things that God hath prepared for them that love him." 1 Cor. i. 9. Those that have not obeyed the gospel will be destroyed, i. e., they will pass through the Adamic death figuratively, not actually. How do you come to that conclusion, I am asked. Because there is no Scriptural account of a temporal death after Christ comes to reign. Those that die, will die on account of their own sin, and not that of Adam. Jer. xxxi. 29, 30; Ezek. xviii. 2. It will operate on a line, as relates to literal death, parallel to that as applied to the child of God. He goes down into the watery grave, from which he rises to walk in newness of life. Becomes dead (figuratively) is made free from the law of sin and death (eternal death) while they who are not chosen or taken out for his name become free from Adamic death, but are subject to eternal or second death, while the righteous being made free from the law of sin and death, can die no more.

In regard to the "vengeance" that shall be visited upon those that know not God and obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, do you think anything could be more severe, than to be banished from his presence and be prevented from sharing in his glory and power? The impressiveness of the voice that will reach to earth's remote ends will be the more [illegible] than when the voice of God thundered from the heights of Sinai and fell upon the awe-stricken and trembling Hebrews. That voice will be heard upon every hill and in every vale, and the secret places of earth shall hear and not escape. They are those that are to be judged: they are the nations that are to be ruled by the law that shall go forth from Zion. The law that is not yet written. These righteous ones that are caught up to meet the Lord in the air, are not subject to law, because Jesus says, they are equal unto the angels and cannot die any more. Luke xx. 36. Neither can they sin. How utterly inconsistent, therefore, to assume that they are to judge or rule one another, as they are subject to no further penalty. Law is for the transgressor. That is applicable to any age.

There are those that sneer at salvation being obtained only in this age; that now is the accepted time, and there is no chance hereafter. I agree with them in one sense; this is the only time or chance to gain the glorious privilege of a crown of immortality, and the personal fellowship and power of the Son of God. That opportunity will cease when Jesus shall appear in the clouds of heaven; when he has completed the number that he will take out for his name. For he says, After this (the taking out for his name) I will return again and build the tabernacle of David, and set it up as in the days of old. What for? That the residue of men may seek the Lord. Oh, that means the Jews, says one. But read on; "and all the Gentiles and on whom my name is called, saith the Lord who doeth these things." Acts xv. 16, 17. This residue is nations of earth, that were not chosen as the elect. There are multitudes of good people among them that have not been fully taught, and have fallen short of election. God is not willing that they should all perish. Therefore he says, "I will give you pastors according to mine heart, that shall feed you with knowledge and understanding." Jer. iii. 15. Why, that I have been told refers to this gospel age. I think not, for if the pastors had taught them the gospel in its purity, they would have won the prize of the high calling in Christ Jesus. And again, the same prophet says, "At that time they shall call Jerusalem the throne of the Lord, and all the nations shall be gathered unto it." "In those days the house of Judah shall walk with the house of Israel." Jer. iii. 17, 18. This is during the times of restitution of all things spoken of by all the holy prophets since the world began, Acts iii. 21 the word restitution means to restore to a condition that once existed. Evidently then these nations may attain unto the condition enjoyed by Adam before sin entered into the world and brought all its attendant evils. Judging the future by the past, there will be many that will not accept the conditions imposed upon them, as they did when they were eye witnesses of the miracles of Jesus. Also Rev. xx. 15.

But this, perhaps is enough for the present, and as I have but barely begun on the evidence that may be brought forth on this subject, I may in some future time, the Lord and health permitting, continue. And if some can be started in the truth in its purity, I shall feel abundantly blessed.

MERRITT ELLIOTT.

Dear Brother Underwood:

I inclose a clipping from the Los Angeles Times, giving the result of an interview with Dr. G. Campbell Morgan, recently from London, Eng., and now preaching in this city and drawing [illegible] crowds to hear him.

There is much truth in his reply to the question, Why do the masses neglect the churches? He summed it all up in one sentence, in reply to the query, "Why is it the masses neglect the church?" The unhesitating response was characteristic of the man. "Put a man in the pulpit that has a definite, authoritive message and the people will soon find him out."

Continuing, Dr. Morgan said: "Busy men of the world have no desire to file into a dingy and often poorly ventilated auditorium and devote an hour to listening to a man who only has doubts to air. 'It's fair to presume' and 'from this we may conclude' are phrases characteristic of much preaching. What men want is an authoritative statement. 'Thus saith the Lord,' uttered with a positive conviction of the truth contained in the utterance, cannot fail to inspire and uplift. Many fail in their efforts to preach Christ because they do not know Christ. As repugnant as may be Dowie's teachings, he reaches men and only because of his dogmatic positiveness."

"But what of the church?" was asked.

"Too much organization," replied Dr. Morgan, "and too little consecration. With the advance of years machinery has been added to the church, but there has been no proportionate increase in power. It's like establishing a great machine shop with no one to man the machines. Had there been a spiritual development in proportion to the material the church would sweep everything before it. Of one thing I am very positive and that is wherever you find the people of a community indifferent as to things spiritual there you will find an indifferent church. Dr. Lyman Abbot is responsible for an utterance that contains much truth. Referring to church attendance he said: 'Instead of asking why people do not attend church, let us rather ask "Why do people attend church at all?"'

"Is the church fulfilling its mission? I don't care to sit as censor but when a congregation turns from the sanctuary hungry there is certainly something wrong somewhere; when a church substitutes form and organization for personal consecration, privilege is being scorned and duty evaded."

I certainly agree with Dr. Morgan that an element of uncertainty in a message to the masses would rob it of more than half its power. "If the trumpet give an uncertain sound, who shall prepare himself for battle." One reason why the common people,—the masses,—followed the Savior, eager to hear his every word, was that he spake as one having authority, and not as the scribes. There was no element of uncertainty in the message he brought to a perishing world. He spake as one having authority, and that authority was derived from the highest possible source, for He says, "I spake not from myself, but the Father who sent me, He has given me a commandment, what I should enjoin, and what I should speak: and I know that His commandment is aionian Life. What things I speak therefore, as the Father has told me, so I speak" (Diaglot).

The popular theology of this time by its endeavor to harmonize certain plain statements, found in the New Testament: such as the "Wages of Sin is death" with the doctrine of man's inherent immortality, has not only contributed largely to infuse an element of doubt into the sacred message, but has robbed it of its deepest and most vital significance; for who that believes he has an immortal soul and has therefore an assurance of continuous life, can appreciate the import of the saying of the Savior above quoted, or the answer of the Apostle Peter when the Saviour, appealing to the twelve asked; "Will ye also go away," said "To whom shall we go, thou hast the Words of Eternal Life."

I am of the opinion that the dogma of mans inherent immortality is responsible for the indifference of the masses to the churches, on other grounds than that of simply infusing an element of doubt into the religious instruction of this time.

Not many preachers are willing to stand by the hellfire doctrine, preached a century ago, of eternal physical torment in hell. The fear of such a terrible alternative being eliminated; and people at the same time assured, that they are immortal, and destined to live eternally under some condition or other, the nature of which in case of the impenitant, the preacher is not able to clearly portray, they rest on that—they will take the chances.

Obituary.

Mr. Robert Allen died at his home, Dunkerton, Iowa, Feb. 19, 1904, at the age of 78 years and 2 months. He was born in Edinburg, Scotland. His wife died July 30, 1898. He was baptized into the faith of the Church of God by Bro. A. J. Eychaner, at Waterloo, in 1899. He leaves nine children to mourn his loss, seven sons and two daughters.

ADA M. ELDRIDGE.

Sarah Shafer, nee. Secrist, was born in Stark Co., Ohio, Nov. 28, 1822. Died at her home 8 miles south of Plymouth, Ind., March 24, 1904. Married in her native County to John Shafer, she became the mother of eight children, six sons and two daughters, all of whom survive her. Her husband died in 1895. In 1876 she united with the Church of God at Antioch and lived, in the judgment of those nearest, a life consistent with her profession, ever admonishing her friends and neighbors of the important need of preparing for the duties and joys of the life beyond the realm of death.

The faith of the apostle, in our judgment, was her faith. Like, also, he said that he who raised up the Lord Jesus shall raise us up also by Jesus. And thus her trust was not in this temporal, earthly house, but rather in the eternal house from heaven, though unseen. The clothes of mortality have now been laid aside in death. From the groans and burdens the aged hands now rest. When the Life-giver shall re-appear may it be hers to be clothed with immortality and be one to reveal those glories to be made manifest by the sons of God. May the four surviving sisters, the sons and daughters and grand children all profit by faithfully using this heritage of hope which has been the crowning success of her life, and which she would gladly bequeath to all.

F. L. AUSTIN.

Harriet Elizabeth Royce was born in McClain Thompkins, N. Y., Feb. 19, 1836. Died at her home at Irving, Tama Co., Iowa, March 29, 1904, 68 years, 1 month and 10 days old. Her childhood was spent in New York, until June 1850, at which time she came with her parents to Plainfield, Will Co., Ill., where she resided about six years. Completing her education at the Plainfield academy, after which she taught school for 2 years in Will Co. She came to Irving, Tama Co., in Dec. 1856, where she spent the remaining years of her life. She united with the Congregational Church at Plainfield, Ill., in 1853 and after coming to Iowa she was a charter member of the first M. E. Class which was organized at Irving in the summer of 1857, where she held her membership until the summer of 1875, at which time she embraced the doctrine of the Church of God in Christ Jesus, and was baptized by Eld. J. M. Stephenson at the Yearly Conference, which was being held at Irving. She has always been a consistent member and faithful worker of that Denomination ever since. She never tired of talking of the things concerning the kingdom of God and fell asleep in the glorious hope of a part in the first resurrection at the coming of the Master. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer, assisted by Rev. Arthur Barton, pastor of the M. E. church at Elberon, from 1 Thes. iv. 18, after which we laid her away to await the call of him who said, "I am the resurrection and the life."

O. J. ALLARD.

Mary A. Gill was born at Abbotteford, P. Q., Canada, May 9, 1838. Died at her home at Baxter, Iowa, March 28, 1904; aged 70 years, 10 months, 20 days. Married Warren W. Lincoln, May 8, 1866. To this union were born two sons, who with the aged father are left to mourn the loss of a loving wife and mother. Funeral services conducted by Rev. Baird of the Congregational Church at Baxter.

O. J. ALLARD.

David F. Bowles, one of Barron's pioneer settlers, passed away at the home of his daughter, Mrs. D. Walsh last Monday afternoon, March 28 after a brief illness. Mr. Bowles was born in Mason County, Indiana, January 28, 1836. In 1855 he was married to Miss Catharine Moore to whom were born eight children, four of whom survive him. His wife died April 14, 1876. The four children who still live to mourn the loss of their loving father are, George of Tacoma, Wash., Mrs. William Hill of Minocqua, Wis., Mrs. E. O. Smith and Mrs. D. Walsh both of this city.

Mr. Bowles came to Barron Co., in 1882, settling on a farm. Two years later he moved to this city where he resided continously up to the time of his death. He enjoyed good health most of his life, and went to the post office for his mail on Saturday afternoon. In the evening he complained of a slight headache, but thinking it nothing serious retired as usual. In the morning, when he did not arise at his usual time, his son in-law, Mr. Walsh went to his room and finding him lying quietly in bed, thought him to be asleep. After several such visits and on a more thorough investigation, found that he was unconscious. A physician was at once summoned and everything possible was done but of no avail. He died Monday.

He united with the Church of God in 1860, and remained faithful till death. He was a true Christian and a friend to all. The funeral services were held in the Baptist Church on Wednesday following.—Barron, Wis. News.

In his article on "Christianity," in the fourth volume of the "Jewish Encyclopedia," Rabbi Kaufmann Kohler, president of the Hebrew Union College, Cincinnati, declares that "the Providential Mission" of Christianity was to offer the Gentile world the Jewish truth adapted to its psychic and intellectual capacities." In elaborating this thought, the rabbi gives a purely rationalistic interpretation of the personality and teachings of Jesus; but to Christianity itself he pays the following remarkable tribute.

"Christianity, following the matchless ideal of Christ, redeemed the despised and outcast, and ennobled suffering. It checked infanticide and founded asylums for the young; it removed the curse of slavery by making the humblest bondaman proud of being a child of God; it fought against the cruelties of the arena; it invested the home with purity, and proclaimed .....the value of each human soul as a treasure in the eyes of God; and it so leavened the great masses of the empire as to render the cross of Christ the sign of victory for its legions in place of the Roman eagle. The "Galilean" entered the world as a conqueror. The church became the educator of the pagan nations and one race after another was brought under her tutorship. The Latin races were followed by the Celt, the Teuton and the Slav. The same burning enthusiasm which sent forth the first apostles also set the missionaries aglow, and brought all Europe and Africa, and finally, the American Continent, under the sceptre of an omnipotent church.....Christianity is not an end, but the means to an end—Namely, the establishment of the brotherhood of man and the fatherhood of God. Here Christianity presents itself as an orb of light, but not so central as to exclude Islam, not so bright and unique as to eclipse Judaism, the parent of both." Literary Digest.

Yonder man is employed carrying sacks of flour every day. He carries so many hundred weight each time, and in the day it comes to tons; and so many tons in a day will come to an enormous mass in a year. Now, suppose, on the first of January, this man were to calculate the year's load and say, "I have all that immense mass to carry; I can not do it;" you would remind him that he has not to carry it all at once; he has all the work days of the year to carry it in. So we put all our troubles together, and we cry, "However shall I get over them?" Well, they will only come one at a time, and as they come, the strength will come with them.—C. H. Spurgeon.

Wisdom of Seirach.

CHAPTER 34 (31 APOCRYPHA).

1. Wakefulness for wealth consumeth ono's flesh and over-anxiety for it standoth away sleep.

2. Over-anxiety of wakefulness will demand slumbers and sleep restoreth heavy weakness.

3. A rich man hath toiled wearily in an accumulation of utilities, and in his leisure hath filled himself with its refinements.

4. A poor man hath toiled wearily in a lessening of his livelihood and in his leisure he hath come to be in need.

5. The one who loveth gold will not have been justified (the love here meant is a supreme passion) and the one who pursueth after corruption will have been filled with it.

6. Many have been given up to a smiting blow because of gold; and their loss hath occurred to their face.

7. A stumbling-block is it to those who become enthused with it, and every heedless one will be taken with it.

8. Because happy is the rich man who hath been found blameless, and hath not gone his way after gold.

9. Who is he and we will account him blessed-happy? For he hath done wonder with his laity.

10. Who hath been tested with it and hath been found perfect? And let him be a boast who hath been able to evade and hath not evaded, and to do evil and hath not done it.

11. His good things will have been established and his acts of mercy a church will requite.

12. Hast thou sat down at a great table do not bring thy throat to it and do not say there are many good things upon it.

13. Remember that a wicked eye is a bad thing. What hath been generated more wicked than an eye? Because of it tears will flow from every face.

14. If thou dost not look at it, do not extend thy hand, and do not encounter tribulation along with it in the finger-bowl.

15. Of thyself apprehend the things of thy neighbor and in respect to every matter think it through.

16. Eat as a man the things placed beside thee and do not make thyself hoteful with mastication.

17. Cease first for the sake of chastening instruction, and do not be greedy lest perchance thou stumble.

18. And if thou be seated in the midst of more do not extend thy hand before them.

19. Since a little is enough for a man who hath been instructed and he doth not snore upon his couch.

20. A sleep of health is upon a measured stomach (lit bowels) he hath arisen at dawn and his soul is with him; sleepless pain and cholera, and turning is with a greedy man.

21. And if thou be constrained with delicacies arise between the courses and rest.

22. Here me child, and not account me naught, and at last thou wilt find my words. In all thy doings become thorough and no debility shall meet thee.

23. Lips will invoke a blessing over bread in a luminous way, and testimony to the beauty of that one is reliable.

24. A city will murmur in a wicked way over bread, and the testimony to the wickedness thereof is minutely accurate.

25. Be not manly with wine; for the wine hath destroyed many men.

26. A furnace testeth metal pores with a bath; even so wine testeth the hearts of the haughty with fighting.

27. Wine for a man is a thing like to life, if thou drink it by measure. What life though is there in inferior wine? And it was generated for mankind's rejoicing.

28. Gladness of heart and rejoicing of soul is wine drunk in due season in its own strength.

29. Bitterness of soul is wine drunk with contention and opposition.

30. Drunkenness increaseth the anger of a heedless person to the extent of stumbling; diminishing strength and promoting wounds.

31. At a symposium of wine do not rebuke thy neighbor, and do not despise him in his rejoicing. Do not speak a word of reproach to him, and do not trouble him with a demand.

COMMENT.

The aphorisms of this chapter pertaining as they do to such ordinary matters as money-getting, the advantages belonging to comparative poverty and honest labor, table-manners, how to be self-respecting without being self-asserting, the importance of being thorough and knowing accurately what we think we know, the inspired comment herein given on the still rampant question of the utility or non-utility of wine—all of which, if we grant old Seirach the first premise which he lays claim to, namely that his teaching is inspired, makes God not only a God of miracles and extraordinary events, but manifest in all his world and interested and directing minutest social affairs, that is if we want him to.

CHAS. GARDNER.

To the Illinois Brethren.

The time has come for us to decide whether we will have a summer Bible school again in connection with our annual conference or not. The enrollment at our school last summer was 28 with an attendance throughout of 21. The brethren are invited to write me. This applies particularly to Berean, but generally to all. If you have spoken personally to me about it, just act in the matter as if you had not spoken, for I forget so easily. One good sister speaking in appreciation of the school said she knew of two whom she would assist if we had the school this summer, but because I failed at the time to make a note of it, I have forgotten who it was. In replying to this simply say whether you wish to have it or not and what can be done by way of attendance from your locality. Any replying who were in attendance last summer are also requested to suggest any changes that might prove favorable. If the school is held, a general announcement will be published in a short time. Please write now.

Scriptures Opened.

A third edition of the above named work is just out, and ready for delivery. This book has been before our readers so long now that its worth is well known. The author is Robert Ashcroft. The price for this edition is put low so that the brethren and sisters can get it to lend to honest enquirers after truth. We hope there are a few who have not turned their ears from the truth to fables. The book will speak for itself in its unfoldings of the purposes and plans of Jehovah, regarding the near future of the earth and its inhabitants. All should be interested in these truths, and those who have never read this book will have a least. Price 65 cents post paid. Send to this office for them, or orders can be sent to J. O. IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attends

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John C. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Paulon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Restitution.

The Restitution or restoration of all "restitutions of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

A Sonnet.

Youth is the season to begin to choose
Which is the right way and which is the wrong.
While life is eager and the pulse is strong,
While everything to gain and naught to lose,
Before a habit more prey to refuse,
Ere blindly follow with the sottish throng,
While the dumb driven cattle herd along,
The same broad road their fathers used to use.

[illegible]
With all the entanglements of myriad ties,
Only the bravest then may do and dare,
And with God's help assiduously apply,
To pass the camel through the needle's eye.

J. F. GILLETTE.

Notes by the Way.

We were conveyed from Ward, Indian Territory, to Cartersville, by the son of Sister Green, a young man, I should suppose of some twenty-five years. Sister Green, and others accompanied me. This was on a Monday morning. In the evening the son returned home, for the purpose of caring for his farm work, bidding us good bye, with well wishes for the success of our evangelical work, hoping to meet us on the Sunday, if all was well. But alas! how little we know what a day will bring forth. On Friday morning a messenger came for the mother to hasten home as her son was sick, nigh unto death. Sister Green and other relatives hastened to his bed side, to find that he had died only about five minutes previous to their arrival. The young wife, mother, brothers and sisters felt severely the shock, on account of the bereavement being so sudden, and unexpected.

On Saturday he was brought to Cartersville, where I officiated at his funeral.

Meetings were continued up to Sunday, when I took sick myself with chills and fever. I then hastened to Chicago, to rest and recover. I remained home four weeks. I was kindly received by the household of faith at home. Addressed the Church twice.

I then once more entered upon my Evangelical work. On the Friday night, my daughter Jessie, accompanied me to the Illinois Central Depot, where I boarded the train for Hammond, Louisiana, to meet my old Pine Woods Bible Class, from whom I had been separated twelve years.

The day I left home, snow fell all the day. I shoveled my sidewalk three times that day, and then failed to keep pace with the snow fall. It seems almost beyond comprehension, yet it is a fact that within twenty-four hours, I awoke in summer land. Words fail me to describe the delightful sensation of falling to sleep at night, (where all nature is wrapt in the sleep of death, not a sign of life in forest or field, not a spear of green grass, not a green leaf to indicate that life still exists in the barren forest, bereft of beauty by the stern ice king) and to awake in the morning, and find the ice-king dead, and that all nature had experienced a glorious resurrection, "in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye." This is the effect upon the senses. Words are inadequate to portray the sensation of delight. This effect is all lost when you witness summer gradually approaching, beginning from the swelling bud.

After my arrival at Hammond, the thermometer for nearly two weeks stood between eighty and ninety degrees above zero. The fields were covered with a beautiful carpet of green. The grass was at its zenith of splendor, in striking contrast with the lighter green of the oat fields. Fresh vegetables were also being shipped to the northern markets. The houses were surrounded by velvety lawns, studded with shrubbery in full bloom, the climbing and bush roses of every color and variety were in full bloom. Scattered about the lawns could be seen beds of lillies, violets and pansies in full bloom. The fruit, shade and forest trees had also put on their beautiful garments. Go a few miles out in the country, among the farmers, and you can see the strawberry farms, with droves of colored people gathering in the luscious fruit, which were being shipped from Hammond by the car load.

I had an enjoyable time visiting the old residents of Hammond, with whom I became acquainted twelve years ago. In company with Sister St. Clair I visited the home which we built at Happy Woods (a suburb of Hammond) the place where I so often met with the Pine Woods Bible Class, which I [illegible] the past.

The city of Hammond had at least doubled in population during my absence, and had so changed and improved, that I could not recognize the Hammond of twelve years ago.

The Christian Church at Hammond kindly granted the use of their Church for our meetings, and extended us every courtesy, which we appreciated very much. They also attended the services almost in a body, and many expressed appreciation of the teaching given. They are not creed-bound, and hence enjoy a greater liberty in Bible study, than those do who are bound hand and foot by creeds of human formation. The meetings opened on Sunday morning, and continued over the following Sunday.

At the last meeting I baptized the wife of Bro. George Siple. She was formerly a Seventh Day Adventist. She has no desire to be "entangled again with the yoke of bondage," (Gal. v. 1) realizing the force of Paul's words: "Christ is become of no effect unto you, whoever of you are justified by the law; (or any part of it) ye are fallen from grace." May she continue rejoicing in the Blessed Hope, and live a holy life of faith.

In my visits and interviews with the Pine Woods Bible Class, I missed the presence of Elias, who during my absence had fallen asleep in Jesus. Elias was ready, he had no fear that the grim monster could hold him, he is now

> Asleep in Jesus, blessed sleep,
> From which none ever woke to weep;
> A calm and undisturbed repose,
> Unbroken by the last of foes.

Sister Arlon always was of delicate build physically, yet she seems to hold her own much the same. She rejoices in the Blessed Hope, and stands in its defense when attacked from those without.

Albert has developed from youth into manhood, and is engaged in the dairy business; he has about forty cows, he ships his milk to New Orleans. He is firm as a rock in the faith, and knows how to defend it.

George is a carpenter by trade, but is also cultivating a few acres of strawberries. He sent me a box of them, they were so large that you would have to slice them to use on the table with cream. He has taken a wife, whom I baptized. They have a little daughter of which they are quite fond. George is also sound in the faith.

Lud has grown quite large since I left Hammond. I presume that he would tip the scales at two hundred pounds, and wears a heavy bushy beard. He is also in the dairy business, and ships quite a large amount of milk to New Orleans twice each day. Lud enjoys hearing the gospel preached, and reads considerable, and is well informed.

Lucy has married since I left, and has a bright little son. I visited her at her home. She has held the faith for many years.

Carrie is looking rather thin, she is a very industrious little woman, and I am afraid she is working too hard, and ought to take life somewhat easier, lest she should break down her physical system. Carrie is intelligent, and loves to hear the glad tidings preached. Her eyes seemed to dance with delight to hear me preach once more. Take life a little easier Sister Carrie.

Since I left, two others have been baptized, and now belong to our Pine Woods Bible Class. One is our young sister Bessie. She was baptized by Bro. Haupt, of Crowley, La. May God bless Sister Bessie, and keep her unto his heavenly kingdom.

We have also Sister Ella, who will also hereafter take her part in the Pine Woods Bible Class. Ella is in earnest, may God bless her. She is shortly to visit Iowa and Illinois, and is also to visit at our home in Austin. I hope the young Bereans will give Ella a hearty reception, when she comes to Austin.

The readers of THE RESTITUTION are familiar with the names of Pine Woods Bible Class, and hence I have taken the liberty to speak of each [illegible] be appreciated by all.

My visit at Hammond is truly a bright spot in my life, which my memory will always cherish. It was so pleasant that I was sorry to leave these dear ones in Christ. I remained about a week after the conclusion of my services.

It finally became necessary to say farewell, and pass along. On Friday I boarded the train for New Orleans. At New Orleans, I took the train for Crowley, some two hundred miles. On arriving at Crowley, I was met at the depot by Bro. Haupt, and taken to his home. I will report the work here in my next Notes by the Way. I will say, however, that meetings at this writing (April 7,) are now being held in the Christian Church, and have one application for baptism.

I next go to Iota, Louisiana, and then to Sherman, Anna, and Quanah, Texas. Thence to Carngie, Oklahoma; Bush, Morse Mill, and Cedarville, Missouri.

In the Spring, after a brief rest at home, I expect to visit Kansas. Any one wishing meeting anywhere between Kansas City and Chicago, will send in notice as soon as possible. I shall also visit Wisconsin, and can go as far north as Canada, if any one wishes my services there. I shall also visit Indiana and Ohio. Any others desiring services in those States, will [illegible] expenses to visit them while I am in those States.

It does seem to me that there is a disposition on the part of members of other churches to give a more attentive ear to the preaching of the grand old gospel of the kingdom, than has been manifested in the past. I think that we have good reason to be encouraged, and press forward in the glorious work with a united front. In order to do this, we must set ourselves solidly against hobbies of every description. The gospel of the kingdom, and a holy life should engage the most earnest efforts of our lives. We have no time to spend in discussing hobby riders, let them dispute and fight with themselves. The truth will spread more rapidly by the freezing out of hobby preachers. Then do not tolerate them either in your churches or Conferences, that is if you have a greater interest in the essentials of the Christian faith, and a godly life, than you have in that which you well know tends to rend and distract.

Have we been with Jesus, and learned of him the great lesson of life, even as he learned it of his Father, and reflected his life as if seen in a mirror, let us also reflect the sweet life of Jesus, as seen in his beautiful life. In proportion as his life pervades ours, so in that degree, it will manifest itself in our acts, words, and general deportment. We may grow in that life to the extent of materially changing our carnal nature, so that which is sinful will become abhorent and repulsive to us. The close companionship will inspire that which is pure and holy.

Yours in the Blessed Hope.
W. H. WILSON.

Watch.

Take ye heed, watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is. For the Son of Man is as a man taking a far journey, who left his house, and gave authority to his servants, and to every man his work, and commanded the porter to watch. Watch ye therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock crowing, or in the morning; lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping. And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch. Mark xiii. 33-37. And yet [illegible] servants signs [illegible] when he [illegible] at the door. He said [illegible], O ye hypocrites, ye [illegible] the face of the sky, but [illegible] discern the signs of the [illegible] in this same thing [illegible] Christian world [illegible] over, the second coming [illegible] as the Jews did [illegible] we must be very modest in applying unfulfilled Scripture, as much harm has been done by so doing, yet there are events occurring thick and fast that we will all do well to watch, and with much interest. The Eastern question is the great question of the hour, and is rapidly coming to the front; all eyes are turned toward the East. Let us watch as this war progresses and study the prophets. Dan. xii. 1. We read of a time of trouble such as never was, evidently reaching up to the second advent, and in Jer. xxv. we have a most remarkable prophecy. A cup and a very bitter one is being prepared for all nations, some will refuse to drink, but will be forced to drink even to the very dregs. "A noise shall come even to the ends of the earth; for the Lord hath a controversy with the nations, he will plead with all flesh. Thus saith the Lord of hosts, Behold, evil shall go forth from nation to nation, and a great whirlwind shall be raised up from the coasts of the earth. Jer xxv. 31-32. This great time of commotion in the world does not originate among the powers, but "from the coasts of the earth." What the result. 33rd verse, And the slain of the Lord shall be at that day from one end of the earth to the other; they shall not be lamented, neither gathered nor buried; they shall be dung upon the ground. Howl, ye shepherds, and cry, and wallow [illegible] the days of your slaughter and of your dispersions are accomplished; and ye shall fall like a pleasant vessel. And the shepherds shall have no way to flee, nor the principal of the flock to escape. What have these shepherds been doing,—crying peace, peace, when there was no peace. Preaching to please the people—have had fat salaries and lulling them to sleep instead of warning them of coming dangers. Let us who are of the "one faith" try to give meat in due season. Here in Joel iii. 9 we have another prediction, Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles: prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up. Beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruning hooks into spears; let the weak say I am strong. Little Japan facing mighty Russia with her 125,000,000 people. Again Zeph says i. 14, The great day of the Lord is near, it is near and hasteth greatly, even the voice of the day of the Lord; the mighty men shall cry there bitterly. That day is a day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress, a day of wastness and desolation, a day of darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness. And I will bring distress upon men; and they shall walk like blind men, because they have sinned against the Lord; and their blood shall be poured out as dust, and their flesh as the dung; neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to deliver them in the day of the Lord's wrath; and Zeph ii. 1, 2, 3, Gather yourselves together, yea, gather together, O nation, not desired; before the decree bring forth, before the day pass as the chaff, before the fierce anger of the Lord come upon you, before the day of the Lord's anger come upon you. Seek ye the Lord, all ye meek of the earth, which have wrought his judgment; seek righteousness; seek meekness; it may be ye shall be hid in the day of the Lord's anger. And John the beloved comes right along with his prophecy in the same direction. Rev. xi. 18, And the nations were angry, and thy wrath has come, and the time of the dead that they should be judged, and that thou shouldst give reward unto thy servants the prophets, and to the saints, and them that fear thy name, small and great, and shouldst destroy them which destroy the earth. Rev. xvi. 13, 14, 15, And I saw three unclean spirits like frogs come out of the mouth of the dragon, and out of the mouth of the beast, and out of the mouth of the false prophet. For they are the spirits of devils working miracles, which go forth unto the kings of the earth, and of the whole world, to gather them together to the battle of that great day of God Almighty. Behold, I come as a thief. Blessed is he that watcheth, and keepeth his garments, lest he walk naked and they see his shame. While the clouds are gathering thick and dark and fast over this poor sin-cursed earth; nations perplexed, complications everywhere, distress without measure, men's hearts failing them for fear of the things that are coming upon the earth. Let us so live with watchful prayerfulness, that we can lift up our heads with rejoicing, knowing that our redemption draweth near.

The Outlook.

At no period of European history, since the days of the first Napoleon, has such a crisis existed as now presents itself. For example, it is stated (with a good show of reason) that Russia, in revenge for the moral support accorded by Britain to Japan, as her ally, is seeking to create a Coalition of States against these isles and their daughter states, this coalition to consist of a Triple Alliance, embracing Russia, France (her ally) and Germany. We admit the probability of the rumor having some basis in fact, that is as far as Russian designs are concerned, for there are many things in the political world which lend color to the plot. No doubt that Russia is [illegible] enforced retirement from the coast-line of Manchuria into the interior, and thus has lost the ability to see things in their true prospective. But France and Germany can surely judge in this matter without passion, and therefore sanely.

What have the Gaul and the Teuton to gain by staking their present status in Europe on the success of Slavic designs in the Far East, which involve the humiliation and destruction of Japan, and the crippling of the power of Britain? What is the prize held out? Rumour does not say, but it is probably the partition of China between the Three Powers—Russia obtaining the lion's share. She may also dream of a division of the British Empire between Slav, Gaul and Teuton, but that is almost too large an order for sane credence!

Well may the Teuton and the Gaul ask if "the game is worth the candle," because; to begin with, though pitting three against two appears numerically a very unequal fight, yet, in reality, the inequality is imaginary. Thus: The Three Powers at present command a joint population of 200,000,000 people, whilst the Two Powers embrace some 390,000,000—this includes the 300,000,000 of the native races of India. Japan can be trusted to give a good account of herself in the Far East. India, with her splendid army—Native and British—can be safely left to deal with any possible force that can be sent against her. Our great daughter-states can—with naval help from Britain—successfully defend themselves against any force at all likely to be directed against their shores.

We see that Canada has been already taking stock of the numbers that from her citizen army she can put into the field for home defence—and it amounts (on paper) to the respectable total of 100,000, say in fact 80,000, drilled troops. Proportionately, no doubt, Australia with New Zealand, and also South Africa, could do as well. Say then, 240,000 trained men, who would be fighting for freedom, home and fatherland.

But, it may be said, what is this to the trained forces of the Three Powers—the three great military nations of Europe? Stop a moment, please. As the strength of a chain is only the strength of the weakest link, so it is not a question of what forces the Three Powers possess, but the number they could send to the front and sustain there with food and munitions, and all the endless needs of an army in the field. Their objective in this case would be a widely scattered one, covering the area of four continents, and, fighting as they would be so far from their respective bases, man for man the Two Powers would fit this be at least the equal of the Three.

That leaves the whole force of the British Isles available for home defense and to garrison such vital centres as Gibraltar, Malta, Aden, Hong Kong, etc. This would give us, making all deductions, half a million trained men to guard this centre of freedom; and, be it remembered, no opposing foot has trod these Isles since the Norman Conquest.

Meantime what of our fleet? Our naval goal of late has been that the British Fleet should be at least the equal of any two possible opponents—and this is not a paper goal but an actual one, to attain and keep which, the nation has made heavy sacrifices. Indeed competent experts believe it is nearer the strength of three powers than two, as Japan might be safely left to account for the Russian navy, to which it alone is more than equal. This would place the British Fleet on more than equal terms with the combined naval forces of France and Germany.

Thus, though two powers to three, we should practically contend on equal terms—supposing there was no honourable way open to refuse the gage of battle.

But there is more to be said against this mad and criminal proposal. What of Italy and Spain? of the Scandinavia, Holland and Belgium? Would they stand idly by, France and Germany united, and that at the expense of the Mother of free nations—Great Britian? The thing is incredible. And what also of the United States? Would our own kith and kin look calmly on whilst the Mother-State was crippled, if not (in purpose) destroyed,—to gratify Slavic spite and greed, and the ambition of Teuton and Gaul? To ask such a question is to answer it with a decided negative, for "blood is thicker than water" all the world over.

We repeat, it is nearly certain that Italy, Spain, Scandinavia, Holland would sooner or later intervene; whilst it is absolutely certain the American Saxon would cry "Hands off"—and back the demand with the might of 80,000,000 people. At least we should secure "benevolent neutrality" on the part of the other European States, with active aid from Brother Jonathan.

In this latter case there would be on both sides a Triple Alliance, but the last-formed would greatly outweigh the present threatened coalition.

Whilst, therefore, we admit the possibility of such a coalition being raised against us; which would lead to a terrible struggle, we do not fear for the ultimate issue—The Flag, which has braved a thousand years the battle and the breeze, would still wave over a free people, whose marvellous history is a proof of providential design and deliverance, and that providence would still say "Fear not worm Jacob."

Both Gaul and Teuton will doubtless think twice or thrice before permitting themselves to be made cats-paws for Russia, to foster Russian designs of world-supremacy. For, any possible gain of Chinese Territory would be dearly bought at the price of such a war, as it would provoke.

That such a coalition may never be a fact accomplished, should be, and of course is, the earnest desire and prayer of this nation, and no pains should be deemed too great to be taken to prevent Russia's embroiling us in such a conflict. Its present phase, as between herself and Japan, is one entirely of Russia's own making, which she can honourably end any day, by meeting frankly and fully Japan's just and modest demands.—The Faith.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

PLEASE do not forget that we need all that is due on subscription at this time.

THE War in the far east was exciting enough last week. The Japanese succeeded in getting the Russian fleet at Port Arthur out in pursuit of a few of their vessels, then making a dash with their faster cruisers. Admiral Makaroff went to the aid of his slower vessels with his flag ship, which was sunk by a mine or torpedo, and the great Admiral who has been styled "The Cossack of the Sea," went down with his ship and nearly all of his crew of 700 men. Some of the other smaller vessels were also sunk, and the Russian fleet at Port Arthur is rendered almost harmless. If there is one thing the Japs understand better than any thing else, it is to keep their own counsel. The things the experts have said they would attempt have been neglected apparently. However, there is new alarm at Vladivostock, and there are rumors again that a blow is is to be struck at Newchwang. There seems to be "quiet along the Y-"

Being in Christ Jesus.

A SUNDAY MORNING ADDRESS.

Brothers and sisters, after deciding to speak to you on Being in Christ, and was considering how to present the subject so that it may redown to the glory of God,—a feeling of deep gratitude came over me because it was my privilege to have learned from the Book just how God made man, and what his possible destinies are; and what his faculties are; and what his responsibilities. This was in a measure induced by the thought that tens of thousands of professional men have undertaken to teach men what they must do to be saved, while in ignorance of what man needs to be saved from, and what they need to attain to. We despise men who profess to have cure-alls,—and claim to eradicates every ill flesh is heir to, while they are ignorant—are utterly ignorant of the anatomy physiology of the man

THEY PRESCRIBE FOR.

And it is awful to think of men of talent and learning prescribing spiritually for those whose spiritual needs they know nothing about. Yes, it is awful; for it brings to mind the words of the Lord in Matt. xv. 13, 14 where he says, "Every plant which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up.....And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch." It is painful to see them wrestling with the subject of life in Christ, and confounding the life of faith here and now with the life-divine bestowed at the appearing of Jesus. But we are persuaded that the Lord rightly named their trouble,—they are blind,—blinded by a long course of instruction that sprang out of the

MONSTROUS DOCTRINE

that man was by nature immortal. Many of these teachers are doubtless honest and devout, but blind. My heart goes out in pity toward such,—and in gratitude toward God who has shined in our hearts to give the light of the knowledge of the glory of God in the face of Jesus Christ. This has enabled us to realize, in some degree, the transcendent privilege expressed by the words and the life of faith in him;" and our life being hid with Christ in God, etc.

"IN CHRIST JESUS"

I remember having read of a saloon of beauty in Russia, where are hung 850 portraits of young maidens, which were painted by Rotari for Catherine the Second, the Empress of Russia. The artist travelled through the 50 provinces of that vast empire to find his models. And it is said that each of these portraits contains a half-concealed,—half-revealed compliment to the Empress;—here a feature of Catherine, there an attitude, some favorite adornment, some jewel, fashion, flower, style of dress, or manner of life.

Need I say to you that the Word of God is the picture gallery for us to frequent. It is adorned with tributes to

THE CHRIST OF GOD.

Here a prophetic portrait of the coming One, and there an historic portrayal of him who has come,—here a typical sacrifice, and there the bleeding Lamb to whom all sacrifices looked forward, here a person or an event that fore-shadowed the greatest of persons and the events that are the turning-points of history, now a parable, a poem, an object-lesson, and then a simple narration or explanation, that fills out with divine meaning things hidden for ages, waiting for the key to unlock them. But, in whatever form or fashion, whatever guise of fact or fancy, prophecy or history, parable or miracle, type or antitype, allegory or narrative, yes, through all this a discerning eye, may everywhere find him, God's Messiah, the Holy One of God. Why, there has not been a human virtue that was not a faint forecast of his beauty in whom all graces were enshrined. All that is glorious is but a phase of his excellence; bless his holy name. And so all truth and holiness found in the

HOLY SCRIPTURES

are tributes to him who is the truth,—the Holy One of God; and through whose flesh God manifested himself to us. This language is no exaggeration. Although at this time there are a number of Diotrephes abroad speaking perverse things to draw disciples after them,—denying his

DIVINE SONSHIP.

I repeat that exaggeration on this theme is impossible. The utmost superlative of human language falls infinitely short of his worth. And beloved in the Lord, the nearer we get to him, the more we are awed into silence,—the more we know of him the less we seem to know, because it lets us see what remains to be known. Yes; everywhere from Genesis to Revelation we find the Christ of God; and nothing more sets the seal of God upon the Word than the fact that he alone explains and unfolds the Scriptures.

A very small key may open a very complex lock, and a very large door; and that door may lead into a vast building with priceless stores of wealth. This brief phrase,—"In Christ Jesus," a preposition followed by a proper name, may really be called the key to the whole New Testament. Those three short words, are surely among the most, if not the most important ever written even by an inspired pen, to express the mutual relation of the believer and Christ. They occur, with their equivalent, over a hundred and thirty times. Sometimes we meet the expression, "In Christ," or "In Christ Jesus," and again, "In him," or "In whom," etc. And sometimes this name or its equivalent pronoun, is found associated with other prepositions—through, with, by, etc., but the thought is essentially the same. Such repetitions and variety show

"IN CHRIST JESUS,"

INTENSITY OF MEANING.

It cannot be a matter of accident when a phrase like this occurs so often, and with so many applications. We may depend upon it the Spirit is bringing a truth of the highest importance before us, and repeats it to emphasize, and compell the reader to give heed as to some vital teaching.

I will now try to show to some extent what the phrase "In Christ," or "in Christ Jesus" means. In a matchless parable in the 15th of John Jesus teaches that all true believers are branches of the Living Vine, and that apart from him, we are nothing, because we have in us no life. This truth finds expression in many ways in the Scriptures, but most frequently in that short and simple phrase I am now considering,—"In Christ Jesus." But it is pertinent to ask, "In whom are all those who are not

IN CHRIST JESUS?

I answer, they are in Adam, the father of the human family and from whom they inherit a corruptible nature of existence, and a warped and twisted moral and mental organizing which means that they are born with a bias in favor of wrong, and instinctively go astray. That this is the truth of the matter, although opposed to what is universally taught and believed, I appeal to the infallible word for proof. In Rom. v. 12 we read, "Wherefore, as by one man sin entered into the world and so death passed upon all men, for that all have sinned. And in Psalm li., David says, "Behold, I was shapened in iniquity, and in sin did my mother conceive me." The proof that the whole race of man die in Adam the father of the race is before you. And the proof that the tendency to sin comes from the same source is found in Psa. lviii. 3, as follows: "The wicked are estranged from the womb: they go astray as soon as they be born speaking lies." I am not supposing you do not know these things, but like the apostle, I would remind you of them, and pass on to consider

AND DEATH BY SIN,

How you can get out of the Satanic nature of existence, and avoid the moral entanglement, or be rid of the immoral tendency we inherit from him? The answer to this lies entirely beyond the realm of the human. Only inspiration can help us here; Happily we have not far to search, nor long to wait for it. In Rom. i. 5, referring to Jesus Christ our Lord, Paul says, "By whom we have received grace and apostleship, for obedience to the faith among all nations, for his name." And in chapter iii. 24, "Being justified freely his grace through the Redemption that is

IN CHRIST JESUS.

This gives the key-note of the epistle—justification in Christ.

In Memoriam.

John A. Wilson was born near Worthington, Franklin Co., Ohio, July 25th, 1832, and died at his home in Perrysburg, Ohio, March 29th, 1904. He was a veteran of the late civil war, enlisting in company C 21st Ohio Volunteer Infantry, in 1861. He did but very little service on the battle field. Fortune had reserved for him another sphere of action, a work requiring more than Spartan valor, volunteers for the work of the noted "Mitchell Raid" to burn the Bridges of the Georgia State Rail Road, was called for from the ranks of the various the twenty-four to respond. All who are familiar with the history of the Rebellion know of the bitter fortune of that enterprise. How after stealing the train at "Big Shanty" they ran more than a hundred miles, but were so hindered by passing trains they could not get sufficient distance between them and their pursuers to afford time for destruction of bridges, and at last were run down and forced to abandon that portion of the train which they had not left behind, but not till their engine had become useless. They fled to the covering of an adjacent wood, but were finally all captured and placed in "old Swim Hole" at Chattanooga. After repeated trials to escape, Andrews their leader, was hung as a spy at Atlanta, Georgia. Seven others were subsequently hung at Knoxville, Tennessee. The ballance finally "broke jail" at Atlanta, Ga., and Bro. Wilson with a single companion started down the Chattahoochee River to the Gulf where was situated the Federal blockade squadron, which they finally reached and were rescued by Commodore Crossman, and sent home to their regiments, broken in health, and mere wrecks of their former selves. The pangs of starvation in prison and incident to the journey of escape was too much for even their strong constitution. Both were discharged, being no longer of service to the government as soldiers. Bro. Wilson then settled in the village of Haskins, Wood Co., Ohio, engaging in the grocery trade. From here we date another epoch in his life. About this time he visited a brother-in-law by the name of Downer who lived in a more southern county of the State. Under the teaching of brother L. H. Chase (now deceased) this man had been led to receive and become obedient to the gospel and like good old Cornelius he wanted his relatives to hear and believe also, and having instructed Bro. Wilson as much as was possible during his short visit; as he was about to depart for his home, he said to him, "All, will you read a paper if I send one to you?" As the offer savored of nothing but good will, Bro. Wilson could do no less than consent, although he afterward stated that he "would rather burn the paper than to take the trouble to read it," as he thought the doctrine of the Restitution was "only another wrinkle on the religious horn," but having pledged his word he "would perform it." As he read he became so interested the paper was not enough. He saw our books and tracts advertized and sent for six dollar worth of the same. Continuing his study he became thoroughly instructed in the gospel and the things pertaining to the name of Jesus. By correspondence with THE RESTITUTION he found the nearest body of believers was located at Raisin, Mich. He came to my house on a certain Saturday and I well remember how we talked of the "glorious hope" till the small hours of the night. Next morning he said to me "Elder Chase, what hinders me from being baptized?" I replied, "If thou believest with all thy heart thou mayest." He replied, "I believe." We went to the water and I there buried him in the likeness of Christ's death "for the remission of his sins." Bro. Wilson went home the next morning, and as I was driving him to the station he said to me, "Now, Bro. Chase, as I have started in the race for life, I want to start all right. I have been traveling wrong for a good while and I want to get wholly in the right road. Till now I have been selling beer in connection with my grocery business. Now, what do you say?" I replied, "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that putteth thy bottle to thy neighbor's lips to make him drunk. This is the law and the testimony." He said, "All right, the Word is enough for me." His neighbor tradesman afterward told me that the next morning they saw him carrying out his liquor casks and carefully placing them on the edge of a large ditch which ran through the village. He then very deliberately took an ax and beat in the heads of the casks, letting the liquor into the ditch." From that time till death his life was a "good fight of faith." He that while in and with "the world" had the courage to face his enemies in the heart of the "Southern Confederacy," now had the courage to contend earnestly for the truth, no matter how unpopular that truth might be. He died as he had lived, in hope of "the better resurrection." He is resting from his labors. May his rest be short.

LEVI C. CHASE.

Consideration.

"Consider what I say, and the Lord

Like Israel of old some of the Lord's people do not consider what the inspired witnesses say, and by not doing so fail to understand the scriptures. Our dear saviour told his little flock to consider the lillies of the field. By considering such small things, which we should not despise, we can learn many grand things about the power of God which will be helpful to us along our thorny pathway. Also we can get a grand lesson from the lily illustration on cheerfulness.

Consider the ravens and sparrows, how the Lord has made provision for their necessities without barns in the winter time, which teaches God's love even for the little birds. We are of much more value than they. Then dear ones, let us trust more to his goodness in our human affairs.

Let us further consider the love of God as revealed through his only begotten Son. The rich promises to them that love him, and we will not fail to get understanding.

Let us consider the heavens, the work of God's fingers, the sun, moon and stars. Ps. viii: 3. The faithful prophet who considereth the things "shewed forth knowledge." By considering the works of God in nature it will bring us nearer to him in humility veneration, and love.

Paul said to "consider the Apostle and High Priest of our profession, Christ Jesus." Heb. iii: 1. Yes he is the churches apostle, let us consider all he taught, as we have opportunity, his parables, the wolf, chaff, tares, wheat, sheep, and vine illustrations, and we will be better equipped to discern the spirits or dispositions of the classes represented by these illustrations. Consider John the Baptist's illustration of the Generation of vipers. Take into consideration the disposition of an old viper snake, of the old wolf and the sheep, then you can understand the classes they represent. Yes Christ Jesus is our High Priest, Consider that, get all you can out of it, the "contradiction of sinners" which he endured lest we be weary and faint in our minds. Heb. xii: 3.

Let us "consider one another to provoke unto love and good works" Heb. x: 24. O yes dear ones, we should consider each other. Our weak points, bear one anothers burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ. Love is the fulfilling of the law; it works no ill to its neighbor.

We must stop. We have merely given an outline to many grand things which are revealed in the Divine word by which the readers can come to an understanding if they will only consider, think deep, study every word of a text.

JOS. M. H. MAJOR.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I have read letters from the north, south, east and west; from the large congregation down to the lonely one member. The thought comes to me, Why are we so scattered, a few here and a few there? Then I stop and meditate for a few moments, and I can see through it all very plain. We read in the Scriptures that we are to go into all the world and preach or in other words teach the gospel of the kingdom, this is why we are so scattered, lonely and forsaken in this life, it may seem; yet this must be in order to fulfill the Lord's request. Dear ones, I fear we are not fully aware how necessary it is that each one of us should do all we could to spread the good news of our soon coming Lord. The signs indicate the time will soon close in which we have to work. Let us take it as a pleasure and not as a burden, to do all the good we can in this life. Being so scattered there is plenty of work for us all to do. Do not think that you cannot do anything; but remember that every one of us are to use what talent we have, let it be much or little, and not expect some one else to do our part for us, in fact I understand that to be impossible. Do not get discouraged if you do not see the good results immediately. Just keep on and think I will do what I can and then I have done my part. Let us not be weary in well-doing; for in due season we shall reap if we faint not. Give those whom you meet tracts and THE RESTITUTION, and if you are able send for a minister. When we have traveled to the end of our journey in this life, and look back on what we have done for the Lord we will not regret the money, time, or labor that we have used. Oh no! It is that that we have left undone that will press on our minds in those hours; but it will be too late then; yes, forever too late. I hope we may all be able to say as Paul did: "I have fought a good fight I have finished my course, I have kept the faith, henceforth there is laid up the Lord, the righteous Judge shall give me at that day and not to me only, but unto all them also that love his appearing."

Christian love to all.

MRS. W. H. EDEMILLER.

Fool Thinkers.

Some people, who are quite sensible in some respects, are great fools in other respects. They will think that some of the most unreasonable and ill-founded statements in relation to matters that they imagine will bless them are positively true. The editor of the Western Christian Advocate, after quoting from the "American Medicine," says: "This same jounal tells of an enterprising 'healer' in the Southwest who instructed patients all over the world to lie down exactly at a certain hour of the day, and at that minute the absent healer would think of them and send forth the miraculous vibrations to cure each, according to his receptiveness and need.

But evidently the man had forgotten, or had never heard of a compliicating difference in time between the clocks of Kansas and Maine, San Francisco and London, whereby his vibrations, instantaneously transferred, would not arrive at all on time. One of the editors of this new-fangled vibratory system announces that he sends out 30,000 copies of his publication every month, and that the name of each of his 30,000 subscribers is called every day in the healing-room, and to each person he sends out his vibrations of healing and success. A little calculation will show that this particular vibrationist must be pretty hard worked. If he called 1800 names an hour it would take him seventeen hours each day to get through his little list! This would almost beat an auctioneer at his own game.

Verily "New Thought" is a somewhat astounding discovery. How numerous those fool thinkers are! They are foolish enough to think that one man, with all of the limitations that belong to a fallen human being, is capable of sending out, thousands of miles beyond himself, healing virtues to many thousand ill people, so that each can be cured of any disease that may afflict him. And those fools will place all possible faith in a pretentious "healer," while, if they were asked to put one-half as much faith in God, they would refuse to do so. And the fools do not hesitate to such a pretender as much money as he demands of them.

Those reputed healers do not care a straw about the ailments of people; it is their money that they hanker for. True wisdom says that surrender of one's self to God, depending upon him for eternal health of soul, is the highest good sense, and the best salvation. —C. H. Wetherbe in Crisis.

Eternal Life.

"This is life eternal, that they might know thee, the true God, and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent."

This definition of eternal life has been before the world for nineteen hundred years. The mission of Jesus Christ on earth was to give men life. "I am come," he said, "that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly." That by this he meant life, literal, spiritual, and eternal life, is clear from the teachings of Scripture.

Immortality is the gift of God, who is infinite, eternal, as well as unchangeable. It is revealed to man in all its fulness and truth through Christ. "As the Father hath life in himself, so hath he given to the Son to have life in himself." "Marvel not at this: for the hour is coming in which all that are in their graves shall hear his voice, and shall come forth; they that have done good, unto the resurrection of life; and they that have done evil, unto the resurrection of damnation." "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life," said Christ. "I am the Resurrection and the Life." "I am He that liveth and was dead; and behold, I am alive for evermore, amen: and have the keys of hell and death."

But some will say, "How are the dead raised up; and with what body do they come?" The inspired apostle answers, "Thou fool, that which thou sowest is not quickened, except it die: and that which thou sowest, thou sowest not that body that shall be, but God giveth it a body as it hath pleased him." A mystery is revealed. "This corruptible must must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality, and then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory." The redeemed soul shall cry out in triumph, "O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where it thy victory." "Thanks be to God, which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Upon this joyous Easter, this resurrection morn of him who was delivered for our offences, and raised again for our justification, may we put off the old man Adam and put on the new man Christ Jesus. May we be dead unto sin, but alive unto God through Christ our Lord. May we keep our eye of faith fixed upon him, and may our conversation be "in heaven, from whence also we look for the Saviour, the Lord Jesus Christ; who shall change our vile body that it may be like unto his glorious body.—Christian Advocate.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

Something New.

Bible Studies.

Bible Studies, No. 2, is now ready, under the title "What is it to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ?" written by Bro. W. H. Wilson. Poetry.

"Pray One For Another."

Such the Master's glorious bidding
To the little flock today,
That, each other, oft remembering,
When they bow their knees to pray,
Love may grow more strong and fervent,
Rooting deep and spreading far,
Watered oft and still increasing,
Till no evil thought can mar.

Pray for help, and pray for healing,
For the dear ones that you love,
By your prayers, together helping,
All to be, like him above,
And "agree" in intercession,
Holding up each other's hands;
This, the way he indicateth,
Guided by his just commands.

He will answer—if believing;
—If his words in you abide;
If you do the thing that's pleasing
Walking closely by his side;
And, if each devout petition,
Be according to his will,
He has given his pledge and promise
"I will your desire fulfill."

Send not vague, unapt petitions,
To your kind and loving King;
He would have you tell when praying
Just the things that he shall bring.
Be it friend, or be it brother,
Lay their names before him now,
All the wants of each one pleading,
Till they come, his love to know.

God has need of all the members;
Some apart from work are kept,
That the answer and the blessing,
Come, because they prayed and wept.
Moses prayed, with tender feeling,
For the wrongs by others done;
This, the secret of his meekness;
So must now be victories won.

When you kneel, if aught 'gainst any,
In your heart of hearts doth live,
Bury quickly hate and malice,
Wrongs and injuries forgive.
Be like him, to good and evil
Blessing with your dew and rain,
Else will he not listen to you,
All your prayers will be in vain.

Be the hands all pure and holy
When the offering you bear,
Gratefulness-incense sweetly rising
With no wrath or doubting there,
Oh, pray oft for one another,
All ye little flock today,
That your God each lonely pilgrim
Safe may pilot all the way!

Partakers of Divine Nature.

2 PETER I. 4.

The subject of partaking of the divine nature is a subject of the greatest importance. The apostle Peter in writing to those who had obtained a like precious faith, informed them how and in what manner they had obtained that precious faith, that it was through the righteousness of God and our Savior Jesus Christ, and that his divine power had given unto them all things that pertained unto life and godliness, and that it was through this knowledge of him that had called them to glory and virtue, that all things that pertained to life and godliness was given, whereby—by or through him that has called us to glory and virtue are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises, that by these (these promises that are so precious to those that have a knowledge of them) ye might be partakers of the (margin R. V.) divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust, and as it is through a knowledge of God and of our Savior that all things that belong to life and godliness are given, likewise it is also through a knowledge of the promises that God has made unto them that obey him, that have led the faithful ones of all ages to become partakers of the divine nature that they might inherit the things promised.

Notice how the whole structure of our faith and hope is built upon the knowledge we have of God, and of the promises he has made unto the fathers. Without this knowledge it is impossible for us to become partakers of the divine nature, as we would have nothing to build upon but the opinions and traditions of men. Alas, how many are building upon just such a foundation, and when the time comes to try every man's work they will fail, because not having built upon the foundation of the Apostles and prophets (or the promises that God made to us through them) Jesus Christ himself being the chief corner stone. By our knowledge of God and his promises we can become partakers or sharers of his divine nature. We are led to obey him by a knowledge of him and of what he has promised to do for us. You will find in the gospel written by John, i. 12, Revised Version, "But as many as received him to them gave he the right to become the children of God, even to them that believe on his name." His name was "The Anointed One" or the Christ, and they that believed on his name in that sense, believed what the prophets spoke of him, and to them gave he the right to become the children of God. John again says in his first epistle, iii. 1-3, Revised Version, to those that had believed on the name of the Anointed One, "Behold what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be called children of God and such we are. Beloved now we are the children of God, and it is not yet made manifest what we shall be, we know that if he shall be manifested we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is, and every one that hath this hope set on him (of seeing him as he is and being like him) purifieth himself even as he is pure. Then he is pure. Purity is one of the attributes of the divine nature, and as John has shown that we can become children of God, and if true children then we become partakers of our Father's nature, and as our heavenly Father has a divine nature, it is but natural that the children take part of the same. The Apostle Paul says in Heb. xii. 9, 10, we have had fathers of our flesh which corrected us and we gave them reverence, shall we not much rather be in subjection unto the Father of spirits and live, for they verily for a few days chastened us after their own pleasure; but he for our profit that we might be partakers of his holiness. We find in this that holiness is also one of the attributes of the divine nature, and it is even possible for us to become partakers of his holiness, for the apostle shows that the very object of God in correcting or chastening us is that we might become partakers of his holiness, for he says, Follow peace with all men and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord.

The same apostle says in his letter to the Ephesian brethren, iv. 22 to 24, Revised Version, Put away as concerning your former manner of life the old man, which waxeth corrupt, after the lusts of deceit, and that ye be renewed in the spirit of your mind, and put on the new man, which is after God created in righteousness and holiness of truth. By this we see that the new man is created with the divine nature of righteousness and holiness of truth. Paul confirms this in his second epistle to the church at Corinth, v. 17, Revised Version, Wherefore if any man is in Christ, there is a new creation (margin), the old things are passed away; behold they are become new. What was the old man or old manner of life spoken of before they were created in righteousness and holiness of truth? Let the same apostle answer in his letter to the churches of Galatia, v. 19 to 21, he says, Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these, adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, idolatry, witchcraft, hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders, drunkenness, revellings, and such like, of the which I tell you before as I have also told you in time past, that they that do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God. These were the old things that they were engaged in when they were walking after the fleshly nature. But they were to put off these works of darkness and put on the new man which had been created in righteousness and true holiness, and were to walk in the new things that belonged to the new life, the old nature having been put off, they were to put on the new nature, the divine nature, and if they walked in the Spirit they would bear the fruits of the Spirit, which are these, love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance (self control, margin) against such there is no law, and they that are Christ's have crucified the flesh (the old nature, put it off) with the passions (margin) and lusts. We can see plainly the two natures that are here contrasted, the old or fleshly nature will keep us out of the kingdom of God, and if we become partakers of the new nature, which is the divine nature, an entrance shall be ministered unto us abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. Divine nature is a holy nature, a heavenly nature, a righteous nature, an excellent nature, partaking of the nature of God, is being godlike, holy, pure, walking according to the teaching of his Spirit as found in his Holy Word, the Psalmist says the Lord is righteous in all his ways, and holy in all his works. Psa. cxiv. 17. And it his will that we too partake of his divine nature that he may use us in spreading abroad the gladtidings of his coming kingdom, not by word of mouth only, but also by the manner of our daily life, being living epistles, known and read of all men. The apostle Peter says in his first epistle, i. 15, 16, Revised Version, But like as he which called you is holy, be ye yourselves also holy in all manner of living, because it is written, ye shall be holy for I am holy. Brethren and sisters of the household of faith, have we this pure, holy, righteous, godlike, heavenly, divine nature that we find in God's Word, that it is our privilege, yea our duty to have? God not only tells us that it is our privilege to partake of his divine nature, but he requires us to become like him, godlike in all our daily life and conversation.

Our Savior in St. John xvii., prayed that his followers might all be one, even as he and his Father were one. Does not this show they were one in mind, in purity, in holiness, and in righteousness? This being their nature it certainly was divine nature. Our prayer is that we may in our daily life become more and more like our heavenly Father and our elder Brother. Your brother in hope of eternal life when Jesus comes.

Who then Can Be Saved?

No question so interests the human family as that of salvation. It means to live in the future. God has a purpose in regard to the earth and man. There has been no age in which God has not planned to give his creatures salvation. We repeat the question, Who then can be saved? It is easily answered, Those who are obedient to the law of pardon. God's plan of salvation has been wrought out through his Son, the Christ. We must therefore have a knowledge of this plan and do as our heavenly Father has directed. Don't harbor the thought that ignorance will excuse you, for the apostle has said that it is through ignorance that ye were alienated from that life in God. Again we read, that it is through the knowledge of the Lord Jesus Christ, that we are made partakers of his divine nature. The above texts should forever settle the question. However we have more that we wish to present. And this is eternal life, that they might know thee the only true God and Jesus Christ whom thou hast sent. And this is the record, that God hath given to us eternal life, and this life is in his Son. For ye are dead and your life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ who is our life shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory. He that cometh to God must believe that he is and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him. Without faith it is impossible to please God. Is it not plain that in order to be saved we must have a knowledge of God and of his Son, the Christ? Where may this knowledge be gleaned? From the Bible all will admit. In Eph. we find there is one God and Father of all, who is above all, and through all, and in you all. In Psalms we read, That men may know that thou whose name alone is Jehovah art the Most High over all the earth. He is declared to be the Creator of all things. He only hath immortality dwelling in the light which no man can approach unto. We wish our readers to understand that the Bible presents but one God. The churches many gods. He is the Father of one Son, who is the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth. In this day of religious ideas it is hard to determine who the Christ is and what God's record of his Son is. We shall refer to Scriptural testimony to settle the matter. Those who believe in the doctrine of the Trinity can not believe in the Christ of the Bible. For Christ is nowhere called God, but the Son of God. The churches of so-called Christendom are adherents of some phase of the dogma of the Trinity. In Acts viii. 37 we find that the eunuch made the following confession to Philip, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. Peter, in his sermon to this preached to the Samaritans, and when they believed him preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ they were baptized both men and women. Philip went down into Samaria and preached Christ unto them. Then to preach Christ is to preach the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ. Now what is meant by the term kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ? If you will turn to the 22nd chapter of Gen. verses 17-18, you read a promise God made to Abraham, Thy seed shall possess the gates of his enemies. And thy seed shall bless all the nations of the earth, because thou hast obeyed my voice. To determine who this seed is we will refer to Gal. iii. 16. Now to Abraham and his seed were the promises made. He saith not, and to seeds as of many; but as of one, and to thy seed which is Christ. Thus we find the seed of Abraham was Christ. [illegible] Christ is to bless the nations. Isa. ix. 6, 7, we read, Unto us a child is born, unto us a Son is given. Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end, upon the throne of David, and upon his kingdom to order it, and to establish it with judgment and with justice from henceforth even forever. The zeal of the Lord of Hosts will perform this. Remember that there is a government, a throne and a kingdom here spoken of and the Son here spoken of is to be placed on the throne to establish the government and, the throne.

Again, let us see what God's messenger said about this same subject. Luke i. 31, And behold, thou shalt conceive in thy womb and bring forth a Son, and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great, and shall be called the Son of the Highest, and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David. And he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever and of his kingdom there shall be no end. Do not these Scriptures in Isa. and Luke agree? Christ is to sit upon the throne of David and he is to rule. This certainly means that he is to have a government. In Acts xv. we have this testimony. Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name. And to this agree the words of the prophets, as it is written, After this I will return, and rebuild again the tabernacle of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the ruins thereof, and I will set it up. Why has the Lord concluded to do this? That the residue of men might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all things well. We can now begin to see what is meant by preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God. Christ preached this gospel of the kingdom through all Galilee. In preaching this gospel, after the resurrection he preached the things pertaining to the kingdom of God. To preach the gospel of Christ is to preach his heirship to the throne and kingdom of David. He who makes an intelligent confession must know and believe the record herein written. In Acts ii. 30, Peter declares that God raised Christ from the dead to sit on David's throne. Paul declares Acts xiii. 34, I will give you (Christ) the sure mercies of David. In the margin we have the holy or just things of David. If we have no knowledge of these things what then? We will let Paul answer, Eph. ii. 12, At that time (when ye were Gentiles), ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world. Without Christ, having no hope, without God in the world! This is your condition if you reject the message God has sent through the prophets, his Son and the apostles. God does not permit us to believe what suits us. Jesus said to his apostles, Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature, and he that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be condemned. The gospel was preached before unto Abraham, saying, in thee shall all nations of the earth be blessed. There is but one gospel spoken of in the Bible, and that is the gospel of the kingdom of God and relates to the future reign over Israel and the nations. In this way Christ will bless the nations. This reign can not begin until God's Son returns from heaven. Acts iii. 20, 21, And he shall send Jesus Christ which before was preached unto you: whom the heaven must receive (or retain) until the times of restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all the holy prophets since the world began. Do you believe the things here spoken of? If you do not you have no part in God's plan of salvation. The apostle says, I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ; for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth (the gospel).

In concluding this article let me say that the apostles all preached the gospel of the kingdom. After Pentecost they preached in connection with the gospel the death of Christ. The death, burial and resurrection does not constitute the gospel, only the facts of the gospel. In preaching the facts alone, is not preaching the gospel, but we must preach the gospel and with it the facts. You cannot find a three fact gospel spoken of in God's Word. Again we read, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that we have received, let him be accursed. You must have an intelligent faith and an honest repentance to have a valid baptism. Then we are admonished to walk worthy of our vocation. Bring every thought into subjection [illegible] to Christ. If so, an entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. May we be looking for that blessed hope and the glorious appearing of the great God and our Savior Jesus Christ is my prayer.

The Word as Our Weapon of Defense.

We are instructed in Eph. vi: 13-17, how to array ourselves for the battle against sin. We are provided with a complete armor and a weapon. Wherefore take unto you the whole armour of God, that ye may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all, to stand. Stand, therefore, having your loins girt about with truth, and having on the breast plate of righteousness; and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace. Above all, taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. And take the helmet of salvation, and the sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God.

In Heb. iv: 12 we see the power of the weapon. "For the Word of God is quick and powerful, and sharper than any two-edged sword, piercing even to the dividing asunder of soul and spirit, and of the joints and marrow, and is a discerner of the thoughts and intents of the heart."

Who should fear to enlist in this warfare with such equipments?

We find that Christ found the Word all sufficient in his case. He did not depend upon his own resources for his answers to Satan. Matthew and Luke agree that he used the "It is written" clause when tempted by the devil. The greatest temptations were set before him, namely, Power to obtain food when hungry. Power to free himself from danger, and Power and great glory. But he baffled Satan with the sword of the Word of God, and (Matt. iv: 11) "the devil leaveth him, and behold angels came and ministered unto him."

There is no "It is written" clause for each of us in times of temptation, and may we be clothed upon with the whole armor of God and study the word that we may be able to wield the sword of the Spirit.

Life-Secrets.

"There's a good time coming, hope,
Wait a little longer."—Old Song.

There is a great truth expressed in the above. We know that a good time is promised, and is sure to come, a time in which true nobility will be the prevailing characteristic.

"When the might with the right, and the truth shall be,
And come what there may to stand in the way
That day mankind shall see."

But the song enjoins us to wait for it; yet while we wait, we need not be idle. There should, in view of it, be earnest, watchful activity, hastening it as best we may.

Among mankind there is generally some degree of veneration developed, extending from the simplest respect to the most profound adoration. In some the faculty is very low, expending itself on its possessor, manifesting the self-centred character of the creature to whom it belongs; while in others it is large, and shows its value in the recognition of worth wherever found, in the promotion and encouragement of goodness, and rises up into its highest exercise—the love and adoration and worship of God. In the days of old Rome the ignorant inhabitants worshipped images. One of these they had formed with two faces, one looking backwrd and the other looking forward. They named him Janus, from which we have our January, and set him to preside over the opening year, imagining that he had power to control the forces of nature, both in the past and future, and make these forces subservient to the desires of his worshippers. We worship the living and true God, and though we do not regard Him as having two faces, still we know He has both the will and the power to "bless those that trust in Him with all spiritual blessings in heavenly places in Christ Jesus."

It is one of our privileges to be able to survey our past experiences, whereby we may discover why our bliss has not been greater than it has been, and be enabled to secure a larger measure of the favor of God in the future. But we must not allow ourselves to think that the greatest thing is how much we can get, but rather how much we can give; for is out of the giving that the getting comes, as surely as the scanty or the plenteous harvest comes out of the scanty or plenteous sowing. It is not for us to wait for grand opportunities to perform some great deed that might yield us life-long fame, for life is made up, not so much of great deeds or great sacrifices as of little everyday things, in which smiles and kind words, and tender, considerate actions, small services unostentatiously rendered, touch the heart, secure the highest and best esteem of those about us, and receive the highest commendation of God.

One or two life-secrets may be beneficial as we pass along the world's highway. Coleridge tells us that—

"He prayeth best who loveth best,
All things both great and small;
For the dear God who loveth us,
He made and loveth all."

As he who prayeth best must be one who lives best, I would say, "He liveth best who loveth best," etc. He who has most of God in him, he who is likest God in the wide and far-reaching embrace of his love, must of necessity be the likest God also in the measure of his happiness. It is well to cultivate God-likeness in our lives, for he that grows in likeness to God shall receive of God in richer and fuller abundance those blessings that promote in the highest degree the perfecting of the human for the inception of the divine—the transforming power that will fashion us like unto Himself.

He lives long who lives well. Most people desire to live long, but many do not like to live well in the sense here referred to. Purity is essential to long life. He who will not live purely in his conduct, in his conversation, and in his heart, cuts the vitals of his being, and will soon be among those that be not. Long life in the Scripture is associated with a pure heart, a guileless mouth, and a tongue that slandereth not.

He lives longest who lives best; who fills his life with the largest measure of helpfulness. Many seem to think that the grand aims of life is to do as little as possible. This is one of the hugest blunders any one can make, even in every-day occupation. The faculties which were given to devise and construct, if allowed to remain dormant and inactive for a lengthened time, lose their power to operate. Beware of the gratification of the lazy disposition, for it is ruinous. Be willing to work, and work with a will, doing what you can in the work that lies to your hand, and, depend upon it, the best blessing of high heaven will attend you, and heaven's joy and satisfaction shall be yours.

He that would live for ever should live truly, nobly, manfully, and he will have no fear in going forward to meet Him who has given him life to value highly. You honor God by seeking to prolong that life, manifesting thereby in some measure your fitness for the life that is to be; but remember that the present life is forfeited by sin, and the life eternal must come to you through the merits of the life-blood of Christ which was poured out on Calvary; sin can only be pardoned by virtue of its efficacy. Wherefore, come to the fountain and be clean; "for this is life eternal, that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ," whom God hath sent.—James Gray, in Messenger.

Tell It To Jesus.

It is a beautiful and comforting thought, the thought of taking the troubles and entanglements of life to Jesus. When John the Baptist was slain his heart-broken disciples took the headless body of their leader, buried it, and then "went and told Jesus." Yes, blessed thought, tell Jesus, the sympathetic Jesus, who is ready to help, and to comfort the afflicted. Thou into whose heart and life there come troubles and sorrows should remember these four words, "Go and tell Jesus." Tell him all your little troubles and temptations, but tell him your joys also; tell him when you are thankful.

There is a story of a king who gave a great quantity of thread to some workmen to weave, telling them to be sure to come to him when they had any trouble with it. The day came when all were to bring their work to the king. All the work showed that the threads had been tangled, except that of one little girl. Hers was smooth and well finished. She was asked the reason, and her answer was: "I did as the king told me; whenever I got into the least little bit of a tangle I went to the king, and he helped me."

Things about us, and we ourselves sometimes, seem to get into tangles. Like the little girl, let us learn to take all these little tangles to the great King; he will unravel them for us. He will heal our sorrows, soothe the troubled heart, and give us help and comfort. Go and tell Jesus!—Brethren Evangelist.

Table Talk.

HUMILITY.

This subject embraces a manifold meaning. Peter exhorteth the elders in their duties. First, then the younger subject yourselves unto the elders. Yea, all of you be subject one to another and be clothed with humility. 1 Peter v. 5. Humble yourselves therefore under the mighty hand of God that he may exalt you in due time. These instructions are given to those who have accepted God's conditions. By believing the gospel as good news of the kingdom, and have been buried with him in baptism, and are now walking in newness of life, children of God by promise, for as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ, and if ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise. Paul tells us Col. iii. 2, 3, Put on therefore as the elect of God, holy and beloved, bowels of mercies, kindness, humbleness of mind, meekness, long-suffering, forbearing and forgiving one another as Christ also forgave you, so also do ye. These all teach us humility and by persistent effort we will have the reward promised in Prov. xxii. 4. By humility and fear of the Lord are riches, honor and life. And in Eph. vi. Paul tells us to put on the whole armor of God that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the wicked one. Stand therefore, having your loins girt about with truth and having on the breastplate of righteousness, and your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace, and take the helmet of salvation, the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God, and above all the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked. But thou, a man of God, flee these things (things of the world) and follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience and meekness. 1 Tim. vi. 11. When we know what is promised as a reward we all ought to be more earnest and desirous of living a life of humility, serving him in truth and holiness. If we do this ours will be a life of humility, and he can say well done, good and faithful servant, thou hast been faithful over a few things I will make thee ruler over many things.

MRS. F. MCCONE.

1 Peter v. 5, Likewise ye younger submit yourselves unto the elder, yea, all of you be subject, one to another and be clothed with humility, for God resisteth the proud and giveth grace to the humble. Therefore, let us humble ourselves under the mighty hand of God, that he may exalt us in due time, casting all our care upon him, for he careth for us. The reward of humility and the fear of the Lord are riches and honor and life, for a good name is rather to be chosen than great riches, and loving favor rather than silver and gold. The Psalmist says, The meek shall inherit the earth and shall delight themselves in the abundance of peace. If we would inherit the earth and have eternal life in Christ's kingdom we must humble ourselves and lay aside our pride, for the proud in heart are an abomination to the Lord. If we would reign with Christ we must suffer also. It is better to suffer afflictions with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. Christ though born to be a King exalted not himself. And in his ministry he had none of the comforts or pleasures pertaining to this life, for he had not where to lay his head, yet he went about healing the sick and comforting the afflicted. For he says, Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest; take my yoke upon you and learn of me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls, for my yoke is easy and my burden is light.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money it. Take warning and send safely.

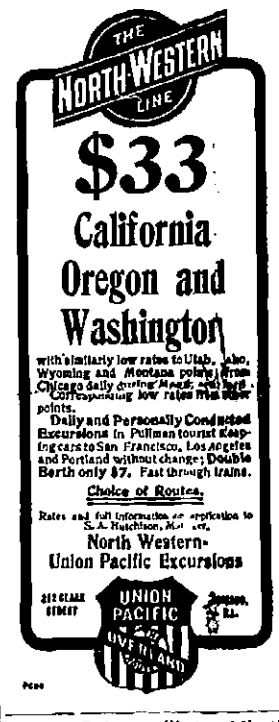
All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended



Colonist Tickets to West and North-west.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Passion, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Poetry.

Quietness and Assurance.

God works in silence, and his vast designs
Are hasting all to pass in quietness and power;
Unheralded the sun comes forth at noon,
And without sound on the nation shines:
Unswept again his ministrations runs;
And twilight world-wide dawns.

The years sweep onward, bid their chariot wheels
Accelerate now—to our yearning call;
The swift-fly hours seem as they pass
Accoutred with a sword, and on mural records
The rapid hand, whose strokes portend the fall
Of many kingdoms, writes.

In quietness through dreary winter days
The buried germs of future years take their rest Assured of happy waking by and by;
Though long the sweetness of the spring delays,
Though tempests mow in wrath from east to west
They wait to arrive in mercy.

Patient in long-unseen or hidden power,
God's judgments hurry the appointed time;
But, from his love, wherein all things dwell,
Mute tokens come about us hour by hour,
In silence—sweeter than the voice of chime
Of fragrant lily bells.

The perfect bliss for which his people crave—
The final victory—he ever secures
The cloud and sunshine of a thousand years:
While the firm garland on a baby's brave
May circumscribe life's utmost gain and loss
To eyes grown dim with tears!

O troubled heart, no storms of adverse fate,
No wave of circumstance may overleap
The jasper borders of eternity;
Acquaint thyself with him, and soon or late
He shall appoint a resting-place for sleep
Wherein no dreams shall be.

He giveth quietness and peace secure
Here and hereafter, unto those who rest
Stedfastened on his own eternal calm;
While sweet assurance entering makes unseen,
Jesus crowned to the triumph of the blest,
The white robe and the palm!

Knowledge.

"Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known me, Philip?" John xiv. 9. These are the words of the Master when requested by Philip to show them the Father. Then follows the declaration: "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." This declaration has led some who are as slow to learn as was Philip, to conclude that Jesus was the Father himself,—involving the absurdity, that Jesus was his own Father; and failing to grasp the truth that God spoke through his Son, and that his Son was the expression of the Father to the world, in truth, in righteousness, and in love.

So that in this sense, he could truthfully say, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father," in the same sense as in his prayer when he says, "Holy Father keep through thine own name those whom thou hast given me, that they may be one, as we are." Ch. xvii. 11. In the same sense that the Father and the Son are one, we should understand the saying, "He that hath seen me hath seen the Father." And that there should be no mistake in understanding our Lord's meaning, he prays that, "Those whom thou hast given me, may be one as we are." So that he who holds that the Father and the Son are one person—must also hold, to be logical, that the twelve disciples are one in the same way.

The question of our Lord to Philip suggests a similar question that with propriety may be asked today: Has not Christ, but Anti-christ been with you so long, and hast thou not known him? What more marks could God have given to his servants, so they may know him than those he has given? I wonder how any one professing to be waiting and expecting the soon coming of our Lord can harmonize that view with the belief that Antichrist has not yet appeared. If Antichrist has not yet come, then we have no right to teach that the coming of the Lord is in the near future. For proof see 2 Thes. ii. 3, "Let no man deceive you by any means, for that day shall not come, except there come a falling away first, and that man of sin be revealed, the Son of perdition."

Now the Spirit was given to lead the believer "into all truth," and as it has given us an exact description of the "man of sin," in order that we may know him—let us examine the testimony and learn the lesson designed for our instruction. First, the time of the appearing of the man of sin is plainly indicated in the writings of the Prophets, and of the Apostles of our Lord. The first plain reference to the man of sin is the appearing of the little horn that came up among the ten, on the head of the fourth beast of Daniel (vii. 8) and in verse 25 we read, "And he shall speak great words against the Most High, and shall wear out the saints of the Most High, and think to change times and laws, and they shall be given into his hand until a time, and times, and the dividing of time." The time indicted for the rise of Antichrist in this passage is after the division of the Roman Empire into ten divisions—indicated by the ten horns—which according to all historians took place in the fifth century of our era. And the use of the Papacy in the fulfilment of the prophecy is placed by some as in A. D. 538 to 610. The first date being in the time of the Emperor Justinian, who favored the Papacy and exalted the See of Rome; the second being in the reign of Phocas who decreed that the bishop of Rome was the head of all the Christian churches.

Further we will notice the testimony of Paul and John in relation to the rise of the man of sin, the Antichrist. In about A. D. 54 Paul writes, "For the mystery of iniquity doth already work; only he who now letteth will let (or hinder) until he be taken out of the way. And then shall that Wicked be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the Spirit of his mouth, and destroy by the brightness of his coming." 2 Thes. ii. 7-8. Paul testifies that the evil power worked in his day, but some power hindered the rise of the sin power, and as soon as that that hindered was out of the way, then the man of sin could appear. The fact that it worked in Paul's day is pretty strong evidence that it has appeared long years in the past. And the most reasonable theory is that the power that hindered in Paul's day was the Roman pagan power; and history shows that soon after Rome became Christian, the Papacy was established on the ruins of Paganism. Agreeing with the symbol in Daniel of its coming up after the ten horns in the fifth or sixth century. John testifies, "And this is that Spirit of Antichrist.....And even now is it already in the world." 1 John iv. 3. These witnesses all agree and place the rise of the sin power in the early centuries of our Christian era. Therefore it is not a future manifestation from our time.

In the second place we will notice the life time, or how long does the man of sin continue. Paul says, "The mystery of iniquity doth already work".....and that after the one that hindered was taken away, "Then shall that wicked one be revealed, whom the Lord shall consume with the Spirit of his mouth, and shall destroy with the brightness of his coming." John also recognizes the spirit of Antichrist in his day. 1 John iv. 3.

Furthermore the period of his reign is given in the Scriptures as 1260 years, and that in that time he should "wear out the saints." Dan. vii. 25. This expression "wear out the saints," indicates that he like the poor, as said the Master, "Ye have always with you." The saints are "given into his hand until a time, times, and the dividing of time." Dan. vii. 25. This same time is mentioned in Rev. xiii. 5, "To continue 42 months." In either of those quotations there is 1260 days, and the Bible gives us the key to interpret them in symbolic prophecy—a day for a year. See Num. xiv. 34; Ezek. iv. 6. And the fact that seven times in Dan. iv. 25 are seven literal years, cannot be urged against the day-year interpretation, because the king in the case is an individual man, therefore literal time. But time in connection with symbols is always symbolic. Thirdly, Has the Papacy fulfilled the predictions concerning "Antichrist, the man of sin, the mystery of iniquity?" As far as my observations have extended, the objection has been that the Papacy has not exalted itself above God, but has acknowledged a Supreme Ruler. Therefore the Antichrist must be an atheist or infidel. I wonder how upon that hypothesis can they account for his "sitting in the temple of God." 2 Thes. ii. 4. And again, what "mystery" would there be in the system? Paul calls it "the mystery of iniquity." And John says, "On her forehead was a name written mystery, Babylon, the mother of harlots." Now for the proof that the Papacy is the "Antichrist," "the man of sin," "the mystery of iniquity," and that its head, the Pope, exalts himself above God. In the first place he is Antichrist, because he claims to be head of all the Christian churches; thus usurping the position of Christ. See 1 Cor. xi. 3, "But I would have you know, that the head of every man is Christ." Again Christ says, "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart." And again, "Blessed are the meek, for they shall inherit the earth." And of him is written that, "He humbled himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." In this humble disposition, the Papacy is opposed to Christ—and that is what the Antichrist signifieth, and John recognized in Cerinthus the spirit of Antichrist, because he denied that Christ came in the flesh. 1 John iv. 3. This exalting spirit manifested by Cerinthus and his followers that Christ was a pre-existent Spirit being was developed in the Papacy until we have the doctrine of the trinity; and men drunken with false doctrine use the term, "Eternal Son of God." A few extracts from history will show that the papacy is opposed to Christ in the spirit of exaltation it has manifested in speaking great swelling words of vain exaltation. From Pope Boniface VIII. we have the following decree, which is still extant in the common law: "We declare, say, define, pronounce it necessary to salvation for every human creature to be subject to the Roman pontiff." From Ferraris Ecclesiastical Dictionary, a standard Roman Catholic authority, we quote the following condensed outline of papal power as given under the word papa, article 2nd: "The pope is of such dignity and highness that he is not simply a man but, as it were, God, and vicar of God.....Hence the Pope is crowned with a triple crown, as king of heaven, of earth and of hell. Nay, the Pope's excellence and power are not only about heavenly, terrestrial and infernal things, but he is also above angels, and is their superior; so that if it were possible that angels could err from the faith, or entertain sentiments contrary thereto, they could be judged and excommunicated by the Pope.....He is of such great dignity and power that he occupies one and the same tribunal with Christ; so that whatsoever the Pope does seems to proceed from the mouth of God.".....He further adds: "The Pope can sometimes counteract the divine law by limiting, explaining, etc."

Again I quote from Fox's "Acts and Monuments," by H. G. Guinness, an English writer of note. "All the earth is my diocese, and I am the ordinary of all men, having the authority of the King of all kings, upon all subjects. I am all in all, and above all, so that God himself, and I, the vicar of God, have both one consistory, and I am able to do almost all that God can do. In all things that I list my will is to stand for reason, for I am able by the law to dispense above the law, and of wrong to make justice in correcting laws and changing them. Wherefore, if these things that I do be said not to be done of man, but of God—What can you make me but God? Again, if prelates of the church be called of Constantine for gods, I then being above all prelates, seem by the same reason to be above all gods. Wherefore, no marvel if it be in my power to change time and times, to alter and abrogate laws, to dispense with all things, yea, with the precepts of Christ." Is not this man the one that Paul calls "that man of sin,"......"the son of perdition?" "Who opposeth and exalteth himself above all that is called God, or that is worshipped; so that he as God sitteth in the temple of God, showing himself that he is God." As "the man of sin," he has violated every precept of the divine law by teaching his followers to worship images. By killing God's saints, by coveting and confiscating their property.

I have before me a work by the Right Rev. Richard Gilmour, D. D. Bishop of Cleveland, called "Bible History," on p. 54-56. The author gives the ten commandments that was written on tables of stone, but omits the one that prohibits the making of graven images and divides the last one into two, thus making up the number, ten. "The mystery of iniquity." What better term could be found in all our language to designate the papal system, than the "mystery of iniquity"? Professing to be the representative of Christ, and at the same time practicing hypocrisy, tyranny, and murder. The mystery is in the minds of its devotees—believing that there is no salvation outside the Roman communion. The fact that the Pope exalts himself above God is manifest by his claim to dispense above God's law, and to change the law—even the precepts of Christ. A noted instance of exercising this claim is seen in the use of images in their churches. In proof that Pope Nicholas could dispense above the precepts of Christ, he says, "for where Christ biddeth Peter to put up his sword..... do not I, Pope Nicholas, writing to the bishops of France, exhort them to draw out their material swords." The Huguenots of France could testify in this instance

GEO. FRANCIS.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. Last week the topic under consideration was:

IS THE GOSPEL A HIDDEN OR A REVEALED PROPOSITION?

Not having finished this we will still continue our study along that line.

Now Carrie, what was the conclusion of last week's study?

Carrie. That study was based on Heb. ii. 3: "How shall we escape, if we neglect so great a salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him; God also bearing them witness, both with signs and wonders, and divers miracles, and gifts of the Holy Spirit."

Q. How did we divide that up?

A. Into three parts.

1st. "Which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord."

2nd. "Confirmed unto us by them that heard him."

3d. "God also bearing witness, both with signs and wonders, etc."

Q. Which of these divisions did we consider?

A. Our time was spent upon the first.

Q. What did we learn from our study of that section?

A. We found, that Cornelius, who desired to obtain the "great salvation," was also directed to that "which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord," as the "words whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved."

Q. Where did we find that?

A. In Acts x. 37: "Which was published through all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached."

Q. What did we learn?

A. We found that Jesus did not begin to preach, until John had completed his mission, and was cast into prison.

Q. At what place did he begin?

A. At Galilee.

Q. Is there anything hidden about this?

A. Not a thing. When we can positively locate both the time and place at which he preached his first gospel message, then there cannot be any dispute about having found the "great salvation," "which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord."

Q. Can we find the time and place?

A. Yes, and also the message he preached as well.

Q. Well, is not that as clear evidence as can be given to prove any proposition.

A. Exactly so; eyes which cannot see that, must be blinded by the god of this world, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ should shine in their minds.

Q. Where do we find the time, place and message?

A. In Mark i. 14: "Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee preaching (the 'great salvation') the gospel of the kingdom of God."

Q. Was this the extent of our lesson last week?

A. Yes.

Teacher. Well, George, what about the second section: "Was confirmed unto us by them that heard him." Who heard him?

A. His disciples.

Q. In their confirmation did they preach the same message as the gospel, the "power of God unto salvation" the "great salvation?"

A. They preached exactly the same message.

Q. Where do you find that?

A. In Luke ix. 1-6: "Then he called his twelve disciples together, and gave them power and authority over all devils, and to cure diseases. And he sent them to preach the kingdom of God."

Q. Did they do so?

A. Yes. "And they departed and went through the towns preaching the gospel,"—"the gospel of the kingdom of God."

Q. The third section said that God would add his confirmation in the shape of signs, and wonders, etc. Did he do so?

A. Yes. See Mark xvi. 19, 20: "After the Lord had spoken unto them, (for forty days of the things pertaining unto the kingdom of God, Acts i. 3) he was received up into heaven, and sat on the right hand of God. And they went forth, and preached every where, the Lord working with them, and confirming the Word with signs following."

Teacher. When we read about the kingdom of God in the Scriptures, or the gospel or glad tidings of the kingdom, to what kingdom does it allude?

Albert. The kingdom of Israel over which David reigned.

Q. Well, are you not aware that some people teach that the kingdom of God is the government of God, whereby he reigns over the hearts of the people through Jesus, established A. D. 33?

A. Oh yes, but that is not the kingdom the Bible speaks about, it is nothing more than a dangerous perversion, simply a deduction of the human fleshly mind. The disciples who confirmed the "great salvation," and were drilled and trained personally by the Lord himself, both prior to, and after the Lord's death and resurrection, did not seem to conceive of such a foolish subterfuge.

Q. What was their conception?

A. See Acts i. 6, just before the Lord's ascension, when he had finished giving them years of personal instruction, they asked this question: "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" Now when Jesus sent them to preach the kingdom of God, do you suppose he meant them to preach a sort of spiritual government of God, established A. D. 33. They had no conception of that which had its origin in the brains of some creed-bound gospel nullifiers.

Q. Well, what is the kingdom of God?

A. The kingdom that God promised Jesus.

Q. See Luke ii. 32, 33: "The Lord shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

Q. Was David's reign a spiritual affair over the hearts of the people?

A. No. He reigned literally over the house of Jacob.

Q. Who were the house of Jacob?

A. The children of Israel.

Q. God promised Jesus the same throne—the throne of his father David, with the house of Jacob over which he exercised his royal power, did he not?

A. He did. There is something real about all of this, entirely devoid of all this spiritual quackery.

Q. How long will he occupy David's throne?

A. "Of his kingdom there shall be no end."

Q. Did God make a covenant with David concerning the eternal perpetuity of his throne, with his seed the Christ upon it?

A. He did. See Psalm lxxxix. 3, 4: "I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant, thy seed (Christ) will I establish forever, and build up thy throne to all generation." His oath and covenant related to a real throne, upon which his seed will exercise real regal power. There is no sort of spiritual trash in all this.

Q. Will he literally keep this covenant?

A. He will. See verses 34, 35: "My covenant will I not break, nor alter the thing that is gone out of my lips. Once have I sworn by my holiness that I will not lie unto David." It is the worst kind of sickish nonsense to suppose that this oath and covenant relates to a sort of spiritual government of God to be established A. D. 33, and that this is the "gospel of the kingdom" preached by Jesus and his disciples. There can be little doubt that preachers who thus teach, that their brains are befogged with the wine of old Babylon.

Q. The oath and covenant made with David, and the oath and covenant made with Abraham relate to the same literal kingdom do they not?

A. They do. See Luke i. 69-73: "And hath raised up an horn of salvation for us in the house of his servant David; as he spake by the mouth of his holy prophets which have been since the world began To perform the mercy promised to our fathers, and to remember his holy covenant; and the oath which he sware unto our father Abraham."

Q. Did the oath sworn unto our father Abraham, relate to a spiritual kingdom of God, to be established A. D. 33?

A. No, that is too foolish to be worth while taking notice of. It related to a covenant granting real territory, with a real government upon it, through which the nations are to be blessed. Heb. vi. 18-20, show that those who enter into this oath-bound covenant, have "strong consolation," have "fled for refuge to lay hold upon the hope set before us." The only place of "refuge" and "hope" is found in the gospel, even the oath-bound gospel of the kingdom.

Q. How can we distinguish between the true and false gospel?

A. It is in the matter of the oath and covenant. The true faith and hope of the gospel is backed by the oath and covenant, and all others not so backed, is bogus. This is so clear that none need stumble as to what the true gospel is. Here is a sample of bogus faith.

"A charge to keep I have
A God to glorify,
A never-dying soul to save,
And fit it for the sky."

There is no oath and covenant to this gospel, therefore, it bears the stamp "bogus." Again:

"When I can read my title clear
To mansions in the skies,
I'll bid farewell to every fear,
And wipe my weeping eyes."

There is no "title clear to mansions in the skies," unless the title is sworn to. Lacking the oath and covenant, the faith, hope and title is stamped as "bogus."

The "gospel of the kingdom" is good news concerning a real genuine government, having real territory, and a real king, with real people, which need a real genuine government. This is stamped as "genuine" by a real oath and covenant. Now, if you change this real kingdom for a spiritual government of God established A. D. 33, and call this "the gospel of the kingdom," you may stamp that a "spiritual humbug," being destitute of God's oath and covenant.

By the means of God's oath and covenant, the real gospel can be distinguished from a thousand gospels by means of this oath and covenant. None but the genuine bears that stamp. Yours in the true faith.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

We are trying to work off our accumulated communications as fast as possible. Try and be patient, and we will give all attention as soon as possible.

WILL all who are in arrears please give us their renewals now. We are in need of all dues. Give this prompt attention.

THERE is little of war news to tell for the past week. Several large armies of Japs seem to be hard to locate, so well do they keep their own counsel. There is no doubt but they hold all of Corea, and are masters on the water. There is strong talk of peace being arranged, with the king of England as the prime mover. However it is said that Russia cannot consent to peace until after she has met a Japanese army on land and been victorious. Turkey is again causing talk.

ON last Wednesday Bro. F. L. Austin and family moved from Argos, Ind. to Niagara Falls, N. Y. It had been arranged by some of the friends at Argos that on the Monday evening before Bro. Austin's family should be invited to take supper at the home of Bro. B. Taylor, and that later in the evening they should be surprised by their friends gathering in a body and walking in on them. The programme was carried out successfully, about one hundred being present, some going from Plymouth. Supper was served to all, and the evening passed pleasantly, old and young joining in regrets that they were to lose Bro. Austin's from their midst, but with the wish that their new home may be a pleasant one.

Being in Christ Jesus, No. 2.

A SUNDAY MORNING ADDRESS.

In chapter v. 1-11 we meet the phrase, through, by or in Jesus Christ, or its equivalent. And here are represented, as bestowed freely, in or through him, justification, peace with God, access by faith, a gracious standing, rejoicing in hope of the glory of God, even in tribulation, the love of God shed abroad in the heart, safekeeping in his life, perpetual joy in God, etc. In him the sinner at once becomes, in God's sight, a saint. All this is bestowed freely to one who is

IN CHRIST JESUS.

Can there be a more important question, than, "How one can get into Christ?" By reference to Rom. vi. 3, 4, we can read these important words: "Know ye not, that so many of us as were baptized into Jesus Christ, were baptized into his death? Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so we also should walk in newness of life." This is the FORM of the doctrine, or teaching—an ordinance that brings the truth within the apprehension of all our senses,

PHYSICAL AND SPIRITUAL;

and intensifies our experience of the doctrine. In the 5th of Romans, 15th verse we see the first Adam, the organic, ancestral, federal head of the race. His acts were representative acts. When he sinned the race he represented suffered with him. Adam could transmit to posterity no better nature than he possessed. We inherit his moral and physical corruption and bondage. In order to redeem any of the fallen race was necessary. Now mark, The whole race was in Adam the first, without any voice or choice in the matter as you know. But it is not so with the Second, or last Adam. All in Christ will be made alive as surely as that all in the first Adam died. But all who were in the first Adam will not be in the Second. The Second Adam has exacted inexorable conditions of those who would get into him. They must believe the gospel of the kingdom, they must repent—reform their lives—they must yield heart obedience to their faith, in baptism for the remission of past sins. Everything depends upon meeting these requirements. Turning back to the 6th of Romans where it says "as many as were baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death;" it continues "therefore we are by baptism...into death, that like as Christ was raised up from the dead by the glory of the Father, even so, we also (being raised out of the water) should walk in newness of life;" not a new nature of existence,—but a new course of conduct or manner of living, new aims, new objects, purposes, principles, live for God instead of self, —live for the future instead of the present. We are then told that if we are planted together in the likeness of Christ's death we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection, knowing this, that our is crucified with him (Christ) that the body of sin might be destroyed, that henceforth we should not serve sin. It is evident from this that the believer on being buried with Christ by baptism into death, is reckoned as if he had actually died for the sin of himself; and in his burial in water as if he had gone into the grave, the place of death, decay and corruption. There he is to leave the old man, the old disposition, crucified, dead and buried,—put off in Christ is judicially regarded as crucified. And besides that, in Christ's resurrection, symbolized by being raised out of the water, the believer is regarded as risen with Christ now;

A NEW ADAM

BURIED WITH HIM

NOT PHYSICALLY

of course, but mentally, spiritually and morally quickened together with Christ, preparatory to the physical, which is styled the redemption of the body, when mortality is swallowed up of life; and the believer is glorified together with Christ. For the renewed body we wait with all saints in eager longing till we be clothed upon at the resurrection. If we are in Christ Jesus our minds have already been renewed. Says Peter, "Blessed be the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy, hath begotten us again to

A HOPE OF LIFE

by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." Wonderful words! It is not merely a potential renewing by laying a foundation for a possible, but still future regeneration or begettal. We who believe are already risen with him. Risen from the death of trespasses and sins, we are described as being previously in, through the faith of the operation of God, that is to say, the old course of life, and its kindredship with Adam, and the heritage of the curse with the incubus of his death, all this was put off at the grave, and left there; and we are now in the Second Adam. And we saw recently that "as he is, so are we in this world. He is the first-fruits of them that slept. And if the first-fruits be holy so also is the lump." Truly a vast and sublime subject, and of vital importance,—and one we cannot dwell upon too often, or too earnestly. But my time slips past me before I hardly get into the marrow of it. The attention given to it by the Spirit shows how all-important a thing it is to us to be

IN CHRIST JESUS.

And when I attempt to enumerate, or sum up, the blessings and privileges that accrue to us through that relationship, it makes me stand in blank amazement. The doctrine of justification by faith is easily spoken,—but O what volumes of meaning it contains for us. To be justified by faith in Christ Jesus is far more than pardon and reconciliation. It causes us to be

RECKONED AS JUST;—

I mean reckoned as if we had never sinned. It puts us upon the same standing as Christ, before God. The beloved Paul in the 1st epistle Cor. i. 2 explains that we are sanctified in the Anointed Jesus, constituted holy ones, with all those who invoke the name of our Lord Jesus Christ in every place. Holy—that's what it is to be "in Christ." And in the 30th verse of the same chapter this is further elaborated. There we are told that being in Christ Jesus we find him (Christ Jesus) —mark the language—"Made of God unto us wisdom and righteousness, and

SANCTIFICATION,

and redemption." It will be worth your while to notice, that sanctification in Christ Jesus is just as prominent in Corinthians as justification in Christ Jesus is in Romans. In the latter the death and re-living of Christ was most prominent: while in Corinthians, our life in him,—and his life in us, is the prominent theme. In other words, the apostle begins in the Corinthians where he left off in Romans, —and carries it on. In 1 Cor. vi. 17 we find the brief but grand statement which illuminates and illustrates both of these epistles. "He that is joined to the Lord is

ONE SPIRIT."

A startling statement, truly. It should induce one and all of us to turn the search-light upon one,—just one. These words represent the very highest and closest unity conceivable. Only one thing can dissolve it. We all know what that one thing is, or should know: it is unfaithfulness! In this epistle this unity is seen to involve the following privileges and duties:—(1) A knowledge of God, or insight into his eternal purpose. (2) The indwelling of God, his Temple (chap. iii. 16) and therefore possession of us by God. (3)

A POSSESSION IN GOD

as our portion, chap. iii. 21-23. (4) A stewardship in God with corresponding obligations, chap. iv. 1, 2. (5) A separation or dedication unto God as his abode, chap. vi. 11, 20. (6) A subjection of the body to God's glory, chap. ix. 27. (7) Communion with God, chap. x. 16, 17. (8) Service to God made possible by communion with him, chap. xii. (9) Dominion of love as the controlling power. Holiness and decorum in public assemblies, chap. xiv. (10) Victory over death and the grave, chap. xv.

In the second epistle the same great thought is enlarged. In chap. i. we are taught that in him we are established, anointed, sealed and have the foretaste of future inheritance. The dominant thought here is the privileges we have in and through Christ; transformation into his image chap. iii. 18,—creation in Christ Jesus, separation unto him, unselfish liberality as the fruit of our union with him—the abundance of revealed truth in him, conformity to his likeness, power over sin, fellowship with God, and the anticipation of the glory to be revealed in us. The thought that seems to overtop all the rest in these two epistles is our creation of God in Christ Jesus, chap. v. 17.

In closing I would say, I would be glad if I could impress upon every mind the necessity of making a personal application to ourselves of at least one lesson from every chapter of Holy Writ we read, or sermon we read, or address we listen to, in the House of God. I am afraid if this is not done the benefit derived will be very little indeed. I think if one does not try to do what I have said—seize upon the salient points, or, at least, one salient point of and test ourselves by it,—that person has perhaps been in a happy frame of mind, and that is something, to be sure,—but he cannot feed upon the memory of his own state of mind very long with profit. What I want to show is, that it is only as we hear

THE WORDS OF GOD

and do them, shall we be like a house built on a rock that shall stand immovable against the burst of the storm. "Hearken and do," is one of the catch-words in the book of Deuteronomy. We cannot heed that injunction unless we catch and hold something for future use. With all the energy I am capable of I have always so far, tried to show that intellectual attainments in the truth avail nothing, unless they take hold of the affections and regulate our conduct. And I solemnly aver, that I think it better to do one thing for God in obedience to his truth, than to cram one's head with a hundred, as though for a competitive examination, or intellectual past time. Most affectionately, and in view of the imminence of the times I entreat you all to look steadily into the divine mirror held up to you. Amen.

PLEASE do not forget that we need all that is due on subscription at this time.

The Time of the End.

"At the time of the end shall the king of the south push at him, and the king of the north shall come against him like a whirlwind." Dan. xi. 40. Bible students are mostly agreed that the two powers spoken of from the 40th verse to the end of the chapter is Turkey as king of the south, and Russia as king of the north. And I am inclined to believe that the first pushing commenced at the time of the Crimean war. And in the first part of Ezek. xxxviii. the prophet is speaking of this same time when Gog (the king of the north) first came against the king of the south, and as the prophet foresaw Gog was turned back until he and all his bands were prepared according to Joel iii. And now we see Gog and all his bands, yea, we now see all nations prepared for war on a gigantic scale, and according to Joel iii. they are now ready to be gathered to the valley of Jehoshaphat. And it is well known that the king of the north has coveted for years the territory occupied by the king of the south, and he would have taken it by conquest long ago if it had not been prevented by the other European nations.

But at God's appointed time the king of the north will come down like a whirlwind. Dan. xi. 40. Like a storm, like a cloud to cover the land. Ezek. xxxviii. And no opposing power will prevent Gog then from taking his coveted prize. But the king of the north will not stop nor tarry long at the capital of the king of the south, for as the prophet has said, "He will overflow and pass over." Ver. 40. "He shall stretch forth his hand also upon the countries, and the land of Egypt shall not escape." Ver. 42. "But tidings out of the east, and out of the north shall trouble him." Ver. 44.

The turning back of Gog and the preparing of himself and all his hands for war have already been accomplished, and now looking at the present situation in the far east we see circumstances arising that may give the king of the north a strong incentive, a motive to do what the prophets have said shall be done. We already see that Gog is receiving tidings out of the east that is troubling him, and as the prophet further says, "Therefore he shall go forth with great fury to destroy, and utterly to make away many. Ver. 44. And if Japan should succeed in getting possession of the east end of the Siberian railroad that would add to the troublous tidings from the east, and Russia would be almost compelled to seek a shorter route by water than the circuitous route she now must move her fleet. According to treaty stipulations Russia cannot now move war vessels nor war supplies through the Dardanelles. But if Russia could move her Black Sea Fleet and her war supplies through the Dardanelles and Suez canal her route by water to the far east would be considerably shortened. Thus we now see that Russia has a strong incentive, and it may soon appear to be an imperative necessity for her to take possession of the Dardanelles and the Suez canal, and so fulfill verses 42, 43.

But just where the tidings out of the north are to come from, at this writing may be hard to tell. But it is well known that there is a restless revolutionary spirit working in Russia, and it is already troubling the Czar to know how to deal with this internal revolutionary agitation. He has placed a strong censorship on all publications that in any way encourage revolution. But the revolutionary element have established printing offices across the line in Austria and Germany, and millions of revolutionary pages are printed and secretly smuggled across the lines into Russia, and placed in the hands of readers, and even the Russian soldiers have so largely accepted of this revolutionary spirit that the Czar hardly knows who are his friends, and the tidings out of the north that are to add to the Czar's troubles may be the internal revolution in his own home land. And thus we can see already circumstances clustering around the king of the north that are liable to drive him into one desperate act after another until he finally falls upon the mountains of Israel. God says that he is against Gog, and if God be against him then one calamity after another will befall him until his final overthrow. Thus viewing the present situation God's people have good reasons to rejoice, knowing that the time of their redemption draweth nigh, and the saints may be called away before much more of this prophecy be fulfilled.

Editorial Mention.

A ten days' meeting has just closed at Moriah, Clark Co., Illinois. The attendance was good considering the condition of the roads and weather. There was a good interest shown by those who attended, and especially can it be said of the young people that their attendance and conduct were commendable. The direct result of the meeting was the baptism of Sister Cora A. Partlow. If there were no other result, this alone would far more than pay for the effort. Sister Partlow is strong in the faith and in the prime of life, and I predict for her a long life of usefulness in the service of the Master. May God bless her for the determined stand she has taken. We have many brethren at this place who are deeply interested in pushing the work; then there are others who seem to be indifferent. Having the hope that we of the Abrahamic faith have, I cannot quite understand how any brother or sister should allow a spirit of indifference to grow up. Another observation which I made was that this locality is like nearly all other localities in that there are certain evil spirits, who, as soon as they find out that their is danger that the truth may take root in new hearts, set themselves to the service of the devil in doing all they can to keep people away from the preaching of the gospel. May God have mercy on all such. My stay with the brethren here has been exceedingly pleasant and the friendship and fellowship formed are now a part of my existence.

Your brother in hope of life.

Woman and Beer.

The influence of beer upon women is becoming one of the painful signs of our times. They have been made to think it harmless, and even a beneficial drink; they send out for it freely, and invite their friends to drink with them. They order it at the groceries, with the household supplies. They say it makes them "feel rested when tired," forgetting that it only stupefies and poisons them. Pitchers cross the streets at midday and return foaming to the family entrance. Young ladies call for it in the eating saloons. Some young ladies, teachers in the public schools, at a distance from their homes, in one of our cities, daily carry a bottle of beer with their midday lunch, and say they cannot be without it. I have seen ladies in carriages stop in front of saloons—some of them not saloons of the highest class, so called —and call for beer to be brought to them, and drink it unblushingly in the sight of the passers by. Never has there been so much drunkenness among women as within a few years, since the general introduction of beer. "The truth is," said a recent writer, "the consumption of beer by women in this country is immense and rapidly increasing. It is not yet their custom to go to the saloons and drink at the bar, as they do in England, but, with the present tendencies, that day is not far distant. At a recent festival in Cincinnati beer was drank openly in the streets, and many in the procession drank frequently, thus exhibiting their shame and glorying in it. Women drank, as well as men—drank publicly. Mothers upon the sidewalk gave beer to the infants in their arms." A woman recently went from saloon to saloon, in the city of New York, trying to sell her one year old babe for a drink of beer.—B. Dorchester.

For Sake of the Next One.

"Why, auntie, I thought you were through!"

"So I am with my work," returned Aunt Carrie, as with a smile she went on threading her needle. "I am only trying to smooth the way for the next one."

"Who for instance?" questioned Will, curiously.

"Well, supposing that just as papa is starting for business to-morrow morning he discovers that he is about to lose a button from his coat, and he can spare only about two minutes in which to have it sewed on. Don't you think it would be quite a relief to mamma to find her needle already threaded.

"Of course, for I shouldn't think one could find that bit of an eye at all if he were in a hurry. I had a dreadful time the other day when I wanted to mend my ball. I should have been glad to be your next one then."

"Suppose, again, Will, that whoever dropped that piece of wood upon the cellar stairs had stopped to pick it up, remembering that some one else would be coming that way soon. Wouldn't it have been worth while? Think how Bridget has suffered from her fall, and how the household has been inconvenienced!"

"Yes, auntie, and if I had wiped up the water I spilled this noon, sister wouldn't have been obliged to change her dress when she was in such a hurry to get back to school; but a fellow will have to keep pretty wide-awake to remember every time." And with a thoughtful expression on his boyish face, Will passed out of his house and toward the front gate, leisurely munching a banana as he went, but apparently engaged in deep thought. Reaching the sidewalk, he threw down the banana skin, and proceeded on his way; but presently he turned and looked hard at the yellow object lying upon the pavement, and then, quickly retracing his steps, he picked it up and flung it far into the road, where no one would be likely to slip upon it. —Morning Star.

Overworked.

If the victim of overwork is a married woman, she has probably begun her married life wrong. By doing a thousand things she ought never to do—that her husband should do, or have done for her—he finally becomes accustomed to view her in the light of a hewer of wood and drawer of water. No matter how devoted a lover he may have been, under such treatment he is certain to degenerate into a careless, indifferent husband.

I remember once to have seen a woman sitting in a dark, close lumber-room, tearing dusty old rags into stripes that were to enter into a rag carpet. June, with its roses and balmy airs, was in full glory; but that wretched carpet had to be finished, and by that time the sultry heat of summer precluded all out-door enjoyment. I knew another who sat before her sewing machine during the month of August, making beautiful clothing for her children. Whose fault was it that by-and-by she was completely prostrated by illness?

Sacrifice to Save Them.

If a dear relative was dangerously sick and we must have money at once in order to get them a physician, would not thread-bare and old-fashioned clothing and very poor furniture and machinery do a little longer? Oh, my dear brothers and sisters! Some dear ones are desperately ill with the disease of sin. Can we not do with plain, poor and old-fashioned things so that we may have means to help send the great Physician's remedies to these sin-sick souls?

Some are in awful peril. Shall we shrink from being odd, if need be, in trying to rescue them? Oh, can we not be peculiar, if by so doing we may lead some one into safety, or clear ourselves from the guilt of their death? —Mrs. M. A. Dake.

Jesus.

The central idea of the Bible is Jesus. The intelligent soul of the world's history is the idea of the world's Saviour. History would be without order, Providence without polarity, but for Calvary. The pole-star of the pulpit is the cross. A system of theology without Jesus in the center, would be as a system of solar astronomy that left out the sun.—J. V. Watson.

What little faith you have, only live it for one day, and it will be stronger to-morrow. Live with your fellow-creatures as their brother to-day, and to-morrow God will be felt by you as your Father in heaven the more tenderly.—William Mountford.

I believe that there is no away, that no love, no life, goes over from us: it goes as He went, that it may come again, deeper and closer and surer, to be with us always, even to the end of the world.—George Macdonald.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

We have arranged to supply our readers with a War Atlas, containing maps of the war center adjacent to the Yellow Sea, Japan, Russia, Pacific Ocean, etc. and with statistical tables of useful information, enabling one to understand the situation as the war progresses. The maps are colored, and it is substantially bound. Sent post paid for 25 cents. Send for one and keep posted.

We've Always Been Provided For.

"Good wife, what are you singing for? You know we've lost the hay,
And what we'll do with horse and kine, is more than I can say;
While like as not, with storm and rain, we'll lose both corn and wheat."
She looked up with a pleasant face, and answered low and sweet,
"There is a Heart, there is a Hand, we feel but cannot see;
We've always been provided for and we shall always be."

He turned around with sullen gloom. She said:
"Love be at rest:
You cut the grass, worked soon and late, you did your very best.
That was your work; you've not at all to do with wind and rain,
And do not doubt that you will reap rich fields of golden grain;
For there's a Heart, and there's a Hand, we feel but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and we shall always be."

"That's like a woman's reasoning; we must, is cause we must."
She softly said: "I reason not: I only work and trust.
The harvest may redeem the day. Keep heart, whate'er befide;
When one door shuts, I've always seen another open wide.
There is a Heart, there is a Hand, we feel but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and we shall always be."

Days came and go; 'twas Christmas time, and the great fire burned clear.
The farmer said: "Dear wife, it's been a good and happy year;
The fruit was rain, the surplus corn has brought the hay you know."
She lifted then a smiling face, and said: "I told you so!
For there's a Heart, and there's a Hand, we feel, but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and we shall always be."

Holding Fast.

"Let us hold fast the profession of our faith, without wavering." Heb. x. 23. What is our "profession"? We have professed to believe the covenants of promise, and have obeyed from the heart that form of doctrine essential to salvation. We have professed our faith in the coming King, professed to believe he is our high priest. That we are heirs of God, and joint heirs with Christ. An heir is not a possessor. Then let us run with patience the race that is set before us. "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering." How can we do this? "Let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works. Nor forsaking the assembling of ourselves together as the manner of some is." Can we hold the profession of our faith fast, and forsake the assembling? Can we consider one another, to provoke unto love and good works, and at the same time forsake the assembling? Forsake not, is a command. Remember, he does not ask for a crowd, not even a preacher, just two or three of like precious faith. What does it mean to not forsake the assembling? Are there two believers in any locality? Then see to it that you obey this command, and be more particular about it, as ye see the day approaching. Thereby holding the beginning of your confidence firm unto the end. It is plain to be seen, if as many as two persons live where it is at all possible to meet for worship in the appointed way, and they forsake, neglect, they are not obeying God. They are not holding fast their profession, and it is impossible to build one another up and give the needed exhortation. How can we build one another up in our most holy faith, and not meet to worship? Dearly beloved, see that no man take thy crown. If we come short, some one will wear the crown. The importance of obeying this command cannot be over estimated. "Cast not away your confidence, which hath great recompence of reward." Heb. x. 35. The reward will not be obtained, unless we, the house of God, "hold fast the confidence and rejoicing of hope firm unto the end." Heb. iii. 6. How shall we hold fast the confidence unto the end? The rules are laid down in unmistakeable language. "Let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." "Let us hold fast the profession of our faith." "And let us consider one another to provoke unto love and good works; not forsaking the assembling of ourselves, as the manner of some is. Heb. x. 22-25. Well, says one, I have professed, but I do not think it makes much difference if I do not meet with the brethren. "Ye are not your own, ye are bought with the precious blood of Jesus," and it is your reasonable service to present your bodies a living sacrifice, wholly acceptable unto God. Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, exhorting one another, and so much the more as ye see the day approaching. From what Paul says in the following verse he considered it a sin to neglect, forsake these things. "For if we sin willfully after we have received a knowledge of the truth, there remaineth no more sacrifice for sin." There is a great responsibility resting on every one who has named the name of Christ. We are to build one another up in our most holy faith. The brethren, whether they be few or many, who meet regularly and do as commanded, are rooted and grounded in the faith, and when the preacher and the big meeting comes along they are found holding up the standard of truth, and when the big meeting is over they remain, and are a light set on a hill which cannot be hid. Dear brethren, what is the extent of your isolation? Are there less than two, if not, forsake not the assembling. Add to your faith all the Christian graces mentioned by Peter. 2 Pet. i. Through the knowledge of him who hath called us to glory and virtue according to his divine power, hath given unto us all things that pertain unto life and godliness, through the knowledge of him that hath called us to glory and virtue. Whereby are given unto us exceeding great and precious promises. That by these ye might be partakers of divine nature. Having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust. Yes, we are in the world but not of it. Let us follow Peter a little further. He says besides this, Giving all diligence, add to your faith virtue, courage. Dear brother and sister, do you think this needed courage will be added to your faith, and you away from the place of worship, not considering your brother in any way? Nay, verily, we may fall into many sinful ways, and let these precious things slip from us. Add to virtue, knowledge, and to knowledge, temperance, (self control) not an easy matter, without the brother's help, patience, another not so easily acquired, and godliness still another, and to godliness, brotherly kindness, and to this love. How can these be added to our faith when we do not consider our brother enough to meet with him for worship? Dear brother and sister, do you not see to forsake the assembling, we are disobeying a command, and rejecting the means by which we are to grow in grace (favor) and knowledge? "They that feared the Lord spake often one to another, and the Lord hearkened and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him, for them that feared the Lord and thought upon his name." Now notice the blessings which are promised those who do these things, "And they shall be mine saith the Lord of Hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels, and I will spare them as a man spareth his own son that serveth him." May this be our portion when Jesus comes to make up his jewels.

Your Sister striving for the victory.

The Two Manners of Life.

Timothy speaks of the present life and the future life as separate. "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is and that which is to come." Tim. iv. 8. According to Leviticus xvii. 14, the life which now is, is in the blood. And according to Gen. xlii. 2, the life which now is (or the blood life), is sustained by eating of the fruits of the ground. When Hagar's little son was about to die of thirst the Lord did not cause the child to live without the water, but provided the natural means by which the present or blood life is sustained. Gen. xxi. 15-20. Elijah's natural life was miraculously prolonged, but the miracle in no way affected the natural or blood life of the honored prophet. The miracle was in the providing the food, and Elijah's life was prolonged in the natural way by eating the fruits of the ground. 1 Kings xvii. 10-15. The life which is to come is a spirit life, not the blood life. St. John iii. 5, 6. The future life is obtained by a living faith in God's Son. St. John iii. 36 and x. 28. The spirit life is not sustained by constant renewing of the wasting tissues by food and drink. For we are told that we shall be like him, for we shall see him as he is. 1 John v. 2. And that children of the resurrection cannot die any more. So we see man shall not live by bread alone (but the spirit of life is) by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God. The immortals eat, I suppose, as a pleasure, not of necessity. The Savior ate in the presence of his disciples after his resurrection. The angels ate with Abraham and Lot. In hope.

Selections.

Known in Adversity.

There are plenty of people who know us in the days of our prosperity. Persons who are clothed in purple and fare sumptuously have no lack of acquaintances. Everybody recognizes them, and most people are ready to interest themselves in what concerns them. But let the shadow of adversity fall, and how soon all this is changed. When the millionnaire becomes a beggar, and the honorable man an outcast; when there are no more feasts to be eaten or favors to be received; how soon the interest abates, and the friends that favored and flattered us in the days of our prosperity, forget us when adversity comes.

Sometimes there falls on men the reproach which attends wrong-doing, and the crown of honor is exchanged for the brand of crime. Innocence may suffer through slander and false accusations, or weak human nature may falter and fall in its course; and how many there are then who are unwilling to recognize the friend of other years whose reputation is now clouded by slander or blackened by crime.

Just when man forgets and forsakes us, then God remembers us and draws near. His invitation is, "Call upon me in the day of trouble and I will deliver thee." This is the voice of pure disinterested love. Here help is offered when and where it is needed, and deliverance is afforded when our necessity is most urgent.

The Psalmist gratefully records the faithfulness of God when he says, "I will be glad and rejoice in thy mercy; for thou hast considered my trouble; thou hast known my soul in adversities, and hast not shut me up into the hand of the enemy: thou hast set my feet in a large room." Psalm xxxi. 7, 8.

The God of David had known his soul "in adversities." There were many that knew him in prosperity. When he rode in his chariot, when he was honored and exalted, men knew him, esteemed him, and praised him. But in the days of adversity and trial, when others forgot him, still he could say unto his God, "Thou hast known my soul in adversities."

There are no friendships which are more firmly established or more thoroughly cemented than those which are consolidated in times of affliction or adversity. That friend who has been with us in days of hunger and thirst and cold and nakedness, is not soon forgotten. The comrade who has marched by our side through storm and sleet, and mud and mire, or who has stood shoulder to shoulder with us amid the leaden hail of battle: he who has been with us and has proved unfaltering, unselfish, and unshaken in his devotion, in the days of famine and distress; or he who has watched with us over our sick, and bent with us above our dying, and wept with us over our dead, has won a place in our hearts which the gay butterflies of fashion, the casual acquaintances of an hour can never attain.

It is in such scenes of trouble and adversity that our God has proved his sympathy for us; he has known us in our adversities. It was thus that Christ revealed himself to the world, "a man of sorrows and acquainted with grief;" tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin; passing through the whole realm of human sympathy and suffering, knowing its varied phases and circumstances of trial, temptation and distress, from the woes of wailing infancy upon a mother's knee, to those final hours of intensest mental and physical anguish, when on Calvary's cross he tasted death for every man: in all these circumstances God has come nigh to man, not only in his joys but in his sorrows; not only in the highest hopes that illuminate his soul, but in the deepest shadows which wrap his horizon in gloom.

God's knowledge of us in adversities is not confined to a mere recognition; it includes a watchful, tender supervision, a perfect acquaintance with all our needs and wants. Many times persons suffer, simply because their friends are ignorant of their true condition. Scores might be ready to help them, but they are not aware that a need exists. But the Lord knows us all altogether; no circumstance escaping his perception and understanding. He sees us and reads our deepest thoughts, our most secret sorrows; he knows us thoroughly; he has ever known his people, and in their hours of affliction and necessity has been their ever present help. He knew Joseph in the dungeon, Moses amid the bulrushes, David in his exile, Jeremiah in the miry pit, the three Hebrews in the fiery furnace, Daniel in the den of lions, Peter in the prison, John on the isle of Patmos, Bunyan in Bedford jail, and every other servant of God in every adversity, temptation, conflict or affliction which it has become his lot to endure.

He who makes the acquaintance of the Most High finds a friend that sticketh closer than a brother. Through the long days of sorrow and the silent nights of tears, he is still a God at hand. He has known our souls "in adversities." He has been with us in six troubles, and has not forsaken us in the seventh; and he has promised to be with us always, even to the end of the age. Though the gay votaries of pleasure and fashion may forsake us in the hour of need; we have in Him a refuge from the storm, a covert from the storm, a covert from the tempest, a springing fountain in a desert waste, the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.—The Christian.

Predictions that may be Relied On.

Let times be ever so good, if you are slothful you will be in want; let times be ever so bad, if you are diligent in the ways of God you will prosper. "The soul of the sluggard desireth, and hath nothing; but the soul of the diligent shall be made fat." Prov. xiii; 4.

Even though you be simple, yet, if you study God's word, you will become wise. "The entrance of thy words giveth light; it giveth understanding unto the simple." Psa. cxix. 130.

Whatsoever cause others may have for fear, you shall not be hurt if you trust in the Lord. "They that trust in the Lord shall be as Mount Zion, which cannot be removed, but abideth forever." Psa. cxxv: 1.

If you love and practice sin, it is impossible for you to escape punishment. "Be sure your sin will find you out." Num, xxxii: 23.

If you trust in your own resolution, strength, or righteousness, you are sure to fall. "He that trusteth in his own heart is a fool." Prov. xxviii: 26.

If you seek salvation from any but the Lord Jesus Christ, you will infallibly be deceived. "For there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts iv: 12.

Though you prosper in worldly things, if you practise sin, you will be unhappy. "There is no peace, saith the Lord, unto the wicked." Isa. xlviii: 22.

Whether you are young or old, weak or strong, sick or well, death is still standing at your door. "Dust thou art, and unto dust shalt thou return. Gen. iii: 19. "There is but a step between me and death." 1 Sam. xx; 3.

The Isle of Patmos.

The name of this island, writes Dr. A. T. Hanna, would never have been heard beyond the archipelago in which it stands, if John had not been banished thither.

Some prisons are famous, as it were, in themselves; that is, by a long succession of illustrious prisoners they have a great part in history. The Mamertine in Rome, the Wells of Venice, the Bastile in Paris, the Tower of London, are of this kind. There are other places, not originally meant for prisons, which have become famous by some one illustrious captive.

So, the rock of Masada, where the Jewish zealots slew themselves to escape the vengeance of the Romans. So, the Isle of Sainte Marguerite, where languished the Man with the Iron Mask. So, the Castle of Chillon is renowned for Bonivard alone. So, the obscure fortress in Austria, where Richard of England was for a time eating his lion-heart away. Such was Wartburg Castle, where God's providence allowed Luther to be imprisoned, that he might have leisure to translate the Scripture for all German folk. And though Bedford Goal was a goal, it would hardly emerge into the atmosphere of history till John Bunyan spends his twelve years there. The rock of St. Helena would be as little heard of as its compeer, Ascension Island, but for that mighty Shade, "the conqueror and the captive of the earth," who spent his last six years there. Thus, "the Isle that is called Patmos," has no record whatever in history, save that it became the place of exile for a persecuted apostle of the Lamb.

And we may note that the inspired John makes no reference whatever to any of his sufferings during his banishment. What unearthly dignity and continence is this! Here are no sighs and wailings over human injustice, and the hard lot of the exile.

How different from other exiles! The poet Ovid was banished among barbarians because of his immoral poetry. He takes up his guilty harp to mourn in doleful strains on his pitiful plight among a cruel and and savage people. Silvio Pellico is imprisoned for political offences, and he makes the world sympathize with him by his pensive thoughts in "My Prison." But John has a mind lifted up above itself. The Spirit of Christ that was in him, deigned not to make mention of his trials. "His mind to him a kingdom was." Patmos was a cheerless rock, but it was enough to stand upon. He could stand there and see all space and all time unrolled before him. He was shut out from the society of earth, but he "looked, and behold a door was opened in heaven." As Daniel, the exile, kept his window open toward Jerusalem, John had a spirit divinely lighted, and a window in it opened toward the celestial glory.—Armory.

Keep to the Word.

Keeping in the middle of the road we avoid the ditches on either side. If instead of disputing over what they believe, people would spend their time in inquiring what God has said, they would find less to dispute about, and more to agree upon, and would be greatly profited and instructed. Men argue long to prove that the Scripture favors or opposes something which is not mentioned in the Bible at all. Why not drop unscriptural phrases and statements, and take the Scripture itself and believe it? Said Eusebius: "Speak what is written and the strife will cease." A good way out of many of the strifes of the present day would be found by holding fast the form of sound words as contained in the Scriptures, putting a rein on the imagination, and speaking "what is written," not in the words which man's wisdom teaches, but those which the Holy Ghost uses.—H. L. Hastings.

Elder J. C. Kimsey, died near Mesa, Arizona, on the evening April 4th, 1904; being 79 years, 2 months, and 5 days old. Elder Kimsey came here from Kansas, some years ago, and settled on a small farm, near Mesa, Ariz. He preached quite frequently in the neighborhood of the brethren in this County. He suffered a great deal at times, the result of an injury. The writer spoke words of comfort to the bereaved widow, and sorrowing relatives and friends at the house, after which he was laid to rest, (in sleep of death, until the morning of the resurrection), at the Double Butte cemetery near Tempe.

J. M. FIKE.

Died at his home, Burkeville, Va., March 25, 1904, Solon Harding in the 57th year of his age. The subject of this notice spent his entire life near the place of his nativity and was one of the most honored and highly respected citizens of the County. During his last illness—of several months duration—he received the very best of attention, not simply from his physicians, but from his devoted sisters and affectionate brother. For 21 years he was in partnership with his brother Melbourne in the mercantile business in this town and after a short separation of less than ten months they are united in death and are sleeping side by side in Burkeville's beautiful city of the dead. In early life he obeyed his Lord's commandments and was baptized by Wiley Jones of sainted memory. He lived a clean, honest, Christian life and will be numbered among those who will spend eternity with Christ. Rev. Taylor, Christadelphian minister from Richmond, Va., conducted the last sad rites and spoke words of great comfort to the sorrowing family. "We are gathering homeward one by one."

The Bereans Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

A HANDFUL OF EARTH.

Oh what wonders we see in it. What a marvelous thing. Indeed, where is the marvel? For we can see nothing but a dry rough powder, dark and lifeless, which we tread under our feet, little thinking that it is of any value. But think for a moment how much it hides and holds that is truly beautiful, also bitter and sweet. From a handful of earth comes the glory of color. The red of the rose, and yellow as bright as the sun, the rich purple violet and the green leaves, and the very same earth produces the nettle's sting.

Who can fathom God's excellent skill? Indeed our mind is taken up in the wonders hid in the earth and our heart is fixed to praise the former of all things. Is it not a wonderful thought that from the dust of the ground came man, his image and breath from God. Therefore as man was made of the dust of the ground, he (like the flowers) was made subject to decay and death. Now we find that the first man Adam and Christ are in contrast. "For as in Adam all die even so in Christ shall all be made alive."

Now as in Adam all die, therefore Adam was the cause of the introduction of death into the world. But it is through our relationship to him that this death reaches to us and has its force upon us. Now the first thought in our mind would be, what can we do to obtain a resurrection from the death state and obtain eternal life. If we read in John vi: 39, 40, 44 and 54, we will find out who will be raised up and made alive at the last day.

ADELINE BEREAN SOCIETY.

The Adeline Berean Society has an enrollment of fourteen members, with an average attendance of about six. We endeavor to meet the second and fourth Sundays of every month at the homes of Brother and Sister E. F. Geslu and Brother and Sister George Pyper. We have been selecting lessons from the old leaflets, each leader selecting his own topic.

Our society had been discontinued from last July until the first of this year, on account of the extra work which those residing in the country, have during summer. But the first of the year we re-commenced with renewed vigor, determining to do the little in our power for the cause of the Master. If our interest has seemed to wane a little, we trust that each will resolve to do his part in the future.

There have been many drawbacks here this winter, such as sickness and severe weather, but there are still a faithful few, and we meet if there are only three present for we know that where two or three are gathered together in His name, he is in their midst.

We have sent THE RESTITUTION to two gentlemen whom we think will be interested. At the close of our meeting each present answers at roll call with a verse of Scripture. We find this an excellent way of learning some of the references which we so often need, and are sometimes at a loss to recall.

Let each and all of us remember the words of our Saviour which we find in Luke ix: 62. "No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back is fit for the kingdom of God."

MARY AHLAKSEN.

BAPTISM.

There are diversity of opinion in regard to baptism. Some say it is to sprinkle, some to pour, some to dip, or plunge and some say it is not necessary to be baptised at all. But Christ said to Nicodemus except a man be born of water and of the spirit he can not enter into the kingdom of God. And again the Scriptures teach he that believeth and is baptised shall be saved, yet Paul says baptism is not washing away the filth of the flesh, but the answer of a good conscience toward God. Peter said unto his congregation, "Repent and be baptised every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost."

God loveth his children that obey His will and followeth His commandments.

MYRTLE FEARS.

THE SERMON ON THE MOUNT.

Matthew v: 8. Blessed are the pure in heart, for their's is the kingdom of heaven. God wants us to have our hearts pure and clean if we expect to enter the kingdom of heaven. Matt-v: 5. Blessed are the meek for they shall inherit the earth. They that are meek and lowly at heart shall receive the earth as their reward or prize. Matt. v: 6. Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness, for they shall be filled. If we hunger and thirst after God's holy word we shall receive it. Matt. v: 9. Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God. We should not make trouble, but make peace instead, if we expect to be called God's children. Matt. v: 10. Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness sake for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

We must stand persecution like Christ did. We may not be nailed to the cross, but we have smaller persecutions that we must conquer in the end.

ANNA L. FRAKES.

WORKS OF THE FLESH.

If we walk in the way Christ would have us to walk we will have no condemnation, but if we follow the things of the flesh we will be condemned. Now if we follow the things of the flesh it will lead us to destruction, but if we follow after the spirit it will gain us eternal life.

They that mind the things of the flesh cannot please God. If we do as he has commanded us to do we can please Him.

If the spirit of Christ be in us we will do as he has commanded us to do and be faithful unto the end and we shall receive the great reward.

If we are led by the spirit of God and do the things He would have us to do, we are the children of God.

Your Sister in Christ,
ELLA FRAKES.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIII. Read PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 4, 1904. NUMBER 17.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, preceded by a belief of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

Submission

My God, I think thee may no thought
Ever deem thy chastisement severe;
But may this heart, by sorrow taught,
Calm each wild wish, each idle fear.

Thy mercy bids all nature bloom;
The sun shines bright, and man is gay;
Thine equal mercy spreads the gloom,
That darkens o'er his little day.

Full many a throb of grief and pain
Thy frail and erring child must know;
But no one prayer is breathed in vain,
Nor does one tear unheeded flow.

Thy various messengers employ;
Thy purposes of love fulfill;
And 'mid the wreck of human joy,
Let kneeling faith adore thy will.

Communicated.

It is Not Possible.

It is not possible for any one however scholarly, and exegetically skilled, to defend by argument the popular view of man's nature and destiny, without contradicting the plain and positive statements of Scripture. Therefore the theory commonly held must be false. Its antiquity and the great names of its advocates are not sufficient to establish its claim to be truth. I will allow that there are passages in the Bible which seem to adherents of the common view to teach what they claim. Here they rest the proposition on inference as proof. This is wrong. Their inferences are nothing more than human opinions or conclusions illogically drawn. It is claimed that such passages as Christ's promise to the penitent thief or robber (Luke xxiii. 43); Paul's being absent from the body and present with the Lord (2 Cor. v. 8); his desire to depart and to be with Christ, (Phil. i. 23) and some others harmonize with the view that man is conscious between death and the resurrection. I shall not set to work here to show that the inference commonly drawn from these Scriptures is false, but will endeavor to make good my statement that it is impossible for any one to defend by argument the popular view of man's nature and destiny without contradicting the plain and positive statements of Scripture. A few examples will be sufficient. Bishop Butler, one of the greatest thinkers that England has produced shall speak first on this point. In a few words he sets forth the popular view: "Our organized bodies are no part of ourselves." This is so plainly a contradiction of God's Word that the dullest intellect can see it. The Lord God formed man of the dust of the ground. Here we have the organization and it is man, socalled by God himself and nothing else is here called man, and yet Butler says this organization is no part of ourselves. By these words he virtually says man is no part of himself. What consummate foolishness. It is the echo of Socrates' words to his servant Crito: "This body is not me." The old Athenean philosopher is hardly worthy of blame, but what of Butler with a plain Revelation before his eyes!

I next quote John Wesley, a man of profound mind. He says, "I am now an immortal spirit, strangely commingled with a little portion of earth. In a short time I am to quit this tenement of clay, and remove into another state." It will hardly be disputed that Butler and Wesley represent the current opinion of the religious world. What God calls man Wesley calls a tenement of clay inhabited for a brief period by the ego, the immortal spirit which is capable, as he thinks of living in or out of the body, and according to his notion very much better out than in, for in the body it is encumbered and tied down; but, once liberated it "mounts and soars to fairer worlds on high (?)."

The Rev. Mr. George, a living author says: "We remark that physical death is not the penalty of sin." Again he says, "Death when threatened as a penalty is not extinction, but conscious suffering." These statements are squarely against God's Word. In the case of Adam the penalty is physical death and returning to dust from whence he came. "Dust thou art and unto shalt thou return" is where the penalty, when fully executed, places the first sinner of our fallen race. The use of the term "die" to set before our first parents their doom in case they should transgress; the words addressed to Adam by the great Judge after that first act of disobedience, and the fact that he did die after an existence prolonged to nine hundred and thirty years, show most plainly the nature of the death which Paul says passed upon all men; all of Adam's descendants, in consequence of the one offence which introduced sin into the world. In the light of this stubborn fact all assertions about an immortal soul, a deathless spirit; the ascribing of consciousness to some supposed entity that survives the stroke of death; and all the talk about going to heaven at death, or to some baden underworld of semiblies (purgatory) are so many contradictions of the plain teachings of the Word which is yea and yea. What is affirmed of Adam as to his nature is true of his children. Whatever was his constitution was theirs. If Adam possessed an immortal soul it is strange that there is not even the shadow of a hint of any such thing on the face of the record, nor implied by any of the terms used in reference to his creation and his threatened doom. As the record stands there is no ground for infering anything else than what the language on its surface sets before us. Modern notions of what man is, is here completely barred out. Now where in the history of Adam's children did the race undergo such a constitutional change that it is safe to affirm the inherent immortality of man now, when in truth this cannot be affirmed of our first parents. After all, may not you, my learned and scholarly opponents, be wrong in your view of man's nature and destiny? You infer or draw conclusions from a few passages which, by every fair rule of exposition should be understood in the light of plain texts, about the meaning of which there can be no dispute without calling in question the laws of language. You approach these passages under two false notions: 1st, That the soul of man is a distinct entity apart from the body; and 2nd, That it is immortal; then of course your inferences seem to you logical. On this ground Bishop Butler said, "Our organized bodies are no part of ourselves." And Wesley, "I am now an immortal spirit, strangely commingled with a little portion of earth. In a short time I am to quit this tenement of clay and remove into another state." And Calvin: "That the believer at the mention of death should raise up his head, rejoicing at the news of his redemption." Athanasius: "That is not death that befalleth the righteous, but a translation: for they are translated out of this world into everlasting rest; and as a man would go out of a prison, so do the saints go out of this troublesome life into those good things that are prepared for them." Ambrose of Milan said, "Death is a passage made from corruption to incorruption from mortality to immortality, from trouble to tranquility." This learned man affirms of death what Paul affirmed of resurrection from death. Starting with a false notion of man's nature, philosopher, preacher, poet and priest go on contradicting God's Word. This is no trifling matter concerning which men may say, It makes no difference what is believed; whether this is true or that is true. These confident assertions are aimed at the very fundamentals of God's great system of truth; and they nullify the gospel. Perforce of a false theory these contradictions are uttered and written by men seemingly honest. How often in his own town the writer has heard ministers assert that there is no death—especially on funeral occasions when the subject in hand is death (what the Bible calls death) it seems fitting to deny the fact before their eyes by saying of the dead person, that is not Mrs. Hays, or that is not Mr. Smith. Mrs. Hays has passed on; Mr. Smith was translated day before yesterday. He has gone to that upper and better world and is now basking in the smiles of his Savior. It is thus the poets sing of death.

"Death is the crown of life
Were death denied, poor man would live in vain;
Were death denied, to live would not be life;
Were death denied, even fools would wish to die.
Death wounds to cure: we fall, we rise, we reign!
Spring from our fetters, fasten in the skies,
Where blooming Eden withers in our sight.
Death gives us more than was in Eden lost:
The king of terrors is the Prince of Peace."

Paul styles death an enemy instead of Prince of Peace. Paul says, "So death passed upon all men." Wesley says, "No man dies." Plato's philosophic fiction is the reason of this contradiction.

J. L. WINCE.

Notes by the Way.

Having taken leave of my Pine Woods Bible Class, at Hammond, Louisiana, Bro. Albert, conveyed me to the Illinois Central Railroad depot, where I took the train for New Orleans. I then boarded the Southern Pacific train for Crowley, Louisiana. The train was run on to a ferry boat and floated across the river.

The trip between Hammond and New Orleans, and also between New Orleans and Crowley was delightful. (This pleasure is rendered more exquisite, by force of contrast. When I left my home on March 17, the ice king reigned supreme.) Oh what a change! the new life had come. All nature smiled in resurrected life, it was to me a type of the new and beautiful life to come, when this corruptible shall put on incorruption, and this mortal shall put on immortality, then the "blessed and holy" will shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of our Father.

Between Hammond and New Orleans, there is much swamp land, filled with luxuriant vegetation. The cyprus and water oak trees are all draped in gray moss. It is a strange and weird sight to behold this drapery of gray streamers hanging all over the trees, and in many cases reaching almost to the ground. Among these draped trees you will see thousands of palmetos, which are a species of a palm. On the higher grounds, are vegetable farms. You can see thousands of acres covered with cabbages and other vegetables. The ride between New Orleans and Crowley, (something less than two hundred miles) is an everchanging panorama of beauty, to any one who can appreciate God's beautiful work in nature. Before reaching Crowley we strike the rice belt. This is probably the finest rice country in the world. I will speak of this later on.

On arriving at Crowley, Bro. Haupt met me at the depot. He then conducted me to his home. At the door I saw the well known face of Sister Haupt eager to welcome me. This was a delightful visit. Sister Haupt is an old time acquaintance. I have known her from early childhood. She was the daughter of Bro. and Sister Leondias Baker, of Aurora, Kane County, Illinois. The old residents of Kane County remember with pleasure this family, together with the Jackson family, and others of like precious faith, who at that time lived in Aurora. I believe Bro. and Sister Norris are about the only ones now living at Aurora. Sister Eva Norris is the daughter of Bro. and Sister Jackson. Both Bro. and Sister Baker and Bro. and Sister Jackson now sleep in Jesus, "Blessed sleep, from which none ever wake to weep."

Alice was just budding into a young woman, when her father died. Some time after her father's death, I wrote to Alice, with regard to her taking the steps to become a Christian. She took to it kindly, and after some correspondence, I buried her with Christ in baptism. Some time after this, I baptized (J. G. Haupt) her intended husband.

Don't neglect to speak to the young people about their salvation, they appreciate your interest more than you may think of. If they drift away, and connect themselves with religious societies who know not the truth, you may lose them. I know of no society that equals our Young People's Bereans. In this society they are kept in line with the truth. The lesson booklets are carefully prepared with this view in mind. If you wish to learn more about them, write to Sister Anna Drew. (the Illinois State President) 629 N. Galena Ave., Dixon, Illinois.

Meetings at Crowley were held in the Christian Church. They were not as largely attended as some of our meetings, yet I think they were not without interest. There are two daily papers at Crowley, The Signal and The News. These papers almost daily printed fair notices of the meetings. The notices of the secular press help very much.

At the close of the last meeting I baptized (Vernon) the son of Bro. and Sister Haupt. Vernon is a promising young man, who has just graduated from the Crowley High School. I was glad to see Vernon take such a lively interest in the Blessed Hope, may God bless you my young brother, and keep you steadfast in the Christ life. His oldest sister, now attending the State Normal school, has become obedient to the faith. I think it will not be long before Hope, the youngest sister will follow the example of her older brother and sister. Miss Hope is a gentle sweet girl, and means to do right.

I also had the pleasure of making the acquaintance of Bro. and Sister Hatch. Bro. Hatch is the oldest son of J. S. Hatch, of Indiana, who for so many years has been preaching the grand old gospel of the kingdom. He is still preaching it, although he is past the eighty year mark, and will continue to do so as long as he can stand on his feet. Bro. Levi Hatch, of Crowley, has great respect for his father. While I was at Crowley, Bro. Hatch made free use of his horse and carriage in conveying me to various points of interest in Crowley, especially that of the rice culture. Rice is almost the exclusive crop for many miles surrounding Crowley, besides a large area in Texas. Rice is a water plant, the quality of the soil has but little to do in the successful growing of rice, the main thing is the water. Withregard to the land, the main thing is to have flat level land, that can be flooded with water. A rice field is divided up into sections by levies being thrown up. The field is flooded in sections, and the object of the levy is to keep the water in the section being flooded. A large ditch is made all around the field, and filled with water. The water is let out of this ditch into the section to be flooded. The ditch derives its water from canals. Large canals intersect the entire rice country, owned by canal companies. They furnish the water to the rice grower for one-fourth of the crop. These canals derive their water from the bayous. Large steam water plants are established to pump the water from the bayous into the canals.

There are some rich growers who are not dependant upon the canals, they bore wells some two hundred and fifty feet deep, and run pumping engines, and pump the water into their own fields.

The rice grows up something like oats, and is reaped the same as oats. The process of threshing is the same as that of oats. The husk is still left on the rice after threshing, the same as it is upon oats. After this the rice is sent to a rice mill. In this mill the rice is thrown against a wire screen by a swiftly revolving cylinder, which rubs off the chaff, and it is by this means ground into a powder, and sold for stock food at eight dollars per ton. The rice is then put through a second process, which cleans it off perfectly white. The rice is then put through a polisher, and it is then ready for a consumer.

In Crowley there are ten of these four story mills. It is estimated that there is some 60,000 sacks of this rice stored up in each of these mills, besides ware houses, etc. This will give the extent to which rice is produced in Louisiana. After concluding the meetings at Crowley, Bro. Haupt and son accompanied me to the depot, where I took the train for Iota, I found Bro. Farley waiting for me. Taking his carriage to his home, and was heartily welcomed by Sister Farley and family.

The brethren at Iota thought that we could not get much of an hearing at that place. When the time for the meeting came, every seat in the house was filled, and more seats had to be brought in to accommodate the people. We had twelve meetings at that place, and the attendance and interest continued until the end. Many seemed almost persuaded to obey. One old gentleman seventy-nine years old did obey. On the last afternoon of our meetings we went to a bayou, and buried this aged man in baptism with Jesus. I baptized one in each of the three places I preached at in Louisiana. That does not seem many, yet it is encouraging to have even one here and there become obedient to the faith.

I enjoyed many talks with Bro. and Sister Stanley and family. They were previously baptized by Bro. Haupt of Crowley. Bro. Stanley is a large rice grower. He has his own warehouse, with some five hundred sacks of rice stored therein.

Bro. Farley runs a saw mill, besides managing his farm.

Bro. Horn and family have settled on a government claim, and are endeavoring to develop and improve it. I visited at several of the homes of the citizens. The people here are a nice hospitable people. There is quite a nice company of young people at this place. I advised them them to start a young Berean Band. They are going to do so, as soon as they hear from Sister Anna Drew.

Bro. and Sister Hatch of Crowley, accompanied me to Iota, and staid a week.

One day Bro. Stanley, Bro. Hatch and myself visited the Louisiana oil field. There are over eighty wells stretched over about one-half mile of territory. One of these wells was a gusher, throwing out by its own force, some two thousand barrels of pure oil in a day. The oil tanks are immense, one tank was said to hold some fifty thousand barrels of oil. They have also an open oil reservoir, covering several acres of ground. It is virtually a lake of oil. The wild ducks mistake this oil for a water pond, and light down into it, and that ends their existence, they never get away again.

If our world-burning Adventists don't hurry up there won't be coal and oil enough left in the earth to burn it up. Money hunters are tapping the earth in every direction where they think these inflamable commodities exist.

While I was at Iota an accommodating preacher visited that place. He was anxious to baptize some one. If they would only let him, he would accommodate himself to their notions. He would either baptize with one dip or three, backwards or forwards, sprinkle them, pour water on their heads, do it in private or public, any thing to suit. They could pay their money and take their choice. An encouraging interest has sprung up at this place. Bro. Haupt has promised to help them some. God bless his work, and the people at Iota, and may the Bereans, when organized, do a splendid work.

After completing this work, I returned to Crowley, for a short time, and visited Bro. Hatch and family and also Bro. Haupt and family.

On Friday morning April 21, Bro. Haupt accompanied me to the train, and I commenced my trip to Sherman, Texas, distant 491 miles. I will remain here for two weeks. Sherman is located fourteen miles south of the Indian Territory line. I expect next to visit Anna and Owanah, Texas, and then Caraglo, Oklahoma, Bluah, Morse Mill, and Cedarville, Missouri. I then go to Chicago for a short rest. After this I have a trip planned between Kansas and Chicago, and another as far north as Canada, if wished, and another east in Indiana and Ohio. Those wishing meetings west, east and north, on the line of the trips outlined, please send notice to my Chicago address. I can save money in railroad travel by thus arranging them. I may arrange to meet Conferences in these various directions if notified in time.

I am not short of calls, I have all I can attend to, but I can reach more of them by consolidating on successive lines. I like systematic work, more can be accomplished for the cause at the least expense this way. Next winter I expect to repeat the trip I am now taking. The people insist on my return. May God bless his dear people everywhere. The Blessed Hope produces an earnestness, kinship and fellowship that exceeds all others.

Yours in love.

W. H. WILCOX.

Married.

Married by the writer at the home of the bride's parents in Dutton, April 23, 1904, Miss Ethel Hall to Ara Campany. We wish them a long life of happiness.

B. W. WOODWARD.

It was my privilege last Sunday, April 17, to unite in marriage Sister Mabel Decker of Millbrook, Mich., to Mr. Robert Patrick of Washington. Mabel is the youngest daughter of Sister Caroline Decker, and has been almost a constant companion of the widowed mother since the death of the faithful husband some twenty years ago. Mabel was then the wee pet of the household; how sadly will the mother miss her as she goes to her far away home, even though the husband and son-in-law is esteemed so highly. Sister Mabel was baptized by Elder Woodward several years ago. May she renew her vows to God, consecrate the new home to prayer, and long enjoy this life is our prayer. They leave their many friends with well wishes for their future.

Obituary.

Catharine Delong was born Nov. 20, 1842, in Anglaze County, Ohio, was married to Henry Weaver Jan. 31, 1860; died April 16, 1904; aged 62 years, 4 months and 27 days. She being the mother of ten children, six boys and four girls. All but two girls with the husband and father are left to mourn her loss. She was a loving wife and devoted mother untiring in the care of her family. Accepting the Lord in her last days, saying, "Thy will be done."

The above notice was handed me by the friends. A very large congregation listened while words of comfort were spoken from 1 Thes. iv. 13, 14. We commend the husband and family to him who has promised rest to the burdened, "Casting all your care upon him, for he careth for you." Though our loved ones sleep it is not forever, there will be a glorious dawn, if we are only prepared for the awakening. May we all seek to know our duty and perform it.

Truth will never die: the stars will grow dim, the sun will pale his glory; but the truth will ever be young. Integrity, uprightness, honesty, love, goodness—these are all imperishable. No grave can ever entomb these immortal principles. They have been in prison, but they have been freer than before; those who have enshrined them in their hearts have been burned at the stake; but out of their ashes other witnesses have arisen. No sin can drown, no storm can wreck, no abyss can swallow up the everliving truth of God. You can not kill goodness, and truth, and integrity, and faith, and holiness; the way that is consistent with these must be a way everlasting. —C. H. Spurgeon.

Beethoven, it is said, after he became deaf, would sit and play on an old worn out harpsicord that had long been unfit for use, and suppose that he was playing matchless harmonies. The instrument was so poor that not one chord in five responded. Here was one that gave forth some sound, and there was another; but even they were out of harmony. And I sometimes think that God plays on a poor old harpsicord when he takes this world to evolve the melodies of divine love, so few chords respond at all, and so utterly inadequate are those that do respond to illustrate this crowning attribute of the mind.—H. W. Beecher.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

We are doing all we can to use manuscripts sent us, and trust that correspondents will use patience. We endeavor to be fair to all, and yet give variety to our readers.

It is surely evident to all that we cannot well do business without means. It surely is likewise evident to those who have not yet renewed their subscription that we must be in need of what is due us. We dislike very much to mention this, and hope you will not compell us to repeat the hint.

During the past week the Russian fleet at Vladivostock is reported to have moved out to sea and succeeded in finding a Japanese transport with some 200 troops on board. They took their officers and the crew off, and then sunk the vessel with the soldiers. The forces on land have at last come together, and the Manchuria side of the Yalu opposite Wiju was the scene of the conflict. It had been given out that the Russians would likely only seek to annoy the Japs in crossing the river, but they found some 8,000 Russians, in a fortified position, succeeded in driving them out, taking their guns, a number of officers and men prisoners, while the killed are 800 Russians and 700 Japanese. It is a question whether or not the Russians are not attempting to lead the Japs on to make an advance into Manchuria, and then cut them off from their base by the use of their Cossack cavalry. The Japs are wily and sharp, and can be depended on to take precaution against such a thing being done. So far they are victors, even on land.

The Second Coming of Christ.

The address at the Christian Church by Elder Wilson last night was replete with logical thoughts as to the course of the ages leading to and beyond the second coming of the Messiah.

Elder Wilson pointed out that the expression "end of the world," was a misleading translation of the Greek in which it is called the end of the age or of the ages. He gave abundant scriptural testimony that the earth as a body should exist forever, that God had established it never to be destroyed. The course of human rule should pass away. All the conditions and arrangements of the present order should end. The world that now is, in the above sense, should be utterly cleansed from all iniquity, and eventually from all death; nevertheless the believer should, according to the promise of God, look for the new heaven and the new earth wherein righteousness shall dwell, which will be the present conditions purified through the royalty of Christ and his saints.

The Church of God, of which Elder Wilson has for many years been a respected and influential evangelist, makes prominent the gospel of the kingdom, as taught with special and continuous earnestness and stress in the Bible and to this end all that pertains to the resurrection question and the second coming of Christ. While they fully expect the latter to occur and that probably within a moderate number of years, they are not of those called Adventists, any more than the many in the denominations who believe in the second coming. They do not like that name because there has been so much error taught under it and because it is not scriptural. They also take a strong position upon baptism, but are not Baptists. Some have thought that they might be Soul Sleepers, but this also is a mistake. They hold that when men are said to die, they actually die and do not fly to live another life. They do not know of a man living inside of a man. The last belief has been gained, they claim, from heathen notions as to the word soul, especially from Plato and his followers. Man has hopes and aspirations, fear and dread. He has strength and mind, soulical and spiritual powers. These faculties are the inner man. The word soul, in the Bible, wherein it not used for the whole man, is generally the affections of man, except where it ought to have been translated as life or rarely by other words.

The idea that an immortal entity in man flies to heaven or hell at death to remain there until the resurrection, when the judgment will decide the final destiny, is foreign to the Bible. So is the idea of going to Paradise and Abraham's bosom or to the burning pit for the same second trial in the judgment day, which idea is perhaps gained from a wrong understanding of the rich man and Lazarus and the passage regarding the thief on the cross.

The Church of God teaches that mankind has actually been dying since the early ages, that they can live again only by a new inbreathing from God, and that thus the righteous are heirs of immortality, for which they long and seek. The dead who died in the faith in early times have not received their reward, God having a better plan that they without us should not be made perfect.—Crowley, La., Signal.

In Union is Weakness.

In union is strength; but union also has its weakness. Things which cannot do, many may accomplish; but those things which many will not do, are often left to be accomplished by one. Two horses can draw more than one; but if one of the two refuses to draw at all, then the other one can haul more than both harnessed together. The object of associated endeavor is to accomplish that which single-handed effort is insufficient to effect, thus associating in masses, scattered forces, and energies which otherwise might run to waste.

But here arises a danger. When scattered forces are thus massed and unified, politicians or office seekers, greedy for the power, honor, or profit which may be derived from such a source, endeavor to assume control of the interests thus established; and though unfit and incompetent, yet they have sufficient craft and adroitness to establish themselves in positions of trust and responsibility, to the exclusion of men who have the shrewdness to perceive and the honesty to expose their unworthiness.

Under such circumstances union becomes a source of weakness instead of strength; and thus great establishments hinder the very interests they were designed to serve, and are made instruments for destroying the very causes for the uplifting of which they were originally designed. Union on correct and righteous principles should be sought and encouraged by every servant of the Lord; but if the union simply signifies that one party shall give, while the other shall do nothing but take; one party shall help, while the other shall only hinder; then the less of such union the better for the welfare of all parties concerned.—H. L. Hastings.

Hung By a Leaf.

I was passing by a large stationery store, and I saw in the window something that arrested my attention at once. It was a ledger, an enormous ledger, suspended by a single leaf. Three eyelets had been fastened in the leaf near the edge, three wires passed through the eyelets, and from those three wires the entire volume hung, its great leather covers and its hundreds of large, thick pages falling down on either side.

It was a splendid test, not only of the stoutness of the paper, but of the bookbinder's art. There it hung for days, yet the leaf did not start, nor tear.

As often as I saw that silent parable, I thought to myself, "Now, Caleb, how would you like to have that test applied to yourself? How would you like to have any leaf of your life taken at random, and your whole life hung up by it in the world's show window? Aren't there some leaves—many leaves—that wouldn't stand the strain? Aren't there some leaves—many leaves—that are too weak, not sound in fibre, loose in the stitching? Wouldn't you very much rather lie in the show-window all nicely shut up in the ledger? Ah, Caleb, Caleb, can you stand the test of the single leaf?"

That is what I said to myself; but as for addressing those questions to you, I wouldn't for the world be so impolite!—Christian Endeavor World.

Priest-Ridden Tibet.

Tibet, now of special interest on account of the British expedition in that mysterious land, possesses so many lamas that it is practically priest-ridden. At the head of the hierarchy are the grand lamas, who all claim to be Buddha reincarnate. Every lamasary has such a priest god, and there is one called Chang Kia Foo, who lives at Peking. Beneath these high priests there are hundreds of lamas who profess to be the reincarnated spirits of Buddhist saints. Then there are lamas in whom are supposed to dwell the founders of monasteries, and lamas in whom good men live their lives over again. The priests constitute such a large portion of the population that many of them are compelled to go about the country begging from door to door.

There are many features about lamaism which strongly resemble the doctrines of the Roman Catholic church. The ceremonial of worship, the burning of incense, the chanting of hymns, are so closely similar to these services in the Roman Catholic church that Father Hue, who succeeded in visiting Lhasa in 1830, reached the conclusion, in his Souvenirs, that the wandering lama from whom Tsong Kapa drew his inspiration was in reality a Jesuit missionary. Other travelers, however, declare that the lamas are wofully corrupt, that while professing celibacy they are very immoral, that they eat the flesh of the dead, and have a passionate thirst for blood. Many, he says, use a hypnotic power over their parishioners, and obtain wealth by various modes of extortion.

Unlike some professing Christians, who expect their Sunday piety to last through the week, the Tibetans pray most of the time. Whether they are at work or at pleasure, whether squatting on the floor of their houses or on a journey, they continue their supplications. In order that religion will not prove too inconvenient these pious people have prayer flags and prayer wheels, by which orisons are rendered automatically. A prayer wheel, for example, is a sort of spool, covered with cabalistic inscriptions, which a lama has written and sold, and should the faithful be walking along the street or conversing with a boon companion, he can keep saying his prayers by constantly turning the wheel. Prayer flags are likewise covered with supplications which are believed to prove efficacious when waved in the air.—Protestant Observer.

The Old Soldier's Story.

It is well-known that soldiers, being subject to exposures, excitements, and the severest occasional exertions, are usually provided with strong drink. And with drunken statesmen to declare war, drunken officers to command, drunken soldiers to fight, and drunken surgeons to cut and maim the wounded, and dose the sick with strong drink till they die, it is not strange that so few of them ever return from the wars alive.

Now and then a soldier can be found who spurns the deadly cup, and so escapes death at the mouth of the bottle—a weapon more deadly than the sword, the musket or the bayonet.

At a temperance meeting held some years since in the state of Alabama, Col. Lehamowski, once a Polish count, and who had served many years in Bonaparte's armies, addressed the meeting. He arose before a large audience, tall, erect and vigorous, with the glow of health on his face, and said: "You see before you a man seventy-nine years old. I have fought two hundred battles and, have fourteen wounds upon my body, have lived thirty days on horse flesh, with the bark of trees for bread, snow and ice for drink, the canopy of heaven for my covering, without stockings or shoes on my feet, and with only a few rags to cover my body. In Egypt I have marched for days with the burning sun upon my naked head, feet blistered in the hot sand, and with eyes, nostrils and mouth filled with dust, and thirst so tormenting that I have torn open the veins of my arms and sucked my own blood. Do you ask how I could survive all these horrors? I answer, next to the kind providence of God, I owe my preservation, my health, vigor, my all to this fact, that I never drank a drop of spiritous liquors in all my life." And he added: "Baron Larry, chief of the medical staff of the French army, has stated it as a fact that the six thousand survivors who finally returned from Egypt, were all men who abstained wholly from the use of ardent spirits."—Safeguard.

Clearing One's Self.

Some years ago, a very uncommon scene was witnessed in New Jersey at the opening of the Passaic county, N. J., court. One of the most prominent and respected members of the bar, a man who, like the late Horace Binney of Philadelphia, had made it a rule not to undertake cases in which there was apparent even the shadow of fraud or injustice on the part of his client, made a motion to address the court upon a personal matter. Being told by the judge to proceed, he said:

"It has been my misfortune to commit a grevious offence against this court, and as the offence was committed in public, it is no more than right that I should ask forgiveness in public. Some time ago I was retained as counsel in a case in which the recovery of certain sums of money was sought. The plaintiff was a gentleman from New York, and the case was brought before your honor in Bergen county, when holding court at Hackensack. Among the items of money sought to be collected was one of $1,000 for drawing a will. The will was a small one, and the charge was certainly exorbitant. My better judgment told me it was wrong, but I was self-willed, and began the suit. I will not so far accuse myself as to say that I intended to recover the whole $1,000; no, I only thought the jury might allow a fair compensation. But I should not have brought the suit. In this I did wrong, and for this I humbly crave forgiveness. I thereby offended the court, the law, and God, the source of all law, and I want to confess my faults so that I may be forgiven. Again, I have at times not taken the rulings of this court with the grace and obedience they deserved, and for this I crave pardon."

Such a confession of error, never before heard in that court-room, was received with great astonishment and an impressive silence. Then the judge assured the Christian lawyer that he knew of no offence which he had committed against the court, or, at least, if such had occured, they had been long ago forgotten.

How little this vehement clearing one's self in the light of Christ, is comprehended by the natural mind, may be perceived by the reporter's comment upon the incident,—that the lawyer's zeal for religion and temperance, together with his ill health, was thought to have "slightly affected his mind"—a condition of being beside one's self, we may add, far too infrequent.—Friends' Review.

Their Stock in Trade.

There are some persons who profess to be workers in the cause of Christ, whose main stock in trade is, the sins and crimes and follies of by-gone years. They have drank, stolen, gambled or cheated, have reformed, and hence they are pushed to the front and made prominent, while others whose lives have been different are sent to the rear as of little account. Now a stock of old vices and old sins is a poor outfit for a servant of God. Men with a morbid appetite for a sensation will go much farther to hear a man who has been a thief than a man of equal ability who has been honest all his life. They will take a great deal more interest in a man who has been a riotous drunkard, than they will one who has been a sober, consistent, decent man. They will be much more interested in a man who has been an infidel and a scoffer, than in one who has been a devout and praying Christian.

The results are often evil. Men who are untaught, inexperienced, and untrained, are spoiled by being pushed forward and worshiped. Defective teaching, poor examples, frequent failures, and final disaster, are often the result of such action. The expensive habits of a sinful life cling to them—they must have more money than honest, economical Christians are accustomed to earn or spend; they become greedy of gain; or are in a state of chronic poverty and debt, they have never earned an honest living and do not know how; and when they are found to be unable to sustain themselves, or to fill the expectations they have excited, they drop out of sight, often to return to their sins, and fade from the vision like wandering stars.

If every such man, instead of being pushed to the front, to the exclusion of other worthier and more useful men, were taught to earn his bread in some honest, sober way; to economize his earnings, and live within his means; to study the word of God, and learn the duties of the Christian life; to be not slothful in busines, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord; then might there be hope of a permanent reformation and a useful and stable Christian life.

It is all very well to kill the fatted calf, and bring out the best robe for the returning prodigal; but the next day, if there is any manhood in him, he will take off that best robe, and put on some old clothes, and go to work, and will not grumble if he has a picked up dinner of cold veal. But if the prodigal expects that he is to sit in the parlor in his fine clothes, and have fatted calf and music and dancing the rest of his days, he will doubtless find that his plan is impracticable, and perhaps will, as soon as he is sufficiently recruited, be off to the "far country" again, to return perhaps no more.—Armory.

Be true to te present hour. It is one duty that rests upon you—the one that no man can neglect and win the crown. You may be harassed and driven back and the contest may seem hopless. You may find only a cross where you confidently took for a crown. It is God's way. The day of your coronation is not yet. When it is the time for the crowning, the crown will be ready. In the cemetery of your apparent failure there will be a resurrection, and it will be to newness of life, and your eyes will see it. Your buried influence and energy and hope and love will rise again, and these will come to your coronation waving their palms. Be true to your best. It is all that God exacts.—United Presbyterian.

Announcement.

The Northwest Conference will convene Friday evening June 17th and hold over the following Monday at Lake Shore, Wash. Lake Shore is about four miles from Vancouver, Wash. Any one wishing conveyance to Lake Shore will correspond with P. G. Wolf of Vancouver. Brethren from a distance will stop at River View hotel right by the ferry landing and wait for the brethren from Lake Shore. All are invited to come and have one more meeting that will be a feast long to be remembered. Another Conference year has almost passed and gone, have we spent our time well or have we been idle in the Master's vineyard? All cannot go out in the world to preach, but we all can live a good square Christian life doing good to all around us. By order of the executive committee.

Mrs. Alsina M. Brooks.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Michigan will commence (D. V.) at Dutton, Kent County, Michigan, Thursday evening, June 2, 1904, and continue over the following Sunday. Another year has nearly rolled around since the annual meeting of the Michigan Conference was held. Once again the invitation comes from the brotherr and sisters of the Church of God at Dutton to have the meeting there. Do we stop and think what it means for the brethren to entertain the Conference? It means a good deal of thought and work, but they are willing to bear the expense and work for the cause of truth. The brethren and sisters of Michigan are urged to make a special effort to be present at this Annual Conference. Arrangements will be made to accommodate all who may come. All will be made welcome. Let us come with the one thought to further the cause of Christ. Not all together to get good, but determined to give as much as we receive, then as is already predicted we will have a good meeting. Let each church send one or more delegates with report of their standing during the past year. A programme will appear later. Dutton is on M. C. R. R. ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids.

Emma Jackman, Sec.

The 17th Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will be held at Waterloo, beginning Aug. 28. Programme, etc., will appear later.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

Without self-sacrifice true friendship can not exist.—Goethe.

Please do not forget our financial needs.

Editor Restitution:

In your paper of Feb. 24th, in an article written by Jas. Lamb he refers to what Christ said to Nicodemus about being born of the water and the Spirit in order to enter into the kingdom of heaven. He says the word Spirit here is another name for the life giving Word. I think he is mistaken as Christ said, the wind bloweth where it listeth and thou hearest the sound thereof but canst not tell whence it cometh or whether it goeth, so is every one that is born of the Spirit. This birth of the Spirit certainly means the resurrection, and Christ demonstrated what he said by appearing and disappearing after he rose from the dead. This is the same birth spoken of by Paul in 1 Cor. xv. 42, It is sown in corruption, it is raised in incorruption, it is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory, it is sown in weakness, it is raised in power, it is sown a natural body, it is raised a spiritual body. That certainly is the birth of the Spirit and not conversion which is the begetting unto a lively hope. Perhaps Bro. Zilmer or some other able brother will take it up. There is one passage I would like to see explained that is where Saul went to the witch, and it appears as though Samuel came up and talked to Saul, we cannot believe it possible that the witch could raise the dead. Some of our brethren acquainted with the original answer.

Obituary.

Nathan M. Connor died at South Bend, Ind., April 22, 1904. Bro. Connor was born in 1839, in Randolph County, Ind.; aged 65 years. Was married to Eva Haum on Oct. 5, 1861; to this union were born 7 children, 6 daughters and 1 son, 5 daughters and his devoted wife survive his death to mourn the loss of a devoted husband and father. But they do not mourn as those who have no hope. They have all been taught the hope of the gospel at home in the family circle. Bro. Connor heard the gospel of the kingdom in its purity in 1885 and he accepted it and obeyed the requirements. Was baptized into the all saving name, after which time he lived a consistent Christian life to his death, which was caused by cancer of the face. Bro. Connor suffered untold agony the last year, but bore it patiently. Words of comfort were spoken by the writer from Job xiv. 14.

H. F. Cordill.

Rebecca Crum was born in Henry County, Ind., Jan 4, 1826; was married to Heron Metcalf, May 4, 1843. She was left a widow in 1852. In 1856 she was married to Geo. F. Spaulding, who died Aug. 16, 1902. She was the kind and loving mother of 6 children, 4 of whom have gone before her. One son lives in Missouri, and a daughter at Stanley, N. D. She had passed the winter in Missouri, but on April 11, she started for the home of a granddaughter, Mrs. J. M. Davis, in N. D.; was taken sick on the trip, and her extreme age and long hard journey were against her and she never rallied but grew gradually weaker until April 20, 1904, when she passed away quietly to her reward aged 78 years, 3 months and 10 days. She united with the Church of God in early life and lived a faithful Christian. She died at the home of J. M. Davis, her funeral being preached there by Rev. Noah Ritzius, from Psa. xv. 8. She leaves 2 children, 5 grandchildren, 2 great grand children and 4 sisters to mourn for her, but what is their great loss is her gain, for she rests from a world of trouble till called to her place in the kingdom.

Mrs. J. M. Davis.

Sister Spaulding was a member of the Church at Plymouth, having lived in this County for many years. We all knew her for a noble true Christian, and mourn for her, giving our sympathy to the bereaved relatives.

Be ye therefore ready also; for the Son of Man cometh at an hour when ye think not.

The bread of life is love; the salt of life is work; the sweetness of joy, poesy; the water of life, faith.—Mrs. Jameson.

Poetry.

The Jew.

He wanders 'mong the nations,
As first from Judah's hills,
No time, nor place can change him—
A Jew he wanders still.

He falls before the dread simoon,
That in the desert blows;
He shivers underneath the blast,
'Mid the lone Polar snows.

Landless and exiled on he comes,
Distinct in every clime,
While the Turkish Crescent's waving o'er
His own loved Palestine.

The rise and fall of empires,
Have passed his wondering view.
Ah! what a life of destiny
Is that of thine, O Jew!

The proud, the impious Babylon,
The seat of pride and lust;
He writhed beneath her captive chain,
Then passed her in the dust.

The Home of Persian glory,
Like the Meteor flash had gone,
And the ray that brought deliverance
No longer on him shone

He trod the streets of classic Greece,
When hands wrestled her brow,
'Mid the tumultuous of her splendor,
We see him linger now.

He gazed on Rome in glory,
As she spread her eagle wings—
Soaring mistress of the nations,
Her voice the law of kings.

Even his queenly Jerusalem,
Strewn 'mid the desert sands,
But the everlasting hills are there,
Mount Zion ever stands.

Jerusalem's promised glory,
His waiting eyes shall see,
And Israel's son no longer roams,
From bondage now is free.

When Judah's scattered children,
Throng to their promised home,
And Messiah sways the scepter,
A King on David's throne.

The Hidden Gospel.

"If our gospel be hid, it is hid to them that are lost. In whom the god of this world hath blinded the minds of them which believe not, lest the light of the glorious gospel of Christ, who is the image of God, should shine unto them." 2 Cor. iv. 3, 4.

It is a sad fact that Paul's gospel, that is, "the gospel of the glory of the Anointed," may be hidden from the minds of men, even with the Bible in their hands. This hiding has been too often brought about by men's own doings. Many causes have been at work to produce this lamentable result. "God made man upright, but he hath sought out many inventions." He sent his gospel by his Son, the Anointed, who, when "he came to his own, his own received him not."

Whatever is to be understood by "the god of this world," whether a personal adversary, (Satan), mammon, pride of social vanity, or of intellect, or any other agency, there is in each case of gospel hiding, if we except that natural inertia of humanity, some particular instrumentality, through which the blinded unbeliever is influenced in his beliefs, opinions, and even in his prejudices. He has his mind blinded, his "understanding darkened, and the fatal result to him is that the "gospel is hid."

It may be said, by the way, that the converse of this is true. To the man who believes unto salvation the gospel has not been hid. In the good providence of God, he has escaped the blinding agencies which prove fatal to the lost. He "rejoices in hope of the glory of God."

Most persons are led, unfortunately, by a kind of gregarious instinct, to follow "the traditions of the elders," and to become virtually slaves to hereditary usages and even to so called principles of their forefathers. The Buddhist youth follows the creed of Buddha, and so on down to even the ordinary Baptist, not excepting even baptized believers of the gospel of the kingdom of God. Few strike out, by personal investigation an independent course for themselves. "Following the multitude even in the doing of evils seems a too common practice. Some one has well said on a secular subject, "Hereditary bondmen! know ye not, who would be free, himself must strike the blow?" Such freedom reached in whatever way, is limited by a certain degree of servitude of, however, a voluntary character. The Apostle Paul was a notable instance, both in his own case and in his teaching of others, of this two-fold characteristic. He repeatedly designates himself "the slave of Jesus Anointed." He describes this slavery with its corresponding liberty thus, "He that is called in the Lord, being a servant, is the Lord's freeman; likewise also he that is called, being free, is Christ's servant." Paul strongly felt his great responsibility to his Lord. He said, "I am debtor both to the Greeks and to the Barbarians, both to the wise and the unwise, so, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel." ....."necessity is laid upon me, yea, woe is unto me if I preach not the gospel." Paul truly did much to prevent the gospel from being hid.

Freedom and bondage akin to this was experienced under the Mosaic dispensation. Ample freedom was secured to Israel under the law. This could be forfeited only by voluntary contract. Personal liberty and even property might be thus alienated, but only for a time. Both were restored at the jubilee, once every fifty years. Such an arrangement being of a secular character has no place in the church of Christ. Perfect freedom exists from its first initiation alongside of such servitude to Christ as he himself has required. The hiding of the gospel has to be avoided at all hazards, and fully exhibited as "under necessity laid upon the disciple, although of a less binding character than that laid upon the Apostles, while maintaining the liberty of Christ's freemen.

It is a solemn thought that even in the days of our Lord the "gospel was hid." In many instances the Jews "made void the Word of God by their traditions." In an interview with a certain lawyer our Lord said to him, "Thou art not far from the kingdom of God." It is sad to think that one privileged to have a conversation with Jesus, and that on a sacred subject, should come short of the kingdom, and to whom the gospel should be hid. That lawyer belonged to a class of men, however, to whom our Lord said, "Woe unto you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men; for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in." Matt. xxiii. 13. Certainly here in the case of many the gospel was hid. The Jewish authorities, scribes, etc., had been permitted to exercise certain powers under the Roman Empire, and true patriotism was with them and their party, at a low ebb. Very few, such as the aged Simeon, Anna the prophetess, and some others, were to be found in the Jewish community. Our Lord said even to his own disciples, "O fools and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken".....But it has to be noted that the disciples were not slow of heart to believe all that had been required of them, namely, what our Lord proclaimed—"the kingdom of God is at hand; repent ye, and believe the gospel." The gospel to them was not "hid."

The vast mass of the professing Christian world are Roman Catholic and Greek Catholic. In the early centuries of the Christian era there grew up an accumulation of error which had a beginning even in the day of the Apostles. The Apostle Paul wrote about the "falling away," and said, "The mystery of iniquity doth already work." Under the Emperor Constantine in the fourth century error was largely developed, and the church was considered to be the kingdom. To this day that fundamental error is embalmed in the Roman Catholic theological formulas. In the notes to the Roman Catholic translation of the Bible into English known as the Douay version, that error is broadly declared. Thus on Dan. ii. 44, "In the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom which shall never be destroyed".....the comment is "A kingdom, viz., the kingdom of Christ in the Catholic Church which cannot be destroyed." At the so called Reformation the Protestants simply adopted this error from Popery. Thus in a Protestant Commentary by Dr. Thomas Scott, there is a long note to the same effect. The words may be quoted: "It has subverted and will continue to subvert Pagan and Anti-christian kingdoms," etc. On Psalm lxix. 35, "God will save Zion and build the cities of Judah," the Roman Catholic note is, "Zion, the Catholic church. The cities of Judah, etc. her places of worship which shall be established throughout the world," etc. The Protestant Dr. Thomas Scott in a long note has, "Zion seems to denote the Church at large, the cities of Judah the several divisions of the church throughout the world," etc.

It surely needs no demonstration beyond these extracts that the theology of both Roman Catholic and Protestant churches is wide of the "gospel of the kingdom of God" preached by our Lord and his apostles. Nor can it be disputed that through this vital error the "gospel of the glory of the Christ" has been truly hid from thousands of the human race.

In the sixteenth century the reformers stopped short at a certain stage, where they left the New Testament "obedience of faith" entirely out of their creeds and confessions. Those creeds became stereotyped as if perfection had been reached, and they have so descended, in most respects to present times. Believers' immersion has been by many transmuted into a ceremony over a babe with a few drops of water with a proxy faith held by so-called god-parents.

Some reached a stage a little beyond this. They passed the point of the reformers by practicing the act of immersion, calling themselves Baptists. They still adhered to the doctrinal theories of the orthodox. These seemed to have made a sort of fetich of water, seeing that it is put in the place of "the faith" which constitutes the real element in the act of adoption. Paul puts this matter clearly when he says, "Ye are all the children of God by faith in the Anointed Jesus; for as many as have been baptized into the Anointed have put on the Anointed." Gal. iii. 26, 27. Here again assuredly in the absence of "the faith" the gospel is "hid."

(To be concluded.)

The Evil of Riches.

"As the partridge sitteth on eggs and hatcheth them not; so he that getteth riches and not by right shall leave them in the midst of his days, and at his end shall be a fool." Jer. xvii. 11. The prophet in the above quotation is speaking of mankind in general, and the saying agrees with James v. 1, where he says, "Go to now ye rich men, and howl for your miseries that shall come upon you." Both the prophet and apostle plainly give the reason why they fail in their riches; it is not because they are rich, but because they have obtained their wealth by wronging others, the means they have used in obtaining their riches. Zaccheus was rich and a publican, Lu. xix. 2, but he was commended by the Lord, and informed that salvation had come to his house. So we see that it is not the riches that condemn, but the disposition of the person and the manner in which he obtains them. Wealth as a rule has a tendency to cause folks to become proud, overbearing, conceited and willful according to their physical nature. Some are natural born misers, some acquire it by cultivation; it is a fleshly appetite causing lust and must be met by a thus it is written, as is given by Christ when he was tempted in the wilderness. The craving after riches appears to be universal among the people of the present day, so much so that there is but little confidence any more in a person's word, it appears to be the time spoken of by the prophet Micah, vii. 2, 3, "The good man is perished out of the earth; and there is none upright among men, they all lie in wait for blood; they hunt every man his brother with a net, that they may do evil with both hands earnestly; the prince asketh and the judge asketh for a reward." And 6-12, "For the rich men thereof are full of violence; and the inhabitants thereof have spoken lies, and their tongue is deceitful in their mouth."

According to the reports given by the press concerning national affairs, as well as personal observation, show that in business transactions there is but little reliance to be placed on the word of any one, every one must judge for himself, and look out for the net. Yet there are few who are strictly honest in all their dealings, a few who regard principle above money, but such very seldom get rich, but if they are righteous and belong to the Lord they are assured that they are better off than the unrighteous rich. Psa. xxxvii. 16, "A little that a righteous man hath is better than the riches of many wicked." Wealth has a great influence upon persons, differing in individuals according to their physical condition. We see a poor laborer who is kind, social and liberal, he falls heir to a large fortune. We see him again in a few years, a changed man, his wealth has apparently changed his disposition, if not his whole nature; he is now proud, overbearing and conceited. He goes dressed in purple and linen. Surely "the love of money is the root of all evil." 1 Tim. vi. 10. It is not the money that is the root but the love of money. Job was wealthy and notwithstanding he was given over to the tempter, afflicted with boils. His wife tried to influence him to curse God, false reports were given him concerning his property, yet he maintained his faith in the Giver of all good and perfect gifts. Job i. and James i. 17.

At the present we see the evil of riches in the churches, the practices put forth to raise money, even some are recommending saloons, gymnasiums and almost every abominable device of the devil to attract the people to get money to keep the church alive. The church has become rich in its own estimation, it boasts of its magnificent buildings, of its high salaried pastors and costly organs.

But what says the Spirit to the seven churches, Rev. iii. 17, the reader will bear in mind that this message was to the last of the seven churches, the "Laodiceans," the one representing the last state of the Church, in the gospel age, the time in which we now live (if I can see the fulfilling of prophecy correct) they have become lukewarm, not faithful, yet claiming to be God's people, boasting of their riches and fine things. So he gives them to understand that they are wretched and miserable, and poor, and blind and naked, just the condition of the nominal church today. Yet in each of the seven churches which represent the entire professed church during the gospel age in its different periods and conditions there are a few who have proved faithful, and are promised a special reward. O may we all repent and be worthy to join in that holy anthem spoken of Rev. v. 9, 10 is our prayer.

95TH PSALM.

In this ninety-fifth Psalm we have read for our lesson today, are many lessons which are profitable for us. In the first verse we have "the Rock of our salvation," in the second, Let us come before him with thanksgiving, in the third, For he is a great God, in the fourth and fifth, In his hands are all things, in the sixth, Let us worship him, in the seventh, We are his people, in the eighth, Harden not your hearts, in the ninth and tenth, The example of the people who do err in their hearts, and have not known my ways, and the eleventh, Unto whom I sware in my wrath that they should not enter into my rest. I want to make special mention of this eleventh verse, for Paul says in Heb. iv. 1, Let us also fear, lest a promise being left us of entering into his rest any of you should seem to come short of it, for unto us was the gospel preached as well as unto them, but the Word preached did not profit them, not being mixed with faith in them that heard it. The Israelites failed to keep their covenant with God and out of that mighty host of about six hundred thousand people, only two entered the promised land. Dearly beloved, how is it with us, have we firm, unshaken, and abiding faith in God, and do we make manifest our faith by our works? The Israelites started on their journey, pledging themselves to keep their covenant with God, and after forty years, this is the testimony, they do always err in their hearts and they have not known my ways. Paul's exhortation is, Let us labor therefore to enter into that rest, lest any man fall after the same example of unbelief. We have made our choice, we have said, as for us we will serve the Lord, and have placed ourselves in covenant relationship with God, and now let us fight the good fight of faith, contending earnestly for it, bringing forth the works which testify of our faith, for faith without works is dead. Oh, we need to put on the whole armor of God, our loins girt about with truth, and our feet shod with the preparation of the gospel, that we may be able to withstand in the evil day, and having done all to stand, that we may enter into that rest that remaineth for the people of God. If we dwell awhile on the magnitude of the offer God has made to us, Eternal life in the kingdom of God, with power and honor and glory through Jesus Christ our Lord. We will want to say with David, come let us worship and bow down, let us kneel before our Maker, for he is our God and we are the sheep of his pasture. There is nothing so enobling, so inspiring, so sublime as true and earnest worship of God. How gracious is our God and how full of tender mercy toward us. Let us then take courage, renew our zeal, and labor to enter into that rest that remaineth for the people of God.

MRS. P. NEILL.

PSALM XCV. 6-7.

O, come let us worship and bow down, let us kneel before the Lord our Maker, for he is our God and we are the people of his pasture. These words found in the 6th and 7th verses of our lesson impressed me, and made me feel the need of worshiping and giving God the praise for his wonderful love, and for his kindness to his people. O worship the Lord in the beauty of his holiness, for he shall judge the world with righteousness and the people with his truth, the heavens declare his righteousness and all the people see his glory. It is a good thing to sing thy praises, and to show forth thy loving kindness in the morning and thy faithfulness every night, for his mercy is everlasting, and his truth endureth to all generations; the Lord is merciful and gracious, and slow to anger and plenteous in mercy. For he redeemeth thy life from destruction and crowneth thee with loving kindness, and tender mercy, like as a father pitieth his children, so the Lord pitieth them that fear him, for he knoweth our frame, he remembereth that we are dust, talk ye of his wonderful, wonderful works; how David is thrilled and carried away from all his trials. When he praises God and tells of his mighty works. When he sees what he has done and what he will do for those that love him, he repeats over and over the story of his love. Father help us that we may tell the same story of thy love, that we may praise thee, for thou art our God and we are the people of thy pasture. Sing unto the Lord, bless his name. Show forth his salvation from day to day.

MRS. ELMA BAKER.

Found in Him.

The apostle Paul expressed the ardent desire that he might "win Christ, and be found in him, not having his own righteousness which is of the law, but that which is through the faith of Christ, the righteousness which is of God by faith." Phil. iii: 8, 9. "Found in him." Here we have three things:

1. Paul expected to be found of Christ.

2. He would be found in a certain relation to Christ.

3. The time of being found.

To find is "to come to, to meet." Paul expected Christ at some time "to come to, to meet" him. At that time he would be found in Christ. In this he differs very much from the views commonly entertained and expressed by religious people in our day. The latter expect to go to Christ in heaven to find him waiting for them, rather than to wait for him from heaven. 1. Thess. i: 9, 10. That he intends to come again, is not open to question, for he himself assured his own in many ways that he would come again. "If I go.....I will come again." John xiv: 1-3. The same "I" (ego) who would "go," will also "come again." His coming again will be to the same place from which he went. Language could not more clearly express anything than that which deals with the Lord's coming again. The angels who were dispatched to comfort the distracted disciples after the Lord's ascent in the cloud, assured the upward gazing "men of Galilee," that "this same Jesus, which is taken up from you into heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts i: 11. Paul was equally clear and explicit in his reference to this event when he wrote, "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall rise first." 1. Thess. iv: 16. So then, it is settled that just as certainly as "the Lord himself" ascended to heaven, he will also "descend from heaven," and "in like manner" as he ascended.

How much the coming of the Lord means to us, dear brethren and sisters. It certainly means the fulfillment of God's exceeding great and precious promises: Life, a crown, glory, honor, incorruption, a kingdom, freedom from pain and death; in short, ample reward for every service faithfully performed.

As to this being found when the Lord comes: Where will he find us? Do you say, as many thoughtlessly do, there is "no harm" in carnal amusements and worldly lusts, such as the dance, theater, gambling, and the glass of liquor? Would you or I, as professed followers of the Lord Jesus Christ, feel no scruple at being found at play with the above mentioned kindlings of ungodliness and vice? Are the associations of these things such as to cultivate fellowship with Christ and awaken and encourage an attitude of earnest "looking for that blessed hope?" Titus ii: 11-13. Where we shall be found, depends on our condition when the Lord comes; in other words, how we shall be found. If we are truly "in him," we have been weaned of those things which are "of the world." 1. John ii: 15, 16. And it seems to me that the proper appreciation of and a keen relish for the unsearchable riches of Christ, would hardly admit of the question of whether there is any harm in things which are at best of doubtful propriety. Are the enjoyments of the service of God so meagre that the child of God must go to the world begging for pleasure? What a sad commentary upon God's service such a course would be.

We have been exhorted to "watch," and as a reason for such watching is given the fact that we "know not when the Master of the house cometh, at even, or at midnight, or at the cock-crowing, or in the morning: lest coming suddenly he find you sleeping." Mark xiii: 35, 36. The tendency of the times is that of drowsiness. So many things calculated to lull to sleep. Therefore the necessity of watchfulness and sobriety, and of counteracting the influences that would rob us of the prize. The Lord, as a competent authority, has pronounced a "blessed" upon "that servant, whom his Lord when he cometh shall find so doing." Matth. xxiv: 46. The apostle Peter duly recognized and emphasised the necessity of diligence "that ye may be found of him in peace, without spot, and blameless." 2. Pet. iii: 14. Peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ (Rom. v: 1); peace in the body of Christ through the unity of the spirit (Eph. iv: 3); peace with all men as far as possible. Rom. xii: 18. All of which comes from being spiritually minded. Ro. viii: 6.

In conclusion, "Little children, abide in him; that when he shall appear, we may have confidence, and not be ashamed before him at his coming." 1. John ii: 28.

A. H. ZELMER.

To the Household of Faith:

I want to inform you that I was never stronger in the gospel of the kingdom than I am now, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that obeys its teaching; for many will say in that day, Lord, Lord have we not prophesied in thy name, and in thy name done many wonderful works. Now brethren and sisters, we hear plenty of teaching in these days of darkness and perversion of the gospel of the kingdom, but far from being the gospel of the kingdom that Christ and the apostles taught, for Christ and the prophets, and apostles said the kingdom would be under the whole heavens. Dan. vii. 27. And Jesus said the meek shall inherit the earth, Matt. v. 5; and in Rev. v. 9, 10, says we shall reign on the earth; and the Psalmist says, the meek shall inherit the earth, and delight themselves in the abundance of peace. Thus we see that the gospel of the kingdom teaches that our reward is on the earth. Now we can see plainly why the answer was, Depart from me all ye workers of iniquity. This shows plainly that their teaching was not in accordance to the teaching of God's Word, for if it had been, they would not have been rejected. Thus we see the teaching of a sky kingdom is not the teaching of the Bible, therefore will avail nothing in the great day. For the Lord will call none but the blessed; for he says, Come ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world. Thus we see the call is to the blessed; for it is evident that they who preach another gospel are not the blessed. For the apostle says, If any man preach any other gospel than that we have preached unto you let him be accursed. He makes it still stronger, Though an angel from heaven preach any other gospel than he preached let him be accursed.

CHAPTER 35 (32 APOCRYPHA).

CONCERNING LEADERS.

1. Have they established thee ruler, be not lifted up; become with them as one of them; be thoughtful for them and thus take thy seat.

2. And when thou hast performed all thy useful function, recline that thou mayest rejoice for their sake, and receive thanks for good conduct as a garland crown.

3. Talk, thou elder, with accurate and full knowledge, for it befitteth thee; and do not hinder suitable accompaniments.

4. Where there is a willingness to hear do not pour out talk, and do not philosophize in an unseasonable way.

5. A diamond seal in an ornament of gold is a new resultant thought of scholarly research at a symposium of wine.

6. A seat of pearl in a setting of gold is a strain of music over sweet wine.

7. Talk, young man, if there be a need of thee but hardly twice if thou be asked.

8. Sum up discourse, much in few words, become as one who knoweth, and at the same time keepeth silent.

9. In the midst of great ones do not make thyself an equal, and while another is speaking do not let thy thoughts wander many ways.

10. Before thunder lightening hasteth down, and before modesty grace will come.

11. At the hour to arise do not be in the rear-guard; run away homeand do not dilly-dally.

12. There sport, and do thy special desires, and do not sin with a supercilious word.

13. And besides doing these things eulogize thy Creator who intoxicateth thee with his good things.

14. The one who feareth the Lord will accept chastening-instruction, and those who arise at dawn for it will find satisfaction.

15. The one who seeketh law will have been filled with it, and the one who practiceth hypocrisy will have been made to stumble thereby.

16. Those who fear the Lord will find judgment and statutes of justification will shine out like light.

17. An obdurate sinner inclineth away from reproof (convicing proof) and according to his desire will he find a resultant-judgment.

18. A man of counsel will not evade thinking a thing through; another sort of a man and a supercilious one will not stoop to fear, and after it hath done with him he will be without counsel.

19. Without counsel do nothing and when thou hast acted do not change thy purpose.

20. In a way of stumbling do not go thy way, and do not toil wearily in stony places.

21. Do not put faith in an unsurveyed way.

22. And be on thy guard against thy children.

23. In every work have faith in thy soul; yea, for this is a way of watching to keep commandments.

24. The one who is putting faith in law is heeding commandments, and the one who putteth faith in the Lord will not have been decreased.

COMMENT.

The first two verses of this chapter ought to be blazoned in gold and hung in all our American halls of justice and municipal council-rooms where our "leaders" and laities can constantly read and constantly keep in mind and heart the sage counsel they embody. The old Israelitish ideal of "rule" was "leadership" and that is the American autonomy as opposed to the Latin or European autonomy that we are trying to work out here. So far God has blessed the effort wonderfully and will continue to if we are true as Washington and Lincoln and our other best leaders have been to its divine simplicity and integrity.

Read what is said here about law and compare it with what Paul says about law in Romans and see if you see any discrepancies in the two arguments. There is many a young man in this country who is or ought to be contemplating a career of "leadership" national or otherwise. Where will you find better and more wholesome advice to guide your aspirations than in this chapter? Believe in yourself, make the Lord your chief counselor and with a high aim and ideal make your endeavor a strenuous one. This is the gist of the counsel herein.

Something New.

Bible Studies.

Bible Studies, No. 2, is now ready, under the title "What is it to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ?" written by Bro. W. H. Wilson. Splendid for distribution among your neighbors. 10 cents for 10 copies; 25 cents for 50 copies; 40 cents for 100 copies. Send orders to A. H. Zilmer, at Plymouth, Indiana.

Notice.

To the Brethren in Iowa:

I have decided to take up the Lord's work in Iowa, for several months at least and am ready to respond to all calls for meetings, funerals, weddings, or any other calls pertaining to the work of a minister of the gospel.

Address me at Fort Dodge, Iowa, P. Box 86.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres. Iowa Con.

Hearers who sit under the ministrations of the truth without the Spirit, may be likened to a man standing upon the brow of a hill which commands the prospect of an extensive landscape. The varied beautifies of flood and of field are before him; nature is clad in her richest livery; there is every variety calculated to interest and to inspire; rugged rocks frown as if they would keep sentinel over the sleeping valley; the earth yields her increase, the crystal streamlet leaps merrily along, impressions of the beautiful are everywhere visible. There is just one drawback to the picture, and that one drawback is, that the man who stands upon the summit of the hill is blind. That is precisely the state of the case in reference to truth in the Bible. It is there in all its grandeur, but the man has no eyes to see it.—W. M. Punshon.

As exercise quickens the pulse and diffuses a healthful glow over the physical system, so acts of religious duty increase our Christian vitality, and develop within us that fervency of spirit which enables us to serve God all the more acceptably in proportion to our usefulness to our fellow-men. Mere theory in religion, however orthodox, avails little without corresponding practice. Hence, many in the church become weak and effeminate. What they need is to exercise themselves unto godliness, and to bring forth the fruits of holy living.—D. P. Kidder.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John C. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Poetry.

"Thirsting After God."

As pants the wearied hart for cooling springs
That sinks exhausted in the summer's chase;
So pants my soul for thee, great King of kings!
And thirst to reach thy sacred dwelling-place.

On bitter tears my pining soul hath fed,
While taunting foes deride my deep despair;
Say, "Where is now thy great Deliverer fled?
Thy mighty God—abandon'd wanderer, where?"

Oft dwell my thoughts on those Under happy
When to thy courts I led the willing throng;
Our mirth was worship, all our pleasure praise,
And festal joys still closed with sacred song.

Why throb, my heart? why sink, my saddening soul?
Why droop to earth, with various woes oppress'd?
My years shall yet in blissful circles roll,
And peace be yet an inmate of this breast.

By Jordan's banks with devious steps I stray,
O'er Hermon's rugged rocks and deserts drear;
E'en there thy hand shall guide my lonely way,
There thy remembrance shall my spirit cheer.

In rapid floods the vernal torrents roll,
Harsh sounding cataracts responsive roar,
Thine angry billows overwhelm my soul,
And dash my shatter'd bark from shore to shore.

Yet thy sure mercies ever in my sight,
My heart shall gladden through the tedious day;
And 'midst the dark and gloomy shades of night;
To thee I'll duly tune the graceful lay.

Rock of my hope! Great solace of my heart!
O! why desert the offspring of thy care?
While taunting foes thus point the invidious dart—
"Where is thy God—abandoned wanderer, where?"

Why faint, my soul? Why doubt Jehovah's aid?
Thy God, the God of mercy still shall prove;
Within his courts thy thanks shall yet be paid;—
Unquestioned be his faithfulness and love.

The Great Salvation.

"For if the word spoken by angels was steadfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompence of reward: how shall we escape, if we neglect so great salvation; which at the first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them that heard him." Heb. ii. 2, 3.

If there is any one subject more important in the Bible than another, it is the subject of the great salvation. We may make mistakes in life, in regard to worldly things and live over them, but if we make a mistake in regard to our eternal salvation, it is fatal. A man may be honest in what he believes, and does, and still be lost. Honesty does not make us right. We read of a class, who will plead their cause at the judgment bar, and then be lost. The fact that they argued their cause before the great "white throne," proves their honesty. Christ says, "Many will say unto me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? And in thy name have cast out devils? And in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you; depart from me, ye that work iniquity." Matt. vii, 22, 23. How awful will that be! They were honest in their belief; honest in their works, yet they were lost. God has but one way of saving folks. "I am the way, the truth, and the life," says Christ, not ways, but way. Again Christ says, "Strive to enter in at the strait gate; for many, I say unto you, will seek to enter in, and shall not be able." Luke xiii. 24. O, how careful then ought we to be! Why did they not enter? There is but answer. They did not "strive" in the right way.

It is a fact that there is but one body, one spirit, one hope, one Lord, one faith and one baptism. Eph. iv. 4, 5, 6. Any other faith, besides the "one faith," begets another hope, leads to another baptism and causes us to be lost in the end. Hence we are commanded to examine ourselves, and see whether we be in the faith or not. Faith is the belief of testimony. The Lord, therefore, has revealed unto us certain facts, which he calls the gospel, the belief of which leads to the "great salvation." These facts first began to be spoken by the Lord, and were confirmed unto us, by them who heard him." So says Paul in our text. God will not vary from his plan of saving people to suit any one's convenience. For instance there was Cornelius, a "devout man, and one that feared God with all his house," and prayed to God always. God even heard his prayers, but he would not save him apart from his great plan of saving people. Rather than do this, he sent an angel to Cornelius and told him [illegible] Peter, "who shall tell thee words, whereby thou and all thy house shall be saved." Acts xi. 14. He sent for Peter who came, and Cornelius told him all that happened and added, "Now therefore are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God." Acts x. 33. Then Peter opened his mouth and said, "The word which God sent unto the children of Israel, preaching peace by Jesus Christ; (he is Lord of all) that word, I say, ye know, which was published throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism which John preached * * * To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." When the commandment came from God, Cornelius having believed this, it was for Cornelius to be "baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus." Acts x. 36 to 48.

Here is the "great salvation" in a nut shell. Of course Peter did not tell Cornelius what the "Word" was that God sent, which was preached throughout all Judea, and began from Galilee, after the baptism that John preached. Cornelius already knew "that Word," said Peter, "ye know." If we can only find out what it was, then we shall have found the great salvation. Remember Paul says the great salvation first began to be spoken by the Lord, and was confirmed unto us by them who heard him.

Let us see what we have learned from Peter.

1. We learn that "peace" was preached.
2. We learn that Christ preached it.
3. We learn that "God sent" him to preach it.
4. We learn that it was preached "throughout all Judea."
5. We learned that it began "from Galilee."
6. We learn that the time it began to be preached, was after the "baptism that John preached."

Now let us take up the history of our Savior, and follow him, and learn what he began to preach from Galilee after the baptism that John preached, and follow him on and see if he preached it throughout all Judea. If we find that he did preach something beginning at the time and place designated by Peter, and that he preached it throughout all Judea, and that the same thing was confirmed by them who heard him, there can be no doubt but what it is the great salvation. Taking up the life of our Savior, therefore, we read, "Now after John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee." Now here he is at the right time, and at the right place. But what did he preach? "Preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God." Mark i. 14. How clear! But did he preach it "throughout all Judea?" Let us see. We next find him at Capernaum, a city of Galilee, and the people wanted him to stay with them, but he said unto them, "I must preach the kingdom of God to other cities also; for therefore am I sent. And he preached in the synagogues of Galilee." Luke iv. 43, 44. Remember Peter said, "The Word which God sent," and here Christ says God sent him to preach the kingdom of God. Hence there can be no doubt but the gospel of the kingdom was the Word God sent to the children of Israel. But did he preach it any where else? Let us read, "And it came to pass afterwards, that he went throughout every city and village, preaching and showing the glad tidings of the kingdom of God; and the twelve were with him." Luke viii. 1. Not only did Jesus preach the kingdom of God himself, throughout every city and village, but we read that he called the twelve together, and gave them power over devils, and "sent them to preach the kingdom of God, and to heal the sick." Luke ix. 1, 2. They went and preached, and returned and told Jesus what they had done. And he took them, and went aside privately into a desert place belonging to the city of Bethsaida. "And the people, when they knew it, followed him; and he received them, and spake unto them of the kingdom of God." Luke ix. 11. [illegible] message, that upon one occasion he said unto a certain man "Follow me," but he said, "Lord suffer me first to go and bury my father. Jesus said unto him, let the dead bury their dead, but go thou and preach the kingdom of God." Luke ix. 60.

After this Jesus went out to a certain place, and his disciples came to him, and he showed them the city of Jerusalem and the beautiful temple, and told them that all those buildings would be thrown down and not one stone left upon another. They asked him when those things should be, and what should be the sign of his coming and the end of the world. He enumerated many things which should take place and then added, "This gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come." Matt. xxiv. 14. Heretofore they had not been allowed to preach it any where, except in Judea. But they had preached it throughout all that country, but it must be preached into all the world, and unto all nations. But something in connection with it must also be preached, and that was what Peter preached in connection with it at the house of Cornelius, viz: "To him give all the prophets witness, that through his name whosoever believeth in him shall receive remission of sins." Acts x. 43. Hence we learn that after his death and resurrection, "He showed himself alive after his passion by many infallible proofs, being seen of them forty days, and speaking of the things pertaining to the kingdom of God." Acts i. 3. Here was a school of forty days instructions "concerning the kingdom," so that the disciples would thoroughly understand it, and enable them to preach it to others. So after he had thus instructed them, and just before he ascended to heaven, he said: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved. And he that believeth not shall be damned." Mark xvi. 15, 16. Don't forget he said the "gospel of the kingdom" must be preached into all the world, and here he says, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." This gospel, certainly is the gospel of the kingdom. But as said above something else must be preached in connection with it. Hence Luke says, "Thus it is written, and thus it behooved Christ to suffer and to rise again from the dead the third day, and that repentance, and the remission of sins, should be preached in his name among all nations, beginning at Jerusalem." Luke xxiv. 47.

Thus we have followed our Savior from the manger to the tomb, and from the tomb to his ascension, and found that the gospel of the kingdom was his theme through life; began preaching it at Galilee, thence at Capernaum, thence throughout all Judea, till his death.

When the light of morning broke into his chamber of death, he rose, met his apostles, and for forty days expounded unto them the things pertaining to the kingdom of God; told them to go and tell it to all nations, with the glorious promise of "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," and with the assurance that remission of sins was in his name, into which all believers of the gospel of the kingdom could be baptized. Blessed thought!

But, was it confirmed unto us by them who heard him? We find the apostles went "everywhere preaching the Word." "Philip went down to the city [illegible] maria, and preached Christ unto them." What is it to preach Christ? When they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized both men and women." Acts viii. 12. Hence, to preach Christ, is to preach the things concerning the kingdom and the name. Paul was the great apostle to the Gentiles, and we find him at Ephesus holding a protracted meeting three months, and his theme was [illegible] preaching the kingdom of God and him preaching the same glorious truth everywhere he went. When he went to take his farewell leave of the church and disciples, he says, "And now, behold, I know that all ye, among whom I have gone preaching the kingdom of God, shall see my face no more." Acts xx. 25.

In all of Paul's travels through the many cities, among them Derby, Lystra, Iconium, Antioch, etc., he confirmed the souls of the disciples, exhorted them to continue in the faith, that it is "through much tribulation, we are to enter into the kingdom of God." Acts xiv. 21.

Upon one occasion Paul appealed unto the Jews, and begged them to hear him, and told them, it was for the hope of Israel he was bound with a chain. So they decided to hear him; appointed a day, and what do you think Paul preached to them? Why, he expounded unto them the kingdom of God, and persuaded them of things concerning the name of Jesus Christ. Acts xxviii. 23. After this, the faithful old apostle, hired him a house. He was loaded down with bonds so he dwelt in the house which he hired, and for two whole years he received all who would come in unto him, preaching the kingdom of God, and teaching those things which concern the name of the Lord Jesus Christ. Acts xxviii. 31. Now he writes a letter to the church at Rome and in closing it, he says, "Now to him that is able to establish you according to my gospel, and the preaching of Jesus Christ, according to the revelation of the mystery, which was kept secret since the world began, but is now made manifest and by the Scriptures of the prophets, according to the commandment of the everlasting God, made known to all nations for the obedience of faith." Rom. xiv.

Thus we have the great salvation. It is the gospel of the kingdom of God, and the good news of the name of Jesus Christ. The belief of these things constitutes one faith, which begets the one hope, which also causes us to be baptized with the one baptism, and which puts us into the one name of the one Lord, where is remission and salvation. When this is done, we are in the body, and are made to drink of one spirit, which comes from the one God who is the Father of us all.

How beautiful! How compact! The whole building is fitly framed together. Oh let me exhort you to study the Word. Learn the truth which makes men free. Free from sin, free from error, free from sectarianism. May God bless both reader and writer. The half has not been told, but for want of [illegible] close with just a few words [illegible] kingdom and the name. Christ is the rightful heir to the throne of David. He is the Son of David from whom he inherits the throne. He is the Son of Abraham, from whom he inherits the land promised. He is the Son of God from whom he inherits the divine nature. See Matt. i. 1. The angel said to Mary, "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David." Luke i. 33. Paul said the world was promised unto Abraham and Christ. Gal. iii. 16. And adds "If ye be Christ's then are ye Abraham's seed and heirs according to the promise." Gal. iii. 29. David's throne was in Jerusalem, and has been in ruins for centuries, but the Word of God says that Christ, when he returns, will build again the tabernacle of David; the prophet says Christ shall sit upon the throne of David, in David's tabernacle, in mercy. Acts xv. 18 to 19; Isa. xvi. 5. All overcomers will be given seats with Christ on his throne. Rev. iii. 21. The way to overcome, is to believe the gospel of the kingdom, repent of your sins and be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ, for the remission of sins, (Acts ii. 38) and continue faithful till death. The only way to get into Christ is to be baptized into him. Faith and repentance brings us to him. "Neither is there salvation in any other, for there is no other name under heaven given by which we can be saved, except the name of Jesus." Acts iv. This being true, and the fact that baptism places us into that name, you can see the [illegible]

Yours for the truth.

Dear Restitution:

Please allow me space for a few words on a subject on which very much has been said and written, but which, as it seems to me, is very little understood. I mean the law God gave to the nation of Israel by Moses. Some are contending that Christians are under that law, even Gentile Christians, and some even Gentiles who are not Christians, this whole nation, and in fact all other nations. The main point seems to be the Jewish Sabbath, as given to the Israelites, the seventh day of the week, or our Saturday, that all should obey that law. I have not noticed that they contend we should be circumcised, or that we should offer lambs or oxen, etc. for sacrifices, but they do contend we should keep the Sabbath, that we are under the law as given by God by Moses relating to that Sabbath. Now, if it is our duty to obey that part of the law, it certainly is our duty to obey every other part, for to keep the whole law and to offend in one point we are guilty of all, for all are given by the same authority. And I here affirm that if we are under any one part of that law as given by God through Moses, we are under all! All the law or laws of that whole covenant stand or fall together. If one is in force, all are in force, if all are not in force, none are! If one has been repealed all have. If not all, none! If one of the laws of that covenant was nailed to the cross, all were! If all were not, none were! There seems to me to be much confusion on this matter even with our very best writers.

Now as I do not wish to take too much of your space, let me state a few things plainly: 1st, God made that covenant with the children of Israel and gave them all their laws through Moses as mediator or medium. 2nd, He made their covenant with the Israelites as a nation, and to no other nation, and no other nation ever had the like. Dan. iv. 6, 8. No other nation can justly claim that what is said in that covenant and law is said to it or them. 3rd, The time this was done was when the Lord took them by the hand and brought them out of the land of Egypt.

Now if any one, other than an Israelite wishes to put himself under the laws of that covenant let him become a proselyte and be circumcised, then he would be under obligation to keep that law. But I know of no way a man can put himself under one part of that law without being under obligations to keep the whole. A Gentile becoming a believer in the Lord Jesus the Christ, does not put him under that (any part of it) law. But a Jew's becoming a Christian does take him from under that law. Now how or why is that? Is it because the law is dead or repealed? No. The law is not dead nor repealed, nor abrogated nor has it expired by statute of limitation. The law is as much in force as ever it was. Jesus did not come to destroy it, but to fulfil it. We should try to rightly divide, or apply the Word of truth. The law as given by or through Moses was God's law, God's Word to Israel—to no other people, but to Israel alone. Therefore Israel alone were and are under that law. That law commands no other people to obey it. And Israel will continue to be under it, as long as they live in the flesh till after the Lord comes, when he will take away that covenant and make a new covenant with them. It is and long had been ready to vanish away. Heb. viii. But it will remain till the Lord replaces it with a better. This will be done by him whom the Father has appointed, namely, Jesus the Christ, including Jesus as the Head and all who are his, his body. There will be one Lord, one body, but many members, one Spirit in all the members. There will be one Christ the Lord, but many persons in that one body of Christ. And wherever any of his members are there Christ will be.

But a few more words—did not Christ die on the cross? Yes. Did he not [illegible] the law [illegible] Then how can that law be now in force? It is not in force to Christ. The law has dominion over a man as long as he lives. God is not God of the dead but of the living. So long as Israel shall live the law will have dominion over them as it did over Jesus to the cross—then he died. He was no longer under the law, so that in a figure it may be said he nailed it to the cross. Nothing but death can deliver an Israelite from the law's dominion. Just as the law of marriage binds the man and wife as long as both shall live. But when either one dies, the other is released from that law, so that the survivor may marry again to another. But Jesus was raised from the dead, but not in the flesh, he was a new creature. Death freed him from the law, and so with every one else. Now Israel may be freed from the law in the same way, by death, and nothing but death will do it! They must die in some way, either naturally or by believing into Christ, and being baptized into Christ. "Know ye not, that as many of us as were (or are) baptized into Jesus Christ were baptized into his death." Therefore we are buried with him by baptism into death that like as Christ was raised up from the dead, etc. Rom. vi. 3, 4, etc. Then those under the law are freed from the law dead to it, no longer under it. And the sinners of the Gentiles are freed from sin. Believing the gospel and obeying it does not make the Gentile a Jew nor the Jew a Gentile, but makes them both one new man—and Jesus being the one seed of Abraham, they all become one in the Anointed one, and heirs to what is promised to the seed of Abraham.

Now, I can see some reason why a believing Jew may have some doubt as to its being his duty to continue to keep the law including the Sabbath, but I can see no reason in the world why any Gentile should think for a moment that he ought to do it, as there is not a word in all the Bible to hint that any other than Israel should do so. The very purpose of the council at Jerusalem, Acts xv., was to consider whether believing Gentiles should keep the law, and certainly it was clearly shown that he need not when the Lord died on the cross, nailing the law to the cross, he nailed it all there, every bit of it. No dead folks can keep any law. He nailed it all there, decalogue and all, every single word. But it is claimed he did not nail all there, for still "Thou shalt not steal," "kill" etc., is in force. I reply, I know it is wrong to steal, kill, etc., but not because of that law. It was wrong before that law was given. It was given because it was wrong, and it is not wrong because it was given. What is morally wrong is always wrong, law or no law. The law was given because it was wrong, not to make it so. Now let every Jew who has believed and been baptized into Christ—into his death, and raised to a new life in Christ, no longer under the law, but dead to it, freed from it, etc., not seek to be again entangled therein, and by all means let no believing Gentile who has obeyed ever for a moment think of putting such a yoke on his neck. And let those teachers who would bind such a yoke of bondage on the neck of a disciple, beware.

Yours in the one hope.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

WE give all possible space to correspondents this week, as many articles have been on hand for some time.

LET all who are in the localities affected by the various summer Conferences make arrangements to attend. There is good there for you, and you can do good to others.

IT is surely evident to all that we cannot well do business without means. It surely is likewise evident to those who have not yet renewed their subscription that we must be in need of what is due us. We dislike very much to mention this, and hope you will not compell us to repeat the hint.

THE war during the past week has taken a surprising start. Admiral Togo has at last succeded in stopping the entrance to Port Arthur, and can use most of his fleet now for other purposes, and send some ships in to be overhauled and repaired. The Japanese have landed armies on both sides of the point above Port Arthur, and have possession of the railroad leading to it. This means that the siege of Port Arthur has commenced. The battle at the crossing of the Yalu was much more serious for the Russians than was first reported, and their armies are being driven back to Liaoyang. Should they be unable to hold that point they can only fall back to Mukden. Meanwhile, in spite of the fortifications at New Chwang, that port is being dismantled, and will soon be abandoned by the Russians without striking a blow to hold it. The Russian general Kouropatkin calls for more troops, and a call is made that will place 500,000 more Russians in the field by July. Before this force can be ready for the strife, the Japs may by following up the start they now have, force the Russians back to their main base at Harbin, on the road to Vladivostock. It seems that the Japanese officers were able to out-general the Russians at every point, and it is demonstrated that the Japs are fighters, and that the Russians have been over-rated.

What is the Gospel?

It is God's declared purpose concerning the earth and its inhabitants. But what is that purpose? We certainly would know practically nothing as to what the gospel is so long as we are strangers to his purpose, and yet we have no means of knowing the Creator's work and purpose except by revelation. The mind of God can only be known so far as he has been pleased to reveal it. The apostle Paul "declared that the gospel he preached was not received from man, neither says he was I taught it; but by revelation," and the same can be affirmed of all the apostles.

The Creator of heaven and earth has been pleased to reveal his mind, limited of course to that state or condition of things in which man is placed here, and to that future condition to obtain hereafter.

The word gospel in plain English signifies glad tidings and hence brings to light something both desirable and obtainable, and therefore truly gladdens the heart of him who hears and believes it. Life and incorruptibility was brought to light through the gospel, and this alone would be sufficient to make the apostolic message good news to all and every one favored with a knowledge thereof. When Jesus came preaching the glad tidings, it is said "the people who sat in darkness saw great light, and to them who sat in the region and shadow of death light is sprung up." To be in mental darkness, that is ignorant of God's will and purpose, is to be imprisoned in the region and shadow of death, a horrible, hopeless condition surely. It is a condition of mind and heart that alienates the subjects thereof from the life of God, and is therefore equivalent to being under sentence of death, with no prospect or hope of deliverance.

It is proper to enquire how man came to be thus related to his Maker? What was the primary cause of his estrangement from God—his sorrow, suffering and death? The explanation is given in the words of the apostle Paul, as follows "by one man sin entered the world, and death by sin, so death passed to or upon all men." Rom. v.

In the above statement the apostle is simply commenting upon the history as given in the book of Genesis as to how sin entered the world, and the consequences that follow. Sin is the transgression of law, the perverse act of a free will, which creates a condition mentally and morally, that tends to perpetuate and intensify that perverse disposition that originated in sin: When Adam and Eve crossed the law made line of their Creator they immediately experienced the reflex influence of their disobedience. Their consciousness of guilt and the shame of their nakedness came home to them as a matter of personal experience. They had become wise in a sense—their eyes had been opened to see and feel the estrangement of their disobedience, but they did not become like the gods (angels) in any higher sense than the knowledge of good and evil. The woman says the apostle was deceived—she did not willfully and maliciously sin, but through deception transgressed the law of her Creator. Nevertheless upon all her posterity is entailed the effects of her sin, sickness, sorrow and death.

We discover therefore a changed condition of things, resulting from the transgression of law. A condition that fundamentally prepared the way for the gospel message of mercy toward the fallen and forgiveness to the penitent. Before the transgression in Eden there was no inclination upon the part of man to hide himself from his Maker, no consciousness of guilt, no experience of shame, no toiling for bread, no death. The introduction of sin into the world not only changed man's relation to his Creator, but in fact placed him where his frailty and weakness would become more and more manifest as his posterity increased. The revelation of God's purpose begins with the entrance of sin and death. Man's greatest need is not money or worldly possessions, but sympathy, enlightenment, lifting up, which of course implies assistance from above, and this God in his goodness, abundantly supplied, indeed this is why the gospel is good news to the children of men. It reveals the character of the Creator, making manifest his goodness and mercy towards the fallen. Though the first man incurred the death penalty, that is to be violently cut off, yet divine goodness and mercy interposed to stay the execution of the penalty, and meanwhile provide a way by which man could obtain forgiveness of sin and a deliverance from death. The apostle says "we are saved by hope," and the door of hope was opened first when man made his exit from Eden. The promise that the seed of the woman should bruise the serpent's head, was virtually making known the Creator's purpose to raise up one of the Adamic race who would be strong enough to overcome sin, and deliver from death all those who exercised faith in the promise and cherished the hope. It is evident that Abel exercised faith, for it is written concerning him that "by faith he offered a more excellent sacrifice than Cain." If some contend that sacrifices were only voluntary thank offerings, I do not see why Cain's offering was rejected and Abel's accepted; one was just as good as the other, if there was any preference at all Cain's was the best, for it was bloodless. Abel believed in the promise of one who was destined to suffer a violent death, implying the shedding of blood, and hence his offering was in keeping with his faith.

Sin is defiling, making it necessary for the sinner to be cleansed, and this required blood, a principle that Abel recognized, and his works demonstrated the sincerity of his faith. Cain was a worshiper of God, doubtless grateful enough for abundant crops, but had no faith in the necessity for sin cleansing by blood. He apparently was disinclined to acknowledge sin. Even in our day there is no element of the gospel more offensive to the natural man than the principle of blood cleansing from sin. To accept it as necessary to the obtaining of God's favor, presupposes that all men are by nature sinners and therefore unclean in the sight of their Creator. This indeed is what the Scriptures teach, however humiliating it may be to human vanity to acknowledge it. Paul writing to the Romans says, "So then as by means of one man's offense the consequence for all men was condemnation, so, also by means of one man's goodness the consequence for all men was a setting right with God which is life." All men were in Adam when he sinned, and therefore, all sinned in him, and hence the condemnation covers all his posterity. It does not follow however that by the righteousness of one man that all are set right with God, that is reconciled to him, but it is true that by means of one man's goodness, the grant of access to God's favor is made [illegible]. The gospel then is the glad [illegible] salvation offered as a free gift to all, who are willing to accept of divine goodness.

To what extent Jehovah revealed his work and purpose to men like Abel, Seth and his descendants we do not know, but it is evident that their apprehension of the divine purpose was sufficiently clear to generate faith, hope and righteousness, and therefore it is safe to conclude that the gospel was made known to them. They certainly believed in the coming of a promised deliverer, a mighty one, who as the "woman's seed," in a time to come would overcome sin, or in other words destroy the sin power.

The nature of Abel's offering indicates that he exercised faith in the promise of one, who through obedience to the divine will would be accounted worthy of deliverance from death, thus making manifest the possibility of resurrection and certainty of immortality beyond the death state. Hence we read "life and incorruptibility was brought to light through the gospel by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." Abraham also believed in one who would lay down his life as an offering, implying the shedding of blood on account of sin. Isaac to all intents suffered a violent death by the hand of his father, which was a trial of faith, but more a type of something yet future. The offering up of Isaac on the altar, foreshadowed the death of Jesus the sacrificial lamb provided of God,—his restoration before actual death had occurred was to Abraham says the apostle, "a figure of the resurrection." Heb. xi. 19. He accounted that God was able to raise him up, and would restore him to life, for the promise was "In Isaac shall thy seed be called." Abraham surely must have been a believer in life from the dead. The sin power was to bruise the woman's seed in the heel, not a vital organ and therefore not fatal to life and being. The resurrection of the promised seed constituted his recovery from the serpent's wound, and everlasting deliverance from the enmity of the sin power. It was impossible for death to hold him, because says the apostle he was a man "approved of God," in that he was faithful and obedient in all things—holy and undefiled in word and deed. It will be seen therefore that resurrection from the dead is one of the fundamental elements of the gospel We cannot, however, overlook what has been already indirectly intimated that resurrection is possible only to those who by faith become related to him who has been raised. The apostles in all their writings emphasize the words "in Christ." The old man and the new man are antithetically related. The heritage of the one is death, the blessing of the other is justification and life. To be in the old man is the natural or animal, as we see it, subject to the vain philosophy, and reasoning of the carnal mind, but in the new man, the process of a new formation of creation is going on, so that mentally and morally there is the consciousness of a new being nourished and sustained by the "law of the Spirit of life in Christ Jesus," which makes the believer free from the "law of sin and death." Rom. viii. 2. "I am the resurrection and the life" cannot be affirmed of Adam, therefore it is written "all in Adam die, even so also in Christ shall all be made alive," for by man came death through sin, so by man came resurrection. Here are two men representative of two opposite states or conditions, one the embodiment of sin and death to all in him, the other is the embodiment of justification and life to all in him. We see therefore the necessity of being "in Christ," and not in Adam, in order to obtain life.

Resurrection however is not limited to the saved ones but includes good and bad, just and unjust, but all are related in some way to him who is the resurrection and the life. A man once legally "in Christ" incurs obligations and responsibilities that cannot be neglected or treated indifferently without incurring the danger of punishment, and we can hardly conceive of a greater punishment than to awake from the death state, and actually see what has been lost. Jehovah says to all his servants, Believe my Word, trust in me, I will lead you, teach you, put you to the proof, try your faith as gold is tried in the fire, be not negligent or dismayed for I will not let you fall, but at last in the great day of judgment crown you with honor and glory in my kingdom.

Future accountability at the judgment seat of Christ is one of the fundamental doctrines of the gospel. A man cannot preach the gospel, and ignore this fact. For every injurious word that man shall speak they shall give an account thereof in the day of judgment, for by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned." Matt. xii. 36-37. If there is anything that will induce sober mindedness, and make one circumspect and chaste in speech it is the consciousness that there is a day of reckoning when justification or condemnation follows. A man cannot despise God's favor, treat his goodness with contempt, without being made to see and realize how ungrateful he has been. There were, says Paul, many in his day who made appetite their God, whose glory was their shame, who minded earthly things. These became the victims of sight and sense, captivated by the lust of the eye, and the desires of the flesh. But on the other hand there were those who earnestly desired to "know the power of Christ's resurrection," that is the power that flows from his resurrection. They desired to know it experimentally which would be equivalent to having their bodies fashioned like unto his glorious body." This class did not mind earthly things—their conversation pertained to things heavenly, and they pressed forward to obtain the promised reward. What shall it profit a man to seek and serve mammon, and at the same time be a spiritual pauper, unconscious of his own blindness and nakedness, until the great search light of the last day makes manifest the approval of God? The apostle says the gospel is the power of God unto salvation to those believing it, and again he says the gospel was preached among all nations for the obedience of faith." Faith cometh not by seeing but by hearing. Man was given ears to hear, and through this organ the understanding is reached by spoken or written testimony, and doubtless through hearing or reading a more emphatic and lasting impression is made upon the mind than by the sense of sight. "Take heed how you hear," that is understand what you hear. The obedience of faith could not follow hearing of testimony unless the understanding is quickened by enlightenment. The obedience of faith is not limited to baptism into Christ, but follows on as one grows in knowledge of things divinely revealed. In a word the gospel is the regenerative force, the renewing power of God, that justifies and purifies the believing soul from the defiling influence of sin. It reveals the love and goodness of God, and begets love in the hearts of all who sincerely and intelligently respond to its goodness. It is the goodness of God that leadeth to repentance. God's favor however cannot be justly appreciated in the absence of an intelligent apprehension of his work and purpose. Moreover the obedience of faith by which character is formed and moral fitness, that is purity of heart, self control, patience, suffering of wrong, rather than do wrong, in a word crucifying the carnal lusts, and passions which belong to the earth.

Believers of the gospel are styled called-out ones, called for a purpose, plainly revealed and ultimately manifest at the appearing of the Lord Jesus, and the establishment of his kingdom. More in my number 2.

GEO. MOYER.

If the plain statements of Scripture concerning any subject seem to conflict with human reasoning and logical ideas, it is better to believe that there is something wrong with the human reason and logic than to attempt to explain the Scripture statements so as to make them conform to our own ideas of what ought to be or what must be.

"Stewardship." 1 Cor. iv: 2.

"Moreover, it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful." At creation's beginning God did not give Adam the Garden of Eden, but put him there "to dress it, and to keep it" —Gen. ii: 15. What is there that we can call our own? Money? "The silver is Mine and the gold is Mine saith the Lord"—Hag. ii: 8. Lands? "The land shall not be sold in perpetuity; for the land is Mine; for ye are strangers and sojourners with Me"—Lev. xxv: 23. Possessions? "Whatever is under the whole heaven is Mine"—Job xli: 11. Did we not earn the wealth we possess? "It is He that giveth the power to get wealth"—Deut. viii: 18. But what of my life? "All souls (lives) are Mine"—Ezek; xviii: 4. And what of the world? "The world is Mine, and the fulness thereof"—Psa. l: 12. From the first, men have recognized their indebtedness to God. The first record relative to Cain and Abel relates to the offerings they brought unto the Lord. One bringing fruits, grain and flowers of earth, and the other the firstlings of his flock. Abraham gave a tenth of all to Melchizedek, God's mystic Priest and King. Jacob, in recognition of God as the giver of all his goods, said, "I will surely give the tenth unto Thee"—Gen. xxviii: 22. This recognized principle was incorporated in God's law. The first tenth of all their increase was for Him. It was not to be offered as a gift. The tithe is the Lord's—Lev. xxvii: 30, 31. If anything was kept back, it had not only to be made up, but a fifth part added thereto. The years of neglect were to be redeemed at compound interest Upon the offering of tithes, blessings and prosperity were distinctly promised and strikingly fulfilled in Israel's history. When the tithes were withheld, religion waned, and poverty and captivity fell like a blight. Through a thousand years of a nation's history the painful lesson was taught that God gives wealth, and He must be first honoured in its service or use.

Yet in the added light of the New Testament the Church has largely lost the sense of her stewardship. She has fallen below even the Jewish measure of the tithe. The faithful words of God need to be repeated in our day. "Beware, lest when thou hast built goodly houses: and when thy silver and thy gold is multiplied, then thine heart be lifted up, and thou forget the Lord thy God, and say in thine heart, my power and the might of mine hand hath gotten me this wealth. But thou shalt remember the Lord thy God, for it is He that giveth thee power to get wealth"—Deut. viii: 11-20. Are we in truth, in reality God's stewards? If you had a clerk or manager or steward to whom you intrusted your estate during your absence, with plain and repeated directions that though he was to get his living out of it, he was not to lay up money for himself, but was to use it for your children and for advancing your work; if you found upon return that he had neglected your interests and your children, and had transferred to his own bank-account what he had not spent upon himself and his own family—what would you call this? You would call it robbery. What does God call it? "Ye rob me even this whole nation. Bring ye the whole tithe into the storehouse, that there may be meat in Mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of Hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." If we have not an overflowing blessing in our lives, the reason may not be very far to seek. In the light of Christ's teaching, however, the whole tithe for us may be more than the tenth. Jacob had no church to support, the Jews had no world to evangelize. The passages quoted, from many more that might have been chosen, are sufficient to shew the teaching of the Old Testament that the tithe was given in recognition that all belonged to God.—J. *W. Obituary.

Austin Heston was born in Henry County, Indiana, Nov. 25, 1833, and died at his home at Lakeville, St. Joseph County, Ind., May, 2, 1904, his age being 70 years, 5 months, and 7 days.

Brother Heston moved to St. Joseph County, a great many years ago, and has resided there ever since as an honored citizen. He was married twice. His first wife was Mary McChesney. Two children were born to them, Liberty and Martha, both of whom died some years ago. His last marriage was to Mrs. Ella Smith, who, together with two grand children Ernest Logan and Mrs. Leona Johnson, mourns his death. He was a great sufferer before his death, and longed for death to be relieved of his pain, however, not without the hope of the resurrection unto life at the coming of Christ. He was baptized in the faith of the gospel in the summer of 1874, and though living somewhat in isolation from the brethren of the Church of God, took an active interest in the cause of the truth. The undersigned spoke words of comfort to the bereaved from 1. Thess. iv: 13-18. A number of the brethren from North Salem, where the deceased was a member, and from Plymouth attended the funeral.

"We shall sleep, but not forever,
There will be a glorious dawn.
We shall meet to part, no, never,
On the resurrection morn."

To the Bereans of Illinois:

At the quarterly meeting held with the Antioch church on Saturday evening, May 7, it was unanimously decided to hold a Bible school this year just preceding the annual conference as last year. So much did the Board of Management desire it that they voted ten dollars support toward paying the grocery bill for the same. The school will be held beginning on Monday, August 15, 1904. The work will proceed much on the same plan as last year except that the daily sessions will consist of two periods of an hour and a half each instead of two hours each. Many have already signified their intention of attending.

Young people cannot estimate the value of such a training until they have had it. For further particulars write me. Suffice it to say that about the only expense—at least the chief item of expense—will be the expense of transportation. Please write and say that you are coming.

Announcement.

The third Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God in Indiana will convene at the Antioch church at 10: 00 o'clock A. M., Friday, June 10, and continue over the following Sunday. The brethren and sisters who have attended the June Meeting at Antioch in former years know the character of this gathering, and scarcely need a special invitation to attend the meeting this year. Many times have God's children met at Antioch and taken with them new spiritual impulses, and there is every reason to anticipate a time of refreshing this year. Let the brethren and sisters for a few days lay aside the cares of this age, and lay up treasure for the age to come. Let the meeting be characterized by deep earnestness and joyful fellowship in the hope of the life to come. Those coming by railroad will come to Plymouth or Argos, where they will be met at trains and conveyed to the place of meeting.

Please send word by postal one week before meeting to Bro. A. R. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind., or T. O. Taber, Argos, Ind., on what day and train you expect to arrive.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the doners request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

Poetry.

To Whom Shall We Go?

An exiled race in a convicts land,
Pierced by darts from a deadly hand,
With sins laid open to God's dread eye,
We hopeless mortals are doomed to die.

Not one of our fellows has power to save,
Not one can ransom from yawning grave,
"To whom shall we go? To whose skirts cling,
In what words hope? or where gifts bring?

That shall set us free from the awful doom,
And ope the gates to an endless home?
But one name given, one only name,
That can cover over our guilt and shame!

Christ Jesus he—'tis his blood alone,
That to God for us, will our sins atone,
To him we go as the only way,
That leads from death to an endless day.

S. ROXANA WIECK.

A Worker's Prayer.

Lord, speak, to me, that I may speak
In living echoes of thy tone;
As thou hast sought, so let me seek
The erring children, lost and lone.

O lead me, Lord, that I may lead
The wandering and the wavering feet;
O feed me, Lord, that I may feed
The hungering ones with manna sweet!

O strengthen me, that while I stand
Firm on the Rock, and strong in thee,
I may stretch out a loving hand
To wrestlers with the troubled sea.

O teach me, Lord, that I may teach
The precious things thou dost impart;
And wing my words, that they may reach
The hidden depths of many a heart.

O give thine own sweet rest to me,
That I may speak with soothing power
A word in season, as from thee,
To weary ones in needful hour.

O fill me with thy fullness, Lord,
Until my heart o'erflow
In kindling thought and glowing word,
Thy love to tell, thy praise to show.

O use me, Lord, use even me
Just as thou wilt, and when, and where;
Until thy blessed face I see,
Thy rest, thy joy, thy glory share.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. I noticed in THE RESTITUTION, a request that Pine Woods Bible Class should study Rev. xii.

As it would not be possible to properly consider all the contents of that chapter in a single lesson, we will therefore confine ourselves to what appears to be the main lesson in the chapter, viz:

THE BIRTH OF THE "MAN CHILD."

I will ask Arloa to state who gave birth to this child?

Arloa. "A woman whose robe was the sun, and who had the moon under her feet, and on her head a crown of twelve stars."

Q. What does the word "woman" symbolize in Scripture?

The church, both of the true and false. That such is the case, most all expositors agree, so that it will not be necessary to cite proofs along that line.

Q. For what purpose is this child born?

A. To rule all nations with a rod of iron."

Q. To whom does the above language apply?

A. Similar language is applied to Jesus.

Q. But does the language quoted from Rev. xii. apply to Jesus?

A. I think not.

Q. What makes you think so?

A. The introduction to the book of Revelation reads: "The revelation of Jesus Christ, which God gave unto him, to shew unto his servants things which must shortly come to pass."

Q. Where was Jesus when he gave this revelation?

A. In heaven.

Q. Was he showing things which had already happened?

A. No, it related to "things which must shortly come to pass."

Q. His own birth and ascension to heaven, had already taken place?

A. Yes.

Q. Then the birth and ascension he spoke of was at that time, an event still in the future?

A. Yes.

Q. What is a man-child?

A. A new man.

Q. Is it the mission of Jesus to create a new man of an higher order than that of the animal man?

A. Yes.

Q. Have you Scriptural proof?

A. Yes.

Q. Where do you find it?

A. In the second chapter of the Ephesians.

Q. Of whom is he making this "new man" or "man-child."

A. Jew and Gentile. See verse 15. "Having abolished in his flesh the enmity, even the law of commandments, (Sabbath not excepted) contained in ordinances, for to make in himself of twain one new man, so making peace."

Q. By what process is the "new man," or "man-child" created?

A. See verses 11 and 12. By becoming citizens of "the commonwealth of Israel," by means of "the covenants of promise."

Q. If this process is rejected, will such be created the "new man?"

A. It cannot be possible, because such aliens and strangers are "without Christ," "having no hope, and are without God in the world." The covenants of promise constitute the gospel of the kingdom. This is how the "new man" is made.

Teacher. Now Carrie, please tell us from what "woman" the "new man" or "man child" is being taken?

Carrie. We know from experience that the larger number are being taken out of the nominal professing Christian church; of all denominations, many of whom are partially prepared to receive the "incorruptible seed," "which by the gospel is preached unto us." These in the aggregate, who receive the seed, will constitute the "new man," or "man child," born out of the "woman"—the nominal church.

Q. Well, is there anything further to be accomplished, in order to qualify the "man-child" to rule all nations?

A. The growth of the child, Rev. ii. 26, 27: "He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end, to him will I give power over the nations; and he shall rule them with a rod of iron." "And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron." None but "overcomers" who keep his works unto the end, can ever be reckoned with the "man child," or "the new man."

Teacher. Lucy, how are they to become "overcomers"?

Lucy. See verse 11: "And they overcame him (Satan) by the blood of the Lamb, and the Word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death."

Q. In what sense did they overcome him "by the blood of the Lamb?"

A. In the first place, I will call attention to Rev. i. 5: "Unto him that loved us, and washed us from our sins in his own blood." In this way we part company with (Satan) our past sins. "Without the shedding of blood there is no remission." Consequently as there can be no salvation in sin, and there can be no remission of sin "without the shedding of blood," therefore Jesus as "the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world," is a foundation rock in the plan of redemption.

Q. Is this fundamental principle being attacked by religionists of our day?

A. Yes.

Q. By whom?

A. Modern Ebionites.

Q. Have you proof of this?

A. I have. See Christian Inquirer, Dec. 1903, page 14, and read the following extracts:

"As to Christ's own view, he had no conception of atonement in its sacrificial sense as a blood offering for sin. He protested against the bloody sacrifices of the Mosaic law, as having in themselves any efficacy in taking away sin. He made little of the temple rites that were still continued in his day. His own doctrine of sacrifice was that of the later prophets and psalmists, the sacrifice of the heart, the self-sacrifice of love. This was to him the meaning of the cross. * * *

"Paul thus introduced an entirely new element into Christ's teaching, viz., that of a mediator and a mediatorial sacrifice, his doctrine must be carefully distinguished from that of the unknown author of the Epistle to the Hebrews.

"Here for the first and only time in the New Testament Christ is made not merely a mediating principle, but a sacrificial victim to propitiate God. The whole Jewish and Pagan theory of bloody offerings to expiate sin is squarely affirmed and applied. * * *

"It is to the Epistle to the Hebrews, then, that we owe the traditional orthodox doctrine of the atonement. It is one of the astonishing facts of history that Christian theology should have seized on such a relic of barbarism and should have incorporated it, in its grossest form of a human victim, into its doctrine of redemption. Plainly pagan as this whole atonement doctrine is, it was the more readily accepted as an article of Christian belief by the uncritical use of passages of Scripture which were interpreted, on the principle of analogy of faith, as representing Christ's own doctrine. But historical criticism has demolished this principle of interpretation, and with it go the doctrines built upon it. Critical scholars no longer regard Christ as thinking or declaring himself 'the Lamb of God' in any sacrificial sense, because the author of the fourth gospel makes John the Baptist call him so, or because the Revelation, once ascribed to John the Apostle, employs the same term so frequently."

It will be observed that the writer of the above extracts does not regard the writings of Paul, the Epistle to the Hebrews, "the author of the fourth gospel," or "the Revelation once ascribed to John the apostle," as of any more weight than that of profane authors. Here Paul is charged with being the first to introduce the "Pagan theory of blood offerings to expiate sin," and that "it is to the Epistle of the Hebrews, then, that we owe the traditional orthodox doctrine of the atonement," "a relic of barbarism." Hence, if this is true, we do not overcome Satan (sin) "by the blood of the Lamb," neither are we "washed from our sins in his own blood," as says the Revelator. The Bible declaration being true, that "without the shedding of blood there is no remission," and hence, according to this theory, it is not possible for any one to become an overcomer. The natural man, unaided can never overcome sin, on account of human frailty.

Q. To whom will he give "power over the nations?"

A. "He that overcometh and keepeth my works unto the end." Rev. ii. 26, 27.

Q. What three steps are requisite in order to become a successful overcomer?

A. See Rev. xii. 11:

1. "And they overcame him (Satan) by the blood of the Lamb."

2. "And by the word of their testimony."

3. "And they loved not their lives unto the death."

Q. Do the Scriptures warrant these people in eliminating the blood of Christ from God's plan of redemption?

A. No, not by any means.

Q. Please quote a few passages.

A. "Without shedding of blood there is no remission." Heb. ix. 22.

"Propitiation through faith in his blood." Rom. iii. 25.

"Being now justified by his blood." Rom. v. 9.

"We have redemption through his blood." Eph. i. 7.

"Made nigh by the blood of Christ." Eph. ii. 13.

"Made peace through the blood of the cross." Col. i. 14.

"Sanctify the people with his own blood." Heb. xiii. 11.

"The blood of Jesus Christ his Son, cleanseth us from all sin." 1 John i. 7.

"Hast redeemed us to God by thy blood." Rev. v. 9.

"Made them white in the blood of the Lamb." Rev. vii. 14.

Q. When they deny Jesus as being "the only begotten Son of God," and also deny that "the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin," (1 John i. 7) how much of the New Testament have they left to pin their faith upon?

A. Not a single book.

Q. The twelfth chapter of Revelation under consideration shows that the "man child" in order to be qualified to "rule all nations with a rod of iron," must first overcome Satan (sin) by the blood of the Lamb," must he not?

A. Yes, the eleventh verse so states.

Teacher. We see that the above extracts quoted from the Inquirer prove these modern Ebionites utterly disloyal to the Word of God, and also deny the most vital principles of the Christian faith.

Yours loyal to the Word of God.

W. H. WILSON.

A Word to the Boys.

If you have anything to do, do it at once. Don't sit down in a rocking-chair and lose three quarters of an hour in dreading the job. Be sure that it will seem ten times harder than it did at first. Keep this motto, Be on time, in small things as well as great. The boy who is behind time at breakfast and school will be sure to get "left" in the important things of life. If you have a chronic habit of dreading and putting off things, make a great effort to cure yourself. Brace up! Make up your mind that you will have some backbone. Don't be a limp, jelly-fish kind of a person. Depend upon it that life is very much as you make it. The first thing to decide is, what are you going to make it? The next thing is to take off your coat and go to work. Make yourself necessary somewhere. There are thousands of boys and young men who wouldn't be missed if they would drop out of life to-morrow. Don't be one of this sort. Be a power in your own little world, and then, depend upon it, the big world will hear from you.—Standard.

[illegible] Questions.

Is the Day of Christ at Hand?

Upon the ten different methods of computation referred to, it may be well to expand a little, without committing oneself to the position taken. No one, however, can appreciate the argument, whatever be its worth, who does not understand the numerical system which manifestly pervades the whole Word of God, and which constitutes a sort of mathematical framework, upon which the whole written Revelation is constructed; and not only so, but this same numerical structure pervades also all the works of God in creation, and all the workings of God in human history. Astronomy, chemistry, botany, biology, theology, all obey one mathematical law, and it must be a prejudiced mind that refuses to recognize this fact. The orbits of the planets and the spiral course of the leaf buds on the trees, the proportion and dimension of the crystals, the octaves of sound and of color, these and many other operations, forces and forms of nature, conform to strict mathematical laws.

From atoms down to the invisible atom there is a uniform system, and it tells of the one Designer and Creator. Once let this fact be admitted, and it becomes no novelty to us to find evidences of similiar mathematical precision in the periods of history. Let us, therefore, in conclusion, glance at the various positions taken by devout students of history and prophecy, and impartially survey the outlook from their points of view.

1. The first method of computation, already referred to, as fixing the present period as approximately "the time of the end," is known as "the times of the Gentiles," seven times or years, each consisting of 360 year days, or a sum total of 2520 years. Of this period Prof. Totten, of New Haven, following the lead of the British Chronological Association, says: "Nabopolassar shook off the Yoke of Assyria, and, by thus assuming the crown of Babylon, commenced the times of the Gentiles. His accession took place in the seventh civil (first sacred) month of the year 3877 A. M. The times of the Gentiles, therefore, ran out 2520 years thereafter or in March, 5897 A. M. (1899 A. D.)

Thus by another method of computing the times of the Gentiles, he arrives at the present period, or at least the beginning of the end. Joshua's long day was the last day in broad, prophetic chronology which is to be wholly counted as solar time.

Since that day the millenaries have been shortened to luna years. The sum of 2555 1-4 plus "long" or solar years up to that day, and the 3444 3-4 plus shortened, or luna years, from thence to the vernal equinox of 1899 A. D., is exactly 6000 years, and accurately terminates the sixth millenary since creation.

2. The Sabbatic system impressed on the whole face of Scripture history affords, as many think, a very obvious key to the divine chronology. This Sabbatic system reaches back to Eden, and characterizes the whole annals of the world. There was first consecrated the seventh day, then the seventh week, then the seventh month, then the seventh year, then the seventh seven of years—introducing the "jubilee"—then the seventh seventy of years, the Grand Jubilee. This number, seventies seventy equals 490, appears in at least two conspicuous places: in 1. Kings vi: 1, adding the ten years of the temple building to the 480, between the exodus and the beginning of the work, we have 490; and in Dan. ix: 24, where again the seven sevens reappear, as the sacred typical number, between the exodus from the captivity, and the building of the new spiritual [illegible] God under the Messiah. This [illegible] 490 is doubly a type of completion. It is not only the product of 7 multiplied by 70, but 7 times 7 (49), the interval from jubilee to jubilee multiplied by ten, another sacred number.

These jubilee periods must be obviously reckoned from the time of Moses, when the law of the jubilee first appears. And counting the exodus from 2515 A. M., the full seven periods of 490, or 3430 years, would bring us to 5945 A. M., or somewhere this side of the middle of the twentieth century as its extreme limit; and if the years are to be reckoned by the prophetic-year standard of 360 days (twelve equal months of thirty days each), the limit would be somewhere about 1898, so that by this method again the "beginning of the end" has already come.

3. A third method of computation "The Millennial Standard," is thought to point to the same approximate terminus. "One day is with the Lord as a thousand years and a thousand years as one day" (2 Pet. iii: 8). This is regarded by many as another not very obscure hint as to God's chronology, and they therefore reason that the predicted millennium or thousand years of Sabbath rest, crowning the six millenniums of the world's toil cannot be far off.

4. The fourth method of computation is "the historical." The number 1260 ("forty-two months," "a time, times, and half a time") is, as we have already seen, conspicuous both in Daniel and in Revelation.

Those who accept the "historical" method of interpreting the Apocalypse believe that the beast and the false prophet represent the papacy and Mohammedanism, or the crucifix and the crescent. They mention that it is a curious fact, to say the least, that both these systems date from the period between 600 and 620 (the decree of Phocas and the first Hegira), as the terminus a quo, and adding 1260 they reach again a terminus ad quem somewhere between 1866 and 1880 as "the beginning of the end" of these systems, as world powers or kingdoms.

5. A fifth mode of computation is that of the "Antichrist Period." The number 666 is divinely given as the number of the lawless one.....who is to be revealed in the last week of years. This number thus inseparably linked with the Man of Sin, in whom personally all the antichristian systems of history are to "lead up," is thought by many to stand for the period of the race's rebellion, and to be the symbolic number of perpetual unrest and incompleteness. There is a show of reason in this, for 666 is a repeating decimal that ever approaches, but never reaches "seven," the number of completeness and rest.

Six times this number 666 gives 3996, the grand crisis—the year of Christ's birth, reckoning from Abraham's birth, as father of the faithful, brings us to the beginning of this century as a new crisis in history.

6. A sixth road by which the same terminus is reached is the condition of "world-witness." (See Matt. xxiv: 14; Mark xiii: 10.) Christ distinctly stated that the gospel must first be published among all nations, and preached as a witness to all nations, and then would come the end.

With no little force many argue that there never was a period of such world-wide evangelism as now. Over 800 missionary societies at work, about 12000 missionary workers, and nearly 50000 native helpers enjoyed the Bible translated into over 400 tongues etc., and "published to all nations." It is also very noticeable that the motto of the present "crusade" is "The evangelization of the world in this generation."

6. A seventh road is that of the Laodicean lukewarmness. By noting Matt. xiii: 47-50 and Rev. iii: 14-22, it will be seen that the last state of "kingdom" previous to the end, is world-wide evangelism, as indicated by the drag-net: and the last state of the church is deep-seated apathy, as indicated by the Laodicean lukewarmness. And those who hold this view contend that both conditions are to co-exist as the end draws nigh. They point us to the startling fact that never before has the church shown such extensive evangelization on the one hand, and such extensive deterioration on the other. Many regard this latter as the "falling away" which is to precede the end. (2 Thess. ii: 3.)

8 An eighth road seems to end at the same goal—it is the development of anarchism.

The hints in the epistles to the Thessalonians, in 2 Peter, Jude and the Apocalypse it is contended, all agree in showing us that, as the end approaches, there will be a peculiarly lawless spirit prevailing—an uprising of an organized resistance to all authority in church and state, a combination of forces to supplant all government, and at the same time an arbitrary attempt to compel men to limit even trade and commerce by a certain "mark," that alone authorizes one to buy or sell. (Rev. xiii: 16, 17.) Those who empasize this as a sign of the end point triumphantly to the recent, and unprecedented growth of communism, socialism, nihilism, and to the simultaneous growth of traders-unions and protective organizations, monopolies and trusts, which restrict all trade or labor to their "mark."

9. The ninth argument presented for the near approach of the end is redemism or the drift of the Jews toward Palestine and the rehabilitation of their national life. This is one the advocates of this view contend the blossoming of the fig-tree (Matt. xxiv: 32, 33) which marks the end as "near even at the doors." Certainly there is something very startling in the modern movement known as "Zionism," and which has developed within the last five years, summoning three great conferences of leading Jews to the European capitals. Never before has the national spirit of the Israelites had such a revival since Christ ascended.

10. The tenth line of argument converges at the same point; namely, the Spirit's withdrawal. There is a mysterious passage in 2 Thess. 27, where we are told that there is some great Hinderer, whose presence prevents the final outbreak of the "Mystery of Iniquity," and who must be withdrawn before the end of lawlessness can come, in the reappearing of the Lord. The advocates of this view contend that, by every sign the spirit of God is shown to have withdrawn, or to be withdrawing, from the church, as a whole. It is maintained by very devout souls that there is left in the church at large, neither spiritual worship, spiritual faith, spiritual work, nor spiritual life; that although life; that although all these exist, they exist in a few elect individuals, and not in the church as a body; and that, especially in the matter of administration—the specific office of the Spirit. He is displaced by the spirit of the world, as evinced by the worldly men and maxims, secular oratory, artistic music, worldly entertainments, etc., which everywhere prevail.

Whatever grounds, above presented, may seem untenable or unsafe, one thing seems undeniable; there is a convergence of signs upon this our day, such as have never indicated any previous period as the probable time of the end. For example, if the Hebrew means Rosh, Russia, and this nation is thus in prophecy indicated as the "head" of the last great movement of history toward world empire, how like a fulfillment are all the present movements of that empire—the trans-Siberian railway railway, the encroachments on China, etc. And if universal anarchy is to be the last great development of society, when was there a time when, both in church and State, there was such a development of lawlessness?

Upon this subject we can no longer, within these narrow limits, expatiate. But it may at least stir up the thoughtful reader to individual search into the signs of the times. What are the indications above the prophetic and historic horizon? If the signs of the coming of the Son of man are indeed to be seen, it may well incite us to be among the watchers who, while others yet sleep, are awake and looking for the dawn.—A. T. Pierson.

The Bible Society.

All who are interested in the spread of the Word of God will be profoundly thankful for the successful Centenary Meetings which have been granted to the British and Foreign Bible Society. The gatherings have not had a little of the form of a national and international celebration, which, while we know that Christ's kingdom is not of this world nor dependent on high patronage, is a striking testimony to the reverence and honor which the nations of the world pay to the Word of God. Despite criticism and all the contempt of unbelief, it has been a wonderful illustration of the truth that the Word of God liveth and abideth forever.

The story of the spread of God's Word during the last century is a story of marvels. It is one of the most encouraging records that could possibly be read, and shows how graciously God has been working for the spread of his kingdom which cometh not with observation. Yet, despite all that has been accomplished, there is even more to be done. During the past year the British and Foreign Bible Society have issued from their Shanghai depot 1,247,295 copies and portions of the Bible in Chinese, which, with those issued by the National Bible Society of Scotland and the American Bible Society, will probably amount to over two million copies and portions altogether. These are truly wonderful figures; yet at this rate it would take about 200 years for every person in China to receive even one copy of a portion of God's Word, and that is disregarding the fact that within 200 years some six generations would have passed away.

Such thoughts as these reveal what a stupendous work lies before the church of God if this generation is to hear or to receive God's Word. Truly "the King's business requireth haste."

Announcements.

The Northwest Conference will convene Friday evening June 17th and hold over the following Monday at Lake Shore, Wash. Lake Shore is about four miles from Vancouver, Wash. Any one wishing conveyance to Lake Shore will correspond with P. G. Wolf of Vancouver. Brethren from a distance will stop at River View hotel right by the ferry landing and wait for the brethren from Lake Shore. All are invited to come and have one more meeting that will be a feast long to be remembered. Another Conference year has almost passed and gone, have we spent our time well or have we been idle in the Master's vineyard? All cannot go out in the world to preach, but we all can live a good square Christian life doing good to all around us. By order of the executive committee.

MRS. ALMIRA M. BROOKS.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Michigan will commence (D. V.) at Dutton, Kent County, Michigan, Thursday evening, June 2, 1904, and continue over the following Sunday. Another year has nearly rolled around since the annual meeting of the Michigan Conference was held. Once again the invitation comes from the brothers and sisters of the Church of God at Dutton to have the meeting there. Do we stop and think what it means for the brethren to entertain the Conference? It means a good deal of thought and work, but they are willing to bear the expense and work for the cause of truth. The brethren and sisters of Michigan are urged to make a special effort to be present at this Annual Conference. Arrangements will be made to accommodate all who may come. All will be made welcome. Let us come with the one thought to further the cause of Christ. Not all together to get good, but determined to give as much as we receive, then as is already predicted we will have a good meeting. Let each church send one or more delegates with report of their standing during the past year. A programme will appear later. Dutton is on M. C. R. R. ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids.

EMMA JACKMAN, Sec.

The 17th Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will be held at Waterloo, beginning Aug. 28. Programme, etc., will appear later.

Beautiful Winona.

With the opening of the season at Winona Lake, May 16th, the sale of excursion tickets over the Pennsylvania Lines to that attractive resort in Northern Indiana will begin. Every summer passed there by thousands has only increased their desire to return. On the golf links, the tennis courts, the baseball or cricket grounds, the croquet field, or boating on the lake, fishing, camping, swimming, driving, or attending recitals and lectures by world-famed personages in the auditorium—whatever the diversion may be, the associations are of that congenial sort conferred by good society. This resort is noted as the site of Winona Assembly and Summer School, attracting teachers and students from educational institutions of this and other countries.

Fifteen-day and season excursion tickets will be sold from stations of the Pennsylvania Lines during the summer. For information about fares and time of trains, apply to local ticket agents, or to F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa. Illustrated literature describing attractions of Winona Lake may be had for the asking. Address S. C. Dickey, Secretary and General Manager, Winona Lake, Ind., who will give particulars regarding camping facilities, hotel accomodations, program of addresses by noted speakers and all other details.—Sept. 30.

Reduced Fares to Cleveland.

May 14th, 16th, 17th and 18th, excursion tickets to Cleveland, account National Baptist Anniversary, will be sold via Pennsylvania Lines. Get information regarding time of trains, etc., from Local Ticket Agent of Pennsylvania Lines.—May 18.

Reduced Fares to Carthage, Mo.

Low Fares will be in effect to Carthage and Joplin, Mo., via Pennsylvania Lines, May 17th to 23d, inclusive, account Annual Conference German Baptist Brethren. Ten-day's stop-over at St. Louis World's Fair allowed. Get further information from Local Ticket Agents of the Pennsylvania Lines.—May 28.

WHEN YOUR TIME IS OUT PLEASE RENEW.

Bible Studies.

Bible Studies, No. 2, is now ready, under the title "What is it to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ?" written by Bro. W. H. Wilson. Splendid for distribution among your neighbors. 10 cents for 10 copies; 25 cents for 50 copies; 40 cents for 100 copies. Send orders to A. H. Zilmer, at Plymouth, Indiana.

"'Keep to the right!' 'Push!' are two signs to be seen in a certain building. They belong together—especially as life guideboards. For there are many who do not keep to the right; they have enterprise and ability, but it is not thrown in its proper channels. On the other hand there are those who keep to the right, but do not push. They are good but not sufficiently effective. They have motive but not motive power. The best rule is to keep to the right—to be true to the great laws of morality and God; and then to push—to count for every ounce possible, to do things, to be aggressive, to wield an influence."

World's Fair, St. Louis.

For the World's Fair at St. Louis, the Vandalia Line have put on sale, commencing April 25th, round trip tickets at rates and with limits as follows, from Plymouth, Indiana:

Season ticket, Rate, $14.00; 60-Day ticket, Rate, $11.70; 15-Day ticket, Rate, $10.75. And on each Tuesday and Thursday, commencing May 17th and ending June 30th, 1904, tickets good in coaches only, at rate of $9.75. Return limit of coach tickets seven days, including date of sale. Same basis from all other stations.

The Vandalia Line will also inaugurate new solid train service between all points on its line, Columbia City to Terre Haute and St. Louis. "The Expo Train" (No. 35) will leave Ft. Wayne early each evening, for St. Louis, by way of Columbia City, Logansport and Terre Haute, with through coaches and sleeping cars, arriving in St. Louis without change about 7 a. m. This train will pass Logansport about 9:50 p. m. On return trip "the St. Louis and Ft. Wayne Express" (No. 36) will leave St. Louis Union Station at about 8 p. m. running via same route. Train leaving Plymouth at 8:22 p. m. makes close connection with this train at Logansport. For further details apply to W. E. Smith, Agent at Plymouth, or C. C. Trueb T. P. A., Logansport, Ind. —May 11

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Low Fares to Pittsburgh.

May 16th, 17th and 18th, excursion tickets to Pittsburgh account annual Convention National Association of Manufacturers of United States of America, will be sold via Pennsylvania Lines. For particulars, time of trains etc., see Local Ticket Agent of those lines.—May 18.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Harvest.

With throbbing heart and tearful eye,
I watched the Spring-time fleeting by;
I saw the snow-drop at its birth
Felled, by spears of rain, to earth;

The violet bursts its emerald sheath,
And shows the amethyst beneath;
The painted tulip fade and close
Before the glory of the rose.

And soon, down in the sunburnt grass,
I see the withering roses pass
And night by night, and day by day,
The lily of summer pales away.

I see the grannies overblow,
The mellowing orchards bending low;
Oh, God, my heart in awe and fear
Looks back upon thy priest year!

Thy bounty covers all the lands;
I lift in prayer my empty hands;
Of all the summer of my life
My harvest is but sin and strife.

Oh could these tears, like April rain,
Make moist my heart's hard soil again,
And stir those seeds which thou didst sow,
Oh never should they cease to flow!

Could prayer but melt this ice away,
Never, never would I cease to pray,
Till thou in mercy, Lord, didst bring
Into my soul a second Spring.
Oh give that rich reward and sweet;
I'll lay its harvest at Thy feet!

Communicated.

David's Trust in God.

An address delivered to the church at Salem, Ohio, Dec. 6, 1903.

Dear brothers and sisters.

I occupy a position before you this morning which I never thought would come to me, at least it looked far off in the dim future; yet I am extremely thankful for this opportunity, as the preparation and experience which comes of this effort has and will result in more good to me than I can express.

This is my first attempt but I am not going to make any apologies for any short comings in my address, as in the first place I do not think one should apologize for doing their best, and in the second place I am going to preach to you the word of God, that which we find in his book, the Holy Bible, and that does not need any apology. We have yet to find any thing better and so we need not be ashamed of it.

I am going to talk to you this morning about David's trust in God, and also our trust in God. No doubt most, if not all of you know the story of David's life, and so I will not go into detail in this regard.

He was in one respect similar to us. When we think of him exalted from a lowly shepherd to king of Israel by the power of God, let us remember that we too are the elect of God, a chosen generation, a royal priesthood, a peculiar people, co-heirs with Jesus our elder brother. And this I want all to remember this morning as we hear again of David's trust, as it will help us to apply practically and with understanding our lesson.

In the year 1063 B. C., David was annointed by Samuel to be king, but it was not until about fifteen years later that he took the throne. During this time he was alike both petted and persecuted by king Saul, but his life as king was still more eventfull.

We may truly say none of the great men of the scriptures passed through a course of so many changes, none of them touched human life at so many points. He was in a measure a type of his coming son Jesus. In all points tempted like as we are.

Certain it was that he had his faults—and they were grave enough—but let us remember that no one has judged them more rigorously than he himself. But when all is admitted there remains a wonderfully rich lovable character. Sagacious, full of resource, prudent in counsel, swift as lightning in act. Frank and generous, bold and gentle, calm in peril, patient in privations, modest and self-restrained in victory, chivalrous to his foes, watchful, hopefull, a born leader and king of men. And the basis of all was a profound joyous trust in his God and ardor of personal love to him.

That trust opened his mouth to show forth God's praise.

He himself has told us what was his habitual temper and how it was sustained "I have set the Lord always before me, because he is at my right hand I shall not be moved, therefore my heart is glad and my glory rejoiceth. Ps. xvi: 8-9.

Even his name was significant meaning beloved, and beloved he was by his people and God.

To illustrate to you his complete faith and trust in God I will use his own words in the 23rd. Psalm. It is I think without exception one of the most beautiful passages in the bible.

The date of this Psalm is doubtful. Some historians claim it was written in youth before he became king. Others declare it was written shortly after the death of Absolom. I prefer the latter as we see then the perfect trust in God of one who has experienced much of the battle of life and whose experiences give color to his utterances.

"The Lord is my Shepard, I shall not want; He maketh me to lie down in green pastures, He leadeth me beside the still waters: He restoreth my soul, He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name sake: Yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil for thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me;—Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies, thou annointest my head with oil, my cup runneth over, surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life and I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever."

See the intensity of devotion, the passion of divine love, that glows all through this psalm. It breathes the very spirit of sunny confidence and perfect trust in God. It matters little whether this was the trust of young eyes looking so courageously into the unknown future, or whether it was the more solemn hopes of age, which can have but few hopes at all unless they be rooted in God, the spirit expressed is thoroughly David's. No doubts, or griefs, throw their shadow upon him. He is conscience of dependence, but he is above want and fear. He does not ask—he has—He possesses and is at rest, as the present has no longings the future has no terrors.

We will look in vain for another example of such perfect restful trust in God, the peace of God which passeth all understanding.

The Lord is my shepard I shall not want. A simple straight statement, Oh how full of trust in God. Implicit, unwavering, wholehearted trust in the Lord.

He had fought Goliath the Giant, had had his life threatened three times by Saul, was forced to flee and dwell in the cave of Adullam; and he says the Lord is my shepard. Think of him in the mountains dwelling in caves, associating with outlaws, an outlaw himself, having had to flee from the wrath of the King. In a strange country, amongst strange and unprincipled men. Think you would it have been strange had he forgotten his God, or perhaps have blamed him for his change of fortune. But no that was not David, he had trust in God, He says the Lord is my shepard. He was forced to beg for bread. During his exile his sustenance was uncertain, yet he says I shall not want. Is not this trust in God? He continues, he maketh me to lie down in green pastures. He leadeth me beside the still waters. Can you realize and appreciate the significance of the illustration? He maketh me to lie down in green pastures, he leadeth me beside the still waters.

David had been a shepard, he had watched his flocks by day and by night, he knew how he had led them from green pastures to green pastures that they might not hunger or want, and had led them to the still waters, the meadow brook, that they might not thirst, he knew how he had provided for them, and had sheltered them from the winds, and had searched for the strayed, or lost ones, and had grown to love them, and how they knew his voice, and recognized him as their protector and followed him. How he had had to think for them, to fight for them, to guard them, sometimes to smite the lion and the bear, in their defence.

He had learned of God, and that enabled him to say the Lord is my shepard, he maketh me to lie down in green pastures he leadeth me beside the still waters. He saw the guiding hand of God in what was done, and understood his love, and thus was his trust strengthened.

He restoreth my soul, he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his names sake, yea though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies thou annointest my head with oil, my cup runneth over.

See what trust in God David had—Though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil? For thou Lord my shepard art with me.

David knew what he was talking about. Had he not always led his men in the thickest of the fight, and many wars did he have, did he not put down two rebellions, was he not subjected to as king, all the machinations of fanatics who choose to exploit their wild ideas, but he says I will fear no evil for thou art with me. Oh what trust.

He restoreth my soul he leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for his name sake. David knew the power of God, and his mercies and lovingkindness, he had sinned, but his heart was right, he trusted God and God had restored his joy and led him back to paths of righteousness.

Note the fine part of David's character, that trait which God admired and which made him say, David is a man after mine own heart.

David says, He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness, for his names sake. Oh that is it. David always gave God the glory, and trusted him.

It was the Lord that was his shepard, it was the Lord that kept him from want, it was the Lord that led him through green pastures and beside the still waters.

David never lost heart, he never forgot his God, and the Lord was his only God. Adversity or prosperity never shook his trust in God, and this was why he could say, surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life. His trust and obedience and alliegance to God had already brought him many of the goodness and mercies of God, and he knew that their continuence lay only with him. Besides had he not been promised that his throne should endure for ever and be glorified beyond measure?

A shepards crook or staff is used to guide and direct the sheep and is heavy and is fine to protect the sheep from marauders. David says though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death I will fear no evil, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. Though I have many trials thy sure word of promise sustains me, though I have manifold temptations thy strong arm upholds me. Though I be filled with the blessings of life I remember thy lovingkindness, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me. Thou annointest my head with oil, my cup runneth over.

Oh David was full to the brim of praise for his God this day when he wrote this psalm.

Your cup is running over with what? David? Why with the goodness and mercy of God. What say we this morning Brethren? Is our cup running over? Let us compare our life with David's. If our cup is not full and overflowing with the goodness and mercy of God it is our own fault, let us think over it.

Are our hearts full of praise to God? Is the Lord our shepard this morning? Is he our shepard every morning, all the time? Do we let him lead us day by day, do we set our affection, our hearts on things above, do we reach up and take God by the hand that he may guide our footsteps, have we the faith and trust of David this morning, are we like David, after God's own heart?

Would we say with the fervor of David, the Lord is my shepard I shall not want if we lacked the necessities of life? Were we reduced to poverty like Job? Would we say the Lord is my shepard I shall not want. Were we sent forth without money food or raiment as were the disciples would we say the Lord is my shepard I shall not want? Were we to be persecuted as were the disciples, were we to suffer affliction as did Job would we say the Lord is my shepard, thy rod and thy staff they comfort me, would we be a David and trust in God? And when we were delivered out of evil, and when we were prospered, would we give God the glory, and would we with David say, for thy names sake, for thy honor and glory.

Oh Brethren this is our stronghold this is our sword, this is our shield, this is our refuge, this is our salvation. Every page is a new pasture fresh and green. We need not starve. God has left it for us.

Last week the grim destroyer was abroad again and this time he picked his victim from the midst of the little circle in Salem. But praise God he cannot hold her forever. She had a David's trust in God and only sleeps to awake at the call of Jesus.

If the Lord is our shepard we are his sheep. But let us rememper that while the shepard led his sheep to the green pastures and beside the still waters and protected them, he did not pluck the grass for them to eat or carry the water for them to drink—The Lord is our shepard and he has assured us we shall not want; but we are also his sheep and he has picked his little flock for a purpose. We have a mission in this life.

Let us diligently seek the Lord. Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workmen that needeth not to be ashamed.

Jesus said this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached unto all the world for a witness. This together with a godly life and trust in the Lord will bring us the reward. David ends his Psalm and I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever, what a beautiful ending. David knew he would dwell in the house of the Lord, for the Lord had promised him so and David trusted the Lord.

That brethren is the end of our song, our prayer, our trust, to dwell in the house of the Lord forever, where we will find no trace of this lifes trials, temptations, sorrows, pains, or wickedness, all will be eternal peace.

But before I close I want to tell you the secret of David's trust in God. His heart was right.

"Simply trusting Christ my Lord, simply trusting every day, trusting him whatever betide, as I walk the narrow way. Simply trusting to the end of this earthly pilgrim way, when my faith shall end in sight, and my night in perfect day."

Let us have our hearts right and trust in God and the two together will make us lead a Godly life and the combination of the three will bring us the promised reward.

My prayer this morning is that when our elder brother Jesus comes he will find us trusting and worthy of sharing his kingdom. Amen.

GEORGE NEILL.

Strong in the Gospel.

In THE RESTITUTION of May 4, I read a letter from Bro. C. P. Algire, addressed to "The Household of Faith," saying, "I want to inform you that I was never stronger in the gospel of the kingdom than I am now, for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that obeys its teaching."

When I read that, I exclaimed, "Praise the Lord!" It does me good to hear such honest out-spoken confessions. Then, my brother, if you are "strong in the gospel of the kingdom," you must know the make up of that gospel, and can tell others just what it is, cannot you? I know of some who profess to be strong in the gospel of the kingdom who now think the gospel of the kingdom cannot be definitely stated, and that no two out of a hundred of our brethren would tell the same story in defining it. I doubt that very much. Now, my dear brother, although you and I are strangers in the flesh, (but not strangers to the covenants of promise). I am confident that you and I can repeat the same old story, and both rejoice in the same Blessed Hope. I have no personal acquaintance with you, and don't even know where you live, but I know that we are brethren, in the Commonwealth of Israel, because I understand your (gospel) language, and I believe you understand my speech, do you not my brother?

It would do me good, as well as the Household of Faith at large if every subscriber of THE RESTITUTION both young and old, who feel that they are strong in the grand old gospel of the kingdom, would write short letters to THE RESTITUTION and say so, and tell how you rejoice in this Blessed Hope, and God will doubtless bless you in making this confession. I ask my Pine Woods Bible Class, every one of you, Ella, Bertha, and George's wife included, to respond immediately, and I believe you all will do so, as you always have in the past honored my wishes.

You all know that this grand old gospel is near my heart. Many of you all over the United States, and some in Canada, have heard me proclaim it with the living voice, and I presume all have through the press.

In my travels I have made so many precious acquaintances among the Household of Faith, and expect to make many more including our Bro. Algire, before my work in the gospel ministry shall close.

God be with you all.

Wisdom of Seirach.

CHAPTER 36 (33 APOCRYPHA).

1. Evil will not rest the end who feareth the Lord, but he will be in trial and will come out again.

2. A wise man will not hate law, but the one who is practicing hypocrisy with it will be like a ship in a cyclone.

3. An understanding man will trust in law and the law will be as trustworthy to him as a request of justified ones.

4. Prepare a word and in this wise wilt thou have been listened to; condense chastening instruction and make answer.

5. A wheel of a heavy wagon are the tender feelings of a senseless person, and as a turning of axles is his reasoning.

6. A mocker for a friend is like a horse for breeding purposes; under every one who sitteth upon him doth he neigh.

7. For what reason doth a day exceed a day, and all the light of every day of a year is from a sun?

8. In the comprehension of the Lord they have been differentiated, and he hath changed appointed times and festivals.

9. From them he hath exalted some and sanctified them, and of them he hath appointed for days in number.

10. All men are from a fundamental origin and Adam was generated from out earth.

11. In a plentitude of exact knowledge the Lord differentiated them and changed their ways.

12. Some of them he blessed and exalted, and some of them he sanctified and caused to draw nigh to him; some from them he cursed and humbled and upturned them from their standing.

13. Like clay of a potter in his hands are they; all its ways are according to his (the potter's) satisfaction; even so are men in the hand of the one who created them, to give unto them according to his judgment.

14. Over opposite the evil is the good and over opposite the death is the life; even so over opposite a truly reverent man is an obdurate sinner.

15. And in this wise have I looked into all the works of the Most High, two by two, one over opposite the one.

16. And I a lost one became wakeful; and I have inherited them from a beginning.

17. Have mercy, O Lord, upon a laity called in thy name and Israel whom thou hast likened unto a first-born.

18. Pity Hierousaleem a city of thy sanctity, a city for thy final rest.

19. Fill Sioon with the practice of those who speak thy virtues, and thy laity with thy glory.

20. Give testimony to thy generic creations in authority and awake the prophecies in thy name.

21. Give wages to those who patiently wait for thee and may thy prophets have been believed.

22. Hearken, O Lord, unto the prayer of thy suppliants according to the blessing of Aaron concerning the laity, and all those upon the earth will comprehend that thou art the Lord God of the animate ages.

23. A belly will eat any food, and there is a food that is better than food.

24. A palate tasteth wild-game food; even so an understanding heart lying words.

25. A perverse heart will give sorrow and a much-tried man will repay him.

26. A woman will accept any male; but there is a daughter better than a daughter.

27. A woman's beauty cheereth a face, and surpasseth all human desire.

28. If there be mercy and meekness upon her tongue, her husband is not according to sons of men.

29. The man who acquireth a wife is getting the begining of a possession, a responsive helper like to him and a pillar for things to rest upon.

30. Where there is no protective hedge a possession will have been plundered; and where there is no wife one will sigh when led astray.

31. For who will put faith in a well-girded robber who leapeth from city to city? Even so is it with a man who hath no nest (home) and who putteth up wheresoever he may be belated.

COMMENT.

This is one of the chapters in Seirach that seems to have been wrestled with and "wrested" more or less in the ages past, and this is the best of evidence to my mind at least that it was at one time accounted especially oracular and authoritive. The statement is so clear and explicit on the "origin of mankind" and agrees so exactly with the Mosaic account and so flatly contradicts the apostate "immoral soul" teaching of Neo-Platonism, and the re-iteration of the illustration used by Hesaias and the earlier prophets of the natural man being like clay in the hands of the potter in God's hand to determine his ultimate use and destiny, and a great deal of other fundamental teaching in this chapter which the careful reader will note in passing—may account for the evident rabonical tinkering with the record which is now known to have occurred early in the second century of the Christian era.

The exalted idea and value of marriage and the home is as apostolic as Peter and Paul, and the ultimate blessing to the world through the return and restoration of Israael is exactly in accord with the evangel of the new covenant. Read old Seirach's votive-prayer in this chapter and see for yourselves.

CHAS. GARDNER.

To the Bereans of Illinois:

At the quarterly meeting held with the Antioch church on Saturday evening, May 7, it was unanimously decided to hold a Bible school this year just preceding the annual conference as last year. So much did the Board of Management desire it that they voted ten dollars support toward paying the grocery bill for the same. The school will be held beginning on Monday, August 15, 1904. The work will proceed much on the same plan as last year except that the daily sessions will consist of two periods of an hour and a half each instead of two hours each. Many have already signified their intention of attending.

Young people cannot estimate the value of such a training until they have had it. For further particulars write me. Suffice it to say that about the only expense—at least the chief item of expense—will be the expense of transportation. Please write and say that you are coming.

The Restitution.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 18, 1904. NUMBER 19.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

It is surely evident to all that we cannot well do business without means. It surely is likewise evident to those who have not yet renewed their subscription that we must be in need of what is due us. We dislike very much to mention this, and hope you will not compell us to repeat the hint.

It does not always follow that because a correspondent advances an idea in his writings that therefore this paper endorses it. A short time since a writer gave his views on the "Thief on the Cross" question. Such are given only as his ideas, and if they do not aid you to a better understanding of the subject, then his effort so far as you are concerned failed. If you have an idea that explains it better, write it out and send it in. Others can get the benefit of it in that way. Do not be personal and critical, but give your views, so that those interested may see and note the difference. This is true investigation, and will do no harm to any one.

The Russians are still backing out as the Japanese advance. Many are leaving Liaoyang in anticipation of the Japs reaching that point. Gen. Kouropatkin is in a bad position, as the Japs may outflank him, and cut off chances of retreat toward Mukden. Much trouble has been caused to the Russians by large bands of Chinese brigands attacking small detached bodies of troops. On the sea the Japanese have lost a torpedo boat while clearing the harbor at Dalny of mines. A boat happened to strike one of the submerged mines, and was of course destroyed. There have been no reports of fighting other than skirmishing, but the steady advance of the Japanese is discouraging to the Russians.

PRAYER.

Prayer is a petition, usually accompanied with thanksgiving. A good definition is found in Phil. iv. 6. "In everything by prayer and thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God." This shows our petitions should be with thanksgiving. We are taught to ask in faith. We are invited to come boldly to the throne of grace for help in time of need. For we have not a high priest which cannot be touched with the feelings of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted as we are. In that he himself suffered, being tempted, he is able to succor them that are tempted. We thank and praise Jehovah for the plan by which we are invited to come boldly to the throne of grace. All of these expressions are to those who have come into covenant relation with God, and have access to his throne through this merciful high Priest. We are not to neglect it. "Pray without ceasing." Daniel prayed three times a day with his face turned eastward, notwithstanding the decree of the king forbidding him. Jesus went up in the mount apart from the multitude to pray. No doubt they were a rabble crowd. We also have the example of Peter going up on the housetop to pray. We infer this was secret prayer. We have examples of both public and private prayer. I wish to call attention to these examples. In Matt. vi. 6, we find this language, "When thou prayest enter into thy closet and shut too thy door." Our Master had just told them to not do their alms to be seen of men, or to be heard for their much speaking. He then tells them how to pray. I would as soon think we were to never say a word different from the exact words given in this petition, as to think we are to never pray only in the closet. There is a sacredness in secret prayer known to every child of God. I think the object of this lesson is to teach them to not do their alms to be seen of men, and not pray to be heard. Christ gave thanks before the multitude. He also separated himself from his disciples for hallowed, sacred, secret prayer. The disciples assembled in an upper room and continued with one accord, with prayer and supplication. When Peter was in prison prayer was made without ceasing by the Church of God. And when the angel released him he came to the house of Mary, where many were gathered together praying. These were God's children, but there were many. There are errors taught at the present time in regard to prayer. There is a popular idea in the world that saints are to plead at the mercy seat, for the miraculous conversion of sinners. And they pray for pentecostal fire to touch sinners and convert them. There is not a single example of a sinner being converted in this way, and not a promise that one will ever be thus converted.

If Bible readers would observe who the speaker is, to whom speaking, and then take note of what is said, there would not be such gross contradictions of Scriptures, and so many misapplications. Then pentecostal fire did not convert sinners, was not given for that. In Acts ii. 22, it is explained "Ye men of Israel, hear these words, Jesus of Nazareth, a man approved of God among you, by miracles and wonders and signs among you which God did by him. May our petitions be in accord with his Word. And let us not be afraid to pray with the household, even if there are outsiders we can, for there are other examples of public prayer. But let us be careful to pray humbly to God. Two men went to the temple to pray; neither were rejected because they were in the temple. One was rejected because he exalted himself. One was justified, and the other abased. For every one that exalteth himself shall be abased, and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted. May we be justified, and watch unto prayer. May the Church of God everywhere be rooted and grounded in the faith. "Take heed, watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is." Be ye therefore ready, for the Son of Man cometh in an hour when ye think not.

MRS. NANCY BARBER.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I want to tell you that our people of Blackwell, Oklahoma, had Bro. Foore of Parsons, Kansas, with us a few days recently, and held meetings in one of our school buildings. Though Blackwell is a place where nearly all denominations (in common) have their own organization and church house, theatres, societies and clubs of all kinds, yet we had a few to come out and hear the Word of truth, or rather the new doctrine preached. We were very anxious to have Bro. Foore come among us, and surely he is a man that works hard, and digs deep after the hidden mysteries contained in God's Word for man's future glory, and we enjoyed the few sermons and the pleasant visits in the family he gave us. Notwithstanding the opposition we had to contend with we had the privilege of seeing one buried by baptism into death and thereby taking the name of the Master unto himself, and we feel confident he will continue to walk in the new life. Therefore I introduce to the household of God, Bro. Mclean as worthy of your prayers and fellowship, though he is an invalid and does not walk at all, he therefore has our sympathy. Blackwell is a thriving place of about forty-five hundred, and surrounded with a very good and beautiful country and struck gas about two months ago, of more than two hundred pounds pressure, and are going right on with other wells, which has made the town quite jubilant. And I would like to say to the brethren, should this come to any one's notice, who are anticipating making a change in the near future, would like to say to such, that we shall be glad to have any of the brethren come to us, as we think this a very good time to become established here in business or in making a home. We are only a small band of believers here, but strong in the faith, and are trying to let our lights shine that others may be benefited by the true light of the gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth, and especially so in these last days, as it does appear that the Gentile times are about run out, or the bride hath about made herself ready, or a wearer for each crown. To this dear loved ones, let us look well and examine ourselves, whether we be of the bride or the number that Paul speaks of as presenting to Christ as a chaste virgin. Dear reader, can we think of anything more glorious than to be one of the bride, the wife of Jesus Christ, the Son of the living God, and think of the grandeur and glory that will be manifested at the marriage supper of the Lamb unto which you and I can attain if we are faithful unto the end. Yes, we want to be of the number that will be called when Jesus comes with our life which is now hid with Christ in God, when he who is our life shall appear, then shall we also appear with him in glory.

ELIZA A. RABE.

2 Tim. iv. 1-8.

I charge thee in the sight of God and of Jesus Christ (not a Trinity) who shall judge the quick and the dead and by his appearing and kingdom preach the Word (what Jesus and the apostles taught) be instantly in season, out of season (at all times whether it was seasonable or not). Bring to the proof (R. V.) rebuke, exhort, with all long suffering and teaching, (because) for the time will come when they will not endure the sound doctrine (healthful teaching R. V.) the teaching that is able to make the sinner whole but having itching ears will heap to themselves teachers after their own lusts, and will turn away their ears from the truth, and turn aside unto fables (it does not matter what you believe as long as you are good and support the church is the present day religion). But be thou sober in all things, suffer hardship, do the work of an evangelist, fulfil thy ministry, for I am already being offered and the time of my departure is come, I have fought the good fight, (as a soldier) I have finished the course (as one who runs a race) I have kept the faith (once delivered to the saints), henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness (everlasting life), which the Lord the righteous Judge shall give to me at that day (the resurrection), and not only to me but also to all them that have loved his appearing. This is a short sermon and very much to the point particularly showing the state of the professed Christian churches in comparison with what Paul and the other apostles taught, their teaching was, Come out and be ye separate that ye be not partakers of their sins, the present day preaching is sink differences and join with us. As long as you keep your differences of opinion out of sight and do not make any discord in the churches you can be one of them. The rich man and Lazarus is the foundation of their creed, Lazarus was the good man and the other bad, but the rich man is the one they want in the churches, and they would send Lazarus to the pest house, to be taken care of by the state.

J. E. HOGARTH.

Editor Restitution:

With your permission I would like to have a few words inserted in our dear old paper of the meetings we have had this winter in Chicago conducted by Bro. Zilmer and Bro. Austin, and the result of the same. One may plant and other one reap, but they will both rejoice together, thank God for such noble men. Bro. Zilmer, as I understand it, was the one who brought to the attention of Bro. Fisher's mind the importance of baptism and its significance. Although he was baptized when a boy he had become dissatisfied, so last Sunday he obeyed and satisfied his own mind, and he said to me as he came out of the water into the dressing room, this was the happiest day of his life. And I also take great pleasure in introducing to the household of faith and the Berean Society dear young Bro. Samuel Smith, who also yielded obedience to the same message of life. What a beautiful sight it was indeed, one who had seen three score and ten, another one just coming into manhood, starting to run the race as set before him in the gospel. Dear young Bereans, be faithful to the Word of truth, sow the seed in your companions' affections and you will be rewarded as this one has been who led our young brother into the faith of the gospel. Bro. Austin gave us some splendid truth last Saturday and Sunday a week ago. I shall never forget the exhortation when he gave the hand of fellowship to the two dear brothers, when he said to us all, don't let it be the mere shake of the hand but that which binds us closer together, which words cannot express, bear one another's burdens and so fulfil the law of Christ. May the Lord bless Bro. Austin and use him to the glory of his name in the east.

Your brother patiently waiting for the Lord.

M. T. ASLAKSEN.

Dear Restitution:

I know it is too late to join the love feast with the rest of you all, as the time for these letters is past. But I want you all to know that I enjoyed the feast with you, notwithstanding the most of you are strangers in the flesh to me, yet I feel as if we are all one family and being all children of our heavenly Father and closely related to our elder Brother. Let us draw near with draw near with true hearts in full assurance of faith. Heb. xi. 22. And cast all of our cares upon him who is able to save to the utmost all who put their trust in him. I ask an interest in your prayer. Your sister laboring to enter into the peace that remains for the people of God.

From your Sister.

LAURA E. SPAID.

Editor Restitution:

I see that it is time to renew our subscription to our dear old paper. We should miss it very much if it did not make its weekly visits. Enclosed find an order for $1.50 to renew for another year, hoping that it may continue to herald the good news of the kingdom until the coming of the King.

Your Sister in the faith.

MRS. C. E. HILSABECK.

Dear Restitution:

As my subscription for THE RESTITUTION has expired I hasten to renew it. I intended to have sent it sooner, I live out of town and have to chance it when I do go, have been confined to the house nearly all winter with sickness. I enjoy reading the paper so much, its weekly visits are a great comfort to me. I like to read the letters from all the dear ones of like precious faith. I think Bro. Wilson's letters are very interesting, I hope he may be the instrument in the Lord's hands of doing much good and saving many souls. Bro. Zilmer's letters are excellent, I would so much like to hear him again. Brother and Sister Woodward are doing a great work for the Master, I often wish I could hear them. It is very lonely not to be able to get to church but I have excellent sermons to read at home, THE RESTITUTION furnishes me with excellent reading with my dear Bible.

Yours looking for the coming King.

MRS. MAGGIE C. FAREWELL.

Coming Change.

Those who heard Elder Wilson of the Church of God at the Christian church a short time ago will be pleased to read a short synopsis of an address which he made in Sherman, Texas, recently, as taken from the "Daily Democrat" of that city. When Mr. Wilson touched upon this subject here some thought that he taught socialism. This was not the case. He is in the fullest sense a Bible Christian and looks upon these matters merely from prophetical standpoints. He is not a socialist, politically. He believes that anarchism, socialism and some extreme actions of labor organizations on the one hand and monopoly and trust extremes on the other are arousing much discontent which will eventually break out in political panic such as the world has never seen.

A. SIGNAL READER.

Eld. W. H. Wilson of Chicago preached at the Central Christian Church last night on the subject, "The Coming Change in Human Governments." He showed that thinking men, reasoning alone from cause to effect, realized that the present status of things could not remain as they now exist without working out a change. He referred especially to the present contest between capital and labor. He showed that the capitalist was not independent of the laborer, neither was the laborer independent of the capitalist; the interests of both are centered in amicable co-operation. But what is the present attitude of these two great forces? Are they not antagonistic? Have not the rich pooled together their immense riches, that they may not only control the labor market, but also the price of every necessity of life, that they may further increase their already fabulous wealth?

To meet this, we have now organized labor. Every trade is separately organized, and, besides this, each separate organization is federated in town, city, county, state and national federation, in both Europe and the United States. These federations have now reached such a perfection of organization that they can stop the wheels of commerce in a whole nation, at any time they may select, just as they lately did in Hungary and previous to this in Switzerland.

Human governments seem unable to settle the point in dispute between labor and capital.

Mr. Wilson stated that the fifth chapter of James is a prophecy relating especially to this present conflict. In that chapter, he said, the rich are advised to weep and howl in anticipation of approaching adversity. They are then charged with holding corrupt riches, or riches gotten by corrupt methods. James says: "Your gold and silver is cankered; and the rust of them shall be a witness against you, and shall eat your flesh as it were fire. Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days."

The word "rust" indicates lack of use of the article spoken of. In this case it is the "gold and silver taken out of circulation, not used. The "rust" is the witness which will appear in court and give testimony against them. The judgment of the court is: "It shall eat your flesh as it were fire." "Ye have heaped treasure together for the last days."

"The last days" is the time to which this prophecy applies. James further charges, "the hire of your laborers which is of you kept back by fraud." He also affirms that when the condition of things described in this chapter shall exist, "the coming of the Lord draweth nigh," "judge standeth before the door."

Mr. Wilson said the change in human governments which would correct this and all other existing evils is to be found in a special message received from the Lord Jesus since His ascension to heaven. This message is given in Rev. xi: 15, "And the seventh angel sounded; and there were great voices in heaven, saying, the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdom of our Lord and of his Christ; and He shall reign forever and ever." He placed much emphasis on the phrase, "the kingdoms of this world," and said that it was at this time the Lord Jesus should ascend the throne of universal empire, and that it was at this time every kingdom in "this world" would be merged into His Kingdom.

He called attention to the 72d Psalm which not only affirms the universality of His empire, but shows how He will correct these evils.

As to the universality of His reign we read: "Yea, all kings shall fall down before Him, and His enemies shall lick the dust." "He shall have dominion also from sea to sea, and from the river unto the ends of the earth."

With regard to the oppressor of the poor, He says He "shall break in pieces the oppressor." That is His remedy; He will destroy all oppression; therefore when this is done, no one can be oppressed when the oppressor ceases to exist. The outcome will be that "men shall be blessed in Him; all nations shall call Him blessed." "Blessed be His glorious name forever; and let the whole earth be filled with His glory.—Crowley, La., Signal.

Prepaid Prayer.

Prayer that has influence with God must be a prepaid prayer. If we expect a letter to reach its destination we put a stamp on it; otherwise it goes to the dead-letter office. There is what may be called a dead-prayer office and thousands of well worded petitions get buried up there. All of God's promises have their conditions; we must comply with these conditions, or we cannot expect the blessings coupled with the promises. We must be sure that we are doing our part if we expect God to do his part. There is a legitimate sense in which every Christian should do his utmost for the answering of his own prayers.

God never defaults; but he requires that we prove our faith by our works, and that we never ask for a blessing that we are not willing to labor for, and to make any sacrifice to secure that longed-for blessing.—The Advance.

We have slept soundly all night, happily unconscious of existence, with its toil and its care; and now the day has dawned. The monarch thereof is painting the eastern sky with golden colors. We awake with a species of surprise, having for several hours been absent from ourselves. We rush to the duties of the day; soon it is mid-day; and soon the shades of evening again mantle the earth. Another last morn is on the wing. Thus our days fly, and thus they will, till all have flown. Soon these lapsing days will place us all in the great yesterday of the infinite past. Solemn preachers are they to the living; solemn monitors to the sinful, and monitors to the good.—S. T. Spear.

A Parable.

A hundred boys stood ready to start on the race, and a great throng had gathered to see them off. The signal was given, and they started. But they were unevenly matched, for some were strong and swift of foot, and some carried heavy burdens, and were weak under their load. And the strong soon left the weak far behind. The one boy among the strong was seen to turn back, and take from the burden of the weak until his load was heavier even than theirs. And some of the onlookers wondered, and called him a fool; but there was a sacred few who understood, and were glad for him. And as he went his strength increased; his burden became lighter, and he helped and cheered the weak. But they soon fell out of the race through weariness. The boy pressed on, and soon came up with the strong; but they were carrying heavier burdens now, and were fast losing their strength. He pleaded with them to throw off their load; but they sneered and called him a fool. They soon fell, crushed under their burdens. The boy sadly pressed on, and left them. And out of the hundred he was the only boy who reached the goal.

It was the race of life, and true success was the goal. And the burdens of the weak were the inexplicable handicaps of life, and the burdens of the strong were worldly ambition, wealth and appetite. But the burden of the boy who reached the goal was self-sacrifice.

Obituary.

Henry S. Travis was a native of Pennsylvania. He moved from thence to Indiana, and resided at Rensselaer a number of years; he was wedded to one of Elder Halstead's daughters. Their family consisted of a daughter (deceased) and four boys. The boys have grown to manhood and have lived at Portland and vicinity since they came to Oregon. Mr. Travis moved to Oregon in consequence of his appointment to office by President Harrison with whom he was personally acquainted. He had practiced law for a series of years in Indiana preceding his appointment; but discontinued this profession after coming to Oregon. The writer had not formed the acquaintance of Mr. Travis, but as his family—at least his wife—had been instructed concerning the kingdom of God when his death occurred, April 24th, their minds turned anxiously toward having one with them at the funeral that holds those precious truths, I received message to come and responded. His death occurred at the Portland sanitarium and the funeral was conducted from the undertaker's parlors. He rests in the Lone Fir Cemetery, Portland, Ore. May God's blessing be with his family. He was 55 years, 7 months and 20 days old at the time of his death.

Miss Harriet E. Coles was born in Autrim, Shiawassee Co., Mich., March 22, 1846. Was married to Orlando Holly, Dec. 24, 1865, moving immediately to Kent Co., where they have since resided. Sister Holly was baptized into Christ by Elder Woodward and joined the Church of God in Dutton about 16 years ago, and "has kept the faith." A complication of diseases from which she has been a long sufferer, ended in death May 8 1904. She said to me many times, "O Mary, why can't I die. I am ready to go." Funeral sermon preached by the writer from their home in Dutton, May 7th. She leaves a husband, one son, one daughter and three grand children to battle through life without her love or counsels. They truly have our sympathy.

The Years.

The years, the years, what are the years
But milestones in "this vale of tears?"
As short-hand writers on the page
Recording life from youth to age.
But photographs that paint the heart,
As signals on an ocean chart.
But gleaners on our fields of care,
Which bathe in tears the sheaths they bear.
Too soon they blast life's brightest hopes,
And shut the flowers the Springtime opes,
Then leave our hearts as deserts drear,
Without a fragrant plant to cheer.

The years, the years, what are the years
But lips that kiss away our tears.
But hands that point to that sweet shore,
Where sighs and tears are known no more.
But hope's light steps across the sea
That borders love's eternal lea.
Ye bygone friends, farewell, farewell,
Let others pass their truths to tell,
Beware or bless, take or restore,
Till earthly changes vectors no more.
As then I read what these reveal,
May I the joy of angels feel.

Will He Give his Beloved Sleep?

When the feet are worn and weary,
When the eyes grow dim with tears,
When the days are long and dreary,
With the monotone of years;
When the fainting footsteps falter
In the marshes dark and deep,
With the griefs no time can alter,
Will he give his loved ones sleep?

When our happiness has vanished,
And the heart is worn and old,
Feeding on the husks is famished
With a hungering untold;
And the way is dark and lonely
Up the ragged mountain steep,
Faith asks the assurance only
That he gives his loved ones sleep.

Will he lead them by still waters,
In the pastures fair and bright
Earth's poor heartsick sons and daughters,
Out from darkness into light?
Oh! I long to know the secrets
The eternal silence keep,
Will we lose our burdens some day?
Will he give his children sleep?

Till there come a day of resting,
When the toil and pain are done,
Done the penance and the fasting,
And the final sands are run?
Will the heart forget its sorrows,
And the eyes forget to weep?
Then will be no weary morrows,
If he gives his loved ones sleep.

Healing the Sick.

Dear Restitution:

In the discussion of this question I shall not attempt to settle the many questions growing out of the question of healing. I shall content myself with a reference to the many Scriptures bearing upon the subject with a brief review of the same.

We find that God healed Abimelech and his wife in answer to the prayers of Abraham. Gen. xx. 17. Thus showing that healing in answer to prayer was practiced at an early day. Again we learn that in answer to the prayers of Moses God healed Miriam. Num. xii. 10.

David prayed "have mercy upon me, O Lord heal me." Psa. vi. 2, 8, 9.

Again, David is sick and he prayed and said, "O Lord my God, I cried unto thee and thou hast healed me." Psa. xxx. 2.

We come on down to the time of Jeremiah and we hear him praying and saying, "Heal me, O Lord, and I shall be healed." Jer. xvii. 14.

In Exodus xv. 26, the Lord said to Moses, "I am the Lord that healeth thee."

Again, when Jesus began his ministry in Galilee the book of Isaiah was handed him and he read, "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me he hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor * * * and recovering of sight to the blind." Luke iv. 17, 18.

Healing follows conversion. Acts xxviii. 27. "Bless the Lord, O my soul * * * who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases." Psa. ciii. 1-3. Hallelujah for it is good to sing praises unto our God * * * He that healeth the broken-hearted." Psa. cxlvii. 1-3. If God will heal the broken-hearted will he not heal the sick. Jesus went about doing good, healing the sick, casting out demons, etc. No sick person ever came to Jesus and went away sick. He always healed them. Jesus never attended a funeral. The dead always came to life when Jesus came to them. The objector says I admit that Jesus and the apostles healed the sick but days of miracles are past and therefore the time in which our heavenly Father will heal the sick is passed. Let us fix one proposition and remember it all the time while we are considering this question of healing. It is this, God and God only has the power to heal. Even Jesus did not possess that power, except as it was given him by the Father. It is also true that our heavenly Father alone has power to forgive sins. It is just as much a miracle to forgive sins, as it is to heal diseases. If our heavenly Father no longer exercises the healing power simply because it requires miraculous power to heal, why should he not cease to forgive sins for the same reason?

In the 103 Psa. David says, "Bless the Lord, O my soul." What for David, why should we bless the Lord? Because he will forgive all our iniquities. Is there any other reason? Yes. He healeth all our diseases. If our good Father will no longer heal our diseases then we can no longer pray that prayer. Let us be careful how we put a limit on the promised blessings which God has promised to the universe. There are four ways provided in the Bible whereby God's children may obtain the blessing of divine healing.

1st. In 1 Cor. xii. 9 we learn that God conferred the gift of healing on some of the members in the church. Persons possessing that gift had power to heal the sick.

2nd. In the epistle of James we have this direction given, "Is any among you afflicted, let him pray." Jas. v. 13.

3rd. "Is any sick among you, let him call for the elders of the church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord, and the prayer of faith shall save the sick, and the Lord shall raise him up, and if he have committed sins they shall be forgiven him." Jas. v. 14.

4th. Again we find in James the following directions, viz: "Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. The effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much." Jas. v. 16.

The foregoing statements are plain and concise and easily understood. When Jesus says is any among you afflicted let him pray. He gives a plain command and one that all can understand and ought to obey. That being true, what are we going to do about it? We dare not forbid one who is sick to pray. To do so would be to contradict a very plain command given by God through the Word of his inspired apostle. Again, how is it with the elders? They are the specially appointed and ordained agents of God to oversee and look after the church of the living God. If they refuse or neglect to perform the duties assigned them, who will discharge these duties? Must the members of the church be neglected because the elders refuse or neglect their duties. The directions are very plain and easily understood. The divine Word says, "Pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord, and the prayer of faith shall save the sick." Why was this commandment given by God to the elders of the church? The simple fact is that sin and Satan had brought sickness and death into the world, to relieve his well beloved children, to some extent, from the effects of the curse, our heavenly Father provided this remedy for the relief of those members of the church who may be sick. But the objector says, All must die sooner or later, therefore why trouble the elders? Let me ask, why then did Jesus and his disciples heal the sick and restore the dead to life. Let me further ask, why did God direct the elders to heal the sick if the healing of them is not important? Is it not better, and very much safer for us to obey the plain commands which we find in the Bible than it is to try to argue them away?

Coming to the last proposition, dare we, with the midday sun of God's blessed Word shining into our hearts, say to each other that we must not "confess our faults one to another, and pray one for another that we may be healed." Why shouldn't we confess our faults one to another and pray one for another? Oh yes, says the objector, it is all right to confess our faults to each other and it is all right to pray one for another, but then you must not expect to be healed. God using the voice of James says, healing is the very object of confession and prayer. Had we not better leave it just as God left it. He caused a record to be made of it, which he has put in our hands. Why did he do it? There are Bible expositors who take the following view of this subject. They start out by saying the days of miracles are passed and refer to 1 Cor. xiii. 8 to 13 as proof of their assertion. This Scripture comes far short of establishing their proposition. Paul does say that "prophecies shall fail" that tongues shall cease and that knowledge shall vanish away, but when will this take place? The claim is made that it had already taken place at the time Paul wrote 1 Corinthians. I do not think that position can be successfully maintained. Paul says "for we know in part and we prophesy in part. But when that which is perfect is come then that which is in part shall be done away." 1 Cor. xiii. 9, 10. Please note that it is when that which is perfect is come that that which is in part shall be done away. It will not be insisted that the perfect has come yet. Paul goes on with the argument. He says, "Now we see through a glass darkly, but then face to face." When face to face? Why, when that which is perfect is come. He further says, "Now I know in part, but then shall I know even as also I am known." When will Paul know, "when that which is perfect is come," and not before.

The last verse in 1 Cor. xiii. is relied upon by the objector as establishing his positions. It reads, "And now abideth faith, hope and charity, these three." It is insisted that the word "now" shows that at the time of the writing of the epistle all gifts had been done away, and there only remained faith, hope and charity. It is claimed that the gift of prophecy, the gift of knowledge, the gift of healing, etc. were all taken away before the Apostle Paul wrote the epistle to the Corinthians. This epistle was written in the year 59 A. D. Anything that was written by inspiration after that time could not be affected by this epistle. The letter of James was written in the year 60 A. D. If there is any conflict between James and Paul relating to the matter we are discussing, the last utterance must control. But there is no conflict whatever. Paul does not say that the gift of prophecy and other gifts had been taken away at the time he wrote Cor. I. 13. On the contrary he said when that which is perfect is come then that which is in part shall be done away. When will that which is perfect come? Certainly not before Jesus comes. Paul said he was looking through a glass darkly, but then face to face. When would he see face to face? When Jesus comes and brings in the perfect. To show that Paul did not teach that prophesying had come to an end I will only refer to the fact that the entire book of Revelation was foretold and written by John the Revelator thirty-seven years after Paul wrote 1 Corinthians. God himself speaking through Jesus and an angel to John, says, "If any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life and out of the holy city."

If the gift of prophecy had not been taken away at the time Paul wrote 1 Corinthians then the gift of healing and other gifts had not been taken away at that time.

Suppose for the sake of argument we concede that the gift of healing has been taken away, that in no way militates against what James says. He is not insisting upon the gift of healing. On the contrary he is talking about prayer to God. By the way that is the main question after all. While I do not think the gift of healing has been done away, I think it quite doubtful whether any person now living has that gift. But it will not do to say that God will not answer prayer when it is addressed to him in the very manner he has directed, asking him to heal the sick. Certainly all Christian people believe in prayer. The whole plan of salvation is based on prayer.

There is one more Scripture that I want to call attention to. It is found in that most remarkable chapter Matt. xviii. "Again I say unto you that if two of you shall agree on earth as touching anything, that they shall ask it, and it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven. For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them. Matt. xviii. 19, 20. Is this most wonderful statement true today? Is it true today that where two of God's children shall "agree on earth as touching any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven?" I very much fear that there are those who are trying to follow the meek and lowly Jesus who will doubt these his words. Why should any one doubt them? There can be but one reason. They are too good to be true. May God help us to fully realize, understand and appreciate the great blessings which God has promised to all those who faithfully follow him and do all his commandments.

Let me call attention to the remainder of the statement of Jesus wherein he tells why his Father will grant the favor asked. Jesus says "for where two or three are gathered together in my name there am I in the midst of them." Is it possible that these statements are true? They are the blessed words of Jesus spoken directly with reference to the action of our good Father. It is one of the grandest promises in the Bible. May God help us to realize what it means to have our heavenly Father meet with us, and do for us what we ask of him to do.

My well beloved readers who are climbing the hill of Zion with hope and expectation of meeting Jesus when you reach the top, let us lay hold of every single promise given to us by the Father and by Jesus our Savior to help us on the way. The climbing may become more difficult soon, if Jesus does not come and take his bride away. Just what may come to the children of God out of the terrible war just commenced in the far East is difficult to tell. Let us by prayer and supplication and thanksgiving, get as close to our dear heavenly Father and the Lord Jesus Christ as it is possible to get. That is the source of power, that is the source of strength, that is the source of valor which will enable us to keep in the front rank of the soldiers of the cross ever fighting for Jesus our King. We must stand shoulder to shoulder and battle as one man, in no other way can we have sufficient strength to win the prize.

Sunday School Lesson for May 8, 1904.

WATCHFULNESS. LUKE XII. 35-48.

Golden text, "Blessed are those servants whom the Lord, when he cometh, shall find watching." Luke xii. 37. It is a pity to think that in hundreds of Sunday schools this lesson so clear on the pre-millennial coming of Jesus will be just contrary to what the lesson says, and death will be put in the place of the coming of Jesus.

There are four topics in this lesson, namely, the girded watchers, and then their reward, and then the skeptics about the second coming, and then their punishment.

1. The girded watchers, "Let your loins be girded about and your lights burning, like men waiting for their Lord." To understand these words, simply turn back to Exodus xii. 11, where the Lord commanded the Hebrews in that dark night when they left Egypt to be ready with their loins girded and their staff in their hand to go out with haste. Every passage in Scripture has a companion passage which illuminates it. There is a great likeness between the Jews leaving Egypt and Christ coming to gather his saints from this world. Moses is a perfect type of Jesus in these points. Moses and Jesus were both born under oppressive earthly monarchs, and both of them had their infant lives hunted to be killed, and both of them were protected in infancy by the throne of Egypt, and both of them sought in their youth to deliver the Hebrew people. And both of them left their native land and went up to God, Moses to Mount Horeb and Jesus to heaven; and both of them spent a dispensation in prayer for their people. Moses going back to Egypt the second time with a rod of power to smite the Egyptians is a type of Jesus coming back a second time to his native earth with a rod of iron to smite the earth with the great tribulation. Moses taking the Jews out of Egypt to Mount Horeb is a type of Christ taking his saints from the earth into heaven. Moses organizing the twelve tribes into a portable city is a type of Christ forming his saints into the New Jerusalem. Then Moses taking the twelve tribes to conquer and reign in Canaan is a type of Christ taking his glorified saints back to earth to conquer and reign. Now see, as the Hebrews were to stand with their loins girded, watching for marching orders to leave Egypt, is the exact picture that Jesus presents in this lesson of the saints being girded and watching for marching orders when Christ comes.

2. The rewards for the faithful watchers. Jesus says, "Blessed will be the faithful steward who is found feeding the household of God when the Lord returns, for he shall be made ruler over all that his Lord hath." The "steward" here stands for any faithful preacher, or evangelist, or Bible teacher, or Christian parent who is giving out the pure Word of God and teaching the things of salvation. There is one word that Jesus uses twice in this lesson which the post-millennial brethren do not know how to dispose of. For it contradicts their false view about the second coming. That word is "ruler." Jesus declares twice in this lesson that at his second coming "the faithful stewards who are found watching and ready shall be made rulers over all God's household." Here is absolute proof that the true saints are to be put in authority over everything on this earth after Jesus comes back. For, mark you, the place where the stewards are to be rulers is the same place where they watched and watered and fed the Lord's family with meat in due season. This rulership that the stewards are to have is the very thing that Christ mentions as constituting their reward.

3. The skeptical servants. If the servant says in his heart, "My Lord delayeth his coming, and shall begin to beat the other servants, and eat and be drunken," etc. This is exactly what thousands of preachers are doing. They say Christ is not coming for hundreds or thousands of years. They teach that the church is to grow into a great empire and gradually conquer the world. Hence they seek for places of power in the church and become religious bosses and tyrants and lord it over God's heritage, and beat, especially their fellow servants who believe in holiness, and some of them get drunk on wine, and others get drunk with self conceit and religious pride.

4. Then comes the various punishments upon those preachers who denied the second coming and were not ready for it, they shall be cut off from the inheritance of millennial glory and have their portion with infidels. There are thousands of holiness fighting preachers that exactly answer to the words of Jesus in this lesson, who are simply using the visible church as an instrument for making a support and getting a position of honor that, will take their places with Tom Paine and the Bob Ingersolls when Jesus comes, and yet Jesus says, they will not all be equally punished, but their stripes will be given according to the amount of knowledge against which they sinned.

"Come Out, Mr Gold."

A native preacher in the Indian Territory, making an appeal for missions to a congregation in which there were several well to do people, with something more than copper and silver in their pockets, used these words:

"There is a gentleman, who I suppose is now in this house. He is a very fine gentleman, but a very modest one. He does not like to show himself at a missionary meeting. I don't know how long it is since I have seen him, he comes out so little. I am very much afraid he sleeps much of the time when he ought to be out doing good. His name is Gold. Mr. Gold, are you here to-day, or are you sleeping in your iron chest? Come out, Mr. Gold; come out and help us to do this great work. Come out and help us preach the gospel to every creature. Ah, Mr. Gold, you ought to be ashamed of yourself to sleep so much in your iron chest! Look at your white brother, Mr. Silver; he does a great deal of good, while you are sleeping. Look too at your little brown brother, Mr. Copper, he is everywhere. Your poor little brown brother is running about doing all that he can to help us. Come out, Mr. Gold; come out of your iron chest.—Anon.

Making the Best of Troubles.

The average dictionary defines an optimist as one who believes that all things are for the best. One day a man wielding a hammer struck his thumb instead of the nail he had intended to hit, and a friend happening along a while after, said: "That's too bad!" "No, it isn't; it's a fortunate happening," said the man. "It has taught me the value of that thumb as I never knew it before. There are just 257 things I have tried to do without that thumb, and found it impossible. Will you please open my penknife for me? Thank you! That makes me just 258." That man was an optimist. A man fell out of a window on the sixteenth story of a building, and as he shot by each window on his way down, he called out: "All right so far!" He was not borrowing trouble. He was an optimist. Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch said: "Never open your umbrel until it begins to rain." She, like the man just mentioned, did not believe in anticipating evil.—Epworth Herald.

Emma Jackman, Sec.

To the Ladies of the Tithing Society in Michigan.

A good work has been done in the past by the sisters in helping to carry the burdens in different directions; and this is no time to lay the burden down, for there is so much need of means to further the gospel work. Try to be present at the meeting sisters, but if that is impossible, the postman will be prompt in delivering your offering in time for Conference, if all do their part in sending either to Emma Jackman, or M. A. Woodward, Dutton, Michigan.

M. A. Woodward, Sec.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

Coach Excursions.

Tuesdays and Thursday, May 17th, 19th, 24th, 26th and 31st, Coach Excursions to World's Fair, St. Louis, will be run via Pennsylvania Lines. On these dates, excursion tickets to St. Louis will be sold at $6.75 round trip from Plymouth Ind., good only in coaches of train leaving at 9:12 A. M.

Announcement.

The third Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God in Indiana will convene at the Antioch church at 10:00 o'clock A.M., Friday, June 10, and continue over the following Sunday. The brethren and sisters who have attended the June Meeting at Antioch in former years know the character of this gathering, and scarcely need a special invitation to attend the meeting this year. Many times have God's children met at Antioch and taken with them new spiritual impulses, and there is every reason to anticipate a time of refreshing this year. Let the brethren and sisters for a few days lay aside the cares of this age, and lay up treasure for the age to come. Let the meeting be characterized by deep earnestness and joyful fellowship in the hope of the life to come. Those coming by railroad will come to Plymouth or Argos, where they will be met at trains and conveyed to the place of meeting.

Please send word by postal one week before meeting to Bro. A. R. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind., or T. O. Taber, Argos, Ind., on what day and train you expect to arrive.

A. H. Zilmer, Pres.
Lydia Railsback, Sec.

The Northwest Conference will convene Friday evening June 17th and hold over the following Monday at Lake Shore, Wash. Lake Shore is about four miles from Vancouver, Wash. Any one wishing conveyance to Lake Shore will correspond with P. G. Wolf of Vancouver. Brethren from a distance will stop at River View hotel right by the ferry landing and wait for the brethren from Lake Shore. All are invited to come and have one more meeting that will be a feast long to be remembered. Another Conference year has almost passed and gone, have we spent our time well or have we been idle in the Master's vineyard? All cannot go out in the world to preach, but we all can live a good square Christian life doing good to all around us. By order of the executive committee.

Mrs. Almira M. Brooks.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Michigan will commence (D. V.) at Dutton, Kent County, Michigan, Thursday evening, June 2, 1904, and continue over the following Sunday. Another year has nearly rolled around since the annual meeting of the Michigan Conference was held. Once again the invitation comes from the brothers and sisters of the Church of God at Dutton to have the meeting there. Do we stop and think what it means for the brethren to entertain the Conference? It means a good deal of thought and work, but they are willing to bear the expense and work for the cause of truth. The brethren and sisters of Michigan are urged to make a special effort to be present at this Annual Conference. Arrangements will be made to accommodate all who may come. All will be made welcome. Let us come with the one thought to further the cause of Christ. Not all together to get good, but determined to give as much as we receive, then as is already predicted we will have a good meeting. Let each church send one or more delegates with report of their standing during the past year. A programme will appear later. Dutton is on M. C. R. R. ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids.

Emma Jarman, Sec.

The 17th Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will be held at Waterloo, beginning Aug. 28. Programme, etc., will appear later.

O. J. Allard, Pres.

Obituary.

The 12th of April, 1904, brought the desolation of a home and the loss of a member of the church at Scholls, Oregon. Sister Emily Davis, wife of Bro. William Davis, died of a lingering disease at the age of 68 years and 85 days. Bro. and Sister Davis were among the settlers of Oregon that came across the plains by the earlier method of travelling with teams. They united with the Christian church about 15 years ago, but have held membership in the Church of God at Scholls for a number of years. With the repetition of those scenes of the loss of loved ones we are reminded of our mortality and that nothing is as sure as death. How much it makes us long for the deliverance that can only come with the Deliverer, when the last enemy destroyed shall be death. The writer gave a discourse from Paul's words, Acts xxvi. 8, "Why should it be thought a thing incredible with you that God should raise the dead?"

W. L. Sekels.

Pertinent Queries.

Can we hope to conquer this mortal flesh unless our whole heart is full of love for the things which are not seen except with the eye of faith? If we love the world the love of the Father is not in us.

Can any one be so void of the love of perfect rest that he does not want to enjoy, after the battle has been won, the pleasures that God has laid up for those that love Him?

"But thanks be to God which giveth us the victory." David said he would praise God while he lived. Can we show our appreciation of his great love toward us in any nobler way than giving our whole heart's service to Him, and praising Him while we live?

"The Lord is coming. Get ready! He is coming soon. Get ready! He is coming in this generation. Get ready! No one can meet Him in peace whose sins are unconfessed and unforgiven. Get ready! The message of the Lord's soon coming is to be given in all the earth. Get ready! The best way to get ready is to help others to get ready!"—Bible Standard.

My general wish on earth has been to do my Master's will. That there is a God, all must acknowledge. I see him in all these wondrous works. Himself how wondrous! What would be the condition of any of us if we had not the hope of immortality? What ground is there to rest upon but the gospel? There were scattered hopes of the immortality of the soul, especially among the Jews. The Romans never reached it. There were intimations crepuscular twilight; but, but, but God, in the gospel of Jesus Christ, brought life and immortality to light. —Daniel Webster, on his death-bed.

Splendid for distribution among your neighbors. 10 cents for 10 copies; 25 cents for 50 copies; 40 cents for 100 copies. Send orders to A. H. Zilmer, at Plymouth, Indiana.

Fares to St. Louis.

World's Fair excursion tickets to St. Louis are now on sale via Pennsylvania Lines. Fares from Plymouth Ind., are as follows.

Tickets good for the season, returning any time to December 15th, will be sold every day at $14.00 for the round trip.

Tickets good returning within sixty days, not later than December 15th, will be sold every day at $11.70 for the round trip.

Tickets good returning within fifteen days will be sold every day at $10.75 for the round trip.

Coach excursion tickets, with return limit of seven days, will be sold twice a week, every Tuesday and Thursday beginning May 17th, until June 30th, at $6.75 for the round trip approximately one cent a mile. Coach excursion tickets are restricted to day coaches, whether on regular or special trains.

For further particulars consult J. E. Hanes, Ticket Agent, Plymouth, Ind. —May 31.

Change in Time of Trains on Pennsylvania Lines.

Under a new schedule in effect Sunday May 15, 1904, passenger trains over the Pennsylvania Lines leave Plymouth Station as follows.

For the East: 2:48 a. m. daily; 10:00 a. m. daily, except Sunday; 3:30 p. m. daily; 5:40 p. m. daily; 6:55 p. m. daily except Sunday; 8:13 p. m. daily, extra fare train; 9:46 p. m. daily.

For the West: 5:08 a. m. daily; 5:58 a. m. daily, extra fare train; 9:00 a. m. daily except Sunday; 2:10 p. m. daily except Sunday; 6:08 p. m. daily.

For particular information on the subject apply to J. E. Hanes, Ticket Agent Plymouth, Ind.

Reduced Fares to Cleveland.

May 14th, 16th, 17th and 18th, excursion tickets to Cleveland, account National Baptist Anniversary, will be sold via Pennsylvania Lines. Get information regarding time of trains, etc., from Local Ticket Agent of Pennsylvania Lines.—May 18.

Low Fares to the West.

May 3, 17, June 7, 21, July 5, 19, August 2, 16, Home-Seekers' tickets will be sold to points in the West, Northwest, South and Southwest, and Canada and Mexico. For further information, apply to Ticket Agents of Pennsylvania Lines.—Aug. 16.

Beautiful Winona.

With the opening of the season at Winona Lake, May 16th, the sale of excursion tickets over the Pennsylvania Lines to that attractive resort in Northern Indiana will begin. Every summer passed there by thousands has only increased their desire to return. On the golf links, the tennis courts, the baseball or cricket grounds, the croquet field, or boating on the lake, fishing, camping, swimming, driving, or attending recitals and lectures by world-famed personages in the auditorium—whatever the diversion may be, the associations are of that congenial sort conferred by good society. This resort is noted as the site of Winona Assembly and Summer School, attracting teachers and students from educational institutions of this and other countries.

Fifteen-day and season excursion tickets will be sold from stations of the Pennsylvania Lines during the summer. For information about fares and time of trains, apply to local ticket agents, or to F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa. Illustrated literature describing attractions of Winona Lake may be had for the asking. Address S. C. Dickey, Secretary and General Manager, Winona Lake, Ind., who will give particulars regarding camping facilities, hotel accomodations, program of addresses by noted speakers and all other details.—Sept. 30.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "The Restitution, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "The Restitution."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Gifts for the King.

The wise may bring their learning,
The rich may bring their wealth,
And some may bring their greatness,
And some bring strength and health.
We too would bring our treasures
To offer to the King;
We have no wealth or learning,
What shall we children bring?

We'll bring him hearts that love him,
We'll bring him thankful praises,
And young souls meekly striving
To walk in holy ways;
And these shall be the treasures
We offer to the King,
And these are gifts that even
The poorest child may bring.

We'll bring the little duties
We have to do each day;
We'll try our best to please him
At home, at school at play;
And better are these treasures
To offer to our King,
Than richest gifts without them;
Yet these a child may bring.

Sabbath Day Resurrection.

It is claimed by Sabbath keepers that Jesus rose from the dead on the seventh instead of the first day of the week: and that this makes void the claim that the first day should be observed as the day of Christian worship, that it is entitled to no more regard than any other of the five days between it and the seventh. So it is called by them "the pope's day," and "heathen Sunday." While the first day is not by inspiration called holy, nor set apart by precept as the day of public worship, yet it was so kept by the churches founded by the apostles, and following this custom, by the churches succeeding apostolic times, and in unbroken line down to the present. The reason for this custom was that the Lord rose from the dead on this day. If he rose on the seventh or sabbath there was a mistake made and made very early in the church's history.

Before me is a little tract advocating a Wednesday crucifixion and a Sabbath day resurrection. Matt. xxviii: 1. R. V. is adduced as proof that our Lord rose on the Sabbath. By this translation Matthew is made to teach that the two Marys came to see the sepulcher late on the sabbath day. The revised translation is not essentially different from King James. The R. V. reads, late on the sabbath day. King James,—in the end of the sabbath. The writer of the tract honestly thinking that these renderings express the meaning of the Greek, and that no other rendering is possible must understand that the women visited the sepulcher twice, the first on the sabbath and the second time on the first day of the week, this time to anoint the Savior, let me enumerate then what took place late on this sabbath.

1. A great earthquake. 2. An angel descending from heaven and rolling away the stone from the door. 3. The keepers quaking with fear. 4. The announcement by the angel that the crucified one had risen. 5. The invitation to the women to bear witness to the fact by viewing the empty tomb. 6. The command to the women to go and tell the disciples the joyful news. 7. Meeting the risen Savior as they went.

Now if all these things occurred on the sabbath, how can we account for what was said and done on the first day of the week, as Mark records. Can any one believe this to be the second visit to the tomb? The same two Marys mentioned by Matthew are mentioned by Mark. They come to anoint their Lord, believing him to be dead. There were other women in company with these. They consult among themselves as to who shall roll away the stone. Approaching nearer they find it rolled away already. From this point on, the record is very similar to that of Matthew's. Did these women forget all they saw and heard about twelve hours before? None so unreasonable as to believe this. We must conclude then that the two narratives refer to the same visit. There is substantial agreement between them. The difference is only in accordance with the style of these inspired historians. But it will be objected that the difference in time as stated in the two narratives can not be made to agree with the fact of one visit to the sepulcher by the company of women. Now in as much as no question has been, nor can be raised regarding the time of the visit to the sepulcher as stated by Mark—chapter xvi: 1,2, and with which Luke xxiv: 1—agrees we must see whether some other translation of Matt. xxviii: 1 can be found.

The Diaglott reads: "Now after the sabbath as it was dawning to the first day of the week." This agrees now with Mark, Luke and John. The first reads "very early in the morning, the first day of the week they came unto the sepulcher, at the rising of the sun." Luke says, "very early in the morning," and John: "early when it was yet dark." It was dark when they started. Twilight in the East is very short. These suggestions are sufficient to harmonize John with Mark and Luke.

Green in his lexicon, defines the Greek word, opse, as follows—late; put for the first watch, and gives as examples, Mar. xi: 19, xiii: 35; opse sabbaton, after the close of the sabbath, Mat. xxviii: 1. This last is the passage in dispute and the one on which seventh day keepers base their claim for sabbath day resurrection—taking the R. V. and King James versions in preference to any others; by doing which they put Matthews record in irreconcibly disagreement with Mark, Luke and Johns, which read the "first day of the week." Green's definition is equivalent to a translation. Sabbatarians perhaps, may not think that sabbath resurrection adds any thing to the sanctity of the day, but that it destroys the ground for first day observance they are quite sure. Davis in his tract says: "I cannot uphold a doctrine, that was introduced and is now upheld for the purpose of upholding a commandment of men which annuls the commandment of Jehovah. For to my mind that is what the question of first day or Sunday resurrection amounts to."

While a good deal that is human has been attached to the first day of the week since apostolic days, its observance as the day of public assembly and worship is not of purely human origin. Before the early Christian fathers came on the stage, and before a pope was developed, the church met and worshipped on the day in question. The early church fathers endorsed the custom, and later, popes did the same. They did not change the day. In a tract entitled Who Changed the Sabbath? the question is asked: What power or influence established this observance in the Christian church? Answer, It was brought in by the working of that influence which finally resulted in the establishment of the Papacy. Then says, the Papacy existed in embryo. This does not agree with another part of the same tract which identifies the Papacy with the "little horn" power of Dan. vii: 8, 20, 21, which as described by the prophet had full power to act and speak at the time to which the prophecy refers. This power, Sabbatarians indict as the criminal that "shall speak great words against the most High, and wear out the saints of the most High, and think to change times and laws; which power they have repeatedly, in all their literature, accused of the crime of changing the sabbath.

This power depicted by the prophet is not the Papacy in embryo, but the Papacy full grown. This power, according to Sabbatarians, pleads guilty to this one charge. Now as far as the first day of the week was regarded as the day of public assembly and worship in the early church there was nothing popish about it for the custom originated with the apostolic church. As proof of this I quote Acts xx: 7. And upon the first day of the week, when the disciples came together to break bread, Paul preached unto them, ready to depart on the morrow. These disciples and Paul did not think by this that they were honoring a custom of the heathen world, or paying adoration to the Sun-god to which the day had been, by idolaters, anciently set apart. They had no scruples on this point. First day resurrection, doubtless was the reason for starting the custom which has been kept up without a break ever since. As additional evidence the reader is refered to 1 Cor. xvi: 2. I have not quoted Mar. xvi: 9 in proof of first day resurrection from the fact that beginning with this ninth verse and on to the end this portion of the chapter is considered doubtful by Biblical critics. This 9th v. reads When Jesus (r. v. he) was risen early the first day of the week, he appeared first to Mary Magdalene. Owen has this to say on this portion of the chapter considered doubtful by some: There is here an abruptness which has led some to believe what follows (9 v. and onward) is a kind of supplementary compendium from some other hand. There is, however, only one M. S. and one version where it is not found; and the authority of these even is weakened by the great liberties taken with the text. There can be no doubt that it is genuine, and rightly attributed to Mark." Here is proof that our Lord rose on the first day of the week. First day resurrection and first day observance are joined together as cause and sequence. Seventh day keepers would like to get rid of this fact but there is no possibility of this.

JOHN L. WINCH.

Saving Faith.

"By grace are ye saved, through faith." Paul, Eph. ii. 8.

"Earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints." Jude 3.

It is satisfactory to look back over forty years to find that saving faith, the heading of this was the title of a closely printed tract of twenty pages, issued by some brethren in Dundee, Scotland. It was originally printed as an article in a magazine entitled, "The Gospel Witness." The publication was addressed, "To the Baptized Believers of the Gospel of the Kingdom of God." Dear brethren, this magazine is addressed to you that through God's blessing it may stimulate your faith and hope and love and incite you to shine as lights in the world by holding forth the Word of truth that others may become partakers with us in the patience and hope and kingdom of our God and his Christ. Brethren, pray that our work may prosper, and that we may witness for the gospel in all holy boldness and sobriety." In closing the tract gives the following, "of the things thus brought under notice, this is the sum. The divinely appointed way of salvation is—

1. Believe what God has revealed for faith in order to salvation. No other Word has saving efficacy. We cannot be saved without a sincere faith, but this sincere faith must take hold of the gospel, which is the power of God unto salvation.

2. Believe that God is to establish the kingdom of Israel anew gloriously, and for ever, under the government of David's Immortal Son, the Son of God; and that the divine blessings bestowed upon them shall overflow to the Gentiles, who shall do homage unto him who shall reign in Mount Zion and Jerusalem.

3. Believe that Jesus of Nazareth is the Christ, or the Messiah, that is, that he is the Anointed, or destined monarch for the throne of this kingdom.

4. Believe that this kingdom is near to come, and therefore wait and watch for the coming of Christ in this (his) kingdom.

5. Believe that Jesus the destined King of the Jews, the Son of God, died for our sins, and was raised for our justification,—that he ascended into the heavens, and that there, as a priest having the power of an endless life, he made an offering for sin, by presenting his own blood in the presence of God; and that he is Lord that hath the power of hades and of death, and will give eternal life to all that call on his name.

6. Be baptized. Baptism into the name of the Lord Jesus Christ can only take place after faith in these things. When one believes these things, he should like Paul arise and be baptized, and wash away his sins, calling on the name of the Lord.

May the Lord direct our hearts, yours reader and mine—unto the patient waiting for of Christ, and minister to us an abundant entrance into his everlasting kingdom."

The present writer has the further satisfaction that he was instrumental in having the tract "saving faith" printed in full in THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Indiana, U. S. A. It is not too much to say that in the estimation of all true baptized believers, the tract will remain a tribute to the memory of some who have passed away.

It will be observed that the heading "saving truth" has its Scripture equivalent in the words of Paul "saved through faith," meaning in the mouth of Paul, faith and its obedience. Rom. xvi. 26, etc.

The exhortation of Jude emphasizes the expression "the faith," and calls for some more particular examination.

This term "the faith" is used by Jude to signify in brief what was being preached in his day by the Apostles and others for "the obedience of faith," of Jew and Gentile. "The faith once delivered to the saints" has reference to what our Lord delivered to his newly chosen apostles at the beginning of his ministry. To "earnestly contend for the faith" is the active exercise of that attitude of aggression requisite for the setting forth of that call to repentance the gospel implies.

"The faith" is spoken of in various relations showing its paramount importance. "Established in the faith," —"continue in the faith," "depart from the faith," etc. Jude regarded "the faith" as the foundation of the Christian community. He says "building yourselves ON your most holy faith." verse 20. This is in entire accord with Paul's declaration—"Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, Jesus [the] Christ. Macknight. As a wise master builder I have laid the foundation." 1 Cor. iii. 10, 11. Both Paul and Jude but gave an echo of our Lord's own words—"On this rock will I build my church," that is, on the faith just then given expression to by Peter for himself and his fellow apostles, Matt. xvi. 18, "Thou art the Anointed One, the Son of the living God."

What "the faith" represents as once for all delivered to the saints we find in Matt. x. 5-7, "These twelve sent Jesus forth and commanded them saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand." Since the gospel was preached to Abraham (Gal. iii. 8); this is the only occasion on which the faith was "once for all delivered to the saints." Our Lord pointed out here to his apostles how necessity should arise for the "earnest contention" enjoined by Jude, "I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves." The ruling authorities among the Jews afforded many illustrations of this warning both before and after our Lord's resurrection.

In modern times many have expounded the prophecies, and set forth what has been called the "future of the church and the world," and all the while ignore the "gospel of the kingdom of God." The true reading of the prophets may thus not be missed, but what of the misreading of the four evangelists? To attain to this and to "earnestly contend" for the faith delivered to the saints is a clement call upon so called Christian endeavor in the present day.

Besides the terms "the faith" there are several other expressions in the New Testament used to signify in brief the "gospel of the kingdom of God." We find for example "Preach the Word"—preach "the Christ"—preach "Jesus," preach "the gospel." Such terms do not themselves define the nature of what is preached. They are simply brief generic terms which present no difficulty to persons cognizant of the specific subject-matter treated of. The same brevity is commonly employed in epistolary correspondence and even in historical literature. The writers of such reckon on the previous knowledge of the persons for whom they write, and so employ brief expressions to denote certain matters of even supreme importance which otherwise might require full description.

Such brief terms as "the faith," "the gospel," etc. find their true and full significance only in the recorded histories of gospel preaching. The evangelists have reported the terms of the proclamation which began with John the Baptist, and was continued by our Lord and his apostles. Thus we read, "In those days came John the Baptist preaching.....and saying, Repent ye, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." After that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand. Repent ye, and believe the gospel. Mark i. 14, 15. This gospel was preached in Judea and Galilee only to the people of Israel, during the period of our Lord's ministry. The Jews knew of no other kingdom of God on the earth than that over the twelve tribes of Israel, and as a matter of fact there had existed no other. That kingdom had been overturned by Jehovah himself through the instrumentality of the King of Babylon. This was accompanied with a distinct promise of restoration under "him whose right it is," that is, the Messiah. This piece of history was well known to the Jews, and there were individuals like the aged Simeon, Anna the prophetess, Joseph of Arimathea, who are recorded as devoted expectants of the restored kingdom.

The preaching of the kingdom of God being "at hand" raised an expectation in the minds of many that "the kingdom of God should immediately appear." Toward the close of our Lord's ministry, he showed by a parable that such an expectation should not be realized, Luke xix. 11-27. In the previous chapter he had predicted his own violent death and his resurrection the third day. In the parable he intimated that he should depart to the "far country," and return before exercising his administration of his kingdom. With reference to his going away he said afterwards to his apostles, "If I go away I will come again," and at his ascension it was announced to his disciples by two divine messengers—"Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye gazing up into heaven? This same Jesus which is taken from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen him go into heaven." Acts i. 11. The term "at hand" previously applied to "the kingdom of God" was henceforth transferred to the Lord himself. Hence we read, "Let your moderation be known unto all men. The Lord is at hand." Phil. iv. 5. The facts concerning the death, resurrection and ascension of the Lord naturally became elements in the setting forth of the "gospel of the kingdom of God." A dead Messiah could not restore the kingdom to Israel, nor could the apostles bear testimony to the king of Israel if still lying in the grave. These facts, however, did not become a substitute for the "gospel of the kingdom of God;" for we find "the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ," continued to be preached by the apostles.

J. CAMERON.

On the Stage.

Men are the actors on life's stage, but a Master mind has written the drama in all its parts. And those who have become acquainted with the Master mind are able to anticipate the coming parts before they are played. For many centuries the actors on life's stage were governed by monarchal managers, but there came a time when the ruling of the stage was divided with the seed of men, by allowing them to choose legislative bodies to make the laws. See Dan. vii. 18. And after the second part of the play has been enacted, a new theory of stage management is introduced which divides the actors into two opposing forces, and every man's hand is ready to rise up against the hand of his neighbor. See Zech. xiv. 13. And a fire is started on the stage, (see Ezek. xxxix. 6) as was the fire on the stage of the late Iroquois theatre, but in the coming act of life's stage the destruction of life and property will be as much greater as the stage is larger. See Jer. xxv. 31, 33. Reader, are you well enough acquainted with the writings of this Master mind to anticipate the coming parts of this dramatic play before they are put upon the stage. The ruling power of the stage has been divided with the seed of men, and that part of the play is about to close. In all the acts thus far all the actors have played in competition one with another. But before the last act is played a new theory of the management of the stage is introduced, and some of the actors say this selfish competative system of conducting the play is working a hardship, and an injustice to a part of the actors, and we insist that the remainder of the play be laid on a plan of equality, and each actor bear an equal portion of the burdens. This new theory alarms the managers of the stage, they see the determined and restless spirit of some of the actors, and something must be done soon, or there will be a break in the unity of the play. The police, the sheriffs and armed soldiers are called in, (as we now see it enacted on life's stage) through the influence of clubs and bullets, for a time order is restored, but still the clamoring for the new rules is continued. And the situation is growing still more critical, the suppressed pent up force like the electrical battery will ever be seeking channels of escape, something must be done by the management, or this pent up force will set the stage on fire. The curtain is partly lowered, but fails to work. The actors become panic stricken, and every one is struggling to get a place of safety, and in the frantic rush some are crowded to the floor, and trampled under the feet of the surging mass, and amid the cries and groans of the mangled and dying the panic stricken mass rush on. This is a sad picture indeed, but it has once been enacted on a small scale in the Iroquois theatre, and will be enacted again on a much larger scale on life's stage, as the prophets have written.

But perhaps all my readers have not been watching this dramatic play on life's great stage as closely as the writer. This new theory of government is growing in all other lands as no other theory ever has, and the rulers of the people are becoming alarmed, and kings are trembling on their thrones. They see that something must be done soon or their power to rule will be taken from them. The new theory of government is so revolutionary that no compromise can be made, and the only remedy left the rulers is to crush the agitation. And perhaps but few of my readers are aware that there was a new military law passed in congress in 1902 that gives the President of the United States full power to call out, and use at his pleasure large bodies of trained soldiers to crush any movement that may threaten the stability of the present system of government. And in keeping with this policy we now see military law declared in two districts in Colorado in violation of the constitutions of both Colorado and the United States, and men are arrested by armed soldiers and imprisoned, and some are taken out of the county and threatened with more severe punishment if they return to their homes, and all this is done without charging the victim with any crime. And the homes of peaceable citizens are searched without a warrant from the State authorities, and any guns the citizens may have are taken from them. This news is kept from the general public. The masters in the United States as they do in Russia suppress such news. They have tried to lower the curtain but it would not work. But these spasmodic uprisings in both this country and Europe are becoming very frequent. The struggling pains to be delivered are coming on more rapid and severe, and soon a new order of government will be brought forth.

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIII. Read PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, MAY 25, 1904. NUMBER 20.

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the literal "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

A CHANCE.

Another chance to do missionary work is hereby given. We will send to new subscribers for 1904 all the papers for December of last year, and all of 1904 for $1.00. No better way can be found to impress the minds of others than by supplying them a periodical that comes to them fresh each week. It is better than a book, and more persistent than preaching. It does not take the place of either of these—but goes with them and works with them.

Urge some one near you to try it a year. Send it to some one you are interested in. Use your means to spread the truth of the gospel, and the fruitage is in God's hands, and he will reward as our works are.

Correspondents should not get the idea that because we were a little flush with manuscripts that it is best to quit writing. There always comes a time in the summer when copy is slack. So keep on, and we will soon catch up with the supply.

It is surely evident to all that we cannot well do business without means. It surely is likewise evident to those who have not yet renewed their subscription that we must be in need of what is due us. We dislike very much to mention this, and hope you will not compell us to repeat the hint.

During the past week the Japanese navy has been weakened by the loss by a submarine mine of a battleship, and a cruiser was sunk in collision with another vessel in a fog. The Russians have lost a fine cruiser of the Vladivostok squadron by running on the rocks, and then blown up to prevent it falling into Japanese hands. On land there has been some little skirmishing, but the week's end finds the Japanese far up the road to Mukden and beyond, having got beyond the Russian forces, between Mukden and Harbin. They have landed more troops near New Chang, which has been deserted by the Russians. Port Arthur is being enclosed, and the Japs are landing siege guns, and it looks as if it was the intention to push matters in that direction, before it is possible for the Russian Baltic fleet to reach the Pacific.

Editor Restitution:

In Restitution of Jan. 27, 1904, E. C. asks for light on Matt. xvii. 11, we will refer to verse 10. And his disciples asked him saying, Why say the scribes that Elias must first come? Verse 11, And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come, and restore all things. In the next verse 12, Jesus tells them more plainly. But I say unto you, that "Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatever they listed, likewise shall the Son suffer of them. By referring to Malachi iv. 5-6 we read as follows, Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the Lord. And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the hearts of the children to the fathers, lest I come and smite this earth with a curse. For a solution of the subject, please turn to Luke i. 5 to 17 in fact read the whole chapter, in the verses I have named we find a certain priest named Zacharias and his wife Elizabeth. They were no doubt Levites, for to them belonged the priesthood. Elizabeth was barren, and they both were well stricken in years. Verse 11, And there appeared unto him an angel of the Lord standing on the right side of the alter of incense, and when Zacharias saw him, he was troubled and fear fell upon him. But the angel said unto him, Fear not Zacharias, for thy prayer is heard and thy wife Elizabeth shall bear a son, and thou shall have joy and gladness; and many shall rejoice at his birth. For he shall be great in the sight of the Lord, and shall drink neither wine nor strong drink; and he shall be filled with the Holy Spirit even from his mother's womb. And many of the children shall be turned to the Lord their God. And he shall go before him in the spirit and power of Elias, to turn the hearts of the fathers to the children, and the disobedient to the wisdom of the just, to make ready a people prepared for the Lord. In this I think we have the fulfilment of the prophecy by Malachi, also of the reference by E. C. to Matt. xvii. 11. In verse 12 the Savior states that the Jews have done unto him, Elias whatsoever they listed because they knew him not. He who came in the spirit and power of Elias, was cast into prison and beheaded, his work was done. Let us bear in mind that the prophecy of Malachi was addressed to Israel. Gentiles have no part in this.

There is one great difficulty in these days, the Jews so called are supposed to be all there is of the Israelites when they are really but a part of Israel. By a careful reading of the Old Testament we find that fully seven-eighths of its writings, especially the prophecies are addressed to the two kingdoms Judah and Israel, who became separate kingdoms during the reign Rehoboam, and have never yet been re united. The kingdom of Judah consisted of two tribes Judah and Levi with the tribe of Benjamin who was loaned to them for light bearers for king David's sake. 1 Kings xi. 36, they remained with the kingdom of Judah, as also were scattered members of all the tribes, through all of their history, were with them in the captivity, and unto the destruction of Jerusalem by the Roman army, and at the time the Roman army was so miraculously withdrawn from the city, they the Benjamites, Christians gave heed to the warning of the prophet Jeremiah, chapter vi. 1, and escaped from Jerusalem, the apostles were all Benjamites, but one Judas the traitor, the apostle Paul also was a Benjamite.

The kingdom of Israel was cast out and divorced from God for idolatry about 120 years before the captivity, and became lost to all except God himself. The kingdom of Judah who sacrificed the Savior, and said his blood be upon us and our children, were also cast out, but not divorced, they became a by word and a hiss among all nations of the earth; their their tribulation is not yet over. Israel's seven times of punishment ended about a century ago. Where and who are they? Judah 7 times of punishment is drawing to a close, and as we watch passing events among the nations we perceive a ray of light in the rifting cloud, and we can rejoice that Gentile times are drawing to a close.

Submitted in love of the truth.

Conference Report.

The Central Washington Conference of the Church of God met at Waterville, Friday evening May 6, 1904 continuing over the following Sunday. The programme for the Conference read as follows:—

Friday 8:00 p m sermon, "Christian Unity," Walker Perrine.

Saturday 3:00 p m business meeting. 7:00 p m social meeting, leader Mary Patterson. 8:00 p m sermon "Christian Duty" A. L. Corbaley.

Sunday 10:00 a m Sunday School. 11:00 a m sermon "Christ's Coming Kingdom," Myrtle Titchenal. 7:00 p m Young people's meeting, leader, Cecil Walker. 8:00 p m sermon, "Signs of the Times," N. D. Titchenal. 9:00 Lord's Supper.

Bro. Walker Perrine being unavoidably detained from the Conference, his place on the programme was filled by N. D. Titchenal.

On Saturday at 3:00 p m the business meeting was called to order by the President, A. L. Corbaley. After disposing of some minor matters the Conference listened to the evangelist's report. The Conference then took up the matter of raising funds to carry on the evangelist work. After much discussion the Conference adopted the following rule, that each male member be assessed $1.00 per quarter and each female member 50 cents per quarter. The next meeting will be held at Wenatchee on August 5, 6 and 7, 1904.

We have had a splendid meeting and enjoyed the blessing of God. May we ever be found ready and willing to do the Master's work until he comes.

Evangelist Report.

We left our home in Wenatchee, Feb. 9th, going as far as Spokane in the eastern part of Washington. From there we went to Waverly some thirty miles beyond the city of Spokane.

The glad tidings had never been proclaimed at Waverly. While there were two church buildings in the town there was none for us, but by the courtesy of the school board we got permission to use a vacant room in the school, we used after we had fitted up.

We preached twenty sermons in all. There were four came out on the Lord's side, two of whom were baptized and the other two were satisfied with their former baptism. May the Lord keep them faithful until his appearing. The seed has been sown and who can tell what the harvest will be. We go to labor with them again during the month of June. May the Lord prosper the work done in his name.

N. D. & Myrtle Titchenal.

Come.

Come brethren, for all things are now nearly ready for our forty-eighth Annual Conference. Are you all making the effort to come that the friends here are making to have you comfortably fed and sheltered when the hour for the meeting arrives? It will be a great imposition on the brethren here for you to stay at home to make money, instead of expending a little of the means you have to come and help carry some of the burdens and blessings of the meeting. Remember friends, if you wish the truth to prosper in Michigan or elsewhere, its friends will have to support it. In the parable spoken by our Lord, we remember, "They all began with one accord to make excuses." We can all find them if we will try to, but instead of trying to frame an excuse to stay at home, work as earnestly as you would try to go to the "Fair," or some other place of amusement, and you will surely be here. Come prepared to take an active part and make our forty-eighth annual equally as good as those of former years. Do not disappoint the Dutton friends by your absence.

B. W. Woodward.

Dear ones of like precious faith:

I am now at Paris, Ill., where I have been holding meetings for a few weeks. There is quite an interest being taken with present results that nine have been immersed, with more almost persuaded. We now introduce to the household of faith Frank Zimerly and wife, Valentine Newheart and wife, Frank Henson, Mrs. Roy Henson, John Collier, Azorah Collier, Nora Young, the last three named being young people. The three mothers and the two young ladies are going to unite with the Bereans. Bro. George Henson, father of Frank Henson, Mrs. Nancy Newheart, Mrs. Maud Zimerly and father-in-law to Mrs. Roy Henson is quite poorly with a cancer in his face. He feels so thankful to have his children come to Christ while he is able to see them immersed and share in their joy. To God be all the praise. I go to Dudley, Ill., next Friday to hold meetings one week, then to Rhodes school house one week, then back home, when I will rest a few days before going to the June meeting.

Your Brother in Christ.

The difference between a life without Christ and a life with Christ is the difference between ebb and flood—the one is growing emptier, and the other is growing fuller.—Charles Cuthbert Hall.

Selections.

Preach the Positives.

Macauley has said, "If Voltaire had contented himself with making jokes about Saul's asses and David's wives, and criticising the poetry of Ezekiel in the narrow spirit in which he criticised that of Shakespeare the church would have little to fear. It is due to him and his compeers to say that the real secret of their strength lay in the truth which was mingled with their errors, and in the generous enthusiasm which was hidden under their flippancy."

These words have an application to the preaching of to-day. If men content themselves with preaching their negatives and doubts, with proving that this part of the Scriptures is of doubtful authority, and that that part is but an inspired parable, they will have, and deserve to have, very thin congregations; even if their genius brings out a respectable attendance at the Sunday services, their prayer-meetings will be naught. We heard it said the other day of one of the historical churches of New England, the pastor of which is a leading apostle of the negative theology, that the Sunday attendance is small, and twenty-five is an unusually large number at prayer meeting. There is no power in negatives. They do not draw, they do not inspire.

If we had ten thousand voices we should like to say to all our brethren, "The world does not care the ten-thousandth shaving of a hair about what you don't believe, about the convictions you don't hold. If you believe in the Holy Spirit, preach him; if you believe in Christ's words, preach them; if you believe sin is a measureless evil, preach this; if you believe that sin always and everywhere will be attended by misery and penalty, preach it; if you believe in Christ's resurrection, in the coming resurrection, in the resurrection life of the believer, preach these things. But if you don't believe these things, then you have nothing to say.—The National Baptist.

Men who boast themselves on the breadth of their opinions are often times the narrowest kind of mortals. Their disrespect for the convictions of others indicates not breadth but bigotry. We have furthermore observed that broadness and thinness usually run in pairs. Do you know that "narrowness" has overled the world? One-minded men have been the earth's glory. Moses was narrow; he gave up everything and became the leader of a peculiar people. Christ was narrow, measured by the broad-minded(?) Pharisees of his time. Luther was narrow, and Knox, and Columbus and the Pilgrim Fathers. There never yet was a great mind that undertook to lead mankind to higher ideals but was a one-ideaed, and one-channeled man. The wires that bear the messages around the world are narrow. The track that bears the nation's commerce from ocean to ocean is narrow. The great liner that flings the sea from its sharp prow, is narrow. The Holy Word that has laid the foundations of all our jurisprudence and civilization and that opens the kingdom to the believer, is called a "narrow book." The way that leads to the gates of eternal life is narrow. But "wide is the gate and broad is the way that leadeth to destruction, and many there are that enter thereby."—The United Presbyterian.

A Christian journal is not an organ of heresy, nor a standard of artificial orthodoxy, but a banner lifted up among the people to rally them on the Lord's side, to muster the forces of truth against error, and re-enforce the representation of right against wrong. It is not a museum of mummied dogmas, but an exponent of living opinions and reforming aspirations. It should bring truth in its noblest aspects and most attractive guise into the home, and should be a pioneer of the church in all quarters where the living voice does not penetrate. Its place is in the workshop, the counting house, the cottage, the ship, the railway-carriage, the school and the mansion. It is the transfiguration of the newspaper, and the commentator and illustrator of the Bible itself.

Daily prayer, and the devout study of the Bible, and the zealous doing of Christian work, will count for nothing if there be the willful cherishing of some secret fault. To live in grace, much more to grow and prosper, we must track the secret sin right away to its innermost haunt, and seek the cleansing grace of God to rid us of it. Beware of these secret faults. The noiseless dry-rot will undermine the stately palace, which floods and thunder-storms may burst upon in vain.—Mark Guy Pearse.

Dean Stanley on Baptism.

Arthur Penrhyn Stanley, Dean of Westminster, noted English clergyman and writer, has left no uncertain testimony upon the subject of baptism, to which his acknowledged scholarship gives great weight. The following summary of his views is given by the "Christian Commonwealth."

1. Immersion was wisely selected, not only because it was a "most delightful, ordinary, and salutary observance," but because it was significantly expressive of the design of baptism.

2. The word which Christ used to express baptism is literally translated immersion.

3. Christ himself was immersed.

4. The apostles uniformly practiced immersion.

5. Immersion was the invariable practice of the primitive church.

6. It was the almost universal practice of Christians for thirteen centuries.

7. When the substitution of sprinkling for immersion began to find favor, it was stoutly resisted as an innovation.

8. Even in some of the old countries (Russia for instance), the innovation has been up to the present time successfully resisted.

9. Immersion, "even in the church of England, is still observed in theory. Elizabeth and Edward VI were both immersed. The Rubric in the public Baptism for infants enjoins that, unless for special causes, they are to be dipped, not sprinkled."

10. The change from immersion to sprinkling is go after than that which the Roman Catholic Church has made in administering the sacrament of the Lord's supper in the bread without the wine.

Try a Little Oil.

In our haste often many little things which contribute to comfort are omitted. One morning on reaching the office, it was desirable to keep quiet, that a sick person in apartments above might not be disturbed. On opening a door, behold it answered by giving a long-drawn-out-squeak, which broke the stillness in a terrible fashion. Then on opening the safe door, there was another noise which rivaled the earjarring sound that had just subsided. The next move was to shove the desk chair to one side a little, and as if this was not enough, a small stand with four rollers on the floor broke in in concert when moved along a little.

This was too much. We knew there was an oil-can on the premises, with oil therein, and at once everything else stopped and an oiling process began. The office door, the safe door the office chair, and the stand all seemed to be highly delighted with the oil, and responded quietly thereafter as their services were needed at the hands of the workers.

Yes use a little oil. There are squeaky joints in the home some mornings. Everything seems touchy. It does not need nervous jerking at such times, nor a torrent of cross words; no, all that is needed is a little oil. But the oil must be applied on the worn, squeaky spot, or no cure will be effected. It needs only a drop, just a little of the oil of kindness, to set the good wife singing all day, to send a thrill of joy into the heart of every child, causing it to bound with gladness perhaps the whole day long.

Many a happy day is lost, all for the want of a little oil. Brother, be sure to keep an oil-can with some oil in it. If out, a suggestion for a supply is found in Zech. iv: 12.—Advent Review and Herald.

Announcement.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Illinois will meet at Oregon, on the evening of Wednesday Aug. 24, and continue over the following Sunday. The programme will appear later. Let all plan to come, and make this the best Conference ever held in our State. Try to bring a stranger with you, some one that you have trying to lead to a decision for the truth. There is no place more helpful than these Conference meetings to those who are seeking light on gospel teaching. By thus helping others we only add to our own joy in the faith, and our coming reward.

Bible Studies.

Bible Studies, No. 2, is now ready, under the title "What is it to believe on the Lord Jesus Christ?" written by Bro. W. H. Wilson. Splendid for distribution among your neighbors. 10 cents for 10 copies; 25 cents for 50 copies; 40 cents for 100 copies. Send orders to A. H. Zilmer, at Plymouth, Indiana.

Secret Faults.

"Cleanse thou me from secret faults."—Psa. xix: 12.

Secret faults are those which we, and we only, know ourselves to be guilty of.

Sins of thought, sins committed in secret, heart sins, desiring evil, meditating evil, meditating mischief, planning schemes to be carried out, and the motives that lie at the bottom of acts. Secret though they be to us, secret to all others, they are not hidden from God. He understandeth our thoughts altogether. Our hearts are deceitful. Every one is liable to sin, and we will do many things alone, which we would not that any friend would know.

Whose motives are all in accordance with the will of God?

This prayer, quoted above, cannot be amiss. Secret sins are our chief enemies. They are in every case the root of open sin, and if we know them not now, how soon may we know them to our sorrow? How apt the prayer, then, and what a fortification it may prove to us!—Sophie L. Schenck.

Come to Meeting.

Come early, if you can, but better late than never.

Come prayerfully, expecting God to do great things.

Come expecting to feed other souls, as well as to get food.

Come expectantly, looking for God to use you and bless you.

Come charitably, hunting for diamonds and not for flaws and faults.

Come, expecting to help build and blow the fire as well as to get warm.

Come, bringing all the fire you have got, and carrying away all you can get.

Come resolutely, overcoming all the obstructions which Satan may precipitate.

Come, and invite your pastor and your class-leader and other friends to come with you.—The Revivalist.

Religious Indifference.

The world has never yet been blessed with a real Christian city. In greater New York there are 636,000 out of church Protestants, who are practically opposing the faith they profess, and the recent census taken in New York and in Liverpool and London of church attendance reveals a woeful indifference to the ministrations of the sanctuary. The disregard of the Sabbath, the tricks, frauds and schemes in business, and the ebb in public conscience all demonstrate clearly that our centres of population are far from being Christian in deed and thought.—G. C. Lorimer.

Not Higher Critics.

It isn't the higher critics that are destroying the influence of the church—and I have no more sympathy with the destructive critics than you have. The trouble is not with the higher critics, but the lower living of Christians. The fog of higher criticism is not to be dissipated by firing great guns at it. That only adds to the fog the smoke of the powder. You can dissipate the fog only by the sunbeams of Christian living. I'll wear myself out preaching the evidences of Christianity, and some cross-grained representative of Christianity in the pews will spoil the whole inside of ten minutes after I get through.—P. S. Henson.

Those who approach the Scriptures with a mere desire to find texts which will support their side of a case are not as likely to arrive at truth as those who humbly and earnestly desire to know what the Bible does teach, irrespective of any opinions they may have formed.

Christ's sacrifice was not only for atonement, but for a pattern for us to follow as well. By that pattern the lives of his followers should be spent. I. N. Dorchester.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending The Restitution to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trust worthy.

Poetry.

Only Wait.

When the spirit, worn and weary,
'Neath its daily load of care,
Finds the pathway long and dreary,
And the burden hard to bear;
Tired with hoping, faint with fearing,
Sighs to reach the golden gate,
Then in accents soft and cheering,
Patience whispers "only wait;"
For a brighter day is dawning,
Joy awaits us in the morning—
In the beauty of the morning—
"Only wait."

Oh, sad hearts, whose soundless sorrow
Dares not let a murmur fall,
Only wait and trust the morrow—
God's great love is over all.
Only wait, oh, wounded spirit,
By the cross of life weighed down;
Thou shalt surely earth inherit—
Bear the cross and win the crown;
For a brighter day is dawning,
Joy awaits us in the morning—
In the beauty of the morning—
"Only wait."

How Long?

"Behold, I make all things new." Rev. xxi. 5.
Be they still fewer —these slow trending years—
How long must we still bear their cold delays?
Struck after struck the glowing dawn presages;
And yet it breaks not,—the expected day!

Each tossing year, with prophet-lip hath spoken,
"Prepare your praises, earth, awake and sing!"
And yet you dome of blue remains unbroken;
No tidings yet of the descending King!

Darkness still darkens; nearer now nearer
The lightenings gleam; the sea's scorched billows moan;
And the sere leaf of earth is growing sere;
Creation droops, and heaves in bitter groan.

O storm and earthquake, wind and warring thunder,
Your hour is coming,—one wild outburst more,—
One other day of war, and wreck, and plunder,—
And then your desolating reign is o'er.

These plains are not your battle-field forever;
That glassy deep was never made for you;
These mountains were not made for you to shiver;
These buds are not for your rude hands to strew.

Flee and give back to earth its verdant gladness,
The early freshness of its unsoiled dew;
Take hence your sackcloth, with its stormy sadness;
And let these wrinkled skies their youth renew.

Give back that day of days, the seventh and fairest,
When, like a gem new set, earth flung afar
Her glory, of creation's gems the rarest,
Sparkling in beauty to each kindred star.

Come back, thou holy love, so rudely banished,
When evil came, and hate, and fear, and wrong;
Return, thou joyous light, so quickly vanished;
Revive, thou life that death has quenched so long!

Re-fix, re-knit the chain so harshly broken,
That bound this lower orb to yon bright heaven;
Hang out on high the ever-golden token,
That tells of earth renewed and man forgiven.

Withdraw the veil that has for ages hidden
That upper kingdom from this nether sphere;
Renew the fellowship so long forbidden;
O God, thyself take up thy dwelling here!

Wisdom of Selrach.

CHAPTER 37 (33 APOCRYPHA).

1. Any friend will say, I also am his friend; but there is a friend who is only a friend in name.

2. Is it not a sorrow unto death for one when a comrade and friend is turned to enmity?

3. O wicked inordinate desire whence thou mayest become so involved as to cover the dry earth with deception.

4. A friend's comrade will enjoy himself with rejoicing and in a time of tribulation will be away off.

5. A comrade may suffer pain along with a friend for his stomach's sake; in the presence of war though he will take a shield.

6. Do not ignore a friend with thy soul, and do not be unmindful of him with thy utilities.

7. Any fellow-counselor exalteth counsel, but there is one who giveth fellow-counsel for himself.

8. Guard thy soul against a fellow-counselor, and know beforehand what his need is. Yea, for he will counsel for himself never to cast a lot for thee, and to say to thee thy way is good, and he will stand over opposite to see what will happen to thee.

10. Do not counsel with one who looketh askance at thee, and from those who envy thee hide counsel.

11. Nor with a woman concerning her rival, nor with a comrade concerning war; nor with a merchant concerning exchange and a market-man concerning a price; nor with an evil-eyed man concerning gratitude and an unmerciful man concerning benevolence; nor with a sluggard concerning any work and a hireling at his fireside concerning a work to be finished, nor with a lazy domestic concerning much employment; do not give heed to these concerning any fellow-counsel.

12. But rather be constantly with a truly reverent man whom thou knowest well is watching to keep commandments, and who in his soul is according to thy soul, and if thou be smitten he will sorrow along with thee.

13. And stand by heart-counsel, for there is nothing more reliable than it for thee.

14. For a man's soul at times is wont to announce more than seven spies seated in a high place to spy.

15. And in addition to all these things beseech a Most High to make thy way straight in truth.

16. A beginning of any work is a word, and before any doing counsel.

17. Evidence of a change of heart.

18. Four portions arise, good and bad, life and death, and that which lordeth it over them constantly is a tongue.

19. There is a man who is subtile and a teacher of many, and to his own soul he is of no use.

20. There is one who expresseth wisdom in words who is hateful, he will be behindhand at every turning.

21. For grace hath not been given him from the Lord, because he hath been deprived of all true wisdom.

22. There is a man who is wise for his own soul, and the fruits of his understanding will be reliable in his mouth.

23. A wise man will chasten his own laity, and the fruits of his understanding will be reliable.

24. A wise man will have been filled with blessings and all who see him will ascribe him blessed-happy.

25. A man's life is in a number of days, and the days of Israel are unnumbered.

26. The wise man will inherit faith in his laity and his name will live forever.

27. O child, in thy life time try thy soul and see what wicked thing there is in it, and do not yield to it.

28. For all things are not profitable for all people, and no soul proveth satisfactory in every way.

29. Do not be insatiate in the use of any enjoyment, and do not pour thyself out on inordinate desires.

30. For in the use of many kinds of food there will be resultant pain, and greediness draweth nigh to cholera.

31. Many have come to their end because of their greediness; and the one who heedeth will add to his life.

COMMENT.

The ethics of this chapter are just as staple now as when written or uttered. No more sanitary advice could be given a young person now in forming friendships and choosing fellow-counselors. One's character can be very correctly read by the company one keeps and the comrades he chooses. Even the love of God is only the highest kind of friendship, and "There is a Friend who sticketh closar than a brother." Habraam is known to this day among the Arabs as "The Friend of God." What is said here too of curbing all our inordinate desires especially appetite and lust, as conducive to long life and blessed-happiness cannot be emphasized too much or too often. To think right, feel right and do right is "the summum bonum" of life whether here or hereafter.

CHAS. GARDNER.

Parable of the Leaven.

Matt. xiii. 33, "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened." I am aware that a great many good people apply the leaven to the pure gospel of Christ, expecting it to convert the world of sinners, and bring in the reign of peace, and everlasting righteousness; but the gospel speaks differently. 2 Tim. iii. 13, "But evil men and seducers shall wax worse and worse, deceiving, and being deceived." It is plain from this, that the leaven could not refer to the gospel, for the gospel will utterly fail to accomplish that which the leaven is to do, for all the meal was to be leavened. Christ says, Luke xviii. 8, "Nevertheless, when the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" Only a small part of the world for Christ. Then it certainly must be an emblem of sin. Christ says, "Beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, which is hypocrisy." The woman took the leaven, and hid it in three measures of meal. Why was she so sly as to hide it, if there was good in it? Luke xi. 33, "No man when he hath lighted a candle putteth it in a secret place, neither under a bushel." But the woman secreted the leaven, she put it out of sight. A woman in prophecy is a symbol of the church. Rev. xii. 1, There we find the woman clothed with the sun, and the moon under her feet, and upon her head, a crown of twelve stars. Right here in this symbol, we have the church in purity. Her first introduction into the world is in the gleaming rays of the sunlight of heaven, with the moon under her feet. The Jewish dispensation, which shone with a borrowed light. And her head decked with a crown of twelve stars, representing the twelve apostles, the true embassadors of Christ. 5 v., "And she brought forth a man child, who was to rule all nations with a rod of iron; and her child was caught up unto God, and to his throne." Now the question is, who is the man child? It could not be Christ, for that would make him older than his mother. Again it could not be Constantine for he killed his mother. Then I would invite you to the 17th verse, for there we find the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God. These the dragon went to make war with, and right here in the remnant seed, we have the man child or seed of the woman; her own offspring, which was to rule all nations with a rod of iron. Rev. ii. 26-27. Then we learn from Rev. xii. 6, that the woman fled into the wilderness, where she hath a place prepared of God. Now come, let us go down into the wilderness, and learn more about the woman. A lewd woman in prophecy is the sign of an apostate church. Rev. xvii. There is the same woman that gave birth to the man child, she has become a harlot, and full of abominations; drunken with the blood of saints, and with the blood of the martyrs of Jesus; and when I saw, I wondered with great admiration, and all sensible people still wonder. And yet the leavening process is to go on, clear down to the end. The woman inserted the leaven away back there, when there were no impurities in the church, but in an evil hour she began to court heathendom, and copied after their corrupt system, and inserted many of their vices, and evil practices into her own bosom; but the remnant seed, the man child, kept the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ. This language concerning the woman and the man child is highly figurative. The man child symbolizes the true and faithful; who were conceived and carried by the mother church, and as the leaven had been hidden in the meal, (the mother church), it began to leaven the whole lump by the impurities that had been hidden there; and now that she might go on in her downward course unmolested, she craves to be delivered of the man child, the remnant seed, for they had the testimony of Jesus Christ, and she did not care to be annoyed by hearing the true gospel any more. She was pained to be delivered; she had no more use for the man child; for her morals had been greatly corrupted by the leaven. The corrupting influences and false doctrines of the church of Rome have entered into the very heart of the church. The leaven was hidden inside of the meal. The energizing spirit of the apostate church is silently working its inroads into the innermost sanctuary of the souls of men, infusing the poisonous venom, that she herself stole from the altars of the heathen gods; which the God of heaven himself condemned in the highest terms. But the corrupt doctrines and practices that were hidden in the church have worked wonders from within. It has entered into the creeds and confessions of men. It is poisoning the minds of the youth of our land. Our periodicals and literature of the day are silently instructing the world to bow the knee to Baal. If the source of a fountain is bitter, the fountain itself will also be bitter. Then if a church draws its inspiration from the leaven of heathen altars, then her inspiration is the energizing spirit of heathendom. This seems to be about the condition of the apostate church and her harlot daughters when the Lord comes.

The Lord photographed the apostate church and her daughters from heaven's own gallery; and John the Revelator, hung them up in A. D. 96, in the gallery of Revelation for all time to come, so that all men who perchance, may pass that way, might see her as she was, as she is, and as she will be, when the leaven has completed its work. Her bloody record will then have been closed, when her own features reflect her true likeness; when they both meet in one, the likeness is then complete and true to name. Then is the time the kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened. You see her own profile is an index of the time of the kingdom. The word "till" is an adverb of time, and it holds the right of way, till the whole is leavened, and then the kingdom is likened unto leaven. As the kingdom finds the world, such will be the likeness.

The Bereans Column.

[Under this heading the society of "Bereans" of Illinois, will supply the copy, and endeavor to fill the space once a month.]

OUR HOPE.

All members of the Church of God have a hope within ourselves by which we are waiting and expecting the fulfilment of God's promises. We get this hope by searching the Scriptures. Hope takes hold of the future. "For we are saved by hope; but hope that is seen is not hope; for what a man seeth, why doth he yet hope for? But if we hope for that we see not, then do we with patience wait for it." Rom. viii. 24-25.

Paul says in Acts xxiii. 6, "I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee, of the hope and resurrection of the dead." Again in Acts xxiv. 15, "And have hope toward God which they themselves also allow that there shall be a resurrection of the dead, both of the just and unjust."

Paul again says in Titus i. 2, "In hope of eternal life, which God that cannot lie, promised before the world began." Now it is plain that the hope of eternal life is created by the hope of a resurrection; for without a resurrection from the dead or the change spoken of by Paul in 1 Cor. xv. 51-52, we can never see immortality and eternal life. For as in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." 1 Cor. xv. 22.

The Lord Jesus Christ is called our hope, everything centers in him. And now we can say, "Blessed be the God and the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, which according to his abundant mercy hath begotten us again unto a lively hope by the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead." 1 Pet. i. 3.

Best wishes to the Bereans. Your Sister in hope.

FLORA M. DORSEY.

Dear Bereans:

By request to hear from the isolated Bereans of Oklahoma I write this letter. Its not much we can say for our own work, as it does not reach outside of our homes. Only to some we hand literature and ask them to read for themselves. But as words of encouragement, we think the Berean work a grand effort and realize what good could come if we were situated to have regular meetings, and only wish we ourselves could have had such light in childhood days. Thus enabling us to do more for our own. Its a sad mistake to neglect Bible study in a home. Teach our children while they are young and it never leaves them. Its a help to study in our homes and to be remembered by kind letters from you Bereans, for by this means you pick up the scattered ones and carry us along and make us realize while we are deprived of the privilege of meeting with you, that you remember us, and we take courage and do our tasks with a more thankful heart; and our daily trials seem lighter as we journey on in this world of sin and disappointment. We also enjoy the Berean column in THE RESTITUTION.

An isolated Sister.

MITTIE CHANDLER.

Dear Bereans:

It has been over a year since I have been permitted to attend the Berean meetings. Where I live I miss the Bereans very much. I have found no Bereans here yet, but I am not discouraged for he says, "Fear not for I am with you even unto the end of the world." If we believe in him and trust him, he will save us.

A true Berean.

ROSIE SHANK.

To the Bereans greeting:

OUR HOPE.

I have set the Lord always before me, because he is at my right hand I shall not be moved, therefore my heart is glad and I shall rejoice for I shall rest in hope, or I shall dwell confidently in that hope. What hope? Hope of being justified by his grace and heirs of eternal life. Apostle Paul said for the hope of Israel he was bound, the hope of promise made of God to our fathers, this hope of a Savior, because of obedience Abraham received the promise, "In thee shall all nations be blessed." So we must be obedient to our heavenly Father that we may be partakers in that hope of promise of a resurrection from the dead through our Lord Jesus Christ. The Lord is my portion, therefore will I hope in him, whosoever seeketh the Lord and trust in him find he is good. So we are told it is good to hope and with patience wait for the salvation of the Lord. What is hope? It is something we do not yet possess, because we would not hope or wish for what we already have, but if we wish or hope for what we do not yet possess, then we will wait with patience for it, and do what is required that we may obtain the promise before us even life eternal. Brethren, let us hold fast the profession of our faith without wavering, for he is faithful that promised. So we are told to be sober, putting on the breastplate of righteousness, faith and love, and for a helmet the hope of salvation, being steadfast, unmovable, always abounding in love in those things whereby we are called. So we are assured that God, the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, will keep us through grace in every good word or work. Why should we give a reason for our hope? Because we are required to do so. Peter says, Be always ready to give an answer to any one who asketh of you a reason for that is in you, with meekness and reverence. The Psalmist says, I will speak of testimonies before kings and will not be ashamed. Christ exhorts his apostles that they would have to testify for him before governors and kings, but he did not send them without comfort, for he assured them of inspiration at such times. And so we, if really true Christians can find an answer in the Word of God, stored away in our hearts, against such times. Now unto him who is able to keep you from falling, and to present you faultless before the presence of his glory with exceeding joy. To the only wise God our Savior, be glory and majesty, dominion and power, both now and ever. Amen.

Submitted in love by your Sister in Christ.

Obituary.

Died at his home in the township of Palmyra, Lenawee Co., Mich., on the evening of May 14, 1904, of heart trouble, Horatio P. Woodard in the sixty-fifth year of his age. The community as well as the writer was greatly startled on the morning of the 15th inst by the telephone message which said, "Horatio Woodard was found dead in his bed this morning." We at once went to the home of the deceased and found the sad news only too true. Bro. Woodard had a very severe attack of la grippe during the month of February last, which left him in a very much weakened condition but from which no serious results were anticipated till within a very few days of his death, when the doctor was called in council, and who also thought there was no cause for alarm on account of immediate danger, although the trouble was of sufficient magnitude to readily locate the disease. To say that the community was "startled" but feebly expresses the condition. But what shall we say of the dear companion who on arising and robing herself thought to gently awaken her husband, but on turning to the bed where he lay to find his sleep was the "sleep of death." There within a few feet of her bed he had lain in death, she knew not how long; for by the appearance of the body he must have died in the early part of the night. Sister Woodard has the sympathy of all. But her joy now is her husband "shall rise again." I think it was eight years ago this coming fall that under the teaching of Bro. B. W. Woodward and his wife in a series of meetings at Ralsio, Michigan, Bro. Woodard was brought to see the light of truth and made the "good confession," and if my memory serves me right, he with fifteen others became obedient to the truth, and were by the writer baptized into the all saving name of Jesus the Christ. Since that time he has been an active, earnest worker in the church. Not so much in words, for he was not gifted in that way. But was found always ready to contribute of his worldly means for the furtherance of the cause of the Master. Truly he will be missed in the home, in the neighborhood and in the church. "I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem thee from death; O death, I will be thy plagues. O grave I will be thy destruction, and repentance shall be hid from mine eyes," was the comforting thought presented to the large congregation. Like the good "man of Us" his "flesh shall rest in hope," till God shall "call." Interment in the Palmyra cemetery.

L. C. CHASE.

Miss Lucy Ann Upham was born in the State of Massachusetts, July 6, 1820. She was married to Franklin I. North, in 1885, and soon after settled in Michigan, which State was their home until death, which came to the husband about fourteen years ago, since which time Sister North has found a welcome home with her daughter Mrs. Minnie Roberts of Jackson, Mich., where she died April 7, 1904. Brother and Sister North were first converted to the Disciple faith and taught by Alexander Campbell, but subsequently having learned the "good news" of the "coming and kingdom of the Christ" they gladly embraced and became obedient to the same, ever after exemplifying that faith by well ordered lives. With our dear sister the hope seemed to grow brighter as the years passed by; and when the end came, she passed away in the triumphs of a living faith. She was buried from the home of her niece Mrs. Alice Taylor of Rome Center, Mich. The writer presented to a congregation the words of hope from the cheering text, "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." We then laid her to rest beside the deceased companion to wait the time when "the earth shall cast out the dead."

L. C. CHASE.

Mrs. Malinda Upham was born in the State of Massachusetts, March 27, 1817. She was married to Warren Norton, Feb. 4, 1836. They came almost immediately to Michigan, settling in Burr Oak, coming later to Lenawee Co., where she died at the home of her daughter Mrs. Geo. Taylor of Rome Center, Jan. 26, 1904. As it was related to the writer she was converted to the gospel by Eld. Chase Sr., long before the memory of the oldest child. She lived a conscientious Christian life ever after, cheerfully taking up the daily burdens that came to her, bearing the same with fortitude till death came. Knowing that death must soon come to her and living as she did quite a distance from the association of her own brethren in "the faith," she had requested the writer only a few weeks before her death that when the time came he should speak the words of comfort and tell of her "hope in Christ Jesus" to the friends and neighbors. But through a great mistake in the repeating of a telephone message nothing was known to us of her death until after she was buried, consequently the services of Rev. Fred Corbett of Adrian were asked and who kindly and feelingly spoke to the friends and neighbors of the immeasurable value of a good life. Those left behind have the heartfelt sympathy of all their friends as also they have the satisfaction of knowing that she had every care and attention that loving daughters could give.

Minnie May (Ganzel) Stroh was born at Grand Detour, Illinois, July 3, 1868. Died at her home in Oregon, Illinois, May 16, 1904. Age 35 years 10 mo. 13 days.

Her mother dying when Minnie was but three years old, she was adopted into the family of Augustus Ganzel, making her home at Forreston, Illinois.

United in marriage to Henry S. Stroh at Forreston, Dec. 4, 1887. To this union four children were born, three of whom survive—Neva, Glenn, and Vera.

Together with her husband, she united with the Church of God at Oregon, Illinois, professing obedience by baptism, June 17, 1902. She has been faithful to every duty, by virtue of which she has endeared herself to us all as a body, and today we mourn as those who have indeed lost a true sister. We shall miss her from our assembly together. She sweetly sleeps. May God give comfort to the bereaved husband and children in the hour of affliction. Brethren pray for the family thus circumstanced and for us, the brothers and Sisters of Oregon that we may be faithful to every duty lovingly imposed by a loving Father to the end we may meet her and join her in that heavenly song when that great day comes.

Spiritual Feeling.

Many are afraid of religious feeling, because it has sometimes run to excess and produced fanaticism. But there is no more reason why we should fear religious feeling than physical sensation. Where there is sensation there is life. Feeling is a sign of life. Feeling is power. Feeling is to the soul what fire is to the engine. It is the fire under the boiler that makes the engine go, and not the machinery alone. It is the fire in the heart that moves men. One may have a mind well stored with most useful knowledge, but so long as he has no feeling, he will make little use of his knowledge. Spiritual feeling sets men about doing good. We must trample under foot that enthusiastic doctrine, that we are not to do good unless our hearts are free to it; but it is far easier to do good, and we shall do far more good, if our hearts are free to it.—Christian Advocate.

Please do not forget our financial needs.

Announcement.

The third Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God in Indiana will convene at the Antioch church at 10:00 o'clock A.M., Friday, June 10, and continue over the following Sunday. The brethren and sisters who have attended the June Meeting at Antioch in former years know the character of this gathering, and scarcely need a special invitation to attend the meeting this year. Many times have God's children met at Antioch and taken with them new spiritual impulses, and there is every reason to anticipate a time of refreshing this year. Let the brethren and sisters for a few days lay aside the cares of this age, and lay up treasure for the age to come. Let the meeting be characterized by deep earnestness and joyful fellowship in the hope of the life to come. Those coming by railroad will come to Plymouth or Argos, where they will be met at trains and conveyed to the place of meeting.

Please send word by postal one week before meeting to Bro. A. R. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind., or T. O. Taber, Argos, Ind., on what day and train you expect to arrive.

A. H. ZILMER, Pres.
LYDIA RAILSBACK, Sec.

The Northwest Conference will convene Friday evening June 17th and hold over the following Monday at Lake Shore, Wash. Lake Shore is about four miles from Vancouver, Wash. Any one wishing conveyance to Lake Shore will correspond with P. G. Wolf of Vancouver. Brethren from a distance will stop at River View hotel right by the ferry landing and wait for the brethren from Lake Shore. All are invited to come and have one more meeting that will be a feast long to be remembered. Another Conference year has almost passed and gone, have we spent our time well or have we been idle in the Master's vineyard? All cannot go out in the world to preach, but we all can live a good square Christian life doing good to all around us. By order of the executive committee.

MRS. ALMIRA M. BROOKS.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Michigan will commence (D. V.) at Dutton, Kent County, Michigan, Thursday evening, June 2, 1904, and continue over the following Sunday. Another year has nearly rolled around since the annual meeting of the Michigan Conference was held. Once again the invitation comes from the brothers and sisters of the Church of God at Dutton to have the meeting there. Do we stop and think what it means for the brethren to entertain the Conference? It means a good deal of thought and work, but they are willing to bear the expense and work for the cause of truth. The brethren and sisters of Michigan are urged to make a special effort to be present at this Annual Conference. Arrangements will be made to accommodate all who may come. All will be made welcome. Let us come with the one thought to further the cause of Christ. Not all together to get good, but determined to give as much as we receive, then as is already predicted we will have a good meeting. Let each church send one or more delegates with report of their standing during the past year. A programme will appear later. Dutton is on M. C. R. R. ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids.

EMMA JACKMAN, Sec.

The 17th Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will be held at Waterloo, beginning Aug. 20. Programme, etc., will appear later.

For sleeping car reservation and other information as to additional train service, etc., apply to W. E. Smith, agent at Plymouth, or C. C. Trueb, T. P. A., Logansport, Ind. —June 25

We need what is due us on subscriptions and trust all who know themselves to be in arrears will remember us. We appreciate the favor

To the Romans of Illinois:

At the quarterly meeting held with the Antioch church on Saturday evening, May 7, it was unanimously decided to hold a Bible school this year just preceding the annual conference as last year. So much did the Board of Management desire it that they voted ten dollars support toward paying the grocery bill for the same. The school will be held beginning on Monday, August 15, 1904. The work will proceed much on the same plan as last year except that the daily sessions will consist of two periods of an hour and a half each instead of two hours each. Many have already signified their intention of attending.

Young people cannot estimate the value of such a training until they have had it. For further particulars write me. Suffice it to say that about the only expense—at least the chief item of expense—will be the expense of transportation. Please write and say that you are coming.

S. J. LINDSAY, Oregon, Ill.

PLEASE do not forget that we need all that is due on subscription at this time.

To the Ladies of the Tithing Society in Michigan.

A good work has been done in the past by the sisters in helping to carry the burdens in different directions; and this is no time to lay the burden down, for there is so much need of means to further the gospel work. Try to be present at the meeting sisters, but if that is impossible, the postman will be prompt in delivering your offering in time for Conference, if all do their part in sending either to Emma Jackman, or M. A. Woodward, Dutton, Michigan.

Winona Assembly.

With the opening of the season at Winona Lake, May 16th, the sale of excursion tickets over the Pennsylvania Lines to that attractive resort in Northern Indiana will begin. Every summer passed there by thousands has only increased their desire to return. On the golf links, the tennis courts, the baseball or cricket grounds, the croquet field, or boating on the lake, fishing, camping, swimming, driving, or attending recitals and lectures by world-famed personages in the auditorium—whatever the diversion may be, the associations are of that congenial sort conferred by good society. This resort is noted as the site of Winona Assembly and Summer School, attracting teachers and students from educational institutions of this and other countries.

Fifteen-day and season excursion tickets will be sold from stations of the Pennsylvania Lines during the summer. For information about fares and time of trains, apply to local ticket agents, or to F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa. Illustrated literature describing attractions of Winona Lake may be had for the asking. Address S. C. Dickey, Secretary and General Manager, Winona Lake, Ind., who will give particulars regarding camping facilities, hotel accomodations, program of addresses by noted speakers and all other details.—Sept. 30.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Sacred Times and Seasons Observed by the Jews.

In order to perpetuate the memory of the numerous wonders God had wrought in favor of his people, Moses, by the divine command, instituted various festivals, which they were obliged to observe; these sacred seasons were either weekly, monthly or annual or recurred after a certain number of years.

Every seventh day was appropriated to sacred repose, and called the Sabbath; although this name is in some passages given to other festivals, as in Lev. xxv. 4, and sometimes to denote a week. It was originally instituted to preserve the memory of the creation of the world. Whether it continued to be observed by the Israelites as a day of rest and holy convocation during their residence in Egypt, is a question concerning which learned men differ. When, however, God gave them rest in the land of Canaan, he gave them his Sabbaths to be steadily kept, and its observance was specially enjoined on the Israelites in Deut. v. because they were the redeemed people of God, and they were to make the Sabbath day a peculiar recognition of their deliverance from bondage.

In the observance of the Sabbath, the following circumstances were enjoined by divine command: 1, This day was to be held sacred as a day of worship, in memory of the creation of the world by Jehovah, and also of the deliverance of the Jews from Egyptian bondage, as well as a day of repose both for man and beast, that they might be refreshed, and not have their bodily strength exhausted by uninterrupted labor; hence the celebration of the Sabbath was the making of a weekly profession that they received and revered the Creator of heaven and earth, and was closely connected with the fundamental principle of the Mosaic law, whose object was to keep the people from idolatry, and to maintain the worship of the one true God; and hence the punishment of death was denounced against the wilful profanation of this solemnity. 2, On this day they were to most religiously abstain from all manner of work. It was, therefore, unlawful to gather manna, to light a fire for culinary purposes, and to sow or reap. To these enactments the Jewish doctors added a variety of other regulations for which there is not the slightest foundation in the law of Moses. Thus it was formerly accounted unlawful to repel force by force on the Sabbath day; and how much its observance was strained by the traditions of the elders in the time of our Lord, is sufficiently manifest. Hence, we find it was unlawful to pluck ears of corn to satisfy the cravings of nature, because that was a species of reaping. We learn from the Talmudical writers that it was unlawful to use oil medicinally, though they allowed it as a luxury; the anointing of the body with fragrant oils being then, in the East, one of their highest enjoyments. It was a traditional rule of the ancient Jewish doctors "that whatever could possibly be done on the day before, or might be defered until the following day ought not to drive out the Sabbath;" an excellent maxim when rightly understood, but when applied to cases of infirmity or sickness, they manifestly showed that they did not comprehend the meaning of the divine declaration—I will have mercy and not sacrifice. In chronic diseases, therefore, of which description were those cured by Jesus Christ on the Sabbath day, they conceived that the person who had so long struggled with them might very well bear them a day longer, rather than prepare medicines or in any way attempt to be cured on that day. The knowledge of this circumstance will greatly illustrate the conduct of our Lord in healing the sick on the Sabbath day, and particularly the man who had been blind.

This rule above stated was made before he began to teach, and he gladly availed himself of the first opportunity to refute their erroneous notions, and expose their gross prevarication in interpreting many of the laws concerning the Sabbath. Further, seeing it was prohibited putting fasting spittle upon or into the eye of a blind man on the Sabbath day, our Savior effected a cure by using both clay and spittle to show his divine authority in employing means to human reason the most improper, even on that sacred day, directly in opposition to the above rule; which was good and just in itself, but hypocritical, superstitious, and cruel when applied to the case of healing on the Sabbath. The services of the temple, however, might be performed, without profaning the Sabbath, such as preparing the sacrifices, and it was also lawful to perform circumcision on that day.

The Sabbath was to be devoted to cheerful rest, that not only the Israelites, but also strangers living with them, as well as their cattle, might be refreshed. Hence it is not improbable that they celebrated sacrificial or offering feasts, to which the poor were invited. In later times at least, we know from history, that the Jews purchased and prepared the best viands they could procure for the Sabbath day to do it honor; and then they actually had Sabbath feasts, to which they oven invited persons with whom they were acquainted.

The Sabbath commenced at sunset, and closed at the same time on the following day. Whatever was necessary was prepared on the latter part of the preceding day, hence the day preceding the Sabbath is in the New Testament termed the preparation.

We know not with certainty from the Mosaic writings what constituted the most ancient worship of the Israelites on the Sabbath day. It is, however, evident from the New Testament, that the celebration of this day consisted chiefly of the religious exercises which were then performed; though there is no injunction recorded, except, that a burnt offering of two lambs should on that day be added to the morning and evening sacrifices, and that the shew bread should be changed. In the synagogues the sacred writings were read and expounded, and to which was sometimes added a discourse or sermon by some doctor or eminent teacher. Prayer also appears to have formed a part of their sacred worship in the synagogue and especially in the temple.

II. The Jewish months being lunar were originally calculated from the first appearance of the moon, on which the feast of the new moon, or the beginning of the month (as the Hebrews termed it) was celebrated. It seems to have been in use long before the time of Moses, who by the divine command prescribed what ceremonies were then to be observed. It was proclaimed by the sound of trumpets and several additional sacrifices were offered.

III. Besides the Sabbath Moses instituted three annual festivals, viz: the Passover, the feast of Pentecost and the feast of Tabernacles; these which were usually denominated the great festivals, were distinguished from the Sabbath and indeed from all other holy days, by the circumstance of two of them lasting seven, and one for eight successive days; during which the Jews were bound to rejoice before the Lord for all their deliverances and mercies. All the males of the twelve tribes were bound to be present at these grand festivals, and for their encouragement to attend they were assured that no man should desire their land during their absence. In other words, that they should be secure from hostile invasion during their attendance on religious worship,—a manifest proof is this of the divine origin of their religion, as well as of the power and particular providence of God in working thrice every year an especial miracle for the protection of his people; for it is a well known fact, that the Jews constantly attended these ceremonies without any fear of danger, and that their most vigilant enemies never invaded or injured them during these sacred seasons. The design of these meetings was partly to unite the Jews among themselves, and teaching them to regard each other as brethren and fellow citizens, to promote mutual love and friendship. To this the Psalmist probably refers in Psalms cxxii. 3, 4, and it was partly that, as one church, they might make one congregation, join in solemn worship together, and renew their oath of allegiance to the one true God, and to their excellent constitution and religion.

So large a concourse of people would give the greater solemnity to these festivals; and as no Israelite was to present himself before the Lord without some offering, ample provisions were thus made for the support of the ministers of the sanctuary. On these occasions, although the men were required to attend, it does not appear that women were prevented from going if they chose, at least to the passover.

For greater security, however, against the attacks of robbers on the road, they used to travel in large companies, those who came from the same city, canton or district forming one company. They carried necessaries along with them and tents for their lodging at night. As the Jewish sanctuary and service contained in them a shadow of good things to come, and were typical of the Christian church, this prescribed concourse from all parts of the country might be intended to typify the gathering of the people to Christ and into his church, from all parts of the world under the Christian dispensation. Hence St. Paul, alluding to these general assemblies of the Israelites on the three grand feasts, says, "We are come to the general assembly and church of the first born."

It was not improbable that these annual meetings promoted the internal commerce of the Israelites, who were prohibited from carrying on traffic with foreigners; and lastly they had an important influence on the Jewish calendar, inasmuch as the year was arranged, so that the various festivals should fall in their respective month without interferring with the labors of the field.

The first and most eminent of these festivals was the Passover, instituted the night before the Israelites' departure from Egypt, for a perpetual memorial of their signal deliverance, and of the favor which God showed them in passing over and sparing their first born, when he slew the first-born of the Egyptians. This festival was also called the days of the unleavened bread because it was unlawful to eat any other bread during the seven days the feast lasted. The name was also given, by a metonymy, to the Lamb that was killed on the first day of this feast, whence the expression to eat the passover and to sacrifice the passover. Hence also St. Paul calls Jesus Christ our passover, that is our true paschal lamb. But the appellation passover, belongs more particularly to the second day of the feast, viz: the fifteenth day of the month Nisan. It was ordained to be celebrated on the anniversary of the deliverance of the Israelites. This was an indispensable rite to be observed by every Israelite, except in particular cases enumerated in Num. ix. 1-13 on pain of death and no uncircumcised person was allowed to partake of the passover. On this festive occasion, it was the custom at Jerusalem for the inhabitants to give the free use of their rooms and furniture to strangers at the passover. As the very interesting history of this most solemn of all the Jewish festivals is copiously related in the twelfth chapter of Exodus, it is unnecessary to give it here; but as various traditional observances were in after times added to the Mosaic precepts concerning this sacrifice, to which there are manifest allusions in the New Testament we will note as briefly as possible the subject under the following heads: 1, The time when it was to be kept; 2, The ceremonies with which it was to be celebrated, and 3, The mystical significance of these rites.

1, Of the time when it was to be kept. This festival commenced on the evening subsequent to the fourteenth day of the month Nisan, the first of the Jewish sacred or ecclesiastical year, with eating what was called the Paschal and it was to continue seven days or until the twenty-first. If any person were prevented from arriving at Jerusalem in time for the feast, either by any uncleanliness contracted by touching a dead body, or by the length of the journey, he was allowed to defer his celebration of the passover until the fourteenth day of the following month in the evening.

Sacrifices peculiar to this festival were to be offered every day during its continuance; but the first and last days were to be sanctified above all the rest, by abstaining from servile labor, and holding a sacred convocation.

2, Of the ceremonies with which the passover was to be celebrated. The Paschal lamb was to be a male, without blemish, of the first year, either from the sheep or the goats; it was to be taken from the flock four days before it was killed. One lamb was to be offered for each family, and if its numbers were too few to eat a whole lamb two families were to join together. Next followed the killing of the passover; before the exode of the Israelites from Egypt, this was done in their private dwellings; but after their settlement in Canaan it was ordered to be performed in the place which the Lord should choose to place his name there. This appears to have been at first wherever the ark was deposited and ultimately at Jerusalem in the courts of the temple.

The first passover was to be eaten standing, in the posture of travelers who had no time to lose; and with unleavened bread and bitter herbs, and no bone of it was to be broken. After they were settled in the Land of Canaan, they no longer ate it standing, but the guests reclined on their left arms upon couches placed around the table.

This posture was an emblem of that rest and freedom which God had granted to the children of Israel by bringing them out of Egypt. The guests being placed around the table, they mingled a cup of wine with water, over which the master of the family gave thanks and then drank of it. The thanksgiving for the wine was to this effect, "Blessed be thou, O Lord, who hast created the fruit of the vine" and for the day as follows—"Blessed be thou for this good day, and for this holy convocation, which thou hast given us for joy and rejoicing." "Blessed be thou, O Lord, who has sanctified Israel and the times!" Of these cups of wine they drank four in the course of the ordinance. Then they washed their hands, after which the table was furnished with the paschal lamb and unleavened bread. The person presiding then took a small piece of salad, and having blessed God for the fruit of the ground he ate it as also did the other guests; after which all the dishes were removed from the table, that the children might inquire and be instructed as to the nature of the feast. The text on which they generally discoursed was Deut. xxvi. 5-11. In like manner our Savior makes use of the sacrament of the Lord's supper to declare the great mercy of God in our redemption; for it shows forth the Lord's death till he come to judge the world.

3. With regard to the mystical significance of the the passover we know generally from St. Paul who calls Jesus Christ our passover, that this Jewish sacrament had a typical reference to him; but concerning the points of resemblance between the type and anti-type learned men are not agreed. The person of Christ was typified by the Paschal Lamb; the animal sacrifice at the passover was to be a lamb without blemish. Christ is styled the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world, a Lamb without blemish and without spot. The sufferings and death of Christ were also typified by the Paschal Lamb in various particulars. Several of the fruits of Christ's death were remarkably typified by the sacrifice of the Paschal Lamb. Such are protection and salvation by his blood, of which the sprinkling of the door posts with the blood of the lamb, and safety which the Israelites by that means enjoyed from the plague that spread through all the families of the Egyptians was a designed and illustrious emblem. In allusion to this type, the blood of Christ is called the blood of sprinkling. Immediately upon the Israelites eating the first passover, they were delivered from their Egyptian slavery, and restored to full liberty, of which they had been deprived for many years; and such is the fruit of the death of Christ, in a spiritual and much nobler sense, to all that believe in him; for he hath thereby "obtained eternal redemption for us" and brought us into the glorious liberty of the children of God.

The manner in which we are to be made partakers of the blessed fruits of the sacrifice of Christ were also represented by lively emblems in the Passover.

The second of the three great Jewish festivals was the Feast of Pentecost which is called by various names in the sacred writings; as the feast of weeks because it was celebrated seven weeks or a week of weeks after the first day of unleavened bread; the feast of harvest and also the day of first fruits because on this day the Jews offered thanksgivings to God for the bounties of harvest, and presented to him the first fruits of the wheat harvest, in bread baked of the new corn. On this day was commemorated the giving of the law on Mount Sinai. This festival had a typical reference to the miraculous effusion of the Holy Spirit upon the apostles and first-fruits of the Christian church on the day of Pentecost on the fiftieth day after the resurrection of Jesus Christ.

The Feast of Tabernacles continued for a week. It was instituted to commemorate the dwelling of the Israelites in tents while they wandered in the desert. Hence it is called by St. John the feast of tents. It is likewise termed the feast of the ingatherings. The design of this feast was to return thanks to God for the fruits of the vine, as well as of other trees, which were gathered about this time, and also to implore his blessing upon those of the ensuing year. No festival was celebrated with greater rejoicing than this, which Josephus calls a most holy and most eminent feast. Dancing, music and feasting were the accompaniments of this festival, together with such brilliant illuminations as lighted the whole city of Jerusalem. These rejoicings are supposed to have taken place in the court of women, in order that they might be partakers in the general hilarity. In every seventh year the law of Moses was also read in public, in the presence of all the people.

To the three grand annual feasts already described Moses added two others, which were celebrated with great solemnity, though the presence of every male Israelite was not absolutely required. The first of these was the Feast of the Trumpets, and was held on the first and second days of the month Tisri, which was the commencement of the civil year of the Hebrews; this feast derived its name from the blowing of trumpets in the temple with more than usual solemnity. On this festival day they abstained from all labor, and offered particular sacrifices to God, which are described in Num. xxix. 1-6.

The other feast alluded to was the Feast or Fast of Expiation, or Day of Atonement; which day the Jews observed as a most strict fast, abstaining from all servile work, taking no food and afflicting their souls. Of all the sacrifices ordained by the Mosaic law, the sacrifice of the atonement was the most solemn and important; it was offered on the tenth day of the month Tisri, by the high priest alone, for the sins of the whole nation. On this day only, in the course of the year, was the high priest permitted to enter the sanctuary, and not even then without due preparation under pain of death; all others being excluded from the tabernacle during the whole ceremony.

Having given a very brief description of the chief annual festivals noticed in sacred writings we will briefly notice those extraordinary festivals which were celebrated after a certain number of years. The first of these was the Sabbatical year. For as the seventh day of the week was consecrated as a day of rest to man and beast, so this gave rest to the land, which during its continuance was to lay fallow, and the "Sabbath of the land," or its spontaneous produce was dedicated to charitable uses, to be enjoyed by the servants of the family, by the wayfaring stranger, and by the cattle.

This was also the year of release from personal slavery as well as the remission of debts. In order to guard against famine on this and the ensuing year, God was graciously pleased to promise a triple produce of the lands upon the sixth year, sufficient to supply the inhabitants till the fruits of the harvest sown in the eighth year were ripe. This was a singular institution, peculiar to a theocracy. And the breach of it was among the nation's sins that occasioned the captivity, that the land might enjoy her Sabbaths, of which she had been defrauded by the rebellion of the inhabitants.

The jubilee was a more solemn Sabbatical year, held every seventh Sabbatical year, that is at the end of every forty-ninth year or the fiftieth current year. The festival commenced on the tenth day of the month Tisri, in the evening of the day of atonement. All debts were to be cancelled; all slaves or captives were to be released. In this year all estates that had been sold reverted to their original proprietors, or to the families to which they originally belonged. This provision was made that no family should be totally ruined, and doomed to perpetual poverty; for the family estate could not be alienated for a longer period than fifty years. The reason and design of the jubilee was partly political and partly typical. It was political to prevent too great oppression of the poor, as well as their liability to perpetual slavery. By this means the rich were prevented from accummulating lands upon lands, and a kind of equality was preserved through all the families of Israel. Never were there any people so effectually secure of their liberty and property as the Israelites were; God not only engaging so to protect those individual blessings by his providence, that they should not be taken away from them by others, but providing, in a particular manner, by this law, that they should not be thrown away through their own folly; since the property, which every man or family had in their dividend of the land of Canaan, could not be sold or any way alienated for above half a century.

There was also a Typical design and use of the jubilee, which is pointed out by the prophet Isaiah, when he says, in reference to the Messiah, "The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because the Lord hath anointed me to preach good tidings unto the meek; he hath sent me to bind up the broken hearted, to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound, to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord." "Where the acceptable year of the Lord," when "liberty was proclaimed to the captives" and the opening of the prison to them that were bound, evidently refers to the jubilee, but in the prophetic sense, means the gospel state and dispensation, which proclaims spiritual liberty from the bondage of sin and Satan, and the liberty or returning to our own possessions, even the inheritance, to which, having incurred a forfeiture by sin, we had lost all right and claim.

That our Lord began his public ministry on a jubilee is evident from his declaration, "The Lord hath anointed me to preach the gospel to the poor; he hath sent me to heal the broken-hearted, to proclaim deliverance to the captives, and restoration of sight to the blind; to set at liberty the bruised; to proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord."

The Restitution.

THE RESTITUTION advocates the final "restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the Kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Plymouth, Indiana, June 1, 1904.

The article on our first page by Sister Butler was written for and read at the morning meeting of the Plymouth Church on Feb. 28, and is published by request.

This is the time of year when many are quite busy with work, but we trust those who have not yet renewed their subscriptions will take time to think that our bills must be met, and that we need what is due to continue our work.

Sister M. A. Woodward stopped at Plymouth last Friday evening, while on her way to Warren Co. and spoke for the friends who had gathered to greet her. She reports preparations for the Michigan Conference at Dutton, over next Sunday, and we trust they will not disappointed in the attendance.

The past week has witnessed some active work in the war. Kinchou, 32 miles north of Port Arthur, where the peninsula is but 2 miles wide, had to be taken, as there are no landing places between it and Port Arthur. The nature of the ground made it difficult to operate an army, and it was necessary to take the works at Kinchou and Nanshan Hill behind it by direct assault. The Japanese lost over 3000 men killed, and the Russians about 600. The Russians had to leave 68 guns, and 10 machine guns, besides many other things for the victors. It was a desperate battle, and shows that heights, protected by mines, artillery and all the devices known in modern warfare, can be taken by storm. This makes it necessary for the Russians to abandon Daluy and retreat to Port Arthur. Word comes that the first part of the Baltic fleet will sail for the far east on June 24. It is also given out that as soon as the Black Sea fleet is ready, that the Sultan will give consent for its passage through the Dardanelles. With the loss last week of the two Japanese war ships, this makes it imperative on the Japs to push the work of capturing Port Arthur, as after the arrival of these reinforcements to the Russian navy, it will be no longer possible to assist the army, or defend the transports. The Russians are also hurrying aid to Gen. Kouropatkin, hoping he can defeat the Japs now in Manchuria, and then go down the road to help save Port Arthur. The work is thus cut out for the next few weeks, and only time will tell how the plans will turn out.

The Literary Digest gives the following view of what is likely to occur in the near future if the affairs of the nations are not handled most carefully:

While certain organs in Europe, such as the Vienna Friedenthatt and the Rome Tribune, see some possibilities in the reactions of the Balkan crisis upon the crisis in the Far East, other newspapers express uneasiness on quite different grounds. Thus the London Spectator, and the Frankfurter Zeitung, to name two at random, consider that a genuine upheaval in Europe is likeliest in France or Spain. Spain, thinks the English weekly, is on the brink of a revolution as thoroughgoing as that which broke up the institutions of France, and this opinion has found expression in the London Times, and the Paris Action. But the situation in France is also causing anxiety, chiefly as the result of the clearage in the nation produced by the affairs of Russia. The enemies of the Republic, according to the Neue Freie Presse (Vienna), see, or think they see, their long-desired opportunity in the Russo-Japanese situation. The Gazette de France (Paris) has become the mouthpiece of an aggressive royalist group, while the Revue des Deux Mondes (Paris), has been attacking the Republic for months. * * * Much indignation has been caused by an article in the Deutsche Revue (Berlin), from the pen of General Freiherr Vonder Goltz, now in command of the First German Army Corps, in which he quotes approvingly from Von Moltke's dictum that perpetual peace is only a dream," and announces as his conviction that the "social question" will "not be solved without war." He predicts "war storms from all directions," and opines that "wherever one looks, inflamable material is at hand, that can easily take fire."

It is surely evident to all that we cannot well do business without means. It surely is likewise evident to those who have not yet renewed their subscription that we must be in need of what is due us. We dislike very much to mention this, and hope you will not compell us to repeat the hint.

At the Methodist General Conference at Los Angeles Cal., the restrictions regarding amusements were modified, and the following appeal was made:—

We look with deep concern on the great increase of amusements and on the general prevalence of harmful amusements, and lift up a solemn note of warning and entreaty, particularly against the strego ing, promiscuous dancing, and such games of chance as are frequently associated with gambling; all of which have been found to be antagonistic to vital piety, promotive of worldliness, and especially pernicious to youth . . . We deem it our bounden duty to summon the whole church to make a thoughtful and instructed conscience the test of amusements, and not to leave them to accident or taste or passion; and we affectionately advise and beseech every member of the church absolutely to avoid the taking such diversions as cannot be used in the name of the Lord Jesus.

According to a writer in World's Work the real struggle in the Far East is for the dominition of China, and thus sums up the situation:

The inherent conflict between Russia and Japan—the Russian policy requiring practical control on the Eastern Asiatic coast and the expansion of Japan requiring that she should be mistress there—would be serious enough if it involved only these two nations. But the danger is that it may at last involve all Europe as well. England, Germany and France all have important Asiatic interests, England in particular; and the whole world is interested in the future of China. This, indeed, is the great prize of war and of diplomacy. Dominance in this part of the world means ultimately dominance over China. The struggle thus involves the future of three nations—Japan, whether she shall have a great future; Russia, whether she shall become the great Asiatic power; and England, whether her control of India and her Asiatic trade shall remain secure. If a world-wide war be prevented it will be a distinct triumph of civilization; and if it come it will shake European civilization to its foundations, and plunge us at once into a definite stage of the great conflict which seems inevitable at some time between Russia and England. It is, therefore, an anxious time. The greatest visible, unsolved national problems of the future may be thrust at once upon the world.

Selections.

Our Prospective King and Kingdom.

"He hath given him a name that is above every name."

As we ponder over the national changes and the sensational movements in the human arena, led by the famous and renowned of earth, we fondly antedate the timely coming of the "Illustrious One," whose majesty shall eclipse all national prowess and glory.

This name so superior in merit and worth is not made prominent in the prominent in the "public journals," nor is his adequacy as a tried and loyal warrior noted in the catalogue of conquests, but his will be the ultimate, transcendent achievement that will lull all military storms and cause the common contestants to stand in awe of his glorious presence.

He is controlling the governments of earth in his exalted position, as in his career of humiliation he controlled the roaring elements in the lone and dismal night on Galilee. When the "sea and the waves shall be roaring, and men's hearts failing them for fear," his majesty will again appear amid the shock of the storm, and the trembling nations will hear when his voice of unlimited power shall again address his chosen toilers: "It is I; be not afraid."

Oh, name above every name, and power superior to all the combinations of human forces though skillfully trained and cultured, whose transition from the thorn-crowned warrior of earth to the celestial coronation, swaying all the elements of the natural world and the "armies of heaven" as well!

"He hath given him a name that is above every name, that at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, and every tongue confess that he is Lord to the glory of God the Father." Blessed are they whose names are enrolled among his warriors, and whose vigilant eyes can "discern the signs of the times," and can discriminate clearly between the "precious and the vile," who amid the clamor of earth and time are raising the ensign of the cross and proving their identity with their once "lowly," but now "exalted Lord." In the midst of national contests and blood and carnage, they are commanded to "lift up their heads, for their redemption draweth nigh."

The perils amid the darkness of the night are precursors of the fast approaching day. "The sea and the waves roaring" is symbolic of human commotions, the culminating paroxysms of sin in the polluted veins of humanity, when "the nations shall be angry," as they charge in the deadly fray. The close observer cannot fail to discern the "signs of the times," and if these thrilling events do not awaken the energies of the church to redeem her waning power, she will find her deplorable position at the "midnight cry," in the ranks of the foolish virgins."

I emphasize the thought that we are nearing the "reign of universal peace," notwithstanding the national hostilities and the wild acclamations of human warriors amid the din of war. "What I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch!"—G. D. Zollers, in Gospel Messenger.

Saved by Grace.

Salvation is a work of grace, in the heart, and saves from sin, transforming from darkness to light, and from the power of Satan unto God. Before one can come in possession of saving grace, there must be a yielding to God, a submitting of the the will to him and a disposition to straighten up the past life and to give him right of way in the future. Such a complete change is wrought in the heart, working out through the life, that truly "Old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."

To reach this condition requires far more than merely uniting with some church, and as is done in many so-called revivals, signing a card. It means to thoroughly repent in deep humiliation before God. He has promised if we humble ourselves he will lift us up—not in our own estimation or in the eyes of the worldly minded, but in himself, and in the joy of the Lord.

In these days men have lowered the standard of salvation to such an extent, that many have entirely lost sight of God's wonderful plan of redemption, and have substituted morality and church-member-ship; some are trusting in a set outward form, while they know almost nothing of real salvation that reaches both soul and body.

The Mormon says,—and others likewise,—that salvation is the work of a lifetime, when the word so plainly tells us, "By grace are ye saved through faith; and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God. Not of works, lest any man should boast. For we are his workmanship, created in Christ Jesus unto good works." Eph. ii: 8-10.

Oh, the joy that so many souls are missing because they are trying to be Christians without Christ, without his saving grace. It is his will that we walk in fellowship with him every day, knowing at all times that we are pleasing him. We may have realized his saving grace, been saved and sanctified in the past, but where are we today? Have we still that same love shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost? Do we know just now the blood of Christ is speaking for us? It is only as we keep in touch with God that we keep the witness to our salvation, and if we draw back on any line there will be a shadow between us and the dear Saviour's face. But if our hearts and motives are pure, and if we know the fellowship of the Spirit, we will also know very soon if there has been anything that has in any way cut off the flow of the Spirit life between God and us. If a soul allows an obstacle to remain, soon the light will fade. Nor will it stop there; but the saving grace and God's keeping power will be taken away, there will be no power to stand against sin; sin will come in, and the soul, though once in touch with God, will dwell in darkness.

It is blessed to keep in fellowship with the Father and the Son, to keep a clear path to glory; but it is also grand to know that God's plan of redemption is ever the same, and if a soul has by neglect or through temptation severed his connection with God, the promise is "If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness." Amen. Praise the Lord!

Bloody Wars of the Ancients.

In ancient time when men fought with battle-axes, swords and spears, and with bows and arrows, it was necessary that armies should come to very close quarters, in order to get within range. An open field was usually chosen, within which both armies lined up in mass form to oppose each other. Then men entered the fray like a lot of ravenous wolves. The battle was decided less by skill than by sheer brute force and the power of numbers. Defeat then meant annihiliation. There were no means for covering retreat. When the battle began to turn, the enemy was already at the heels of the vanquished, and in a position to cut them down without mercy, while yet frenzied with the fury of the fight. It was not infrequent then that half the numbers engaged were killed. One hundred thousand Persians fell in a day before Alexander. Hannibal slew at Cannae, 216 B. C., forty-eight thousand Romans out of sixty thousand. In the great battle in the Valley of the Marne, in October, 451 A. D., between the combined Romans and Goths, and the Huns under Attila, the allies slew the invading barbarians at the rate of one hundred thousand a day for three days. That was the bloodiest battle in history. That bloody job stands pre-eminent as an instance of justifiable homicide. It saved Europe from savagery, and rescued civilization.

It is estimated that Caesar's wars cost more than two million lives. His war bulletins did not report a long list of wounded, and a short list of slain. They were death lists—so many killed. The number of wounded was insignificant.

When firearms were introduced, tactics were changed, and armies were no longer hurled bodily upon each other, staking every thing upon the issue; but for a long time the firearms were primitive, and would not shoot very far, and the tactics were but a modification of the older and simpler methods of hand-to-hand fighting.—Hudson Maxim, in the May Woman's Home Companion.

Radium Christians.

One of the most interesting and far-reaching scientific discoveries made of late is that of radium, a metal which possesses the wonderful properties of emitting light and heat without appreciably diminishing its bulk of forces. How beautifully suggestive is this radium of the normal spiritual condition of the Christian! Any other light needs to be lighted and replenished. Any other fire needs to be fed.

This metal glows and radiates as if it had an infinite source of energy. It has been claimed that one gram of this substance could exert energy enough in time to lift the whole British navy to the top of Ben Nevis, and yet retain all of its initial force. We are reminded at once of that one perfect radium life nineteen centuries ago, that was continually giving off to others, and that yet grew greater and greater until it has come to dominate the hearts of one-third the human race, and to endure them with an energy that makes them the rulers, practically, of the other two-thirds.

A more recently suspected property of this radium is that in course of time it may communicate to other metals the properties that it possesses. What may be true of radium we know to be true of the Christian who is in vital touch with God. Radium Christians do not have to be continually lighted or energized by others. They are constantly giving off energy.

One radium Christian can do more than lift a great navy: like John Wesley, he can lift the whole world to a higher place. Radium Christians are as much a mystery to the world as radium is to scientists, but the fact of their existance has been so revolutionary as to compel the world to change its standards of morals, politics and business. If all Christians were spiritual radium, the miracle that through Paul was wrought in pagan Europe would be wrought in the whole world. Radium Christians would make a radiant earth.—Christian Endeavor World.

True Thoughts of God.

It is far more important to possess true thoughts of God than it is to be in possession of all knowledge that comes through observation and experience. Is it after all, such an impossible thing to have true conceptions of God? And yet our true conceptions, it must be admitted, come very short of actually and fully measuring God in his person and attributes.

The loving and tender thought of a little child toward God is a true and beautiful thought; so is the feeling of the same child toward those he at the fireside calls father and mother. The thought in both instances is immature and childish, but it is, as far as it goes, true. It does no violence to the character of heavenly Father or the earthly parents. But this true thought of the child will grow larger and more comprehensive as the years go by and its powers of conception are unfolded and disciplined; but it will be no more true than is that of the child in the nursery kneeling down by its cot and repeating the beautiful cares of infancy.

This is what is meant when it is said there is nothing in this world so important as that our thoughts of God be true thoughts: that is, such as do no violence to his loving and gracious and fatherly nature, and such as we can take with us in all the times to come.

The child which has mastered the alphabet or primer will always have need of its letters and its easy words, though in its maturity it may have become both scholarly and learned. The little lessons of God we have now mastered in this schoolhouse of time will always be helpful, if they are true to God.

And so the words written by the prophets descriptive of God's loving and watchful care and fatherhood as though they had been written today with all the light of the intervening years to shed radiance upon them. And this is so, for they are true -true yesterday, today, and forever. The truth about God changes not, though all things else change and pass away. —Methodist Recorder.

Worth Knowing.

"Dr. Jay W. Seaver for the past twenty-five years physical director of the Yale gymnasium, said the other day that he had observed that its high standing men at Yale do not smoke, and that the smokers of the college were of mediocre attainments or low standing.

"'This may be interpreted in two ways,' said Dr. Seaver. 'Either the use of tobacco has reduced mental activity or the kind of mind that permits its possessor to become addicted to a habit that is primarily offensive and deteriorating is the kind of mind that will be graded low in intellectual tests.

"'I have inquired of the men what return they get for the expenditure involved in smoking, and the almost universal reply is that they feel a social satisfaction from smoking. It gives a fellow something to do when he is with others; or, it is company for him when he is alone, is the almost universal reply.

"'A very rare reply is that smoking makes him feel better physically. It argues a rather poor mental equipment and lack of ambition if a man needs a pipe to keep him company.'

"In discussing the physical side of the question as he had reckoned it from his charts, Dr. Seaver said that the gain in growth in general twelve per cent greater among those who do not use tobacco than among those who smoke. He said that it had been proved by laboratory experiments here that a dose of nicotine secured by smoking a fairly mild cigar reduces a man's muscular power from twenty-five to forty per cent.

"He has noticed among Yale men that smoking inevitably lowers the standard of cleanliness and begets a disregard for the rights of others that seem to have its root in selfish indulgence."—N. Y. Sun.

The business of discovery in the natural world is to clear away hindrances and to make channels for forces which were long ago reposed in nature, right under our hands and so near that they actually touch us. Just as the great discoveries in electricity consist in giving direction to the mighty power that it may become a thing of service rather than a means of destruction, so the chief business of religion is to clear away the difficulties in the divine path so that God may work naturally in the hearts of men.—Lloyd Lee.

Obituary.

William James Orem, born Jan. 8, 1836 at Church Creek, Dorchester Co., Maryland, aged 68 years, 4 months and 3 days; died May 11, 1904 in Atchison City on his way back to Maryland to visit his relatives. His wife and little daughter were with him. Heart failure caused his sudden death. He was buried the 13th at the Robison cemetery in Doniphan Co., Kansas, close to where he lived so long; laid to rest by the side of his first wife and three children. He was married to Mary Haggard in the year 1863, two children by his first wife still live, Rebecca, who is the wife of Bro. Anderson in Doniphan Co., Kan., near the cemetery where he was laid to rest; also Lydia, who is the wife of Bro. Cleary of Baileyville, Kan.; also Wilma 12 years old by his second wife, Ida Shellenberger, to whom he was married April 26, 1891. Those who best knew Bro. Orem loved him best. He was one of the ablest defenders of the faith in the West. His whole life after he learned the truth was a life of sacrifice for the truth and the Church. He became the acknowledged leader of the Church near Severance in 1897. At that time they numbered 40 members, but death and removal to other homes has reduced the number to 7, yet he after moving to Baileyville, Kansas, continued to visit us. At the last tent meeting he preached the last sermon on the programme, The glories of the coming age. Those that heard it will never forget it. At all the tent meetings there was one discourse given on the apostasy and he was selected to speak. He spoke two hours, the seats did not seem a bit hard. No man living or dead, in the church or out of the church ever heard a more able defence of the truth. The brethren in the west have lost one of their ablest defenders of the faith. O, what condolence can be offered to the heart broken wife and children, but the balm of Gilead, our adorable Savior's return. No man ever lived in this community that so completely held the affections of every one, even his religious enemies spoke kindly of him. O, how much the heart can suffer and still live on.

J. P. Bitner.

Georganna Miller, daughter of John and Sallie Palmer, was born in Hamilton Co., Ind., Nov. 26, 1873. She became an orphan at the age of two and one half years, and was reared by her uncle and aunt, Bro. and Sister M. M. Bennett. She was united in marriage to Samuel L. Miller March 3, 1897. To this union one daughter was born. Sister Miller died at Noblesville, Ind., May 15, 1904, at the age of 32 years, 6 mos. and 9 days, leaving her husband and daughter, her uncle and aunt, besides a host of friends to mourn their loss.

She became a member of the Church of God Dec. 26, 1888, and was a faithful believer until the time of her death. May it be her lot and ours to have a part in the resurrection of "the dead in Christ."

What is Best.

We do not know! Thou knowest!
As children in the dark
We lift our hearts, our hands to thee,
And find a rest, an ark;
We trust thee in our ignorance,
O Wise, O Good, O Strong;
And though the shades encompass us
We find thee with our song.

We think we know. Thou knowest.
We dream and hope and plan,
And make mistakes, and sigh to know
How frail and weak is man;
But thou, from the beginning,
Canst see the end of all,
We rest upon thy knowledge,
Father, on whom we call.

We do not know the best for us,
And so we strive in vain;
And for our sowing often reap
A harvest dire of pain;
We fall and fall, and then at last
We cry to thee for aid,
And only rest when thou dost say,
"'Tis I, be not afraid."

O God, we would be wiser yet,
And only pray: "Choose thou."
Lead as one leads the little ones,
We are thy children now;
And day by day, and step by step,
We need thy guiding hand;
Oh, let us cling to thee until
We reach the safe home-land.

And then let days be fair or dark,
The journey short or long,
Our hearts will rest in comfort,
And we will sing our song;
Since thou dost know, our ignorance
And weakness matter not,
We trust in thy great love, O God,
And thou dost choose our lot.

Restitution.

Another day is over with the fading of the light,
Weary I lay my burdens down and bid the world goodnight;
The shadows on the hill tops come and go,
While in the west the sun is sinking low.

High in yon dark blue heavens the stars shine, one by one,
Near in its silver splendor, rises the radiant moon,
Silent I raise my heart to thee in prayer,
Light of the world that shineth everywhere.

The murmuring of the ocean falls faintly on my ear,
Where the waves are rolling inward in the distance, low and clear;
O thou who once didst still the waves of Galilee,
Now in my waking hours, bring peace to me.

Towards thy watch towers, O Jerusalem, I turn my weary eyes,
Weary with a fevered longing for the fields of Paradise,
Where the roses and the myrtle, rich and rare,
Deck thy fair fields, and blossom everywhere.

Salem city of our God, thy children scattered wide,
Shall once again be gathered back unto thy side,
And all Ezekiel's solemn vision be,
A type of faithful love—fulfilled in thee.

A Half Gospel.

In Rainbow for March 1872 an article "Divine Remedy for the World's Woes," contains the following:—

"For many ages only a HALF GOSPEL has been preached even by those who professed earnest regard to the evangelic and puritanic element; and when we remember that even this half gospel—'the sufferings of Christ' without his return in glory to subdue and rule the world, was obscured by the preposterous belief that man by nature is immortal, etc.....it is absolutely astonishing to think that it had so many adherents. Nothing but the grace of God—the power of God's blessed Spirit—can account for the fact that an instrumentality only half of whose power was wielded.....could produce such sublime results. Making all necessary deductions for formalists, hypocrites, etc.....it is unquestionable that the actual number of the heavenly family, including those that sleep, is very large. Compared with the enormous masses of the world..... they are but a little flock; still they are enough to form the first fruits unto God and the Lamb, and to shine forth in power and glory as the royal priesthood, etc....."

It has to be noted that only a "half gospel" preached and believed signifies a "half gospel" lost or ignored, and that, according to the Rainbow this missing half of the gospel constated of certain millenarian teachings which the magazine had been for years worthily maintaining, although apart from their true gospel aspect as "the gospel of the kingdom of God." What is especially noteworthy, it is acknowledged by the Rainbow that "the sufferings of Christ" are only "half a gospel;" but the sad and strange thing is that the other "half" is not supplied to the readers as the true supplement to the "half" which was preached, but simply in the form of certain fulfilments of prophecy having important relations to the "gospel of the kingdom."

It is also a little strange that the Rainbow attributes the success of the "half gospel" to "the power of God's blessed Spirit." Of course this is an assumption resting on the popular theology. "But is not my WORD like as a fire, saith Jehovah, and like a hammer that breaketh the rock in pieces."

Speaking of evangelical bodies the Rainbow had said "Their existence as churches is the visible and eternal testimony to the fact that the doctrine of Christ crucified has laid hold upon the minds and hearts of millions of the human race, and brought them into peaceful and loving relationship with the God and Father of our Lord Jesus Christ." The truth of the latter clause here is extremely problematical, although it need not be disputed that millions have been brought to a form of discipleship far short of the discipleship of New Testament times, and marked by one strong feature of the apostasy, namely, gross ignorance of the missing "half" of the gospel.

It need not be matter for surprise, however, if the gospel of the kingdom of God, in its salvation aspect should be ignored by those professing evangelistic principles, even although these should be held in connection with Millenarianism. In the first century a "falling away" from the faith was already begun. The apostle Paul had special occasion to doubt the steadfastness of the disciples at Corinth. He wrote, "I fear lest by any means, as the serpent beguiled Eve through his subtilty, so your minds should be corrupted from the simplicity that is in the Anointed. For if he that cometh preacheth another Jesus whom we have not preached, or if ye receive another Spirit which ye have not received, or another gospel which ye have not accepted ye might well bear with me." 2 Cor. xi. 3, 4. He predicted that of "their own selves," the elders at Ephesus, "should men arise"..... "to draw away disciples after them." And he wrote to Timothy—"This thou knowest that all they which are in Asia be turned away from me, of whom are Phygelles and Hermogones." He was therefore extremely concerned in counteracting such influences. To the same Corinthians he wrote, "The weapons of our warfare are not carnal but mighty through God to the pulling down of strongholds, casting down imaginations and every high thing that exalteth itself against the knowledge of God, and bringing into captivity every thought to the obedience of the Anointed." To the Galatians he wrote, "I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of the Anointed unto another gospel, which is not another, but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of the Anointed." Gal. i. 6 8.

From such testimonies as these the reader need have no hesitation in concluding that any gospel with the fundamental "half" left out, is "another gospel," and a "perversion of the gospel of the Christ." "Subtilty" is by no means a quality of human nature which was confined to the days of Paul. It is as common now as it was then.

In the present day it is somewhat difficult to understand how some baptized believers of the gospel of the kingdom of God can treat that gospel in a similar manner to that we have noted in the pages of the Rainbow. This is found in the Intelligence department of the Messenger (Glasgow, Scotland, June, 1903) in what is given as the "Constitution" of the church in "Roxbough Street Hall, Edinburgh." The terms of "Membership" make no mention of the "gospel of the kingdom of God," and even the word "gospel" does not appear. With the exception of "immersion in water" the whole "Constitution" is substantially identical with the Rainbow's deliverance as to "a half gospel," as quoted above.

The present writer has had called to mind certain queries in which it had been suggested that the proclamation "The kingdom of God is at hand," was not the gospel in its "entirety," and that certain things which were in their nature gospel were therefore "the gospel." Certainly during the public preaching of John and Jesus "The kingdom of God is at hand," was the gospel "in its entirety." The death and resurrection of Jesus became appended to it afterwards. Some things in their nature gospel were not "THE GOSPEL." When Gabriel was sent to Zacharias to intimate the birth of a son, he said, "I am sent to show thee these glad tidings," literally "gospel." No one affirms from this that the birth of John the Baptist was "the gospel." Then [illegible] "good things" of "the faith and love" of the Thessalonians to Paul—literally "gospel"—this was not "the gospel." When our Lord appointed the twelve and the seventy he gave them their message in most specific terms—"As ye go, preach saying, The kingdom of God is at hand." There was nothing indefinite about this message. It cannot be alleged that the twelve and the seventy had any authority to add to the message by making any comments or discourse of their own so as to make their simple proclamation an "epitome" of some teaching more ample or complex. It was different in the case of John and Jesus, who were invested with divine authority in their prophetic character. Much valuable instruction given by them is to be found in the gospel history. But their proclamation of the gospel message is to be carefully distinguished from their general teachings.

The Rainbow seems to give an indication, in an incidental manner, as to how the evangelic preaching of "a half gospel" might have been supplemented. It is said, "If intelligent Christian men would but think sometimes a little outside the lines of received theology, with Isaiah and Paul for their guides.....with Daniel and John as their clear-sighted companions, what grand, what splendid sights, they would see!" That is, they would learn to theorize concerning the Millennium, the Antichrist, etc. But what if they had also taken Matthew, and Mark, and Luke, and John, from whom to obtain their information as to what the other "half" of the gospel consisted in, they might be enabled to replace in its proper fundamental position that lost "half gospel" which the Rainbow only saw in some of its Millenarian relations. "The lines of received theology" have in great part been inherited from a past apostasy, and cannot be allowed to stop the way of such as desire to walk in the "old paths" trodden by the first preachers of the gospel.

J. Cameron.

Table Talk.

Does the question ever arise in your minds, dear brothers and sisters, as to what are desirable and essential states of mind for acceptable worship.

There are many answers for this, such as, a knowledge of God's word, firm faith, humility, fixedness of mind and fidelity.

In order that our worship might be acceptable in the sight of our Father, we must watch ourselves continually. There must be a high standard and a firm resolve to do what is right, let the consequences follow. Certainly God has given us a perfect example, like as we are, yet without sin. Jesus knew that he was to be King of the Jews, and he kept the flesh under subjection, by the help of his Father. Now each one of us has the promise; "To him that overcometh, will I grant to sit with me on my throne, even as I also overcame and am set down with my Father in his throne."

We too may become kings and priests, to God, if we rather suffer affliction with His people than enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season. I have said, we must set a high standard.—Each day we should consecrate our lives anew to Him in whom we live and move and have our being. If we succumb to temptation, leave undone the duties of a Christian, and do those things we ought not to do, we know that we have an Advocate with the Father, even Jesus Christ the righteous. If at first you don't succeed, try, try, again. As Peter said in his second epistle, speaking to the brethren, "Therefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though ye know them, and be established in the present truth."

This is why we meet together today to remember our Lord and his love for us and the covenant we have made with Our Heavenly Father. Daily, almost hourly, we ought to be reminded of the things that pertain to the kingdom of God, and what we must do to be there, for there is a constant struggle between right and wrong. Paul says, when I would do good, evil is ever present with me, and Jesus has said, "If any man will come after me, let him deny himself and take up his cross daily and follow me."

Again he comforts the disciples against tribulation. These things I have spoken unto you, that in me ye might have peace. In the world ye shall have tribulation, but be of good cheer, I have overcome the world. In order to worship acceptably, we must overcome our fleshly instincts as they rise each day, strive to set forth a character becoming a Christian. I want to read a little piece I found in a book taken [illegible] "Let us not therefore judge one another any more, but judge this rather, that no man put a stumbling block, or an occasion to fall, in their brother's way."

A vexation arises, and our expressions of impatience hinder others from taking it patiently. Disappointment ailment, or even weather, depresses us, and our look of depression hinders others from maintaining a cheerful, and thoughtful spirit. We say an unkind thing, and another is hindered in learning the holy lesson of charity that thinketh no evil. We say a provoking thing, and our sister or brother is hindered in that day's effort to be meek. How sadly, too, we may hinder without word or act! For wrong feeling is more infectious than wrong doing: especially the various phases of ill temper,—gloominess, touchiness, instability,—do we not know how catching these are?

But God, who is rich in mercy, for His great love, wherein he loved us, even when we were dead in sins, hath quickened us together with Christ by whose favor ye are saved,—and hath raised us up together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus. That in the ages to come he might shew the exceeding riches of His favor in his kindness toward us through Christ Jesus.

May each of us go from this assembly today with a firmer resolve to worship our Heavenly Father at all times and honor him at all times.

Dear Restitution:

I see by your columns that another one has fallen asleep, after suffering intense pain with that dread disease cancer. With the Editor's permission, I will send a receipt that will remove cancer if it is located where one can reach it with a plaster. Take fresh sheep sorrell, pound or grind it and squeeze out the juice in earthen dish, place dish in pan of water, set on stove, let evaporate slowly until it is thick. Spread on white cloth, large enough to cover cancer well, change for fresh plaster night and morning, keep on three or four days, until cancer is killed. Then poultice with bread and milk to take out inflamation, and keep cancer moist until it comes out. It takes ten to fifteen days after it is killed for it to come out. I removed a cancer from my shoulder in this way. First I had a large cancer removed from my mouth by cancer specialist then cancer appeared on my shoulder, and hearing of this remedy I took it out with it. Cancer is a blood disease and the patient must take a thorough course of blood medicine, or it will return. Red clover blossoms are good, make strong tea, drink lots of it for several months, or the extract of red clover blossoms can be bought at drug stores. Cancer is a very difficult disease to get rid of, once it is in the blood, but sometimes it can be cured if taken in time and the right treatment used. Hoping the great Physician will soon come and heal all diseases, and give us life and immortality, I will close.

Nannie Osborne.

[We give the above from Sister Osborne, and any one afflicted can easily try it. It must be remembered that all cancers are not alike, and that the same treatment will not cure in every case. However, there can be no ill effect from such a treatment as stated above, and if it gives relief for a short time even it is worth trying.—Ed.]

Dear Restitution:

I am, and have been for years intensely interested in the welfare of those who have turned to God from idols to serve the living and true God, and to wait for his Son from heaven. I daily rejoice to be thought worthy of being included among those who compose "the house of God, which is the Church of the living God, the pillar and ground of the truth." Since I have made a few evangelistic efforts I am more than ever deeply impressed with the love of God for his church, and the anxiety the Lord expressed about finding faith when he returns. I have no doubt but that he will find some holding the faith righteously, but I am constrained to believe, and state that the church now, and from now on has greater need than ever to "watch and pray" that it will need the best efforts of the Church of God to hold its own. Under pressure of such thoughts I went round among the brethren at Brush Creek, Bellefountaine, North Lewisburg, Dayton, Springfield and Wooster. At Brush Creek I found the brethren waiting on the Lord, and ready and willing to make an effort to have the news preached, and it was an effort for the brothers, mostly farmers, working hard from early morning till dusk, and though very tired, they came. Bro. Curtis lighted the [illegible] and the light of truth shone also. Friday and Saturday the meetings were small. Sunday morning I spoke to the young members about forming a Berean class or society, as being a means of special help to them in acquiring spiritual knowledge, afterwards spoke earnestly to the Church on the "abounding iniquity" and exhorting to more diligence. I trust they were as much benefited as I was. In the evening we had considerable of an audience. We had but three meetings, as it was not considered wise to have more at present on account of extra hard work on the farm. Though pushed with work Bro. Lehman took me to Ludlow Falls where I got the electric car for Piqua, and got to Bellefountaine in the afternoon of Monday May 2. Next evening we had a very interesting meeting at the home of Bro. and Sister Venable, Sister Leidelgh present, her husband called for her, and somewhat late we bade good night each wishing to meet soon again. Bro. Venable as before took me to N. Lewisburg. It was one of those lovely mornings when all nature seems to rejoice in peace. As we drove along talking of the good time coming we did forget to be thankful that our lines were at present cast in pleasant places. At Bro. Walter Bales we again found busy people, after dinner Bro. Venable went home. I found the brothers and sisters here well and cheerful. We had meetings Friday evening and Sunday morning and evening in the school near Bro. Bales, about three miles from N. Lewisburg. Sunday evening I was surprised to see so many present, and especially young men and women, they gave strict attention and many bade a kindly good night. There was no trouble getting the school, just the opposite. At the kindly invitation of Sister Mrs. Emma Gerard, I went to Dayton. I had the address of several, also the meeting place of the Church of God. I called on all, none had the simple faith of the gospel, the precious promises as we hold and cherish. The Church of God had moved from the little hall on South Cincinnati St. and I could not get any trace of it in the limited time I had. At night before retiring Mr. Gerard handed me a Bible. I read and had the pleasure of preaching a short simple gospel sermon, which was well and kindly received. I stopped at Springfield just over night, spent the evening with Bro. and Sister Kauffman, and next day stopped at Wooster. After several inquiries I found a man an "Advent Christian," but I was more than pleased to hear him talk the simple things of the gospel that I delight in. There are about fifteen that meet occasionally six miles from Wooster. They thought of having regular meetings once in two weeks and a preacher. He promised to let me know what they decided to do. I asked him to do that, as I would at least like to meet them all. I reached home at 1 a. m. May 12, and found all well except our Bro. Crawford who often suffers much from a severe pain and cold feeling in his back. While there is a rejoicing in Spirit while waiting and watching for our Lord, there is much in general from the effects of sin that constrains us to pray fervently, Lord Jesus come.

P. Neill.

Dear Brother Underwood:

We are sorry to say that the old Restitution brought the sad news to our home announcing the death of Bro. J. C. Kimsey of Mesa, Arizona, which caused me to weep with those that weep, but we weep not as those that have no hope. It pains our hearts within us to give up one of the dear old soldiers of the cross of whom we have met in former years. I have known of Bro. Kimsey since the Spring 1876, when he had a discussion with one Tatam, a Baptist minister at Wheatland, Mo. Then in 1878 I met Bro. Kimsey at Bro. Joshua Kidwell, where I was staying while going to school, he came there to hold a meeting and I heard him proclaim the glad tidings of the grand old gospel of the kingdom when a boy, which he sowed deep in my youthful heart, which never withered away from the beat of the day. So then many years rolled by, a copy of The Restitution was handed me by Bro. Oliver, I saw his letter to The Restitution, and through the kindness of Bro. Underwood I obtained his address. I wrote him, he said he remembered me in that grand meeting, and was glad to hear from me and hoped to meet me in God's kingdom. I hope this meeting will be soon. At the sounding of the trumpet when the saints are gathered home by the crystal sea, and all the loved ones we shall meet. What a gathering that will be! We would say to the [illegible] deeply feel. Let us be [illegible] life, and when we knock at heaven's door that it may be opened unto us, and that he may say, Well and faithful done, enter into thy joys and sit upon thy throne. Your in hope of eternal life.

J. M. Deffenbaugh.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I will write you to let you know that I am still serving my Master as best I can. Since my dear wife's death I have not been able to work for the Lord as much as I desire to. However, I do some work for him. It was my happy privilege to bury Sister Alma Hobson of Anson, Kan., into the all saving name in the Walnut river near Arkansas City, Kan., on May 1, 1904, and I will thus introduce this dear Sister Hobson to the brothers and sisters of like precious faith. This dear sister traveled nearly 50 miles, that she might be baptized by one of the faith, thereby showing her faith by her works, and I ask you of the faith to write this dear sister letters of encouragement, and if you have any tracts or papers that would be beneficial send her some of them also. I did not have the chance to talk to her as much as I wished lest I miss the train. I will further say that Bro. and Sister Chaplin's daughter Bernice informed Sister Hobson of my whereabouts, and I also hope that Bernice and her husband will ere long do as Sister Hobson has done. What a noble sight it is to see a newly married couple enlist under the banner of King Emmanuel just at the beginning of their married lives. I and my youngest son are keeping house, while my three other children are away from home. How quick our little family went to pieces after mother's death. O how I do wish to see that day when it shall be said, "There is no more death."

Your brother in hope.

H. M. Williams.

Editor Restitution:

I wish Bro. Wilson or some advanced student of Scripture would write on the condition of the saved. It has long been a query in my mind, "Shall we know each other there?" And more so since the death of our daughter. Friends give their opinion, but they all differ, and it is not satisfactory to me. When death enters the home circle we begin to think more seriously of these things. We see but faintly, and when thinking upon these things, we become lost in confusion, and can only settle down to the promise, "Eye hath not seen, or ear heard, neither hath it entered into the heart of man, the things that God hath prepared for those that love him."

Jas. G. Adams.

To the Bereans of Illinois:

At the quarterly meeting held with the Antioch church on Saturday evening, May 7, it was unanimously decided to hold a Bible school this year just preceding the annual conference as last year. So much did the Board of Management desire it that they voted ten dollars support toward paying the grocery bill for the same. The school will be held beginning on Monday, August 15, 1904. The work will proceed much on the same plan as last year except that the daily sessions will consist of two periods of an hour and a half each instead of two hours each. Many have already signified their intention of attending.

Young people cannot estimate the value of such a training until they have had it. For further particulars write me. Suffice it to say that about the only expense—at least the chief item of expense—will be the expense of transportation. Please write and say that you are coming.

S. J. Lindsay, Oregon, Ill.

To the Ladies of the Tithing Society in Michigan.

A good work has been done in the past by the sisters in helping to carry the burdens in different directions; and this is no time to lay the burden down, for there is so much need of means to further the gospel work. Try to be present at the meeting sisters, but if that is impossible, the postman will be prompt in delivering your offering in time for Conference, if all do their part in sending either to Emma Jackman, or M. A. Woodward, Dutton, Michigan.

M. A. Woodward, Sec.

A great many people purpose to do right; but the trouble with them is that they purpose in their heads, and that doesn't amount to much. If you are going to be a Christian you must purpose to serve God away down in your heart. "With the heart man believeth unto righteousness."—D. L. Moody.

The third Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God in Indiana will convene at the Antioch church at 10:00 o'clock A.M., Friday, June 10, and continue over the following Sunday. The brethren and sisters who have attended the June Meeting at Antioch in former years know the character of this gathering, and scarcely need a special invitation to attend the meeting this year. Many times have God's children met at Antioch and taken with them new spiritual impulses, and there is every reason to anticipate a time of refreshing this year. Let the brethren and sisters for a few days lay aside the cares of this age, and lay up treasure for the age to come. Let the meeting be characterized by deep earnestness and joyful fellowship in the hope of the life to come. Those coming by railroad will come to Plymouth or Argos, where they will be met at trains and conveyed to the place of meeting.

Please send word by postal one week before meeting to Bro. A. R. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind., or T. O. Taber, Argos, Ind., on what day and train you expect to arrive.

A. H. ZELMER, Pres.
LYDIA RAILSBACK, Sec.

The Northwest Conference will convene Friday evening June 17th and hold over the following Monday at Lake Shore, Wash. Lake Shore is about four miles from Vancouver, Wash. Any one wishing conveyance to Lake Shore will correspond with P. G. Wolf of Vancouver. Brethren from a distance will stop at River View hotel right by the ferry landing and wait for the brethren from Lake Shore. All are invited to come and have one more meeting that will be a feast long to be remembered. Another Conference year has almost passed and gone, have we spent our time well or have we been idle in the Master's vineyard? All cannot go out in the world to preach, but we all can live a good square Christian life doing good to all around us. By order of the executive committee.

MRS. ALMIRA M. BROOKS.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Michigan will commence (D. V.) at Dutton, Kent County, Michigan, Thursday evening, June 2, 1904, and continue over the following Sunday. Another year has nearly rolled around since the annual meeting of the Michigan Conference was held. Once again the invitation comes from the brothers and sisters of the Church of God at Dutton to have the meeting there. Do we stop and think what it means for the brethren to entertain the Conference? It means a good deal of thought and work, but they are willing to bear the expense and work for the cause of truth. The brethren and sisters of Michigan are urged to make a special effort to be present at this Annual Conference. Arrangements will be made to accommodate all who may come. All will be made welcome. Let us come with the one thought to further the cause of Christ. Not all together to get good, but determined to give as much as we receive, then as is already predicted we will have a good meeting. Let each church send one or more delegates with report of their standing during the past year. A programme will appear later. Dutton is on M. C. R. R. ten miles southeast of Grand Rapids.

PAMA JACKMAN, Sec.

The 17th Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will be held at Waterloo, beginning Aug. 20. Programme, etc., will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Illinois will meet at Oregon, on the evening of Wednesday Aug. 24, and continue over the following Sunday. The programme will appear later. Let all plan to come, and make this the best Conference ever held in our State. Try to bring a stranger with you, some one that you have trying to lead to a decision for the truth. There is no place more helpful than these Conference meetings to those who are seeking light on gospel teaching. By thus helping others we only add to our own joy in the faith, and our coming reward.

Beautiful Winona.

With the opening of the season at Winona Lake, May 16th, the sale of excursion tickets over the Pennsylvania Lines to that attractive resort in Northern Indiana will begin. Every summer passed there by thousands has only increased their desire to return. On the golf links, the tennis courts, the baseball or cricket grounds, the croquet field, or boating on the lake, fishing, camping, swimming, driving, or attending recitals and lectures by world-famed personages in the auditorium—whatever the diversion may be, the associations are of that congenial sort conferred by good society. This resort is noted as the site of Winona Assembly and Summer School, attracting teachers and students from educational institutions of this and other countries.

Fifteen-day and season excursion tickets will be sold from stations of the Pennsylvania Lines during the summer. For information about fares and time of trains, apply to local ticket agents, or to F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa. Illustrated literature describing attractions of Winona Lake may be had for the asking. Address S. C. Dickey, Secretary and General Manager, Winona Lake, Ind., who will give particulars regarding camping facilities, hotel accomodations, program of addresses by noted speakers and all other details.—Sept. 30.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00. and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, Co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Poetry.

The End.

The course of the weariest river
Ends in the great gray sea:
The morn, forever and ever,
Strives upward to the bow.
The rainbow, the sky adorning,
Shines promise through the storm:
The glimmer of coming morning
Through midnight gloom will form.
By the time all knots are riven,
Complex although they be,
And pears will not first be given,
Dear, both be you and me.

Then, though the path may be dreary,
Look onward to the goal
Though the heart and the head be weary,
Let faith inspire the soul;
Seek the right, though the wrong be tempting
Speak the truth at any cost:
Vain is all work attempting
When once the gem is lost.
Let strong hand and keen eye be ready
For plain and ambushed foes;
Though earnest and fairly steady
Bear heed unto the close.

The heavy clouds may be raining,
But with evening comes the light;
Though the dark low winds are complaining
Yet the sunrise gilds the height;
And love has his hidden treasure
For the patient and the pure;
And time gives his fullest measure
To the workers who endure;
And the word that no law hath shaken
Has the future pledge supplied;
For we know that when we "awaken"
We shall be "satisfied."

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. We have a very important question, that I feel a great interest in, and very many people, I fear, have but a small conception of its immense value, and that question is:

ARE YOU A COVENANTOR?

I will ask Bessie to tell us, who is a covenantor?

A. A person who enters into a covenant relationship with another person.

Q. What usually lies at the base of most covenants?

A. Money.

Q. Do you know of a covenant where this is an exception made to the general rule?

A. I do.

Q. Where do you find such a covenant?

A. In Isaiah lv.

Q. Will you please quote it?

A. I will. "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price. Wherefore do ye spend your money for that which is not bread? And your labor for that which satisfieth not? hearken diligently unto me, and eat ye that which is good, and let your soul delight itself in fatness."

Q. How can we obtain such riches, and that without money?

A. By becoming a covenantor.

Q. Covenant with whom? Who is rich enough to make such a covenant, especially when there is no money involved in the covenant?

A. Our heavenly Father.

Q. Where does he offer to make such a covenant?

In Isa. lv. 3: "Incline your ear and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David."

Teacher. I will ask Ella to show to us who are invited as parties of the second part, to enter into the above covenant with God, as the party of the first part?

Ella. The offer is made to all who will "incline their ear, and come."

Q. What covenant is that?

A. "The sure mercies of David," or in other words, a share in the oath-bound covenant that he (God) made with David.

Q. What did he covenant to David?

A. Psa. lxxxix. 3, 4: I have made a covenant with my chosen, I have sworn unto David my servant, thy seed (the Christ) will I establish forever, (on thy throne), and build up thy throne to all generations."

Q. Are you sure the words "thy seed," have reference to Jesus?

A. Yes. See Acts xiii. 22, 23: "I have found David, the son of Jesse, a man after mine own heart, which shall fulfil all my will. Of this man's seed hath God according to his promise raised unto Israel a Savior, Jesus."

Q. What did he raise him up for?

A. See Acts ii. 30: "Therefore being a prophet, and knowing that God had sworn with an oath to him (David) that of the fruit of his loins according to the flesh, he would raise up Christ to sit on his throne."

"The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David." Lu. i. 32, 33.

"Of the increase of his government and peace there shall be no end upon the throne of David." Isa. ix. 6, 7.

"The Lord hath sworn in truth unto David; he will not turn from it: of the fruit of thy body I will set upon thy throne."

Q. Did he promise all fellow-covenantors a share in the same throne?

A. Yes, as already quoted: "I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David."

Again, Psa. cxxxii. 12: "If thy children will keep my covenant and my testimony that I shall teach them, their children shall also sit upon thy throne for ever more."

"To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne,"—the throne of David.

Q. What will be required of fellow-covenantors to entitle them to a seat on David's throne?

A. "Keep my covenant and my testimony." Psa. cxxxii. 12.

"To him that overcometh." Rev. iii. 21.

Q. Are people who are not parties to a covenant, required to observe and keep the terms of a covenant in which they are not covenantors?

A. No, there would be no advantage to accrue to a person keeping the terms of a covenant, unless he shall first have a covenantor's interest.

Teacher. I will ask Carrie to tell us what steps a person must take in order to become a covenantor?

Carrie. He must first acquaint him or herself with the covenant itself, understand the nature of the covenant, and the benefits, which are acquired by having a covenantor's interest. Also learn what will be necessary to do, in order to become a covenantor, and also the terms after making the covenant, that the covenant as it relates to the parties of the second part, may be kept inviolate.

Q. When the throne and kingdom of David is mentioned in Scripture, what are we to understand by those terms?

A. The commonwealth, government, or civil polity of Israel.

A. The gospel promises the future blessedness of all nations. Through what instrumentality will that blessing come to them?

A. Through the commonwealth of Israel, with Jesus at the head of that commonwealth, as the "Governor which rules my people Israel," occupying David's throne, according to the requirements of the "covenants of promise."

Q. When a person becomes a covenantor, what relationship shall he sustain to the Re-organized Commonwealth of Israel?

A. A "joint-heir with Jesus Christ," (Rom. viii. 17) "a royal Priesthood," (1 Pet. ii. 9), "Fellow citizens." Eph. ii. 19.

Q. What is the position of those outside of the bonds of the covenant?

A. "Gentiles in the flesh," "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel," "strangers and foreigners from the covenants of promise." Eph. ii. 11-20.

Q. Are there non-covenantors, or "aliens," children of "hope?"

A. I will let Eph. ii. 11, 12, answer, "At that time you were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope, and without God in the world." In no commonwealth are "strangers," "aliens," and "foreigners" given the same privileges that are enjoyed by "fellow-citizens."

Teacher. David, speaking of this covenant, says, "He hath made with me an everlasting covenant, ordered and sure; for this is all my salvation, and all my desire." 2 Sam. xxiii. 5. Albert, what do you think, are not these covenants also the "salvation" and "desire," of all fellow covenantors?

Albert. They should decidedly be so. Our eternal salvation is involved in these covenants. With all true fellow-covenantors there is no "desire," which can elipse that one desire. It is their meditation all the day long, and it is ever present, even in the waking hours of the night time.

Q. Is there salvation in these covenants for fellow covenantors?

A. Yes, Paul says, (Rom. i. 16) "I am not ashamed of the gospel of christ; (or the gospel preached by Christ) for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

Q. True, there is salvation in a belief of the (not a) gospel; but, tell me, has that got anything to do with the Davidic covenant?

A. Yes, it has. See Mark i. 14: "Now after that John was put in prison Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God."

Q. What did he exhort his hearers to do, after hearing "the gospel of the kingdom" preached?

A. "Repent ye, and believe the gospel"—the gospel of the kingdom.

Q. What do people repent and believe the gospel for?

A. In order to secure their personal salvation.

Q. What is the meaning of the word gospel?

A. Good news.

Q. When it precedes the phrase "the kingdom of God," what does the phrase signify?

A. Good news relating to God's kingdom.

Q. Does it mean a sort of a spiritual government of God, in the hearts of people, commencing A. D. 33?

A. No, it relates to the kingdom the prophets preached, Jesus preached, the apostles preached, the kingdom God promised Jesus.

Q. The kingdom God promised Jesus, ought certainly to be recognized as God's kingdom, and the word "gospel" (or good news) should stand related to that kingdom should it not?

A. It should.

Q. Does the kingdom which God promised to Jesus, stand related to the Davidic kingdom, which God covenanted with an oath to build up to all generations, with his (David's) seed, the Christ upon the throne?

A. Exactly that, and none other.

Q. What evidence is there to sustain that position?

A. God's promise as recorded in Acts i. 32, 33: "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David; and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

Q. Now, when God said, "I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David." And again, when he says, "If thy children will keep my covenant, and my testimony that I shall teach them, their children shall also sit upon thy throne for ever more," he could not mean any thing else than the covenant throne unto David, could he?

A. Nothing else, whatever, especially so, when Jesus confirms the above by saying: "To him that overcometh, will I grant to sit with me in my throne." And his throne, the angel said, is "the throne of his father David." There is no spiritualizing trash in all this, but something that is real, and genuine.

Q. Is this all your "desire," as well as your "salvation."

A. It is "all my desire," as well as my "salvation." It is the salvation also of all who believe and obey the gospel of the kingdom. It is "the power of God unto salvation," to all such.

Q. Who is it that become covenantors?

A. All those who believe and obey the gospel of the kingdom of God, as preached by Jesus. To all such comes the promise, "I will make with you an everlasting covenant." This is a matter of great moment to all covenantors. When the Lord comes to claim his throne, let us be able to come before him as faithful covenantors, and not as "aliens from the commonwealth of Israel," because all aliens will be excluded from citizenship in that commonwealth.

Your fellow citizen.

The Sunday School Lesson for May 22.

Jesus teaches humility. Mark x. 35, 45.

Golden text: "For even the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." Mark x. 45. How few Sabbath school teachers will get the true significance in this lesson. All the verses refer to the rank and degree that the saints will have in the millennium kingdom when Christ comes to fill the earth with his kingdom. In verse 40 Jesus affirms that position by his side when he comes to reign shall be given to those for whom such places are prepared. Proving that comparatively few in proportion to those saved, will rank as princes. In verses 42 to 45 he shows the contrast between the present governments on earth, and what the government of the coming kingdom will be. The apostles understood the teachings of Jesus, that after he died and rose again, he would become King over all nations. But they did not understand that there was to come a gospel or church dispensation to intervene between the resurrection of Jesus and his reign on earth. Christ had just been speaking of his death and resurrection. And in verses 29-31, and in the world to come eternal life. Jesus had been speaking of the rewards in his coming kingdom, and this explains why James and John, and not in gospel tells us that their mother came with them, asking Jesus that they might have exalted stations in his kingdom when he came to reign. Now you will notice that our Savior did not deny that he would come back in a visible person, and literally reign over all nations, for that was the very thing he had taught them. But he called their attention to the supreme question of them having a fitness for the position they wanted. You may hear any number of preachers say that Christ rebuked the disciples about his coming in a literal reign on the earth. Such a remark is untrue, for you cannot find one single text where Jesus ever rebuked any one for believing in his visible and literal reign on earth. But on the other hand he sanctioned such a faith, and simply emphasized the two great points of having a fitness for the kingdom and of not knowing the time when the kingdom would appear or become visible.

FRED MIELER.

Editor Restitution:

I send a letter to a sister for publication, if you think it worthy the space in RESTITUTION.

Dear Sister:

I was surprised when I found it was you that was sending Leaves of Healing to me, and more sadly surprised when I read your letter, and found that you were so taken up with Mr. Dowie, and his doings in Illinois. I know that you have been alone in the faith, and afflicted for many years, but I thought you were immovable in the gospel that Christ and the apostles preached, reading your Bible and RESTITUTION for so many years, but I see that your mind is greatly troubled, and I will try in my weak way to show what danger you are in by reading (so-called) Zion literature. I don't dispute your friend's honesty, nor the cases of healing that you send the accounts of, though I have never seen any of it done. I heard Mr. Dowie preach here in Fresno, California, before he started his Zion in Illinois. In each of his sermons he tried to make it plain to the people, that the man proper was immortal and could not die. You know Sister, that is what the devil or serpent taught in Gen. iii. 4. One asked what I thought of the healing he did here. I said it was probably the devil healing through him, as he was preaching the devil's gospel, Ye shall not surely die. Now, Sister, there is one statement in your letter that I hope you will think over very seriously, that is, If the devil is doing that healing he is a pretty good devil. If he does do good deeds, he is doing them to carry out his scheme in deceiving the people, so don't think for one minute that there is any good in him, for he has caused us all of our many troubles, sickness, pain and death. O how I hate him, for he is still deceiving the people, and causing hundreds of thousands of them to believe his first lie in the garden of Eden. Please read 2 Cor. xi. 13-15, and see that Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light, and his ministers also he transformed as the ministers of righteousness. Sister, think of this, it means some thing, it is not idle talk; and read Mark xiii. 22, and see that false prophets shall arise, and shall show signs and wonders, to seduce if possible even the elect. O how careful we should be, for it is the church member or good moral person that he is after. He already has the desperately wicked all safe. Remember that Satan is too intelligent to use any harsh means to get the class that he is after, he uses gentleness and kindness, and comes as near the genuine as he can without having people believe that he told a lie in Gen. iii. 4. Read Gal. i. 6-9 carefully and see what is said of man or angel that preaches another or perverts the gospel of Christ, let him be accursed. Now, if Mr. Dowie is that Elijah, healer and restorer, sent of God, as is claimed for him, it surely would be right for all of us to follow after his example, especially in our habits and way of living. Now, Sister, do you think it would be right for you or me to pattern after his example in San Francisco with his company of fourteen going to the Palace hotel, and paying $75 for one meal, a fraction over $5.35 each, especially if we had not earned the money. Mr. Dowie will no donbt find places on his trip where people are suffering for the plainest food and the $75 would keep a family of six or eight for a whole year. Now, do you really think that if Christ was here that he would go on that kind of a spree with Mr. Dowie? I think not, and I think that you will think not, if you study Christ's life in the New Testament. You quote Acts iii. 23 in connection with Jer. iii. 4. You quote Acts as a proof that we will be destroyed if we don't hear Alexander Dowie in all things; and you quote Jeremiah to prove that he (Dowie) will take two of a family and one of a city and bring them to a place in Illinois, that he has named Zion. Now, Sister, don't read one verse, and guess at what it means, but read the connections, and see plainly that the prophet spoken of is Christ instead of Mr. Dowie, and the Zion spoken of is in Jerusalem instead of Illinois. Now, Sister, if you think that means we are all wrong because we do not have any prophets or healers in our church, which church will we go to, for there are a number of other churches that have prophets and healers? For me, I will stay with the Church of God as long as they preach the gospel that Christ and the apostles preached. I don't want you to think that I don't believe in prayer, for I surely do. We are told to pray without ceasing, and in everything give thanks. And James says that the effectual fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much. I sincerely believe that many thanks from the heart will greatly lessen our temporal needs, and lighten our afflictions. Sister, if we are afflicted and poor in this life, that is only momentary compared to the eternity in the kingdom with Christ, the restorer and healer, that will have us permanently healed, and better yet, God shall wipe away all tears from our eyes, and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain. Rev. xxi. 4. What a glorious thought, if we become rich in faith, by the study of God's Word, we are heirs of the kingdom, and will soon be permanently healed from all things that offend. All in love for the truth. Your Brother in Christ.

G. W. CALDER.

The Yellow Peril.

What is the real meaning of the fact that a small hermit nation like Japan—not so long ago classed amongst pagan nations—has suddenly sprung to political manhood, has collected a fleet of modern war vessels, has discarded the methods of scientific fighting of the dead; the immortality of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, are pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

How Spiritual Power is Lost.

Power is lost through self-indulgence. The one who would have God's power must lead a life of self-denial. There are many things which are not sinful in the ordinary understanding of the word sin, but which hinder spirituality and rob men of power. I do not believe that any man can lead a luxurious life, over-indulge his natural appetites, indulge extensively in dainties, and enjoy the fullness of God's power. The gratification of the flesh and the fullness of the Spirit do not go hand in hand. "The flesh lusteth against the Spirit, and the Spirit against the flesh; and these two are contrary the one to the other." Gal. v: 17. Paul wrote, "I keep under my body, and bring it into subjection," 1. Cor. ix: 27: see Rev. Ver.—Greek. Note also Eph. v; 18.

We live in a day when temptation to the indulgence of the flesh is very great. Luxuries are common. Piety and prosperity seldom go hand in hand, and in many a case the prosperity that piety and power have brought has been the ruin of the man to whom it has come. Not a few ministers of power have become popular and in demand. With the increasing popularity has come an increase of pay and of the comforts of life. Luxurious living has come in, and the power of the Spirit has gone out. It would not be difficult to cite specific instances of this sad truth. If we would know the continuance of the Spirit's power we need to be on guard to lead lives of simplicity, free from indulgence and surfeiting, be ready to "endure hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ." 2 Tim. ii: 3. I frankly confess I am afraid of luxury—not as afraid of it as I am of sin, but it comes next as an object of dread. It is a very subtle but a very potent enemy of power. There are devils to-day that "[illegible] but by prayer and fasting."

A. Torrey.

No Time for Fools.

When George Westinghouse, as a young inventor, was trying to interest capitalists in his automatic brake, the device which now plays so important a part in the operation of railroad trains, he wrote a letter to Commodore Cornelius Vanderbuilt, President of the New York Central Railroad Company, carefully explaining the details of his invention. Very promptly his letter came back to him, indorsed in big, scrawling letters, in the hand of Commodore Vanderbilt, "I have no time to waste on fools."

Afterwards, when the Pennsylvania railroad had taken up the automatic brake, and it was proving very successful, Commodore Vanderbilt sent young Mr. Westinghouse a request to call on him. The young inventor returned the letter, indorsed on the bottom as follows:—"I have no time to waste on fools."—Success.

The Future Hidden.

We are blind with regard to the future; it is as if we had no vision at all; we may not boast of to-morrow, because we know not what one day may bring forth. We know the history of the day that is gone, but what is coming in the morning not the wisest man can tell. God keeps to-morrow in his own hand; but this we know, that we shall be led and upheld and comforted; our perplexity shall be relieved, the crooked places shall be relieved, the crooked places shall be made straight, the rough places plain, and even the valleys shall be exalted; a new song will be in our mouth at the close of the day: if we have to sing of judgment, we shall also have to sing of mercy, for God's way toward us is one of judgment and love.—Joseph Parker.

Voice of a Statesman.

No earnest, honest effort in a good cause can fail. It may not be crowned with applause of men. It may not seem to touch the goal of immediate worldly success, but it is not lost. It helps to strengthen the weak with new virtue; to arm the irresolute with proper knowledge; to animate all with devotion, which in the end conquers all.—Charles Sumner.

Plymouth, Indiana, June 8, 1904.

This is the week for holding the regular Annual June Meeting at old Antioch, this County, and all should attend who can do so. Good speakers will be in attendance.

This is the time of year when many are quite busy with work, but we trust those who have not yet renewed their subscriptions will take time to think that our bills must be met, and that we need what is due to continue our work.

Around Independence and Victor, Colo., where the labor trouble with miners has caused so much stir, riots have occurred, and a number are killed, and property is being destroyed. At this time soldiers are in charge.

The trouble at Morrocco, growing out of bandits capturing an American citizen and holding him for a large ransom, and demanding other impossible conditions, has caused the sending of a United States fleet to that country. France and England, having interests there are also sending ships, and there may be trouble.

The War news the past week has amounted to very little. The positions of both sides is being strengthened, and small parties are sent out to test the strength of the enemy. There are two questions that are troubling the experts just now. One is what the Russian fleet in Port Arthur will do, and the other is what General Kouropatkin will do. The Chicago Tribune has the following to say about the situation:

If the Japs seem about to storm the line to Port Arthur will the Russian fleet make a run for it? The result of this run would be the destruction of the Russians, but also the severe crippling of the Japanese fleet, which would open the way for the Baltic squadron's appearance in oriental waters. If the Russian ships araid in the harbor their fleet would be destroyed just the same, but no coincidental damage would be done the Japanese. There is one consideration in this respect which must not be overlooked. It is reported that the big naval guns have been removed from the ships and stationed in the fortresses. If this is true the guns could hardly be got back to the ships in time for a sudden rush to sea.

Will Kouropatkin try to relieve Port Arthur? If he does he must march down the railroad from his present position at Liaoyang and strike Oku in the rear. It is fair to suppose that Oku has fortified his rear, and his base is, of course, safe, because his base is the sea. If Kouropatkin marched in any force southward from Liaoyang his left flank would be exposed to attack from the third Japanese army at Takushan, which is under command of Lieut. Gen. Nodzu, while his rear would be open to a simultaneous attack from Gen. Kuroki, whose forces are now concentrated at Fengwangcheng. That is the situation as sized up by military experts.

Eternal Life.

While many good and interesting things have been said and written upon this important subject, yet it is far from being exhausted; and the writer feels justified in endeavoring to attract attention to a very significant feature of it. The thing desired is "life." Life, in the abstract, has been defined as "that condition of a plant or an animal in which its organs are capable of performing their functions." Life is at the basis of all enjoyment and all suffering. A dead man can neither enjoy nor endure. To be capable of either, a man must live; the organs which collectively constitute himself must be capable of performing their functions.

The "life" mentioned in the Scriptures is frequently qualified as "eternal" or "everlasting." The former is used thirty times in the New Testament, while the latter is employed fourteen times, to designate the kind of life promised and to be hoped for. Both adjectives are from the Greek aionios, which is derived from the noun aion or aionos. The use of the adjective, in speaking of "life," shows that the speaker or writer wished to qualify the life in question, to distinguish it from other life. Otherwise there would be no use to say "eternal" or "everlasting" life; it would then suffice to simply say "life." This aionian life, therefore, is a kind of life which differs from any other life. We will consider what is meant by this term. The Greek writers used the adjective aionios to designate things which were either of indefinite or unlimited duration. Liddell & Scott define aionios as "lasting for an aion, perpetual," citing from Plato's Republic. They add that it is like aidios, "everlasting, eternal." Mr. J. B. Rotherham, in a footnote on John iii: 16, in his emphasised New Testament, says, "It is most important to remember that age is not the primary meaning of aion: rather duration indefinitely extended. Moreover it seems to be clothed with this more primitive significance, that the qualifying word aionios comes into use. * * The noun and the adjective are in perfect accord: both have in them the spirit of the famous plural itself (ages of ages), which is simply a more vivid expression of the same idea. He that hath aionian life, lives to the aion—to the remotest age;—in fact, to the ages of ages. Indefinite extension is stamped on all these expressions, aionios refuses to be bounded; as soon as you see the end of a thing aionios becomes inapplicable thereto. * * * To aionian punishment (Matth. xxv: 46) no conclusion can be assigned; if it be essentially a conscience endurance to the subject of it, then it must last as long as consciousness itself remains; if essentially a punishment of loss, it can not be said of the loss that it will ever be exchanged for gain. * * The Hebrew (olam) starts from the notion of concealed, the Greek from that of continuous duration. They coincide in the idea of duration indefinitely prolonged." From all of which it is clear that aionios used adjectively has reference to duration, to time; and hence the life designated by it, possesses some quality of duration which is not shared by any other kind of life. Other subjects are qualified by aionios, as "the kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ" (2 Pet. i: 11); "redemption" (Heb. ix: 12); the "covenant." (Heb. xiii: 20); an "inheritance" (Heb. ix: 15); "salvation" (Heb. v: 9); and "glory." 1. Pet. v: 10. God Himself is said to be the "eternal" and the "everlasting". God. Deut. xxxiii: 27; Rom. xvi: 26. A thing which can not truthfully be said of man. Gen. iii: 22. It is obvious that the adjective aionios as applied to a kingdom, redemption, etc., is intended to convey the idea not merely of indefinite, but unlimited or endless duration. It is said that Jesus "shall reign over the house of Jacob forever (eis ton aiona), and of his kingdom there shall be no end." Luke i: 33. So when aionian life is promised or hoped for (Titus i: 2), it is a life which is unlimited in duration, endless.

That man does not now possess eternal or endless life is very clear. He does not live forever (Gen. iii: 22), but "is of few days and full of trouble." Job xiv: 1. There is nothing in his natural and moral constitution which entitles him to any claim to eternal life. If he ever obtains this boon, so as to live forever (see John vi: 40, 47, 51, 58), it will be because it has been given him by God. "The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. vi: 23. Here we notice (a) the gift, "eternal life;" (b) the giver, "God;" (c) the recipient of the gift, man who needs it; (d) the Medium through which the gift is conveyed, "Jesus Christ our Lord;" (e) the conditions, if any, of the reception of the gift. The gift is in the Giver's power, who can give or withhold it according to His pleasure. He can make its reception conditional or unconditional. That the gift of eternal life is conditional, and therefore will not be granted to men indiscriminately, must be patent to all who have given this question consideration. True, eternal life is a "gift." However this by no means argues that it is given to all men without difference. The Scriptures clearly and emphatically forbid such a conclusion. "As sin hath reigned unto death, even so might grace reign through righteousness unto eternal life by Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. v: 21. Here eternal life is traced to grace which reigns through righteousness. Righteousness pertains to the character and conduct of the persons who receive the grace, or favor; in other words, upon the proper relation between themselves and God. Justification from past sins enters into this relation. This finds its basis, first of all, in the favor of God, but also in the faith and obedience of the one seeking to be justified. Phil. iii: 9; Rom. vi: 16. Faith is the principle upon which God justifies. Rom. iii: 22, 24; 30: iv: 5, 23, 24; v: 1, 2; Gal. ii; 16; iii 8. Without faith it is impossible to please God. Heb. xi: 6. Justifying faith if not without works. Jas. ii: 20-26. These are acts of obedience. Obedience is "unto righteousness." Such obedience makes free from sin. Rom. vi: 18. Then when one is freed from the service of sin, he becomes a servant of righteousness. Being free from sin, the fruit is unto holiness, and the end (the final outcome) is everlasting life.

The fact that all this is due to the grace of God does not prove that eternal life will be indiscriminately bestowed. That "grace of God" teaches us that denying ungodliness and worldly lusts, we should live soberly, righteously, and godly in this present world. Titus ii: 11, 12. The fact that one of its functions is to teach is no proof that its lessons will in every case be heeded and its principles carried out. An inspired apostle besought the brethren at Corinth not to receive the grace of God in vain. 2 Cor. vi: 1. And in thus beseeching them, he styles himself and others as "workers together" with God. The word of God toward those persons in the promulgation of the gospel was one of grace, or favor. This gospel they had "received." 1. Cor. xv: 1, 11. But they were to exercise care lest they should have received the grace of God in vain, or to no purpose. This grace may be "frustrated," set aside, or made ineffective, by an improper attitude toward it. Gal. ii; 21. Men can "fall from grace." Gal. v: 4; Heb. xii: 15, margin. And it is possible to do "despite unto the Spirit of grace." Heb. x: 29. This grace is to reign through righteousness unto eternal life; but where it is received in vain, to no purpose; or turned into lasciviousness (Jude 4); or men fall from it, by clinging to something else; its teaching is disregarded or neglected and its purpose frustrated, it can not be said to reign through righteousness in all sense of the word; and the necessary result must be that eternal life, the reception of which is suspended upon these conditions, can not be received. There were those at Antioch and Pisidia who "judged themselves unworthy of everlasting life." Acts xiii: 46. The context says that "they were filled with envy, and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming." This hostile attitude toward the Word of God caused the apostle to "turn unto the Gentiles" at that place. Those who judge themselves unworthy or undeserving of everlasting life by such open hostility will not be counted worthy to have a part in that resurrection, the participants of which shall not die any more, being the children of God because the children of the resurrection. Luke xx: 34-36. "The life is in the Son" (1. John v: 9-11), that is, the "everlasting life," and therefore "he that hath the Son hath life; but he that hath not the Son of God hath not the life." Standing in the proper relation with the Son is a most important condition toward the reception of everlasting life.

Let me warn the reader against a fundamental and very pernicious error which is entertained with much tenacity. It is assumed, taught, and believed, that the real man is the so-called "immortal soul," and that this "soul" continues to live on after the death of the body. If this view be correct, then it is not true that "eternal life is the gift of God through Jesus Christ our Lord." For if man derives his immortality from Adam, he lives forever whether there is a Jesus Christ or not; and in this way the honor which the Father intends to place upon His Son, is given to another.

If none not even the righteous, are now actually in possession of eternal life, when shall this blessing be received? Let the Lord Himself supply the answer. "In the world to come eternal life." Mark x: 30. "In the world to come life everlasting." Luke xviii: 30. In both these passages two periods of time are contrasted: "Now in this time" (Mark); "in the present time" (Luke), are placed in contrast with "the world to come." The things to be received by the followers of Christ "now in this time" are houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; that which is to be received "in the world to come" is life everlasting. There is a practical and I believe satisfactory way of determining whether or not we have reached the period in which the life everlasting is given. Jesus said, "The children of this world marry (implying that there is another "world"), and are given in marriage; but they which shall be accounted worthy to obtain that world, and the resurrection from the dead, neither marry, nor are given in marriage; neither can they die any more: for they are equal unto the angels; and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection." Luke xx: 34-36. As long as men and women are married or given in marriage, they are in "this world," or age. So long they can die. They have not yet been "counted worthy" by the proper authority, and it behooves them to "walk worthy." Eph. iv: 1. The present world will have an "end." Then another world will obtain. The coming of the Son of man will end the one and introduce the other. The resurrection of those that are Christ's will take place "at his coming." 1. Cor. xv: 23. They are "raised incorruptible." v. 52. The living are changed from mortality to immortality. Then, as the apostle says, "when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this mortal shall have put on immortality, then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written, Death is swallowed up in victory. O death, where is thy sting? O grave, where is thy victory?" 1. Cor. xv: 54, 55. "Our vile body" itself shall be the subject of a "change" so thorough and so glorious. Phil. iii: 20. That will be a life that is "everlasting," endless, and will correspond with an everlasting kingdom, everlasting inheritance, everlasting possession, and everlasting glory. Only God is able to bring about such an exceeding and eternal weight of glory. "Thanks be to God which giveth us the victory through our Lord Jesus Christ."

Love.

Love is one of the principle faculties of the Christian. He that loveth not, knoweth not God, for God is love. In this was manifested the love of God toward us, because that God sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins. Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another. 1 Jno. iv. 8-11.

So we find in the Guide of eternal life much responsibility in this one thing love. In 1 Cor. xiii. 1, we read the following language, Though I speak with the tongue of men and of angels, and have not charity (or love), I am become as sounding brass and a tinkling cymbal. And all through this chapter is similar language, and more especially does the last verse of this chapter place greater stress on this part of the Christian life than any yet referred to. It names the three things that the true believer must positively be in possession of in order to be one of the chosen ones. 13th verse, And now abideth faith, hope, charity (or love) these three. But the greatest of these is charity. We find in the only true Guide much said in reference to love, and as it is one of the most essential things to salvation, it is very needful that much should be said in reference to it. When we pause for a moment and conceive of one so perfect and so determined in the perfecting of the plan for the salvation for poor, frail and fallen humanity, nailed to the dreadful cross, for the love of all men; one who has undergone all the accusations and cruelty that could be bestowed by the wickedest men earth could produce, we hear from the lips of the loving Savior, Father forgive them, they know not what they do. It does seem that one with a heart of sympathy would follow his command and love one another and hold in love the one that paid the price for us. If some friend or earthly associate would lay down their life that we might live, would we not reverence them above others? And would it not be almost unbearable to see them mocked and wrongfully abused? Such was and is yet the thanks to the one that died that we might live.

Paul prayed to God for the Philippians. Phil. i. 9, And this I pray, that your love may abound more and more in knowledge and in all judgment. Sometimes when we are at the brink, ready if not altogether carried along with the tide, help us to remember the love of God, and ever keep aglow our hearts with the things commanded in the Book of life and of love. So forgetful and so neglectful are we liable to become, that without constant watchfulness we shall be very apt to be indifferent from that love that accounts us worthy of eternal life. We read again that we are exhorted not to love in word, neither in tongue: but in deed and in truth. 1 John iii. 18. Herein is our love made perfect, that we have boldness in the day of judgment; because as he is, so are we in this world. There is no fear in love; but perfect love casteth out fear; because fear hath torment. He that feareth is not made perfect in love. We love him, and the reason is, because he first loved us. 1 Jno. iv. 17, 18, 19. Blessed is the man that endureth temptation; for when he is tried, he shall receive the crown of life, which the Lord hath promised them that love him. Jas. i. 12. But as touching brotherly love ye need not that I write unto you: for ye yourselves are taught of God to love one another. And indeed ye do it to all the brethren, which are in all Macedonia; but we beseech you, brethren, that ye increase more and more. According to the instructions laid down in this book of authority, love must ever be increasing. Undoubtedly there is a very great lack of love, for as we can see very distinctly all around us, no matter which way we may choose to look, we can see on every hand the lack of even a spark of love to brighten the path that leadeth unto life. May our hearts be filled with the love of God, and be ready to see the King in his glory. Eph. vi. 23-24. Peace be to the brethren, and love with faith, from God the Father and the Lord Jesus Christ. Grace be with all them that love our Lord Jesus Christ in sincerity. Amen. As we look through the testimonials of the apostles and of Jesus we can find in almost every chapter something said in reference to the love of God toward us, or the love that we should exercise toward him and the brethren. Surely much will be lost if we fall short of the love that makes us fit subjects for the life that ne'er shall end, and may we be able to hear the "well done good and faithful servant."

Serve the Lord with gladness, cheerfulness or pleasure of mind. It should be the bounden duty of every Christian to serve the Lord fervently, for it is from him that we receive all our blessings and him only. It ought to be a pleasure for us to serve him daily, and be our uppermost thought to wait upon him, to have him in our minds constantly for his tender mercy toward us at all times. But what a number of mankind that never lets him come into their minds, they seem to pass along through the world, thinking it a natural consequence that everything will go on as it has from the beginning of creation, they take a great deal more time in the pleasurable amusements of the world than thinking of serving the Lord with gladness. But the time will come upon them unawares, in a time that they think not of, when it will be too late to make amends, and serve the Lord with gladness. For it is through him that we are to gain eternal life, and that is something worth striving for. It will be eternal life, or eternal death, and who would not give up all the pleasurable things of this short and fleeting life for the former, assuredly most any one should. We find it recorded in Psalm xcv. commencing at the first verse, "O, come let us sing unto the Lord, let us make a joyful noise, to the Rock of our salvation. Let us come before his presence with thanksgiving and make a joyful noise unto him with Psalms. For the Lord is a great God, and a great King above all Gods." If we build our structure on the Rock of our salvation, it will surely stand, though assailed by the enemies of Christ. It is the only sure foundation on which to build. A structure built on a sandy foundation is not reliable when assailed by the floods, which might be compared, to the sceptics, atheists and infidels, who know not God and obey not the gospel of Christ. It is he that made us, and not we ourselves. We are his children and the sheep of his pasture. May we realize that we are mortal and of ourselves can do nothing, and therefore we ought to serve him with our whole heart and mind, for the many blessings we receive by his hand. Serve the Lord with gladness, with a cheerful heart, for in so doing we may, (when done with this present life, and Christ comes to establish his kingdom, and take his great power and reign) be so fortunate as to have a part with him.

W. D. Townsend.

"Whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." Col. iii. 17.

And whatsoever ye do in word or deed do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by him. Whether therefore ye eat or drink or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God. By him therefore let us offer the sacrifice of praise to God continually, that is the fruit of our lips giving thanks to his name. In everything give thanks for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning you. Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them, for this is the law and prophets. At the time appointed Christ will render to every man according to his deed. For the Son of Man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels, and then he shall reward every man according to his works. And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily as to the Lord and not unto men. Let no corrupt communication proceed out of your mouth, but that which is good to the use of edifying, that it may minister grace unto the hearers. And grieve not the Holy Spirit of God whereby ye are sealed unto the day of redemption. And be ye kind one to another, tender-hearted, forgiving one another even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.

Obituary.

Mary C. Ransom was born in Vienna, Oneida, Co., N. Y., June 7, 1824. Was married Dec. 28, 1847, to Lorenzo M. Goodyear at Camden, N. Y. She was the mother of eight children—five boys and three girls—all of whom survive but one. Had she lived but a few days more she would have celebrated her eightieth anniversary. Her home for a large part of this time was near Dixon, Illinois, on the estate which the labor of her hands had helped to accumulate and where her husband preceded her in death about seven years ago. Early in life she united with the Congregational church but in later years she associated herself with the Church of God. The coming of Christ, the resurrection from the dead, and kindred subjects were her chief interest. Interment took place on Sunday, May 29, from her late home and in the beautiful city of the dead at Dixon, Ill.

Wm. E. Davis died May 19, 1904, of heart trouble and pneumonia. Bro. Wm. Davis was born in Virginia, Feb. 27, 1836. He served in the Union army and came to Oregon in 1866 with his wife, who was Miss Emily E. Hopkins, to whom he was united in marriage in the State of Wisconsin, in 1857. They settled on the place where they both died 31 years ago. We buried Sister Davis April 13th, a little over a month ago. Bro. Davis was a professed Christian, having united with the Church of God 6 years ago and was connected with the Christian church previous to that date. He left two sons both living on the home place, also 11 grandchildren, and one brother and one sister still reside in Michigan and Dakota. A large congregation attended funeral services. The writer reasoned from the Scriptures concerning Jesus and the resurrection.

Mary A. Heiser was born in Marshall Co., Ind., Aug. 14, 1871, and died June 2, 1904, aged 32 years, 10 months and 12 days. She united as a sister with the Church of God at Burr Oak in 1902. There seemed to be no struggle at death, for she felt that for her was laid up a crown of righteousness that fadeth not away. She was united in marriage to Joseph D. Heiser of Grant Co., Ind., July 30, 1891. To this union three children were born to make life brighter and to cheer and cherish them in their declining years. But lo! when life was the brightest, the sickle that sweeps far and near took from this family their pride, the flower that seemed so pure. Sister Heiser was left motherless when only five years old and in a few years her only brother died, leaving her with only father to live for. One year ago father followed mother and brother. She leaves to mourn her death her most devoted and loving husband, two children, William George and Russell Howard, one of the children, Ica May, having died in infancy. Several aunts and uncles also still survive her. The funeral of Sister Heiser was held at Burr Oak, Sunday June 5. Services were conducted by Bro. D. E. Vanvactor. Interment at Burr Oak cemetery. Husband and children wish to express thankfulness to the many friends for kindness shown during the long illness of their dear one.

Random Thoughts. No. 11.

I now proceed with my topic as to who will be the subjects in the kingdom of God. I have said that while in time it will include all nations, at first it will be Israelites—the twelve tribes of Israel. I will now turn to Ezek. xxxvi. and xxxvii. I wish my reader would at once read these two chapters through, as I can only quote in part. In chapter 36 the Lord by the prophet addresses the mountains of Israel. Then verse 8 to 12, But ye, O mountains of Israel, ye shall shoot forth your branches, and yield your fruit to my people of Israel, for they are at hand to come, for behold, I am for you, and I will turn unto you, and you shall be tilled and sown; and I will multiply men upon you, all the house of Israel, even all of it. And the cities shall be inhabited, and the wastes shall be builded; and I will multiply upon you man and beast, and they shall increase and bring fruit: and I will settle you after your old estates, and will do better unto you than at your beginnings; and you shall know that I am the Lord. Yea, I will cause men to walk upon you, even my people Israel; and shall possess thee, and thou shalt be their inheritance, and thou shalt no more henceforth bereave them.

The whole chapter should be read and it must very plainly appear that the mountains of Israel will again be inhabited and possessed by the children of Israel, not only by the people of the ten tribe kingdom, but by all Israel including the other two tribe kingdom, the kingdom of Judah—the whole 12 tribes, and they shall no more be bereaved, and they will multiply and increase—hence they will be brought back in the mortal state and will marry and be given in marriage. They are not brought from their graves, but, says the Lord, verse 24 "I will take you from among the heathen (nations), and gather you out of all countries, and bring you into your own land."

The same things are taught in chapter 37, also, under the figure of the valley of dry bones. Now, will my readers read the parable or figure verse 1-10, and it will be seen to describe the state of Israel nationally as it is today, with a few exceptions. They have no hope of ever being a nation in their own land again. Now, let us read the explanation by the author of the figure verse 11-14, Then he said unto me, Son of Man, these bones are the whole house of Israel, behold they say, our bones are dried, and our hope is lost; we are cut off for our parts. Therefore prophesy and say unto them, thus saith the Lord God; behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel. And you shall know that I am the Lord, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves, and shall put my Spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land. Then shall ye know that I, the Lord hath spoken it, saith the Lord." This is very expressive when they said, "our bones are dried, our hope is lost, we are cut off," etc. They did not mean they were dead personally or as individuals, but nationally. As a people or nation they were cut off from their land and country. And had lost all hope of ever being a nation in their own land again. They were politically dead and buried among the nations. But just as in the figure, the bones become living people, so they would be gathered out of their political graves among the nations and would become a great nation, and they would then know the Lord had spoken it and performed it.

When to still further show his purpose the prophet is to take two sticks, and they become one in his hand, etc. which is explained to mean (verse 21-28) that the "Lord will take the children of Israel from among the nations, whither they are gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land; and I (says the Lord) will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel, and one King shall be king to them all; and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all; neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their detestable things, nor with any of their transgressions; but I will save them out of their dwelling places, wherein they have sinned, and will cleanse them; so shall they be my people, and I will be their God. And David my servant shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd; they shall also walk in my judgments, and observe my statutes, and do them, and they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob, my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, even they and their children, and their children's children for ever: and my servant David shall be their prince for evermore. Moreover, I will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them; and I will place, and multiply them, and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore. My tabernacle also shall be with them; yea, I will be their God, and they shall be my people. And the nations shall know that I, the Lord, do sanctify (set apart) Israel, when my sanctuary shall be with them for evermore."

I am aware that some people try to explain all this as referring to the church, and in the past, for which I see no reason. The mountains of Israel are not now occupied, tilled and possessed by Israel, but if what God said to and of them were fulfilled, Israel would be there now, and they would be like the garden of Eden. Chap. xxxvi. 35. So also if God had already brought them from their political graves among the nations they would not be there now, but be living on and cultivating their own land. And so with the two sticks. If what is said about them had been fulfilled, instead of the two kingdoms of Israel and Judah being still scattered among the nations without a land, a country, a king or a government of their own they would be both one kingdom in their own land, and David, once their king would be again their king and prince along with Jesus the great King and the apostles and the rest of the saints or holy ones, who will judge, rule or govern the world in righteousness, and these Israelites would be subjects and if but a remnant or part of Israel will return, they will multiply and increase and be very numerous—as the sand of the sea, and they and their children, and their children's children will dwell there for ever! Are they there now? If not, we must look for it in the future. It will be seen that as they will multiply and increase, and children will be born to them, and they again will have children generation after generation, they are still flesh and blood, as subjects in God's kingdom, they must be Israelites living as individuals, (though dead nationally or politically) not those who had died and gone back to dust, and raised from the dead. If the dead, the real dead are to be raised to be subjects in the kingdom and the gospel is to be preached to them, by which means all or nearly all will be saved, then will they marry and be given in marriage, etc. If so, the question of the Saducees, Luke xx., was right to the point, and Jesus missed the mark in his answer. The man that had more than one wife in his life, or the woman that had more than one husband in her life time. If they are to be raised from the dead in the flesh, and (in the case of Israel) taken back to their own land, how will they manage in such cases? The woman that had seven husbands will she have them all at once? So with husbands who had several wives, and some of them were widows, and some men are widowers. If these are to be raised from the dead, and will be subjects in the kingdom of God, will the man or the woman have all their wives or husbands at the same time? And—no I will not ask any more such foolish questions. It seems to me the whole question of any future probation to people who have lived and died in ages past is contrary to God's Word. I have yet to see the first hint for any such thing in the Word of God. But that the people, some people living when the Lord comes (not the saints or holy ones) will live on, and be subjects in the kingdom, and will marry and bear children generation after generation is clearly taught as we have seen from what I have given, but still there is more to follow. More anon.

GEO. ELTON.

The secret things belong unto the Lord our God, but those things which are revealed belong unto us and our children forever that we may do all the Word of the law. Deut. xxix. 29. He revealeth his secrets to his servants, the prophets. Amos iii. 7. A prophet then is a man inspired by the Lord, reveals his secret, as was Daniel. A prophecy may be revealed and not be understood. Dan. xii. 8. As in Dan. xi. 5 to the end of that book. Now this prophecy cannot be explained or understood until the end of the days when Daniel is to stand in his lot as a prophet, when the prophecy will be understood or made known. Some parables of our Lord are explained, others are not. Therefore some of the secret things of the Lord are not fully revealed in the prophecies and the parables, and it will require a prophet to make them known as he "reveals his secret to his prophets." All the expositions of the unexplained prophets and parables cannot cause them to be understood, because they are a part of the Lord's secret, and do not belong in this age. But they will be revealed in their time, which will be in the age to come.

In the 24th chapter of Matthew we have the signs given that are to precede the soon coming of the Lord, and the events that are to take place between the coming in of these signs and his advent. After these things have taken place, then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps and went forth to meet the bridegroom, Matt. xxv. 1, and were commanded to watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of Man cometh. Ver. 13, For the kingdom of heaven is as a man traveling into a far country, who called his own servants and delivered unto them his goods. Verse 14. After a long time the lord of those servants cometh and reckons with them. Verse 19. Then follows the coming of the Lord to judge the nations. Verse 31. I may be asked, Why were these prophecies and parables given if not to be understood in this age? I will answer in the language of another, "O the depth of the riches both of the wisdom and knowledge of God, how unsearchable are his judgments and his ways past finding out, for who hath known the mind of the Lord, or who has been his counselor? Rom. xi. 33.

We know nothing of the mind of the Lord or his ways only as they are revealed in his Word. And should it be admitted that the unexplained prophets and parables can now be understood, then who were the interpreters? Would not this be admission that the Mormons, Dowie and other false prophets might be right? All this array of interpreters of the unexplained prophecies and parables are an empty show of words, and is the wisdom of the world which is foolishness with God. If we do not understand is no cause why we should doubt, as many do. The faithful servant or the child of God doubts not, but faithfully does and believes all that God and the Master says and requires. I believe that God by his wisdom, power and knowledge did take the beginning of his creation. Rev. iii. 14. And by him (Jesus Christ) made all things in the heavens and in the earth. I think that Christ was a created being, and the first of God's creation, and that he had an existence prior to his advent into the world. It has not all been revealed, but a part continues to be the secret of God; now that event was brought about, and should not prevent us from believing that such was not possible by his power, wisdom and knowledge. But let us be admonished as Timothy was, to rightly divide the Word of truth. Yours expecting eternal life at the return of the Lord.

FRANK FOWLER.

The Lord will Come.

It sometimes requires courage for people to stand up and face the world in upholding their convictions, and the Church of God is no exception to this rule, and as a people we are not very popular, for adhering to the great Bible truth, of the personal appearing of the Crucified One, and his establishment of a literal Kingdom or government upon the earth.

A few days ago, I saw in a great secular journal, the statement that "There were a few ignorant people, that for the purpose of scaring other ignorant ones into being good, held to this pernicious doctrine, and advised people not to waste their time in vain expectations of this event literally coming to pass, for the Kingdom of God was purely spiritual, and it was only the spiritual presence of Christ that would ever be realized on this earth."

But it is just possible that there are people, other than Millennarians, though highly qualified to be leaders in secular affairs, yet are ignorant of the fundamental facts of biblical truth. This same writer called attention to the "scare that occured in the year 1000, based upon a forced exposition of Psalm 90-4, and the teachings of William Miller in 18-8, in relation to the end of the world at the time Christ should come." But for our own part we cannot see why the doctrine of the "personal coming," should be so scary, as the very unreasonable and unscriptural doctrine of eternal torment, to which the above writer holds.

Why the literal presence of the man Christ Jesus, should be a cause of fear to those who have obeyed the doctrine once delivered to the saints, we are wholly unable to understand. The life and character of Jesus was such as to win the deepest affections; he was meek, kind and gentle, possessed of the attributes, and ever taught the lessons that would beget the love and devotion of his associates. We understand that God gave to him the same attributes that he himself possessed; and we are taught that "God is love;" and that he is unchangable; why then need we fear to see one come that loves us, and is so anxious to share that love with us that he would sacrifice his own life to gain us to be his friends?

Evidently people are misinformed as to the construction we place upon the phrase, The end of the world. We do not believe that the material world, or earth will be destroyed, or come to an end; but that the present order of things that now exist, i.e, the political heavens or governments, will cease by being supplanted by a righteous government that will execute judgment and justice in the earth; a universal kingdom that will extend over the entire earth, everlasting in its duration, with Jesus and his saints, to execute its just and righteous laws.

To make the truth of our contention clear, we will refer to the covenant God made with Abraham, in which he said, "Unto the and thy seed will I give this land," Gen. xii: 7, an unqualified contract. A few years later, he renewed the covenant and said, "I will give it to thee and thy seed forever." Gen. xiii: 15, xvii: 7, 8. He repeated it to Isaac, Abraham's son, Gen. xxvi:3, 4, 5 confirmed it unto Jacob, Isaac's son. Gen. xxviii: 4, 13. To David he enlarged upon the covenant, in which he declares this Kingdom or government shall stand forever, and the Kingship shall be vested in one of of his own seed or blood. This Kingdom is now in an overthrown condition, Ezek. xxi: 27, and none will deny but that this seed or direct descendent from Abraham and David, is Christ; no one would ask for proof of this, as it is so readily obtained. This Jesus was put to death, resurrected and ascended into heaven; and at the time of his ascension, his disciples inquired of him, if he could at that time restore the Kingdom again unto Israel? Acts i: 6, showing that they understood that this overthrown Kingdom would be brought into working order again, and that He (Christ), was to sit upon it, as its rightful King. When He went up a cloud obscured their vision, and while they continued to earnestly gaze after him, an angel appeared and said unto them, "This same Jesus whom ye have seen go into the heavens shall so come again," (or in like or the same manner) Acts i: 11. Jesus testifies in Mark xiii: 26 that after certain things should occur, that they should see the Son of Man coming in the clouds with great power and glory. Matt. xxiv: 30 records the same. The apostle Peter was concerned as to what they should receive as a reward, for surrendering all they possessed for his sake. Jesus answered, Verily I say unto you, That ye that have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of Man shall sit upon the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones judging the twelve tribes of Israel."

We would think a person would have extreme hardihood to assume that the twelve were sitting upon thrones at the present time, while those tribes are in their scattered and unorganized condition. Yet they are to sit at the time when the Lord Jesus sits upon his throne, and this must be a future event, for Paul had unlimited confidence in the personal appearing of Jesus, for to the Philippian brethren he said, For our conversation is in heaven, from whence we look for the Lord Jesus, who shall change our vile bodies, and fashion them like unto his own glorious body. Phil. iii: 20-21. To the Colossians the same apostle said, When Christ our Life shall appear ye shall appear with him Col. iii; 4. To the Thessalonians, the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout etc. 1 Thess. iv: 16 and again, "When he shall come to be glorified in his saints, and to be admired in all them that believe in that day," day of coming, 2 Thess. i: 10. Just at the close of this grand old apostle's ministry he admonished Timothy his fellow laborer, "I charge thee therefore before God, and the Lord Jesus Christ, who shall judge the quick and the dead at his appearing and Kingdom," and further on, "I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, henceforth there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord the righteous judge shall give me at that day, and not to me only, but unto all them that love his appearing." 2 Tim. iv: 7, 8.

Daniel looking into the future with prophetic eye saw One like the Son of Man come in the clouds of heaven, and there was given him dominion and glory and a Kingdom, that all nations and languages should serve him. An everlasting Kingdom that should never be destroyed. Dan. vii; 13, 14.

This is in harmony with the words of the covenant that God made with Abraham, in which all the nations of the earth should be blessed.

In conclusion, although we have been very brief in bringing testimony to prove the personal appearing of our risen Lord we pray in behalf of our secular brother, that the God of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of glory may give him the spirit of wisdom and revelation in the knowledge of Him, that the eyes of his understanding may be enlightened, that he may know what is the hope of his calling, and what is the riches of his inheritance in the saints. That he may put off his following after the teachings of Pagan philosophers, and study the Scriptures with an eye single to the glory of God and his Christ, that he may receive an abundant entrance into the Kingdom of our Lord Jesus Christ.

MERRITT ELLIOTT.

Selections.

That Great and Last Day.

We know of but one such day brought to view in the Scriptures, called "The judgment of that great day" (Jude i: 6). The apostle calls it "that day," as if pointing to its preeminence above all other days, which is to take place at Christ's second coming. It will be the day when God shall reward every man according as his work has been; one class of men will then be rewarded with the crown of life, and another class will receive eternal death. "The wages of sin is death."

The world—in its present condition—is not to go on always; there is to be a terminus, a conclusion, an end; and the end will come when the last day arrives. When it comes everybody will know it, for it will be no secret affair. "Behold he cometh with clouds and every eye shall see him." That great and last day will surely come, the day for which all other days were made. "For the Lord himself shall descend from heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God" (1 Thess. 4: 16).

The vast multitude of men will be found unprepared, like the antediluvians and the Sodomites, who were destroyed. That great day will close up the affairs of this present evil world, and be the beginning of a fixed, unending eternity of immortality and of blessedness to all God's people. O ye men of earth, what shall that day be to you?

That great day will surely come, for "God hath appointed a day in which he will judge the world in righteousness," by Jesus Christ, whom he hath appointed. That day will surely come with all its realities and recompenses, also with its terrors and gladness, its glory and brightness to the saints, and its blackness and eternal death to the wicked. In view of the near approach of that day, what manner of persons ought we to be? The day will be the opening of the gate of paradise to the overcomer, and of eternal death to the sinner. There will be no carnal mirth or profane laughter on that solemn occasion. That day will end lies, blasphemy, drunkeness, infidelity, scoffing, and all contempt of Christ, and mockery of his saints.

That day should ever be before our eyes. The day which earth has never seen, and the day that men least think about and least regard. This life is allotted to man to prepare for that day, that we may appear before God blameless.

God's love abounds toward all men, and the invitation is to all: "Come unto me, all ye ends of the earth, and be ye saved." There is still salvation for the lost sinner, who should repent, believe, and be saved. That great day has a voice which speaks to all men. To the Christian to be up and doing, and to the sinner to prepare to meet his God.

As to the nearness of that day, the evidence is overwhelming. Yet that day will come as a thief in the night, to all those who are not found watching. There will be many who are almost saved, yet lost after all; almost at the gate yet seeing it shut in their face. So live that an abundant entrance may be administered unto you into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ.—J. E. Clark in Crisis.

The Yellow Peril.

What is the real meaning of the fact that a small hermit nation like Japan—not so long ago classed amongst pagan nations—has suddenly sprung to political manhood, has collected a fleet of modern war vessels, has disciplined an army of scientific fighting men, has challenged the largest European Power, and has struck the first blow with success? There is something serious behind all this, and Dr. Pentecost tells us what this something serious is. The fact is that the West has been living in a fool's paradise concerning the East. Contempt for the colored races has blinded men to the terrible power these races possess. The East has been asleep, but it is awaking. In Japan we see what an awakening means. What if the 400,000,000 of Chinamen awake too? The Asiatic, without Christ, and with modern science, will be a terrible foe. We ought to face these things. Dr. Pentecost has spoken of them with the tones of a prophet, and he very truly shows that nothing but the Gospel, which regenerates the heart, and destroys all racial enmity, can solve this Eastern question. We have reached a solemn hour in the world's history—an hour full of portents. It is the time to pray and to understand the facts.—The Christian.

The religion of Jesus has to do with the life that now is as well as that which is to come. Paul here lays down four rules for the Christian—be awake, be steadfast, be a man, be master. These laws for the Christian life command themselves to the judicious. Be strong; be master of circumstances. Things will not always work in your favor. The tide will often set against you, and you must pull hard against the current if you are to make any progress. Show your power by overcoming difficulties. The highest strength lies in self mastery. If you can down the evil in your heart, hold yourself to the ways of righteousness, you have given the surest proof of manhood.—L. A. Crandall.

Obituary.

Bert Allen Swindler was born near Belleview, Ohio, Aug. 14, 1874, and died at Roll, Ind., May 27, 1904, aged 29 years, 9 months, and 13 days.

He was married to Martha M. Griffith Mar. 6, 1898, to which union was born one child, Dale La Verne, who died Apr. 24, 1903.

The deceased became a member of the Church of God in December 1898, the undersigned officiating at his baptism. His wife, father and mother, five brothers, and two sisters, survive to mourn his loss.

The funeral, which took place at Roll on Sunday May 29th, was attended by a very large concourse of people. The writer spoke words of comfort from Rev. xxi; 1-5.

This death which was due to stepping on a rusty nail shows forcibly that in the midst of life we are in death. Youth and vigor do not exempt from the encroachments of the "enemy" death. Four weeks before when the writer visited Roll, Bro. Swindler occupied his place at the meeting, and now—what a change! May the God of comfort be with the bereaved.

Announcement.

The third Quarterly Conference of the Churches of God in Indiana will convene at the Antioch church at 10:00 o'clock A.M., Friday, June 10, and continue over the following Sunday. The brethren and sisters who have attended the June Meeting at Antioch in former years know the character of this gathering, and scarcely need a special invitation to attend the meeting this year. Many times have God's children met at Antioch and taken with them new spiritual impulses, and there is every reason to anticipate a time of refreshing this year. Let the brethren and sisters for a few days lay aside the cares of this age, and lay up treasure for the age to come. Let the meeting be characterized by deep earnestness and joyful fellowship in the hope of the life to come. Those coming by railroad will come to Plymouth or Argos, where they will be met at trains and conveyed to the place of meeting.

Please send word by postal one week before meeting to Bro. A. R. Underwood, Plymouth, Ind., or T. O. Taber, Argos, Ind., on what day and train you expect to arrive.

A. H. ZILMER, Pres.
LYDIA RAILSBACK, Sec.

The Northwest Conference will convene Friday evening June 17th and hold over the following Monday at Lake Shore, Wash. Lake Shore is about four miles from Vancouver, Wash. Any one wishing conveyance to Lake Shore will correspond with P. G. Wolf of Vancouver. Brethren from a distance will stop at River View hotel right by the ferry landing and wait for the brethren from Lake Shore. All are invited to come and have one more meeting that will be a least long to be remembered. Another Conference year has almost passed and gone, have we spent our time well or have we been idle in the Master's vineyard? All cannot go out in the world to preach, but we all can live a good square Christian life doing good to all around us. By order of the executive committee.

MRS. ALMIRA M. BROOKS.

The 17th Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will be held at Waterloo, beginning Aug. 20. Programme, etc., will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Illinois will meet at Oregon, on the evening of Wednesday Aug. 24, and continue over the following Sunday. The programme will appear later. Let all plan to come, and make this the best Conference ever held in our State. Try to bring a stranger with you, some one that you have trying to lead to a decision for the truth. There is no place more helpful than these Conference meetings to those who are seeking light on gospel teaching. By thus helping others we only add to our own joy in the faith, and our coming reward.

To the Saints of Illinois:

At the quarterly meeting held with the Antioch church on Saturday evening, May 7, it was unanimously decided to hold a Bible school this year just preceding the annual conference as last year. So much did the Board of Management desire it that they voted ten dollars support toward paying the grocery bill for the same. The school will be held beginning on Monday, August 15, 1904. The work will proceed much on the same plan as last year except that the daily sessions will consist of two periods of an hour and a half each instead of two hours each. Many have already signified their intention of attending.

Young people cannot estimate the value of such a training until they have had it. For further particulars write me. Suffice it to say that about the only expense—at least the chief item of expense—will be the expense of transportation. Please write and say that you are coming.

To be glad of life because it gives you the chance to love, to work, and to play, and to look up at the stars; to be satisfied with your possessions, but not content with yourself until you have made the best of them; to despise nothing in the world except falseness and meanness, and to fear nothing but cowardice; to be governed by your admirations rather than by your disgusts; to covet nothing that is your neighbor's except his kindness of heart and gentleness of manners; to think seldom of your enemies, often of your friends, and every day of Christ, and to spend as much time as you can with body and spirit in God's out-of-doors—these are guide-posts on the foot-path to peace.—Henry Van Dyke.

Beautiful Winona.

With the opening of the season at Winona Lake, May 16th, the sale of excursion tickets over the Pennsylvania Lines to that attractive resort in Northern Indiana will begin. Every summer passed there by thousands has only increased their desire to return. On the golf links, the tennis courts, the baseball or cricket grounds, the croquet field, or boating on the lake, fishing, camping, swimming, driving, or attending recitals and lectures by world-famed personages in the auditorium—whatever the diversion may be, the associations are of that congenial sort conferred by good society. This resort is noted as the site of Winona Assembly and Summer School, attracting teachers and students from educational institutions of this and other countries.

Fifteen-day and season excursion tickets will be sold from stations of the Pennsylvania Lines during the summer. For information about fares and time of trains, apply to local ticket agents, or to F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa. Illustrated literature describing attractions of Winona Lake may be had for the asking. Address S. C. Dickey, Secretary and General Manager, Winona Lake, Ind., who will give particulars regarding camping facilities, hotel accomodations, program of addresses by noted speakers and all other details.—Sept. 30.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertised in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIII. Ready PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 15, 1904. NUMBER 23.

The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world began." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

The Word Divine.

Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass way.

Dearer with every passing hour
Is God's sweet word to me,
To fix that truth as to a tower,
In troubled times I flee?
For while the heavens and earth shall last
Its promises are sure—
Yea! when they both are with the past
Its glories shall endure.
The word of Him who cannot lie,
Who, by his own will stand,
When the swift whirlwind sweepeth by,
And in the desert land,
Who sendeth out his angel guard
Above his loved one's way,
And turneth by his rod of power
Their darkness into day.
Whose blessings, promised to the meek,
About their pathway rise,
Like blossoms in a wintry-waste,
Or stars in storm-tossed skies.

O, I have proved each word of thine,
My God, as gold is tried—
Never to fear or prayer of mine
Was thy strong help denied.
I bless thee for each step I've trod,
By the dark waves of woe,
With faith and peace my feet were shod
Through the wild flood to go!
Hast thou not said, "But for a night
The weeping shall endure—
Joy cometh with the morning light?"
O, promise sweet as pure!
Where is my joy?—to dwell apart
From earth's poor bonds set free,
Hidden within thy faithful heart,
To find my all in thee.

—Mrs. Lizzie Fenner Baker.

Communicated.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. Bessie, what have you to suggest for our study tonight?

Bessie. I would select Matt. vi. 33.

Q. Will you please read it?

A. I will. It reads as follows: "But seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness; and all these things (temporal things) shall be added unto you."

Q. What is the chief thing which men so earnestly seek to obtain at this day?

A. Money, or the temporal things of life.

Q. Is that the right thing to seek for?

A. It is not, the chief aim of a disciple's life, should be to seek first of all things, for the kingdom of God. (Not the Church kingdom.)

Q. Is it an easy matter to secure admission into God's kingdom?

A. It is not, it requires more diligence and earnest seeking for, to finally secure it, than it does to secure the temporal things of this life.

Q. What makes you think so?

A. Because I find in Acts xiv. 22, this language: "Confirming the souls of the disciples, and exhorting them to continue in the faith, (not any sort of a church faith, or human creed), and that we must through much tribulation enter into the kingdom of God." This was written some fourteen years after Pentecost, and the kingdom was still a matter of promise to the heirs.

Q. To whom was the above language addressed?

A. To the churches of God at Derbe, Lystra, Iconium, Antioch, etc.

Q. What did Paul and Barnabas do for these churches?

A. "Ordained them elders in every church," Verse 23.

Q. Were the members of these churches already in the kingdom of God?

A. No, that could not be a fact, because Paul and Barnabas had told them, (the members of these churches) that if they should ever enter the kingdom of God, it would be necessary to observe two things.

Q. What two things?

A. 1. "Continue in the faith."

2. "And that we must through much tribulation enter the kingdom." The church kingdom (?)

Teacher. I wish to state right here, that while I was attending a Bible class in the Christian church (better known as Campbellites) at Sherman, Texas, Mr. Fuller, the pastor of that church, said that the position of his denomination was, that the Church is the kingdom of God, and that it was set up on Pentecost. The leader of the class said that the disciples did not understand the nature of God's kingdom when they asked the Savior, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?" Now, Ella, what have you to offer along this line?

Ella. I should observe that the modern Christian church, and the Apostolic churches, are wide apart on that question.

Q. What is the difference between them?

A. It is this: the members of the modern Christian Church claim that they are already in the kingdom of God. The Church being God's kingdom on earth. The members of the Apostolic churches had to "seek for the kingdom of God," and that it could only be entered by those who should "continue in the faith, and that we must through much tribulation enter the kingdom of God."

Q. Under the modern Christian Church system, would it not be better to seek the temporal things first?

A. Yes, it would.

Q. Why so?

A. Because if you only have a good supply of gold, silver, and greenbacks you can by a liberal use of this money, purchase to yourself a high position in the modern church kingdom, without having to endure a single bit of "tribulation."

Teacher. I want to say, that a communicant of this Sherman church, told me, that if a member was too poor to respond to the numerous demands for money called for in that church, that he was of no account in that church. Hence, we can see that money can purchase you a good position and much esteem in the modern church kingdom. If you are poor you can have but little influence.

Q. But with regard to the kingdom of God spoken of in the Bible, are the riches spoken of, an help or an hindrance to gaining an inheritance in God's kingdom.

A. A positive hindrance.

Q. Where do you find it so stated?

A. In Mark x. 23: "How hardly shall they that have riches enter the kingdom of God." It would, indeed, be an immense help in entering the modern church kingdom. It would also be apt to hide a multitude of sins. Are not new pastors of a church advised not to be too severe on certain sins, because you might offend Mr. Blank, who contributes liberally to the support of our church? Money is the foundation rock of the modern church kingdom.

Teacher. Albert, what did Jesus teach his disciples to pray for?

A. "Thy kingdom come."

Q. Do people who teach that God's kingdom did come on the day of Pentecost still pray for the kingdom to come?

A. They do so, constantly.

Q. Is not such prayer vain and useless, if the kingdom is already come?

A. Exactly so, a vain repetition, indeed.

Q. What did Jesus say that it was the Father's good pleasure to do for the "little flock"—the church?

A. Luke xii. 32: "Fear not little flock, for it is your Father's good pleasure to give you the kingdom." If the "little flock" themselves do now form the constituent part of the kingdom in an ecclesiastical system, then the above language is without any significance, whatever.

Q. What did Paul say of the Collossian brethren?

A. See Col. iv. 11: "And Jesus, which is called Justus, who are of the circumcision. These only are my fellow-workers unto the kingdom of God, which have been a comfort unto me." This was written about thirty years after Pentecost, and yet they were not in the kingdom of God, but were only called "unto" it.

Q. Did Paul write to the Thessalonian brethren some twenty years after Pentecost?

A. Yes.

Q. What did he say?

A. "So that we ourselves glory in you in the churches of God, for your patience and faith in all your persecutions and tribulation that ye endure: which is a manifest token of the righteous judgment of God, that ye may be counted worthy of the kingdom of God, for which ye also suffer." Think of it, so long after the church kingdom had been set up, and as yet they were merely judged to be worthy sufferers for a place in that kingdom, instead of being inheritors.

Q. Can an heir be a "possessor" of that for which he is only an heir as yet?

A. He could not. An heir ceases to be an heir, immediately he becomes a possessor. See James ii. 5: "Hath not God chosen the poor of this world, rich in faith, and heirs of the kingdom which he hath promised to them that love him."

Q. How long after Pentecost was this, when God's people were as yet only "heirs of the kingdom?"

A. About twenty-seven years after Pentecost. They had been inheritors of the church kingdom for twenty-seven years, and as yet thought themselves only heirs.

Q. If God's kingdom had at that time been in existence for some twenty-seven years, and these brethren were ignorant of it, and still looked for the future coming of the kingdom, still regarding it as a matter of promise. How do you account for it?

A. They were still heirs, as they supposed they were, because as a matter of fact, no such kingdom did exist, and could not exist, as long as it should remain in the form of a promise. It requires but little mental perception to discern that as long as the kingdom continues to be a matter of "promise," it can never exist as a matter of fact. Hence, there is not the least particle of Scripture evidence to sustain the Campbellite church kingdom teaching.

Q. Some thirty-three years after Pentecost, what did Peter write to those of "like precious faith?"

A. He said, that if they should continue to add certain Christian graces to their faith, "An entrance shall be ministered unto you abundantly into the everlasting kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ." 2 Pet. i. 5-11. It seems that thirty-three years after Pentecost, these "of like precious faith" had not been admitted into the kingdom of God. They did not seem to have any knowledge about this Pentecostal church kingdom, like our modern Disciples do.

Q. If the kingdom had been set upon the day of Pentecost it would have been a genuine flesh and blood kingdom, would it not?

A. It would, but Paul, writing about twenty-six years after Pentecost, said: "Flesh and blood cannot inherit the kingdom of God." 1 Cor. xv. 50. None but the Lord Jesus has as yet obtained the Spirit, or incorruptible nature. Jesus said: "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God." Not a single inheritor of the church kingdom has as yet been "born of the Spirit," and hence, are not inheritors of the kingdom of God.

Q. Can flesh and blood enter the church kingdom?

A. Any amount of it, and some of it pretty sinful flesh, at that. Money can purchase flesh and blood inheritors an honorable place in that kingdom, but money is liable to bar such an one from God's genuine kingdom. The angelic reapers will gather out of that kingdom all offensive things. But things that offend exist in abundance in the church kingdom.

Teacher. Now, Lud, can those who will not conform their lives to the Christ life, enter God's kingdom?

A. By no means. See Matt. vii. 21, 22, "Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven, but he that does the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say unto me, in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied (taught) in thy name? And in thy name cast out devils? And in thy name have done many wonderful works? and then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye workers of iniquity." Some of these professors were Bible class teachers and street preachers, having done many wonderful works in his name (faith healers, etc.), who could also lift up their hands, and cry aloud, "Lord, Lord." They were acceptable members of the church kingdom, but they will be far from being acceptable inheritors of God's coming kingdom, when he shall restore again "the kingdom to Israel." These bogus professors are easily known. They will boldly declare that Jesus' disciples did not understand the nature of God's kingdom, when they asked the Savior, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?"

Q. Was it a church kingdom that God promised Jesus?

A. Very far from it.

Q. Will you please show what it was?

A. Yes. See Luke i. 31, 33: "The Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob forever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end."

Q. Where was David when this so-called church kingdom was founded?

A. Dead and buried.

Q. How long had he been dead and buried, when this supposed church kingdom was founded?

A. About a thousand years.

Q. Then David never had a throne in this modern church kingdom?

A. Never.

Q. Is David not now reigning over the church in heaven?

A. No. "For David hath not ascended into the heavens." Acts ii. 34.

Q. When Jesus reigns on the throne of David, over whom will he reign?

A. "The house of Jacob."

Q. How long will he thus reign?

A. "Of his kingdom there shall be no end."

Q. Then the disciples were not as ignorant as some Bible class teachers may think, when they asked, "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?"

A. No, the question harmonized with Jesus' teaching exactly, and also with God's promises unto him, and also with his oath and covenant unto David. This oath and covenant is of no importance to church kingdom preachers. They are in truth "blind guides." "Come out of her my people, that ye be not partakers of her sins, and ye receive not of her plagues." You can find no home or fellowship with those whose brains are befogged with the wine of old Babylon.

W. H. WILSON.

Christ—The Lion and the Lamb.

Many a man can play the part of the Lion, facing death on the battle field; but how few are they that can play the part of the lamb—manifesting humility and submission?

In George Washington we have a noble example of a man laying aside the glory and exaltation of official life, and assuming the role of a private citizen.

In Japan we behold a nation of lions, boldly battling with a nation of three times their population and resources. But Japan could not submit to the humiliation placed upon her by Russia and her allies some ten years ago—in having to evacuate Port Arthur, and then seeing Russia take possession of what she had won in battle.

History gives us no example of the characteristics of the Lion and the Lamb being united in the same person to the extent that they appear in Jesus Christ—Israel's Messiah. We find in this man perfection. He said, "Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them that despitefully use you, and persecute you."

This He fulfilled to the letter when on the cross, suffering death at hands of His enemies: when human nature would naturally have resented such cruel treatment. But He lion like combined with humility, in obedience to the will of his Father uttered those memorable words—"Father forgive them for they know not what they do."

We find by consulting the fifth chapter of the Revelation that as a lamb He approached the one who sat on the throne, and received the book containing the secrets of the future. As a lamb He prevailed, and in verse 5 He is termed "the Lion of the tribe of Juda, the Root of David." Juda was the leader and spokesman of his brethren, his ascendency over his brethren is reflected in the last words of his father addressed to him.

At Sinai Judah numbered 74,000, Num. i: 20. He is not only the Lion of this tribe but, "the Root of David. How can this son of David be "the Root of David?" In Isaiah xi: 1. He is a Branch out of the root Jesse. But in the day when "the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the Sea, "in that day there shall be a root of Jesse which shall stand for an ensign of the people; to it shall the Gentiles seek: and his rest shall be glorious." Isai. xi. 9-10. So this son of David is become David's Lord. This branch out of the roots of Jesse is become the root of Jesse. As He said, "I am the resurrection and the life, and again "because I live, ye shall live also."

Therefore Jesse and David are indebted to Christ—the Lamblike Lion, for their resurrection, and He can triumphantly say, "I am the Root and the offspring of David, the bright and morning star."

Editor Restitution:

I was very sorry to read in THE RESTITUTION of June 1st of the death of Bro. W. J. Orem of Kansas. I did not have the pleasure of an intimate acquaintance with Bro. Orem, and for this cause I am thankful to Bro. J. P. Bitner who wrote the obituary notice, that he has given us his testimony as to his private life, that "no one in this community so completely held the affections of every one." I met Bro. Orem on the two occasions that he visited this his native State (Maryland), and I would say of him, to know him was to love him. There was a peculiar, straightforward manliness about him that was attractive; a sort of "wild west" good humor and free friendliness that was quite unusual, and as to his eloquence in public address it was altogether unique. On his first visit we managed to get out a small audience in a Baltimore hall to listen to him, and those that came would have been ready to say like Bro. Bitner that "none of the seats felt hard." I have listened to some of the greatest orators of our day, John B. Gough, Charles Sumner, William J. Bryan, senators and congressmen in Washington; I have heard some of the best speakers that we have on gospel themes, but none of them surpassed, if they equalled, Bro. Orem for natural eloquence. It seems to me that one who heard him speak could better understand the testimony of Jesus concerning the power of John the Baptist. There was a sense of power in his delivery and a feeling in the listener of a reserve power, and yet there was no apparent effort on his part, no straining after effect, only a long steady flow of ideas interspersed with wit and pathos. He could descend from the sublime to the ridiculous, and mount as readily to the sublime from the ridiculous and carry his audience along without a jolt. He could tear an opposing argument to rags with a little side remark, or even a shrug or a wave of the hand that was much easier to understand than a long argument. It seems a loss when such a man falls. We think may be that a power like his turned to account would gather into the gospel net whole loads of converts. It does seem strange why it is not so, especially in view of the fact that the false gospels of the day are ground out and drawled out in such prosy style for the most part. Nevertheless it is written, Neither will they believe, even if one rose from the dead. Another point that was noticeable in Bro. Orem was his modesty. In private he seemed more ready to listen than to talk, so different this is from public speakers as a rule that seem to enjoy the sound of their own voices. I suppose it is something over twenty years since I met Bro. Orem, yet his remembrance is still fresh with me today, his quiet manner in private, contrasted with his lionlike power in public and his gracious wit contrasted with his sarcastic humor in debate, and over all that sublime reverence before God, and that modest respect and commiseration for his fellow being that made him a type of the best style of western American. May we meet him again soon in God's kingdom.

Editor Restitution:

When we realize that God has promised eternal life, and also that there is a time coming when sin and sorrow, pain and death shall be done away. When we understand that our Savior has promised us a position in his kingdom and that both now and in the world to come we may have the privilege of helping to bring about this glorious condition of affairs. It seems to me that no matter what trials or temptations we may have to meet that we should be the happiest people on earth, for we know that if we overcome these things as we should we will be made stronger and be better fitted to do the work that God has for us to do. Those of us here at Hammond, La. who were members of Bro. Wilson's Pine Woods Bible Class were certainly made glad when we saw the leader of our class once more and heard him preach the grand old gospel of the kingdom in such a plain earnest way, that it is hard to see why all could not understand; but if those of us who do believe these things will only work as earnestly and courageously as we should until the chosen ones are all selected, then our reward is sure. I never pick up THE RESTITUTION but what I find something good in it and today I was especially pleased when I read what Bro. E. S. Dwiggins had to say on healing the sick. I believe that if we had more faith in God's willingness to answer prayer that we would be stronger and better Christians.

Your brother in Christ.

ALBERT SIPLE.

Dear brothers and sisters:

This is my first attempt to write for the love feast, which I enjoy so much. As my subscription is about out I will renew, enclose one dollar and a half pay for the dear paper. I feel greatly encouraged when I read the letters from different ones of the faith telling of the good work being done in various places. I do hope the Lord will help all to work while it is yet day, for the night cometh that no man can work. I am firm in the belief of a Redeemer that was begotten by the Holy Spirit, born of the Virgin Mary, the Son of God, and he and he alone is the one that is to redeem and restore all things. As the wickedness of the last days increase we should ever be on the watch. Who must we watch? Our brother or sister. No, let us pray for them and watch ourselves. The Lord does not require us to separate the wheat and tares, but says let them be until the harvest, he is the only one that knows how to separate them.. I ask all of the Church of God to pray for me that I stumble not.

An Unexpected Exposure.

In Pittsburg, Pa., there is or was, a club known as the Columbia, to which and unfortunate accident occured on Sunday morning while people were on their way to church. The club's house was next a vacant lot, which had been excavated preparatory to building on it. It happened that on Sunday, morning the wall of the clubhouse on the side of the excavation fell down, leaving the rest of the building completially intact. The interior of all the rooms on that side was thus exposed to the view of those passing by. When the wall fell it was seen that the several rooms of the top floors were occupied by gambling parties, who doubtless had been engaged in the game all night. The partitions were so twisted that the doors of escape could not be opened from the inside, and the occupants of the rooms had to stay there in full view of the persons going to church until the firemen could raise ladders for their relief.—Boston Herald.

PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 15, 1904.

THE report of the Michigan Conference is at hand, and will appear in next issue.

THIS is the time of year when many are quite busy with work, but we trust those who have not yet renewed their subscriptions will take time to think that our bills must be met, and that we need what is due to continue our work.

WE are informed that Bro. T. E. Adams died at his home in Oswkie, Kan., on May 22. It will be remembered that last fall he had some sort of a stroke, and died we presume from the results of. We trust some one will furnish us a suitable obituary of Bro. Adams, for he was one of the best of men.

OUR Antioch Meeting for 1904 is in the past. The attendance by the members was as large as ever, though some judged the outside crowd less than a year ago. The house was filled, and many standing up on Sunday. The secretary will give a report, but we wish to say that the interest in the services, the attention to the preaching, and the kindly spirit of love that pervaded throughout, was a marked feature of the occasion. For the past forty years these June meetings have been held at this place, and it is to be hoped that nothing will prevent their continuance.

THERE is little War news to tell since last week. The Japs to the North are still pushing the Russians back, with losses on both sides that show stubborn fighting, though no extended engagement has taken place Around Port Arthur it is the same. The Japanese miners and sappers get nearer and nearer as days pass by, and seem persistent in the determination to capture the place. Many rumors are published, but the movements and intentions are kept secret to a large extent. On Tuesday came the word that some 40 Russian vessels were coming from the Baltic, but whether it be an actual start of a part of that fleet for the far east, or only a trial trip is not known. It was stated also that the Black Sea fleet would pass the Dardanelles on June 20, but until that event actually occurs little need be said. If England and the other powers allow the Sultan to agree to this move, it will be for a purpose they all understand clearly.

The Paternity of Jesus! and Arraignment of Marcionism. No. 1.

1. We enter upon the discussion of this matter because Rev. ii. 14-16; and also verses 20-23 make it clear that the Church of God is held responsible if pernicious doctrines are allowed to be taught in it.

2. Because we are persuaded that if Joseph was the father of Jesus WE HAVE NO SAVIOR!!

3. Because 1 John ii. 22, 23 shows that it is a fundamental principle of the divine economy that "whosoever denieth the Father and the Son is anti-christ, and

4. Because we believe, and intend to prove, that this description applies exactly to the system we oppose, and

5. Because from Marcionism to the present time, its adherents have not scrupled to discard whatever Scriptures conflicted with their tenets, and

6. Because its present-day literature abounds with evidence that Moses, the Prophets and the Psalms which speak of Jesus are lightly esteemed; and

7. Because many of the advocates of the system show that they never had more than a smattering knowledge of the truth as it is in Jesus, or else they would not make such egregious blunders as will appear in the extracts we make below. This does not apply to all, we regret to say.

8. Because it practically sets aside the principle of justification by faith; and

9. Because it teaches that the salvation of every one is attained to on account of good deeds, or their own personal righteousness, and

10. Because this system aims its axe at the very root of the tree we have taken shelter under when it ignores,—denies the sacrificial nature of the death of Jesus, by whom we have at-one-ment, or reconciliation. And

11. Because what success has attended the advocacy of this pernicious teaching in this country was by such commendable. And if its brethren in America had acted on this principle they would not have been subjected to the criticism. If they would go and do likewise, we doubt if any one would disturb them.

And now as to the wonderful begettal,—Because it is wonderful to him it does not follow that it is one of the lying wonders predicted by Paul. As he did not give any proof of his assertion, it is to be presumed that he had none: or else that his dear friends, in his judgment, had already been "given up by God to believe the wonderful lie that they might be condemned."

Further on he says "the story of the miraculous conception is proven to be a heathen fable, introduced (after the days of the apostles) into the gospels of Matthew and Luke to gain it credit." It would have been as easy to have given the proof as to make this statement. Our readers must decide why he not give it.

Was it more wonderful to make a woman out of a man in the first place, than it was to make a man out of a woman later? If not, are there not two lying wonders? If the woman was not made out of the man, WHERE did she come from? It says that the Lord God took a rib from Adam while he was asleep and closed up the flesh, and of the rib so taken made he a woman. Is this wonderful story swallowed by our author? If so, it must be very trying to him, seeing it was a woman of full size and all her faculties in working order; and such a paucity of material, just a rib! And such a marvelous surgical operation, too!!

But it must not be forgotten that it just as positively says that "when the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth his Son, made of a woman, made under the law to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons."

1. A TIME had been SET by God for sending forth his Son.

2. The mode of deliverance adopted by God with reference to those who, under the law, were in hopeless condemnation, is here given.

3. He sent forth HIS SON.

4. He did NOT adopt the SON OF JOSEPH, and send HIM.

5. The method of procuring the Son he sent is here given.

6. He was made of a woman.

7. This agrees with Matthew and Luke, who both show that he begat a Son of his own by a virgin by overshadowing her with the creative power of the Spirit.

8. All this is in harmony with Gen. iii. 19, and Isaiah vii. 14.

How different this from our author: —"I therefore believe that in order to redeem mankind from their state of sin and misery, God selected from among his fellows, Jesus of Nazareth, a man pre-eminent among them for piety and virtue, and that he was the natural Son of Joseph and Mary."

The promise regarding the seed of the woman given in the garden is ignored; the evident intention being to convey the idea that the Almighty happened to find a person that would answer his purpose very well, and so adopted him.

This proves what we said at the outset,—that those holding the idea that Joseph was the father of Jesus, have always ignored whatever Scriptures seemed to conflict with their views.

This was not a difficult matter, if it was not necessary to find a sinless person: and providing also that the lamb without blemish under the Mosaic system was not typical of the "Lamb of God" that was to "take away the sin of the world."

And under those circumstances Isa. vii. 14 can be easily disposed of, by saying that instead of a virgin, it should read "A YOUNG WOMAN shall conceive!"

What a WONDERFUL SIGN that would be, to advertise more than seven hundred years ahead,—so that the people would be on tiptoe with expectation! Such an unheard of thing!

We cannot be mistaken, our straight jacketed Josephite does not believe what Gal. iv. 4 declares God did do,—sent forth HIS Son made of a woman. Does not believe what is quoted from Ps. xlvi. 6, in Hebrews x. 5, which proves that, in the Purpose of God, a Body had been for a long time prepared for the Son to be sent forth when the full time to do so arrived.

The accounts of the paternity of Jesus in Matthew and Luke are too wonderful for him,—although the event is attributed to the same Spirit of God which moved upon the waters when it was all in darkness, and the earth without form and void:—the same Spirit that formed man of dust, and woman of man. He should read Jer. xxxii. 27, where Jehovah says, "Behold I am the Lord, the God of all flesh, is there anything too hard for me?" And meditate upon the language of Jesus in Mark xii. 26, "Do ye not therefore err, because ye know not the Scriptures, nor the power of God."

After reading, "by the WORD of the Lord were the heavens made, and all the host of them by the breath of his mouth. He gathereth the waters of the sea together as an heap, he layeth up the depths in storehouses. Let all the earth fear the Lord; let all the inhabitants of the world stand in awe of him; for he SPAKE and it was done; he COMMANDED and it stood fast;" yes; after reading these sublime words it is SICKENING to see men setting aside the divinely revealed truth that the Son of God was made of a woman, and haggling learnedly (?) over the tiniest microbe of divine substance with its law of procreation, and as to whether creation was without or within, and winding up with a clear case of adultery!

To such shameful lengths will frail mortals go when they become wise above what is written. As if the WORD OF THE LORD, that made the heavens and the earth and all the Host of them; and had DECLARED that the Seed of the woman, should bruise the Serpent's head, had promised more than he could perform; or what was impossible.

"Ish" is the original for man. "Is ha" is the feminine of "Ish," and signifies, says Prof. Bush, man-ness. The English word woman, however, will appear a more appropriate rendering of its Anglo-Saxon origin, "womb-man," i. e., female man, he borne in mind. Did not the Maker of the first man and first woman know what word to select to convey his idea? Is there another such phrase in all the Book? If not, why not? Is not this Seed of the woman to be Abraham's Seed? Does not Paul say that Abraham's Seed is Christ? Gal. iii. 16. Does not Luke i. 32 identify the Son of Mary as the rightful heir to David's throne, long overturned? Ezek. xxi. 25, 26. Is not this the man we read about in the 80th Psalm: "Let thy hand be upon the man of thy right hand,—upon the Son of Man whom thou madest strong for thyself?"

We have a distinct reference in Psa. cxvi. 16, to the promise to the woman, and also her Seed. It says—"O, Jehovah, truly I am thy servant: I am thy servant and the Son of thine handmaid; thou hast loosed my bonds."

In the death state he was bound until the dawn of the third day, and then his bonds were loosed, thank God! We thank him again that he never forgot his promise to the woman! She was Jehovah's handmaid midway between the promise and its fulfilment.

The evidence has recently been furnished us that after more than twenty-five years of earnest search for proof that the accounts of the nativity of Jesus were not authentic;—the most the searchers can say, is, "We candidly believe that certain verses in the first chapter of Matthew have been injected into the record by another hand than Matthew's." What a gospel to offer people? "Believe that Joseph was the Father of Jesus because we candidly believe that certain verses in Matt. i. have been injected into the record by another hand than Matthew?

It is a high handed piece of business for our author to call the miraculous conception a lying wonder on such evidence as that; and expect his dear friends to pin their faith on to the candid belief of others. It also reflects on the wisdom and goodness of God, if the salvation of the many depends upon the researches of the learned few. How can they have "a candid belief" even, if they have not the testimony? They only have a candid opinion we think. We will not be robbed of the first chapters of Matthew and Luke till we get the evidence. Who are they to foist their opinion upon us?

Table Talk.

We are taught in the first verses not to have respect of persons, judging them from outward appearance, if we do we commit sin, but rather have respect unto the poor, for if we come to him in the right way, by faith and obedience we are all one in Christ Jesus, whether we be rich or poor, there is no respect of persons with God. We find it is the poor of this world that God has called. I will read a few quotations. It is the poor that have the gospel preached to them, the Lord heareth the poor and despiseth them not, Jesus blessed his disciples, saying, Blessed are the poor, for yours is the kingdom of God. Luke vi. 20 and brethren have not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty; not many noble are called, but it is the poor, rich in faith, heirs of the kingdom which he has promised to those that love him. And as we have opportunity let us do good unto all men, especially unto the household of faith. Bearing one another's burdens, we are also to love our neighbor as ourselves, to visit the fatherless and widows in their affliction. Let us not be weary in well doing, for in due season we shall reap if we faint not, for he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap life everlasting. What a glorious future to look forward to! Let us who have been obedient be faithful, that we may have an abundant entrance in the kingdom. Amen.

Editor Restitution:

My subscription expired some time ago, and I am not yet able to renew. My health has been very poorly all the past winter and spring, so that I am not able to attend to business. My aged mother, aged 86 years, fell and broke her hip last Oct., which and occurence has made it necessary to give most all my attention to her. She was gaining strength nicely, though at her age she would certainly be very tottery, but she received another fall the other day, and now she is down in bed again, though I hope not so bad as at first. I have rehersed the matter to you because I thought it was due you to know why I have not renewed my subscription for the Restitution.

I am very sorry I delayed writing, thinking perhaps I might be able to get the money. We hear no gospel here, and are quite isolated, but I can't ask you to send me the paper. We shall sorely miss its sweet messages every week, and will be so lonesome too. D. V. I intend to send again for my dear old RESTITUTION some sweet day, but for the present I will only say God bless its every number, and may it live to tell the grand old Gospel till the Lord comes, is my prayer. Many thanks for sending it so long after it was due.

[We have no right to publish the name of the writer of the above. The time of this subscription expired last March. If any one wishes to have the honor and privilege of paying for this Sister, we will be glad to credit her account. Surely she should not be deprived of the paper, just because she cannot pay for it.—ED.]

Beware of Dogs.

"Beware of dogs," said Paul, writing to the Philippian Christians. He meant human dogs. He knew something about them. He had been hunted, scratched, and bitten by them. He had often had a howling, yelping pack of them at his heels. The best prescription he could get out of his experience with them was given in the one sharp word, "Beware!"

"Beware of dogs"—snapping, snarling dogs that don't bite but keep everything around them in a state of discomfort, uncertainty and vexation. If you meet one don't stop to argue with him. It doesn't pay. Give him right of way, and go about your business. Let him enjoy his own ugliness, and snarl to his own edification.

"Beware of dogs"—sneaking, cowardly, skulking dogs, that watch for a good chance to snap at your heels, and then scamper off before you can compliment them with a kick. Turn away from them—if you can. If you can't get away from them, don't walk backward the rest of your life, just to keep facing them. Let them snap till the snap is all out of their vicious jaws. You can stand it if you are not on forbidden ground.

"Beware of dogs"—mad dogs, whose bite is dangerous if not fatal—dogs that go galloping through town and country, with venomous froth and foam of slander dripping from their tongues and gaping jaws. Take the other side of the fence and let them have a clear track. If they should break their cruel teeth on an intervening rail, all the better. They do that sometimes!

"Beware of dogs"—big, stubborn, pugnacious bull-dogs, that hold on, right or wrong, wherever they happen to take a grip. They do not prolong an argument upon any question of right, but clinch it forthwith with a final snap. Absence of body is more to be recommended than presence of mind in dealing with them. Bull-dogs are good in their place, whatever that may be!

"Beware of dogs"—blood-hounds, that pursue their victims to the death, never losing the trail, with malice unfailing and perseverance unyielding, rushing on over fields and gardens, without respect to the rights of others, ...have accomplished their purpose or exhausted their strength.

"Beware of dogs"—all human dogs. Paul's shot was aimed at the whole tribe. David's lament was, "Dogs have compassed me," and Paul's experience was no less unpleasant. Burly human bull-dogs gripped him; blood-hounds pursued him; mean little sneaking curs barked and snapped at his heels; and hungry street scavengers howled around him. It is for us to profit by his experience and heed his warning words: "Beware of dogs."—Evangelical Messenger.

Begin Where You Are.

The man who has really resolved to live the best life that he can, must begin right where he is—begin where his failures, his false education, his errors, and his sins have left him. By no single stroke of the pen can we erase whole pages in the history of our lives. We have made or unmade ourselves as we are. If we could only begin at some lofty height which our moral dreams picture for us, it seems to us that there would be inspiration in going still further; but we cannot substitute in a moment the dream-life for the real one. We are surrounded on every side by hard and tangible realities. We must begin where we are. One who takes a practical and sagacious view of what is possible to him in life, will not burden himself by attempting the unattainable. He will begin when and where he is, and do that which lies in his power. Every day of life brings its own task; each task is an opportunity; each task accepted, each opportunity fulfilled, may be a step toward a higher life. Jacob's old dream was not an unreasonable one. His angels did not fly to heaven; they went patiently up each round of the ladder, and they began at the bottom.—Christian Register.

Only One Gate.

The old city of Troy had but one gate. You would search in vain for a second through all its high walls in their ample circumference. There was only one way, and no other could be found that led into the city. Nevertheless, the one gate was passable for all save an enemy.

Even so is the way into life eternal in the city of God. "I am the door," said Christ. "Strait is the gate," he also said; and again, "Enter ye in at the strait gate." Troy was, but Jerusalem the golden is. Its door is wide open, its gate ever accessible. The way there is narrow, but all the lowly can walk in it. There is room enough within the pearly gate of the amble city for the perishing millions. None need remain outside.

But the one way, the one gate—do you find it? Are you seeking it? Is your hand on the latch, and hold of the door? Do you hear the wide, wide welcome shouted through the shining portal—"Come in! come in. Eternal glory thou shalt win"?—Will you pass in by the only appointed way, the one gate, and be forever blessed? Come and enter now before the door is closed against you, and the star of hope sinks from sight behind the dark mountains of judgment.—D. T. Taylor.

PLEASE do not forget that we need all that is due on subscription at this time.

For each dreamer, of all the young pilgrims across the world of time, there waits the angel ladder. Beside each one of us the bush in the desert burns with fire. The difference between those who see and those who do not see these things lies in their devotion or disobedience to truth, so far as they know it.—F. B. Meyer.

IT is surely evident to all that we cannot well do business without means. It surely is likewise evident to those who have not yet renewed their subscription that we must be in need of what is due us. We dislike very much to mention this, and hope you will not compell us to repeat the hint.

Our Helping Fund.

We whose names are given herewith, believing that it is our duty to provide a fund to be used in sending THE RESTITUTION to those too poor to pay for it themselves, do cheerfully give the amount set opposite our names for the purpose of aiding the managers of the paper to supply the needy ones. This fund to be applied as the donors request, (or when left to the publisher to decide) only for those who themselves state their circumstances and need, or whose case is presented by some one known to be trustworthy.

A Cup of Cold Water.

The Lord of the harvest walked forth one day,
Where the fields were white with the ripening wheat,
Where those he had sent in the early morn,
Were reaping the grain in the noon day heat,
He had chosen a place for each with in our,
And bade us there work till the day is done.

Apart from the others, with troubled voice,
Spoke one who had gathered no golden grain;
"The Master has given no work to me,
And my coming hither has been in vain;
The reapers with gladness and song will come,
But no sheaves I will bear in the harvest home."

He heard the complaint, and he called her name:
"Dear child, why murmur thou idle here?
Go fill thy cup from the full-tide stream,
And bring it those who are toiling near,
I will bless thy labor, and it shall be Kept in remembrance as done for me."

'Twas a little service, but grateful hearts
Thank'd God for the water so cool and clear;
And some who were fainting with thirst and heat
Went forth with new strength to the work so dear;
And many a weary soul look'd up,
Revived and cheered by the little cup.

Dear Lord, I have looked with an envious heart
On those who were reaping the golden grain;
I have thought in thy work I had no part,
And mourn'd that my life was lived in vain;
But now thou hast opened my eyes to see
That thou hast a work for little me.

If only this labor of love be mine—
To gladden the heart of some toiling saint
To whisper some words that will cheer the weak:
Do something for me—I'm worn and faint—
Though small be the service, I will not grieve,
Count at just a cup of cold water to give.

And when the Lord of the harvest shall come,
And the laborers home from the field shall call,
He will not look for my gathered sheaves;
But his loving words on my ears will fall,
"Thou gavest a cup of cold water to Me
A heavenly home thy reward shall be."

The Sons of God.

In these days of religious discussion it seems a difficult matter to always determine the truth as it is written in the Word of God. In this article we shall attempt to show who the sons of God are, and how we become such. In Romans viii. 14, we read thus, "For as many as are led by the Spirit of God they are the sons of God." Without controversy this is a very plain statement. If led by the Spirit of God then the sons of God. But when are we led by the Spirit of God? While we are aliens or after our adoption as sons? These questions should find an answer in God's Word, so to it we must go. Adam and Christ were sons of God—Adam by creation and Christ by begettal. Both were put on trial for the rulership of the world. Adam failed. But Christ gained the victory. God's plan is to complete the new creation under Christ and to fill his purpose he is calling for sons. In Acts xv. 14 Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles to take out of them a people for his name. We should keep two things in mind in this text. That God did visit the Gentiles and how he did visit them. Christ called his twelve disciples to make them rulers in the time of regeneration. Matt. xix. 28. The apostles are to rule over the twelve tribes of Israel. So he must have other rulers. Rev. iii. 21. To him that overcometh will I grant to sit with me in my throne, even as I also overcame, and am set down with my Father in his throne. Rev. v. 10. And hast made us unto our God kings and priests, and we shall reign on the earth. The sons of God are those who are called according to his purpose and who become a peculiar people. In reading an account of the life of Christ we hear through what trials he passed. He was without honor in his native city. On many occasions he was scornfully treated. In the language of Isaiah, he bore our griefs and carried our sorrows, he was despised and rejected by men; he was bruised for our iniquities; he was oppressed and afflicted. All this came upon him that he might become the Son of God. God acknowledged him to be his Son at his baptism in the following language, Matt. iii. 17, "This is my beloved Son in whom I am well pleased. Again on the Mount, Luke ix. 35, This is my beloved Son; hear ye him. This voice came to Christ when he was obedient to the Father's will. At his baptism he was anointed by the Spirit, and John says iii. 34, For God giveth not the Spirit by measure unto him. Again it is written that Christ is the only begotten of the Father, full of grace and truth. He was fully prepared for the work that the Father gave him to do. Christ was obedient to the end, suffering death on the cross for which God declared him to be his Son. Rom. i. 4. And declared to be the Son of God with favor, according to the Spirit of holiness by the resurrection from the dead.

Now if we ever become the sons of God it must be in following in his steps. First, our begettal must take place. Being (begotten) born again, not of corruptible, but of incorruptible by the Word of God, which liveth and abideth for ever. I Pet. i. 23. 2nd, we must be planted together in the likeness of his death that we shall be also in the likeness of his resurrection. Knowing that our old man is crucified with him. Now if we be dead with Christ, we believe that we shall also live with him. Now if we do not become obedient to this form of doctrine can we have the hope herein expressed, "That we shall live with him." Certainly not. Our sonship depends upon our willing obedience to God's words. The churches of today teach that God's Spirit must quicken our hearts in order that we may believe. Is this true? Christ promised to send the Comforter. When he is come, he will reprove the world of sin and of righteousness, and of judgment. And he will guide you (the apostles) into all truth. If we get the Spirit of God we must come where it is. At Pentecost the Church was baptized with or in the Holy Spirit. Christ had been previously anointed with the Spirit. The apostle declares Christ to be the head of the body, the Church. Now, if the Spirit has been deposited here we must in order to get it come into the church, complying with the requirements laid down in the Word. No alien can receive this Spirit, for it belongs in the Church. How may aliens become sons and heirs? Let Paul answer, Eph., That at that time ye were without Christ, being aliens from the commonwealth of Israel and strangers from the covenants of promise, having no hope and without God in the world. When they were Gentiles they were aliens, etc. But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off are made nigh by the blood of Christ. These Gentiles were made heirs through faith in the gospel of Christ, which Paul declared was the power of God unto salvation unto every one that believeth. Believeth what? The gospel of Christ. Jesus came into Galilee preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God. Mark i. 14, called by others the Word of the Lord. In answer to the jailor's question, Paul said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved and thy house. And he spake unto them the Word of the Lord. Acts xvi. 31, 32. What followed? And he took them the same hour of the night and washed their stripes; and was baptized, he and all his straightway. The jailor expressed a wish to know what he must do to be saved. Paul answered him by preaching the Word of the Lord. They were then baptized. When Philip went down into Samaria and preached unto them the things concerning the kingdom of God and the name of Jesus Christ they were baptized both men and women. In Philip's preaching to the eunuch he opened his mouth and preached unto him Jesus. This preaching led the eunuch to demand baptism at the hand of Philip. If thou believest with all thy heart thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. Then Philip baptized him.

We observe then in three incidents that the order is the same. So with the voice of two or three witnesses shall every word be established. John the Baptist preached they should bring forth fruits meet for repentance. (Mar. fruits answerable to amendment of life). If we get the Christ life we must bring the fruits required. Matt. iii. 8. Again, But as many as received him, to them gave he power (right or privilege) to become sons of God. To become the sons of God we must believe the record that God has given of his Son. It is useless for us to say that we have to answer to our own conscience in this matter. We are required to answer a good conscience toward God. We are required to bring into captivity every thought to the obedience of Christ. If we fail to comply with the first principles we fail throughout. We must comply with the law of pardon. The Psalmist says, Psa. xix. 7. The law of the Lord (margin doctrine) is perfect, converting the soul. Again it is written, Isa. lv. 7, Let the wicked man forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts, and let him return unto the Lord, and he will have mercy upon him, and to our God for he will abundantly pardon.

Gather from what source you may and the same truths present themselves. Our minds are influenced by the reading or the preaching of the gospel. It becomes receptive and the good seed has fallen into good ground. By proper cultivation we may gather an abundant harvest. How true it is "If in the spring we scatter a handful of seeds in the summer we may gather a lap full of flowers." "Seek ye first the kingdom of God and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you." Matt. vi. 33. For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, they are the sons of God. For ye have not received the spirit of bondage again to fear; but ye have received the spirit of adoption, whereby we cry Abba Father. There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. Rom. viii.

In concluding permit me to quote from Gal. iii. 26-29, For ye are all the children (sons and daughters) of God by faith in Christ Jesus. For as many of you as have been baptized into Christ have put on Christ. There is neither Jew nor Greek, there is neither bond nor free, there is neither male nor female; for ye are all one in Christ Jesus. And if ye be Christ's, then are ye Abraham's seed, and heirs according to promise. So let us be God's acknowledged sons, and if faithful to the end he will declare us to be his sons by the spirit of holiness, and by our resurrection from the dead. Then we shall be heirs of God and joint heirs with Christ. Your brother in the hope.

D. C. Rousos.

In Christ or not in Christ.

Is an important question, upon the answer to it, eternal consequences depend. Out of Christ we are aliens to the commonwealth of Israel, and strangers to the covenants of promise, and are without God in the world: and liable to utterly perish forever.

But in Christ we have access unto the Father; to Him of whom the Son saith, the Father himself loveth you. What a consolation, to be loved by Him who is the fountain of love, from which flows every good and perfect gift?

In Christ we are sons and daughters of the Lord, the Creator of the heavens and the earth. In Christ all the precious promises of God's Word are ours.

As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people; and no good thing will He withhold from them, that love Him. Verily it is our wisdom to lay hold of the eternal life, offered in the Gospel. Having been inducted into Christ in the divinely appointed way; by immersion in water; thus symbolizing the death of the old man, and our raising therefrom to walk in newness of life,—walking in Christ the new man.

Then if we walk in Him, and not deny His name; we have the promise of eternal life in the Kingdom of God. What an honour to be associated with Jesus Christ, the righteous, in the work of dispelling darkness from all the earth? To enlighten men's minds, so that the fires of Purgatory, and of eternal torment, will disappear before the truth like mist before the rising sun. And if to know that we have contributed our mite to the salvation of some poor souls will be our greatest consolation: What will be the enjoyment of our Lord, when He beholds the hosts of the redeemed, saved by His spotless life, and death?

Baptism.

I rejoice to make a record of the fact that Rosetta B. Wilbur, of Loran, Illinois, put on Christ by baptism on Sunday, June 5. She is the young daughter of our Bro. and Sister W. A. Wilbur. One by one the faithful ones are falling by death but here and there we find one who is willing to step in to fill the vacant place. May God sustain this dear Sister in all of the trials and temptations which she is sure to meet. She has the prospect of a life of great usefulness for her Master and her friends and brethren. Brethren, remember this dear one in your prayers.

S. J. Lindsay.

Dear Restitution:

Please find enclosed post office order for one dollar and a half to pay for the dear old Restitution. I am some behind the time, but please pardon me as I am getting old. It grieves me to see so many not prompt in paying for the Word of God. We are told that we should owe no man anything. I have prayed earnestly for thy kingdom to come, and thy will to be done on earth as it is in heaven. May God be with all the household of faith till Jesus comes, is my prayer.

Mrs. Emily Collett.

Letters to the Michigan Conference.

Dear Bro. and Sister Woodward and all the dear ones in Christ assembled:

As each Conference time nears there is always a strong desire to meet with you, but as that is not possible for us to do we enclose $10.00 for a remembrance that we have not forgotten the work in Michigan and the faithfulness of some of the workers. Our prayer is that all may be encouraged to push the Lord's work with renewed energy. Remember us in your prayers.

Yours in hope of the soon coming King.

Mr. & Mrs. L. A. Boice.

Dear brothers and sisters.

Christ has the power of life. His coming is the blessed hope of the Bible—that blessed good book. Praise ye the Lord! Be ye in hope, stand fast in the faith of the gospel: the faith that Jesus is coming soon. Do no wrong thing; do right. "Hold fast the form of sound words which ye have heard in faith and love which is in Christ Jesus."

Omar Oliver.

Dear brothers and sisters:

I send greeting to one and all, may the God of all grace be with you to will and to do his good pleasure. May God's richest blessings be upon you and may you enjoy the fulness of his love in your hearts. I am sorry not to enjoy the blessed privilege of meeting with you all once more, and hear the good Word of God proclaimed. My present duty is caring for the sick, so cannot be at this reunion but want to tell I am among those who are looking for the Lord's return and pray thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven. I have prayed for this meeting time to be a time of drawing near to God and for the upbuilding of his cause among the people. Have only heard two gospel sermons in months. Bro. Woodward came up to Millbrook two weeks ago, preached twice on Sunday. The Lord opened the way for me to go and hear the same old story "ever new." It made my heart rejoice and gave me courage and strength to go on serving the Lord day by day. May the dear Lord bless Bro. and Sister Woodward in their labor of love for the Master. I have asked the Lord to send to this meeting just the ones that will be willing to be used for his glory. Should there be those among the number who feel they cannot preach or do any great work for the Master just pray for me that I with you may be able by the grace of God to live godly in Christ Jesus and not bring reproach upon the name of the blessed Christ who died that we might live. I expect to be among those who will hear him say, Well done, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord. Oh, what a blessed privilege after all this life's hard trials are passed to be able to meet Jesus face to face, and the blessed Father with all the faithful who have gone to their rest, asleep in Jesus, and those who will be caught up to meet him in the clouds, for he has said he is coming in the clouds with all the holy angels. May we have on the robe of righteousness and the pure heart, for only the pure in heart shall see him. May God bless each service and all be encouraged to fight the good fight of faith. Your sister in the love of Jesus and his appearing.

Mrs. Clara Chaffee.

Editor Restitution:

I returned last night from Illinois, having been gone two months. Since my report of meeting, I immersed two more into Christ, making in all eleven during my meeting, with quite an interest in the truth.

They wish me to return some time soon. I will go back some time after harvest, and hold some meetings. I held several meetings in the city of Paris, and in Dudley west of Paris. All the lady members are going to unite with the Bereans.

May the Dear Lord keep them in the love of the truth.

J. S. Hatch.

Dear Restitution:

Having lately moved to this place I wish The Restitution changed, as I expect to remain here perhaps the remainder of my life, as I am in feeble health and know not how long that will be. May the good Lord prosper you and The Restitution, as I believe it is doing more good than any paper I ever knew, and only the Bible excepted. It is the best explanation of the Bible I ever studied. Please excuse bad writing, for I am in feeble health and can hardly write at all. Yours looking for our Savior.

Selections.

The Faithful Captives.

An English lady once remarked, that if she desired to make a person utterly miserable, it would only be necessary that he should be of noble birth, possessing great wealth, brilliancy of intellect, and beauty of person, and the ordinary advantages of high social position. This combination of circumstances would be sufficient to insure his utter wretchedness and ruin; and meanwhile would receive the thanks of all his friends for acting the part of a benefactor in bestowing the fatal gifts upon him. The lady's conclusion may be just, for unleavened by that wisdom which is the gift of God, and that piety which fears and obeys the Most High, all gifts, however precious, are liable to be perverted, to the ruin of their possessor.

There have been, however, instances where individuals have walked unharmed amid the seductions and allurements of prosperity, overcoming every inducement to evil, holding fast their integrity, and finishing life's journey in honor and in peace. But in these cases there has been joined with the worldly advantages, the wisdom which cometh from above, and that fear of the Lord and adherance to righteous principle, without which all opportunities are vain, and the choicest gifts of God are turned into a curse and snare.

Among those whose consciences have conquered appetite, and whose faith has triumphed over circumstances, may be mentioned those princes of royal blood, who, being carried captives to Babylon, were selected by their captors on account of their promising appearance and manly beauty, and surrounded with all the educational and social opportunities which the metropolis of the world could then afford them. Raised from the degradation to which their own captive race had fallen, fed at the king's table, and educated at his expense, they had every temptation to forget the associations of their early days, and to link themselves with Babylon in her shame as well as glory. But they purposed in their hearts that they would not defile themselves with forbidden food; they refused to drink the wine that was brought from the king's table; and, overcoming every obstacle, sought to live lives of devotion to God, even though his temple was desolate, and their lot was cast in a land of strangers. God honored their fidelity. A three years' course of study demonstrated, through these abstinent and self-denying men, that he who can conquer his appetites can overcome every obstacle that he encounters. And so, at the end of this course, they stood foremost in the royal college of Babylon, outstripping the pampered sons of luxury, and standing at the head of the wise men of the Babylonish empire.

It would be interesting to study the career of these young men, from the time when in their boyhood days they put away the Babylonish wine-cup, and confined themselves to the simple regimen prescribed by Moses' law, onward through each crisis in their history when they stood forth in strength and victory, as impersonations of moral principle, and bulwarks against prevailing ungodliness. We should find one of them standing up to reveal to his royal master the mysterious dream which had disturbed his slumbering hours, and which, even to save their lives, no other of the wise men could disclose; we should find three of them standing erect amid the cringing thousands who bowed before the golden image; passing unscathed through the fiery furnace; rolling back the tide of idolatry which overswept the nation, and thus evoking the royal decree which proclaimed the name and honor of Israel's God among all the people of the world's greatest empire. We should see one of them standing, stern as the angel of doom, in the presence of the royal revellers, reprove a monarch's sins, rejecting his proffered honors, and reading in his ears the mysterious words which foretold his doom, "Mene, mene, tekel upharsin." We should see him again at the head of the finances of the Persian empire, watchful, steadfast, and faithful in all things, and yet acknowledging allegiance to God alone, and choosing instantly to face the lions rather than to cease to bow the knee to God. We should see him finally triumphing over all his adversaries, a witness for God whose testimony went forth to every land, and whose name is mentioned with that of Noah and Job as chief among the men who were held of God in special honor.

These were the men who, in spite of royal birth, high intelligence, personal attractions, and appliances, were yet triumphant over adverse influence, and were blest of God, and crowned with the honors which the good bestow. They succeeded where many fail. They triumphed where multitudes have fallen. The secret of their victory was faith in God. It was by faith they "stopped the mouths of lions, quenched the violence of fire," and "out of weakness were made strong." Like Moses, they endured as seeing Him who is invisible; and like the faithful of every age, that vision of the Unseen One anchored their souls amid the storms of temptation and the surgings of appetite and passion. If we are to share their victory, we must stand upon the Rock on which they stood. Not many mighty or noble are called; but God's grace is sufficient for every condition, and those who in humbleness and lowliness will seek their heavenly Father's face, shall find that He is a present help in every time of need, and "giveth us the victory, through our Lord Jesus Christ."—H. L. Hastings.

Speaking to the Point.

An addition was made some years ago to the jail in Paterson, New Jersey, at a cost of $30,000. When it was completed, the county officers and contractor celebrated the event by a banquet in the building. There were liquors in great abundance. After a number of toasts had been drunk, the gentleman presiding, a judge, proposed "the temperance cause." It was probably done because they were getting pretty drunk. Mr. Bantram, a temperance man, was called on to respond, and did so in the following stinging speech, which some of them, perhaps, will never forget. He said:

"I thank you for this invitation, and I recognize its fitness. You have assembled to celebrate the enlargement of this jail, rendered necessary by the use of strong drink, in which you are so freely indulging this day. Down stairs the cells and corridors are crowded with criminals who have but changed places. A few years ago they were respected citizens, some of them occupying as responsible positions as those now occupied by yourselves; but they commenced as you have commenced, and they continued as many of you are continuing, and to-day they are reaping the harvest in a career of crime, and paying the penalty with a period of punishment."

At this moment another bottle was opened, and Mr. Bantram said:

"I hear the popping of corks. I listen to the merry voices, and the praises you are singing to the infernal spirit of wine: but there comes to me through the grate, the prisoner's cell, who is shedding penitential tears over his folly, and accompanied by the still sadder wail of anguish uttered by the broken-hearted wife, worse than widowed through the traffic in strong drink, which, as a judge in your courts said, 'is the great promotor of crime,' a traffic licensed by your votes, and sustained by the patronage you are this day giving it. It is with inexpressible sadness that I discover that there can be found in Passaic county so many men with hearts so hardened, feelings so calloused, sensibilities so blunted, that in a place like this, under circumstances like these, they dare raise to their lips that which depraves the citizen, and endangers the state. Thanking you, gentlemen, for this unexpected privilege, I take my seat, fully conscious that you will never again call on me under similiar circumstances."

...ation.

...e to the point compare... heaven; so are earthly ...ships compared with heavenly joys. Certain Moravian missionaries, in the old times of slavery, went to one of the West India Islands to preach, and found they could not be permitted to teach there unless they themselves became slaves; and they did so—they sold themselves into bondage, never to return, that they might save slaves' souls. We have heard of another pair of holy men who actually submitted to be confined in a lazar-house, that they might save the souls of lepers, knowing as they did that they would never be permitted to come out again; they went there to take the leprosy, and die, if by so doing they might save souls. I have read of one, Thome de Jesu, who went to Barbary amongst the Christian captives, and there lived and died in banishment and bondage, that he might cheer his brethren, and preach Jesus to them.

Brethren we have never reached to such devotion; we fall short of what Jesus deserves. We give him little; we give him what we are ashamed not to give him. Often we give him our zeal for a day or two, and then grow cool: we wake up all of a sudden, and then sleep all the more soundly; we seem to-day as if we would set the world on fire, and to-morrow we see not our own lamp trimmed; we vow at one time that we will push the church before us and drag the world after us; and by-and-by we are like Pharaoh's chariots with the wheels taken off, and drag along right heavily. Oh, for a spark of the love of Christ in our souls! Oh, for a living flame from off Calvary's altar, to set our whole nature blazing with divine enthusiasm for the Christ who gave himself for us that we might live! Henceforth, take upon yourselves in the solemn intent of your soul this resolve: "I will unloose the latchets of his shoes: I will seek out the little things, and I will do them as unto the Lord, and not unto men, and may he accept me, even as he has saved me through his precious blood."—Spurgeon.

Announcement.

The Northwest Conference will convene Friday evening June 17th and hold over the following Monday at Lake Shore, Wash. Lake Shore is about four miles from Vancouver, Wash. Any one wishing conveyance to Lake Shore will correspond with P. G. Wolf of Vancouver. Brethren from a distance will stop at River View hotel right by the ferry landing and wait for the brethren from Lake Shore. All are invited to come and have one more meeting that will be a feast long to be remembered. Another Conference year has almost passed and gone, have we spent our time well or have we been idle in the Master's vineyard? All cannot go out in the world to preach, but we all can live a good square Christian life doing good to all around us. By order of the executive committee.

MRS. ALMIRA M. BROOKS.

The 17th Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Iowa will be held at Waterloo, beginning Aug. 20. Programme, etc., will appear later.

O. J. ALLARD, Pres.

The Annual Conference of the Church of God in Illinois will meet at Oregon, on the evening of Wednesday Aug. 24, and continue over the following Sunday. The programme will appear later. Let all plan to come, and make this the best Conference ever held in our State. Try to bring a stranger with you, some one that you have trying to lead to a decision for the truth. There is no place more helpful than these Conference meetings to those who are seeking light on gospel teaching. By thus helping others we only add to our own joy in the faith, and our coming reward.

To the Bereans of Illinois:

At the quarterly meeting held with the Antioch church on Saturday evening, May 7, it was unanimously decided to hold a Bible school this year just preceding the annual conference as last year. So much did the Board of Management desire it that they voted ten dollars support toward paying the grocery bill for the same. The school will be held beginning on Monday, August 15, 1904. The work will proceed much on the same plan as last year except that the daily sessions will consist of two periods of an hour and a half each instead of two hours each. Many have already signified their intention of attending.

Young people cannot estimate the value of such a training until they have had it. For further particulars write me. Suffice it to say that about the only expense—at least the chief item of expense—will be the expense of transportation. Please write and say that you are coming.

Pennsylvania Lines.

With the opening of the season at Winona Lake, May 10th, the sale of excursion tickets over the Pennsylvania Lines to that attractive resort in Northern Indiana will begin. Every summer passed there by thousands has only increased their desire to return. On the golf links, the tennis courts, the baseball or cricket grounds, the croquet field, or bowling on the lake, fishing, camping, swimming, driving, or attending recitals and lectures by world-famed personages in the auditorium—whatever the diversion may be, the associations are of that congenial sort conferred by good society. This resort is noted as the site of Winona Assembly and Summer School, attracting teachers and students from educational institutions of this and other countries.

Fifteen-day and season excursion tickets will be sold from stations on the Pennsylvania Lines during the summer. For information about fares and time of trains, apply to local ticket agents, or to F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa. Illustrated literature describing attractions of Winona Lake may be had for the asking. Address S. C. Dickey, Secretary and General Manager, Winona Lake, Ind., who will give particulars regarding camping facilities, hotel accomodations, program of addresses by noted speakers and all other details.—Sept. 30.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is only to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you are advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

The Restitution.

"The Restitution of all things Which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his Holy Prophets."

VOLUME LIII. PLYMOUTH, INDIANA, JUNE 22, 1904. NUMBER 24.

The Restitution of all things which God hath spoken by the mouth of all his holy prophets since the world begins." As a means to this end the establishment of the kingdom of God on the earth, with the Christ as King of kings, and the immortal saints as joint-heirs with him in the government of the nations; the restoration of Israel; the literal resurrection of the dead; the immortalization of the righteous, and the final destruction of the wicked; eternal life only through Christ, and many other kindred truths. Also a hearty belief of the gospel, repentance and immersion in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins, pre-requisites of the forgiveness of sins, and a holy life as essential for final salvation.

Poetry.

It is Well.

"Is it well with thee, and with thy husband, and with the child? And she said, It is well." 2 Kings iv. 26.

Yes: it is well! The evening shadows lengthen;
Home's golden gates fall on our ravished sight,
And though the leader ties we strove to strengthen
Break one by one—at evening time 'tis light.

'Tis well! The way was often dull and weary;
The spirit fainted oft beneath its load;
No sunshine comes from hearts all gray and dreary,
And yet our feet were bound to tread that road.

'Tis well that not again our hearts shall shiver
Beneath old sorrows, once so hard to bear;
That not again beneath death's darksome river
Shall we deplore the gone, the loved, the fair.

No more with tears, wrought from deep, inner anguish,
Shall we bewail the dear hopes crushed and gone:
No more need we in doubt and fear to languish;
So far the day is past, the journey done!

As voyagers, by three winds beat and broken,
Come into port, beneath a calmer sky,
So we, still beating on our brow the token
Of tempest past draw to our haven nigh.

A sweet air cometh from the shore immortal,
Inviting homeward at the days decline;
Almost we see where from the open portal
Fair forms stand beckoning with their smiles divine.

'Tis well; the earth with all her myriad voices
Has lost the power our senses to enthrall;
We hear, above the tumult and the noises,
Soft tones of music, like an angel's call.

'Tis well, O friends. We would not turn—retracing
The long, vain years, nor call our lost youth back;
Gladly, with spirits braced, the future facing,
We leave behind the dusty, foot-worn track.

Notes by the Way.

My evangelistic work in the State of Louisiana being completed for the present, I returned to Crowley, for a brief visit with Bro. Haupt and family previous to opening the work in the State of Texas. My first appointment was at Sherman, Grayson County, 431 miles distant from Crowley, at which city I arrived at about eleven o'clock, p. m. Bro. Woodrow was at the station expecting my coming. He recognized me by a sign previously given.

We then took the street cars, and were soon at his home, where I was heartily welcomed by his wife and family.

Our meetings at this place were held in the Central Christian Church. I found the Christian (or Campbellite) church in the South, quite numerically strong, but so badly split up into bitter contending factions. The Baptist preacher at Sherman, told me that he remembered the time (to speak extravagantly), when there was a Christian Church on almost every corner, on account of there being so much dissension among them as a denomination. There are two churches of that denomination in Sherman at this time which do not love each other very well. In fact, the whole denomination in the South is split in two on the question of having instrumental music in church worship. They are variously spoken of and described as Progressives, Non-progressive, etc., etc. The Non-progressives at Sherman carried their organ out of the church, and left it in the street. The Progressive faction carried it away, and started another church. I preached in the so-called Progressive church. This progressive church is decidedly non-progressive, however, when they come to the study of the Bible.

They granted us the use of their church building for a week, but during that week several of our meetings were spoiled by rain. On this account Bro. Woodrow requested the use of the building for a part of the next week following, that the series of meetings already begun may be completed. This, however, was refused. They seemed to be so very fearful about the stability of the foundation upon which their church kingdom is constructed if our meetings should be allowed to continue. They evidently perceived a great difference between the kingdom, as taught by Holy Scripture, and that which was preached by Mr. Campbell. They seemed to prefer, however, the Campbell view of the kingdom, to that given in Holy Scripture; in fact, in this matter, they showed themselves to be decidedly non-progressive, preferring the human to the divine.

I also attended their Sunday school Bible Class. The Lord's prayer was the topic which was being investigated by the class. The leader asked me to comment on the verse beginning with the petition, "Thy kingdom come," etc. I explained that the kingdom had not yet been set up, but that it was an event to come, which was still in the future. In order to show them what the kingdom really was, which was at that time expected by the Lord's disciples, I called their attention to the disciples' enquiry: "Lord, wilt thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?"

The leader of the class said, that their enquiry was clear proof that the disciples themselves did not understand the nature of the kingdom. (They certainly did not understand the Campbell view.) I further explained, that the kingdom must be that which Jesus himself expected, and must also be that which the angel declared unto his mother Mary as follows: "He shall be great, and he shall be called the Son of the Highest; and the Lord God shall give unto him the throne of his father David: and he shall reign over the house of Jacob for ever; and of his kingdom there shall be no end." (David never reigned over any church.)

The pastor of the church said that the teaching of the Disciple church was, that the kingdom was the church and that it (the church kingdom) was set up on the day of Pentecost. These modern Disciples differ from the Lord's disciples. A lady in the class then asked the pastor, if it was still proper for us to continue praying, "Thy kingdom come," if the kingdom had already come? This was a hard question for the pastor. He replied that we might do so, seeing that the church (the Campbellite church of course) had not yet been established over all the earth, therefore the kingdom was not yet fully come. (And never will come, if it has to wait for such an extension). The lady then suggested, that we might change it, (the prayer) and pray for the "extension of the kingdom." Is not this changing and mutilating the Lord's prayer to fit their church kingdom theory, with regard to the prayer? Now, the pastor first affirmed that the kingdom had come (a completed event) and then in the same breath, denied his affirmation, rather than to spoil his church kingdom theory. This was evidently the occurrence which decided them to lock us out of their house. If I should be allowed to continue preaching in their house, I might possibly spoil one of the kingdoms of God which is already set up in Sherman.

Methodist and other churches are not a part of this church kingdom. It must be the Disciple church. Things look very shaky for this extension kingdom (of the Disciple church) as it is now being split up into all sorts of factions in the South. "A kingdom divided against itself cannot stand." Now, which of these factions is the genuine kingdom of God? It matters but little which, for they are all shaky.

Another Campbellite faction has just been born. A man named Roberts has reasoned it out that Luther's reformation, was nothing more than a reformation of the Catholic church, and that all Protestants are a part of said reformation. Therefore, since that time, no one has had any authority to administer a genuine baptism on account of there being no church in existence, better than reformed Roman Catholics which he claims are but daughters of the old mother. In the presence of a large congregation this man publicly baptized himself. He now claims to be the only one properly authorized to baptize, and to be the reviver of the true church.

It may be that the Campbellites will have to abandon the Pentecost kingdom after all, and start another kingdom with Mr. Roberts. A minister of the Non-progressive order spent most of a day with me, at Bro. Woodrow's house. While he is now looking for the kingdom that God swore unto our father David to establish his seed upon his throne for ever more, nevertheless he finds it hard to part company with the church kingdom.

Sherman is a city of about 15,000 inhabitants. It has no saloons (except "blind tigers") in it.

After completing my work at Sherman, I started for my next call at Anna, Texas. I was met at the depot by J. Milton, and conveyed to his home about eight miles in the country. Meetings began at this place on Saturday night. Right here at this place I found that the Campbellites were again aggressive, their leader bucked up against me from the first. At the close of one of our meetings, as I was distributing sample copies of THE RESTITUTION, he got up and talked to the people, and distributed copies of their paper, called The Firm Foundation. I took a copy of said paper home. In one article they made ridicule of our position with regard to the image of Dan. ii. In examining the paper, I found the foundation very sandy indeed. For three successive nights did this church kingdom champion tackle me. The positions which he took, were so weak, and absurd, that I finally turned them to ridicule, made nonsense of them (something I seldom do.)

On one of these occasions, I made it appear so comic, that the audience just roared with laughing, and fairly laughed this church kingdomist out of the house. He did not try his smartness any more but kept still, and even the children noticed his being silenced. He challenged me to a debate, however, on this church kingdom topic, but my financial circumstances were such that I could not afford to remain longer. I regretted it very much. For the sake of the people, I would just liked to have showed up the sandy foundation of the so-called "Firm Foundation," upon which Campbellites rely.

I make no practice of engaging in denominational controversies, but in the south you have to because these Campbellites are aggressive, and will go for you right straight, and if you can't or don't hold your own, the people will think you are of no account. Therefore I considered it my privilege to use both edges of the sword and cut deep.

The attendance at the meetings was large, and the interest was fine. I could have established a nice church at this place, if I had been able to remain longer and carry on the proposed debate, and fight Campbellism to the death, for the people's sake.

The method of preaching which will succeed in the South, would not answer at all in other localities that I have visited in the North, but here, you are obliged to become a soldier, and buckle on your armor, take your sword, and wade in for all you are worth. In order to make converts in this place you must get up and show the people that you are able to tackle your opponent, and down him on the spot, with the Sword of the Spirit.

The industry in this portion of the country consists mainly in the raising of cotton, wheat and corn. These things all do well here. The soil is sticky and black, and is quite rich. When it is wet and muddy it will often block the wagon wheels up solid, the soil is so gummy.

After concluding my services at this place, I returned to Sherman for a short rest, after which I took the train for Quanah, Texas. Leaving Sherman at 1 o'clock, p. m., I arrived at Fort Worth at about four o'clock in the afternoon. Here I changed cars, but had to remain at the Fort until 8:20 p. m., about which time, I boarded the train for Quanah, and arrived at my destination at about 8:45 in the morning. I found Bro. Newberry, waiting for me. We then went to a hotel for about two hours rest. After breakfast we drove to his home which is about twelve miles in the country. We staid there until Sunday morning, when we returned to the city and opened meetings. While the meetings were being continued, I put up at a hotel. Bro. Newberry being the only one of the faith near that city, and his home being in the country. Quanah is located near the border line of southwest Oklahoma, the Red River being the boundary line between Texas and Oklahoma, while on the west we have New Mexico as the boundary.

I was much interested in seeing those great prairies, where once the red man and those great herds of buffalos made their home. These prairies have been given up to stock raising. It is here where our great meat packers have got a large amount of their livestock from. There is no woodland in this country, it is just one massive prairie. You can stand on that great prairie, and look toward the four points of the compass, and rarely ever see a human habitation, or even a tree, save mesketon brush. It is inhabited principally by wolves, jack rabbits, dog owls, prairie dogs, badgers and rattle snakes. You can scarcely imagine the numbers of prairie dogs which live on those great plains. There are hundreds of thousands of acres of land which is all honey-combed with prairie dog holes, which holes are only a few feet apart. They are large enough to put an ordinary fence post in. These dogs dig for a long distance underground, and sometimes horses break through the crust of these tunnels. As you approach a group of these dogs, each one will run for his hole, and then turn around and so cunningly look at you, and if you go near them, they will dive into their holes, and I have seen them then just poke their heads up above the whole, and watch you. The owls live in abandoned dog holes. Strange comic looking birds they are. They live on animal food. They kill the young prairie dogs for food. Prairie wolves run over the plains and kill full grown dogs. Large rattle snakes also attack these prairie dogs and coil about them, and break their bones up fine, and then swallow the dog whole. These snakes I am told eat enough in one meal to last them three weeks.

It is on these plains where the great sand storms occur. I have seen the sand drifted up in the road much like we sometimes find snow in the winter time at the north. It is hard work for a horse to pull even a carriage through these drifts. As you approach the Red River, you will observe successive ridges of sand hills, which have evidently been drifted there from time to time. Beautiful wild flowers abound all over the State of Texas. Many beautiful varieties are found, which I am not acquainted with. The prickly pear and cactus abound on these plains.

Mr. Strong, the county sheriff, living at Quanah, took me on a carriage drive many miles into the country to see the Acme cement mills in operation. They dig out of the earth a white powder, which is a natural cement, which after undergoing a certain process in the mill, it is then ready for use. A finer cement is also made from a white rock. These mills are said to prepare and ship some twelve or fourteen carloads of cement per day.

A business man of this city has twice visited me at the hotel to converse on Bible topics. The good seed has found a congenial lodgment in his heart. May God give the increase.

On Thursday night, by invitation, I attended a Bible reading at the Christian church. I was invited to address them for a short time, which I did. I generally sow some seed where an opportunity presents itself.

On Friday Bro. Newberry came with his carriage to convey me to his home to hold some meetings in the school house in his neighborhood. As we were riding over the prairie I noticed some beautiful birds, with very long tail feathers, these he said were the birds of paradise. There were other long tailed birds which were very fleet of foot, they can run like a streak; these he said, was the chapparell bird.

The meetings held in the country were better attended, and better interest was manifested than were those in the city. As I stood at the school house and cast my eye over those vast open plains in every point of the compass, I just wondered where the audience was going to come from, for not one single human habitation could I see. Yet they come, even larger and more attentive audiences than we could get in the city.

On Tuesday May 31, I started for my appointment at Carnegie, Oklahoma. On account of so few railroads, and a scarcity of trains on them, it took two days to travel less than two hundred miles. It costs more in paying hotel bills than railroad fare.

At Hobart, O. T. I met the well known Indian Chief Lone Wolf and family. He is the chief of the Kiowa tribe.

At Carnegie, full blood Indians of the Kiowa tribe are very numerous. In the country, out a piece from Carnegie, where the Chandler family live, there is but one other white settler, the rest are full blood Indians. As I look out of the window to the west I can see an Indian village.

I will report this in my next "Notes by the Way." I will have something of interest to tell you.

I go next to Cedarville, Bluch and Morse Mill, in Missouri. I expect to be in Chicago the first part of July. I will then arrange other trips from calls that are now in, or may come in up to that time. Calls are open to all parts of the United States and Canada, new or old.

Yours in the blessed hope.

In His Name.

"And whatsoever ye do in word or deed, do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by Him," Thus were the brethren at Colosse exhorted in the letter directed to them by the apostle Paul. Col. iii: 17. This exhortation has reference to doing and the [illegible] doing [illegible] an act, any question whether we do it right. The things we do have a two-fold bearing; they are partly the result of our moral character, and they also re-act upon that character; so that the longer we engage in a certain course of action, the more we become fixed in our character and confirmed in our habits. As a man thinketh in his heart so is he (Prov. xxiii: 7), is a saying whose truthfulness has been abundantly proven. It is clear from the apostle's injunction that the persons addressed had power over their actions "in word and deed;" that it was in their power to regulate their conduct either favorably or adversely to the apostolic advice, that their conduct would have a corresponding effect upon them, and that they themselves, after the admonition was communicated to them, were responsible in the premises. They were admonished to "do all in the name of the Lord Jesus." The Latter was also their Lord, exercising authority over them, with the right to require them to regulate their conduct.

Rightly did the apostle Peter say that "there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved." Acts iv: 12. And Paul: That God has highly exalted Christ Jesus and given him the name which is above every name that at the name of Jesus every knee SHOULD bow; ..... and that every tongue SHOULD confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father." Phil. ii: 9-11. In this name, life may be obtained by mortals on condition of faith. John xx: 31. Repentance and remission of sins were commanded to be preached in this name among all nations. Luke xxiv: 47; Acts x: 43; xiii: 38; 1. John ii: 12. By the gospel, God is taking out of the Gentiles a people for His name. Acts xv: 7, 14. Believers of the gospel were commanded to be baptized into the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins. Acts ii: 38; viii: 16; x: 47, 48; xix: 5; 1. Cor. i: 11-15. Baptism into the name of Jesus is equivalent to being "baptized into Christ." Rom. vi: 1-4, Gal. iii: 27. It is also a baptism into the "one body" (1. Cor. xii: 13), which is the church. Col. i: 18. Thus it is seen that precious and inestimable blessings are offered to us in that name, and the believer sustains a very close relation to its Bearer. Therefore the necessity of such conduct on the part of believers as not to bring reproach upon "that worthy name by which ye are called." Jas. ii: 7. "Let every one that nameth the name of Christ depart from iniquity." 2. Tim. ii: 19. In the chapter of our text the apostle reminds the brethren that they [illegible] "dead," and that their "life is hid with Christ in God. When Christ, who is our life, shall appear, then shall ye also appear with him in glory." To this he adds the exhortation, "Mortify therefore your members which are upon the earth: fornication, uncleanness, inordinate affectation, evil concupiscence, and covetousness, which is idolatry. . . . . But now ye also put off all these: anger, wrath, malice, blasphemy, filthy communication out of your mouth. Lie not one to another, seeing ye have put off the old man with his deeds." ii. 1-9. These are "the works of the flesh" mentioned elsewhere. Gal. v: 19-21. They can not be done "in the name of the Lord Jesus." And "ye have not so learned Christ." Eph. iv: 20.

Christ did not do the works of the flesh, but "suffered for us in the flesh." 1. Pet. iv: 1. And when did He suffer? On the cross, to be sure. Yet His sufferings were not confined to the ordeal of crucifixion. "He Himself hath suffered being tempted." Heb. ii: 18. And He "was tempted in all points like as we are, yet without sin." Heb. iv: 15. In His temptations there was an appeal to His human nature to act contrary to His Father's will, to gratify merely the desires of the flesh. But He did not yield. He said, "It is written." Matth. iv: 4, 7, 10. What was "written"? His Fa[illegible] which He had come t[illegible] 34. The [illegible] ed. All this [illegible] nunciation of self and all in[illegible]

What are we to do? "Arm yourselves likewise with the same mind." Why? "For he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin; that he no longer SHOULD live the rest of his time to the lusts of men, but to the will of God." 1. Pet. iv: 1, 2. We are aware that we now "live in the flesh," and the two forces here mentioned, "the lusts of men" and "the will of God," also bear down upon us. Which shall have the ascendancy? That depends upon our individual choice and action. "Know ye not that to whom ye yield yourselves servants to obey, his servants ye are to whom ye obey; whether of sin unto death, or of obedience unto righteousness?" Rom. vi: 16. If we allow the carnal mind to dictate to us and shape our conduct, we shall be under the dominion of sin, and shall of the flesh reap corruption. Gal. vi: 8. But if we let this mind be in us which was also in Christ Jesus, if we "deny ungodliness and worldly lusts" (Titus ii: 12), "crucify the flesh, with the affections and lusts" (Gal. v: 25), sin shall not have dominion over us. Rom. vi: 14. "The end" of a life characterized by such conduct is everlasting life. 22. Then we shall not only have "the name of the Lord Jesus," but also His nature —"the divine nature, having escaped the corruption that is in the world through lust." 2. Pet. i: 4. Then no sacrifice we may have made will seem too great, or no denial of self or worldly lusts too painful, no duty performed too arduous, no suffering too intense. The far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory" (2. Cor. iv: 17) will overwhelmingly outweigh and overbalance "our light affliction which is but for a moment." Thus Jesus the Author and Finisher of our faith, "for the joy that was set before Him endured the cross, despising the shame, and is set down at the right hand of the throne of God." Heb. xii: 2. Reader, let us steadfastly look unto Him. As we do this, we will lose the fascination of worldly pleasure, forget our own trials, run patiently the race set before us, and obtain the incorruptible crown.

Notices have been sent out lately to a number of our subscribers who are in arrears. We wish to say to such as have not yet responded, that we must hear from you at once. The case is just as urgent as the notice states.

The past week has been one of activity in the Far East. The Russian Vladivostock fleet sailed out to the Corean Straits, found two Japanese transports with about 1,400 troops on board. No attempt was made to take them prisoners, but they deliberately proceeded to sink the vessels with all on board. About 1,000 were killed, the rest reaching land by small boats and by swimming.

Vice Admiral Kamimura of the Japanese navy was informed of the event, and at once started to cut the Russians off from their home port. Once before these vessels made a similiar raid, and now there is considerable censure at Japan for his failure to prevent this disaster, and word comes that he will find and sink the Russians or else follow the custom of his countrymen and commit suicide. On the land it has been different, for there was a large battle about 60 miles north of Kinchou. It seems that General Stackelberg sought to harras the Japanese who are investing Port Arthur, but was met by an army that no one knew was there, and after a hard fight and the loss of over 2000 men, besides a number of guns and other war material, was forced to retreat. There are various reports current regarding the advance of a Japanese force to cut off the retreat of the Russians, but should they go too far they are liable to be caught between superior forces of the enemy, and to suffer loss. It is a battle of generals as much as of troops so far. There are also rumors that the Japs have captured some more forts about Port Arthur, but there is little ually of the situation there. ances in Russia con- of the

The Paternity of Jesus! and Arraignment of Marcionism. No. 2.

Our author believes the sacrifices under the law were for the purpose of leading the Jews to the practice of that purity of life which were in the sight of God better than sacrifices." We have no objection to his belief of this. His belief proves nothing. Take the thousand year practice he speaks of; did it have the effect his belief calls for? If not, did God enjoin upon them inadequate means, for purity of life,—or has he a baseless belief?

Is it not too bad that he does not explain on what principle the slaying and offering of animal sacrifices could teach purity of life?

Was it not a very blind method of instruction if there was nothing typical connected with it, and no place for the exercise of faith. The gentleman must have been hardly pressed for a reason for disfellowshiping his former brethren when he wrote that.

He further says, "I believe if the Jews had learned and practiced what these sacrifices were intended to teach them, that Christ would not have died at all."

Did he never read the word of the Spirit in Gal. iii. 21, 22 that shows God had concluded all under sin that the promise by faith of Jesus Christ might be given to them that believe, because there was no law which could either give life, or bestow righteousness, that is, constitute one righteous! The principle of justification by faith has existed from the infancy of the race.

"By faith Abel offered unto God a better sacrifice than Cain, by means of which he was attested to be righteous, in the words, justified by faith, God testifying on his gifts; and through it, having died, he still speaks." But our author does not hear him. He has no room for faith in his system.

"Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God." Rom. x. 17. From this we know that Abel had received the Word of faith from God, and embraced it; and obeyed it, by offering the firstlings of his flock and of the fat thereof, and the Lord had respect unto Abel and to the offering."

The reader will please remember that it says, Gen. iv. 4, that Abel brought of the firstlings of his flock and of the fat thereof.

And when we refer to Lev. iii. 16, 17 and find that it was a perpetual statute that all the fat is the Lord's; and then to Lev. vii. 25 and read, "Ye shall eat no manner of fat of ox, or of sheep, or of goat," we can hardly resist the conclusion that Jehovah had instructed the first family of the race, as he did the Israelites later, that when they made an offering unto Jehovah, they should remember that all the fat belonged to him.

The first generation had no past experience or history to guide them. Their only source of knowledge was God. And it is not thinkable that Abel just happened to offer acceptably. And when we read that it was Abel's faith that enabled him to please God, and know by analogy that it was Cain's lack of faith, as evidenced by the kind of offering he made, that displeased God, we have substantial evidence that whatever God had promised, he did not believe it.

Plainly we see he had no confidence in the remission of sins by the shedding of sacrificial blood, nor in the promise concerning him, who, being bruised in the heel or slain as Abel's accepted lamb was, should rise again and bruise the serpent's head.

Enoch's prophecy shows that at that early day it was known that long ages would elapse before the Lord would come with ten thousand of his saints. They would have to be taken out of the world—transformed by the truth, live, die and be raised again first; and we are ourselves witnesses to the discouraging slowness of the process.

And we know positively from the cloud of witnesses in the 11th of Hebrews that the early patriarchs and prophets knew, that in order to share the promised good time, they would have to die and live again.

And it is stated in Hebrews ix. 22 as an established principle of the economy of God, that there is no remission of sin without the shedding of blood, we do not see how we can evade the conclusion that when animal sacrifices were offered, it was intended to be a practical acknowledgement of sinfulness, and that the fate of the animal was justly due the offerer; and that it was entirely of God's favor they were spared.

Taking all this into account with the fact that the blood of bulls and goats could not put away sin; and that we are not redeemed with corruptible things, but with the precious blood of Christ; as of a lamb without blemish and without spot,—who verily was FOREORDAINED BEFORE the FOUNDATION OF THE WORLD, but was manifest in these last times for us who believe in God;" (1 Peter i. 18-20.) would it not be like a God of love to stoop down to weak frail mortals, with meagre capacities and blunted moral perceptions, and institute a typical system that would in a measure keep alive in their affection and memory the promise of the woman's seed? So it seems to us.

Think of the night of the betrayal, and of the symbolic memorial service instituted to help us to keep fresh in our hearts and minds, all that he has done and suffered in our belief; and then too, remember that he was the manifestation of God, not his person, but his character and holy attributes, indeed we have his word for it, that the words he spake, and the works he performed were those of his Father.

After quoting the words of Peter where he reminds us that we are redeemed with the precious blood of Christ; we feel sad at the thought of those who imagine they can procure a resurrection from the dead in the same way that Jesus did,—and feel no need of redemption through his blood; and say there is no need of his becoming their wisdom righteousness, sanctification and redemption.

As we are considering the very family to whom the first gospel promise was made, and are working in the interest of the household of faith, we will not hastily pass on; but add thoughts that have been considered since we last laid the pen aside. And

1. The case of Abel furnishes evidence of what would now be called a religious education.

2. That they knew right and wrong, and just what had happened through the disobedience of their parents.

3. They knew they were under the sentence of death, and would one day surely die, and were then living on sufferage. And

4. Realized that the above consideration placed them under obligation to God for everything.

5. And that homage and obedience became them.

Taking this family history into account, is it not lawful to conclude that both of these brothers knew that a better state of things, at some time, had been made the subject of promise?

Can we doubt that the parents, by whose folly the children suffered so many disabilities, had explained to them, that the benefits to accrue to the race of man from the good time promised, were dependent upon their good behavior?

May we not be morally certain that a line of conduct which would please God had been pointed out to them?

As God is unchangeable, and always does what is best; and as we know that four thousand years later, it was impossible to please God without faith, may we not lawfully conclude that that rule was in force in the infancy of the race?

We ask this last question in the light of the fact of Cain's failure to please him without faith, and Abel's success with it; and also in view of the fact stated in Rom. xiv. 23, "For whatsoever is not of faith is sin."

We can see that Abel was justified on the divine principle of faith and obedience; and Cain was not justified because he was wanting in faith and obedience. There was something he did not believe. If he had believed it, his offering would have been in obedience to his faith.

This shows the fallacy of our author's theory, that it is only by a man's forsaking and giving up his past sinful life, and devoting his future life to God and to righteousness that a reconciliation or at-one-ment could possibly be effected."

The gentleman speaks of a man's "past sinful life," as if God takes no account of it, providing he reform. What a shameful perversion of the truth this is! Just one condition exacted.

Jesus said, he that believeth [the gospel, Mark xvi. 16] and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be condemned." [Two conditions mentioned].

Jesus said repentance and remission of sins should be preached in his name. Luke xxiv. 47. Two conditions again mentioned.

Peter, when full of Holy Spirit, (Acts ii. 38) in answer to the question, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" Answered, "Repent and be baptized, every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ." For what purpose, Peter? Ans., "For the remission of sins;" the forgiveness of sins.

What sins was Peter speaking about? Answer, the same Paul speaks of in Rom. iii. 23, "For all have sinned [in the past] and come short of the glory of God. Being [now] justified freely by his favor, [how?] through the redemption that is in Christ Jesus."

Remember, Peter prescribes baptism in the name of Jesus Christ, [as an act of obedience to their confessed faith—as evidence of heart-belief of the gospel listened to] for remission of sins. It is no purchase-price paid for remission. Justification freely is absolute; but it is through the redemption that IS IN CHRIST JESUS.

The next verse of Rom. iii. answers the question as to who this Christ Jesus is, and what he is, as follows:—

"Whom God hath set forth to be a propitiation through faith in his blood."

For what purpose did God do this? Ans. To declare his righteousness for the remission of sins that are PAST, through the forbearance God." Where does our author's theory land him?

Here we place the Josephite doctrine of at-one-ment in juxtaposition with the Word of Truth. It says:—"I am aware that it is the blood which is said to make an at-one ment for the soul, but as the blood is the life of the soul, it can only mean that as sin had separated between God and man, it is only by man's forsaking and giving up his past life, and devoting his future life to God and to righteousness that a reconciliation or at-one-ment could possibly be effected."

Briefly—Jesus Christ, whom God set forth as a propitiation through faith in HIS BLOOD, is entirely rejected. And in speaking of the separation from God by sin, instead of quoting from Eph. ii. 13, "But now in Christ Jesus ye who sometimes were far off, are MADE NIGH BY THE BLOOD OF CHRIST," he says, practically, there was no need of Christ's blood,—all one has to do, is to give up his past life, and devote his future life to God. This is so wide of the truth that it is evident he is ignorant of the first principles of the doctrine of the Anointed.

In order to show our readers that the true inwardness of the bold announcement recently made in this country, that the blood of animals slain under the Mosaic system did not point forward, or typify the blood of Christ, was that his blood was NOT WORTH pointing to. Proof of this is found in the Nazarine Messenger, so-called, for May, 1894. We quote verbatim:—

"Jesus was a man like other men, or, why did he require to be baptized of John, whose baptism was for the remission of sins? (Luke iii. 3) if he did not require it for the purpose for which it was administered,—he did the institution no honor. If he had no faults to be remitted, or sins to be washed away, he did wrong to pretend to comply with an ordinance given by God, for the purpose of cleansing from sin. If he did not need it, and did it just the same, it was simple mockery, and sham, instead of fulfilling all righteousness, as he said, Matt. iii. 15. There could be no moral excellence if there was no moral requirement.

"But he felt his weakness, FRAILTY, NOTHINGNESS and UNCLEANNESS in the sight of God, and went down into the water to wash away his faults and short comings, and fulfilled that form of righteousness. He could not be human and have no failings...

"Jesus felt he was not perfectly clean before God, and went down into the water in obedience to his Father's commands, and washed away the faults of his youth. In complying with this form appointed by God he found acceptance and approval."

We cannot hope to reach the ears or hearts of those who disregard the Word of the Spirit in Heb. iv. 14, 15 which says, "Seeing, then, that we have a great High Priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus, the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession; for we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities, but was in all points tempted like as we are, YET WITHOUT SIN." And

Hebrews vii. 26, "For such an High Priest became us, holy, harmless, undefiled, separate from sinners." And

1 Peter ii. 21, 22, "Because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps, who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth."

John viii. 29 gives the testimony of Jesus himself as follows: "I do always those things that please him"—the Father. And in the 46th verse he issued the challenge to his contemporaries, "which of you convinceth me of sin?" But from Pennsylvania, United States of America, nearly 1900 years later, comes the announcement that he went "into the water to wash away the faults, weaknesses, frailties and uncleanness of his youth."

When men begin to tamper with the Scriptures in order to maintain some tenet of their own, the down grade is very steep, and in a short time they can without compunction reject whatever does not suit them.

This explains why they see no efficacy in the blood of Christ. There would be no efficacy in it, if he was NOT SINLESS. If in any respect he sinned, he did not perfectly keep the law, and it has not been taken out of the way. The middle wall of partition still stands,—Gentiles have not been admitted to the covenants of promise; the everlasting covenant has not been brought into force; Christ has not been raised from the dead; we have no great High Priest,—no Advocate with the Father; no means of adoption are in operation; no remission of sins in his name is possible; we have no hope and are without God, if the Second Adam failed as did the first.

But he did keep every jot and tittle of the law, and made it honorable, and it was nailed to the cross with him, and, as Esaias said they should, some of the Gentiles are trusting in him; he was brought again from the dead by the God of Peace, through the blood of the everlasting Covenant. Heb. xiii. 20. Each of these particulars, and a hundred others, give the lie to the sinfulness of Christ, as above claimed. Yes; Christ IS RISEN, and this has begotten us to a hope of life; and a blessed hope of seeing him, and being made like him, and reigning in glory with him. His resurrection is proof of his sinlessness!

These men in denying the divine paternity of Jesus, and the sacrificial death of Jesus, and the typical character of animal sacrifices practically abandon at least one-third of the Scriptures. Jesus said Moses wrote of him, and he told the Jews if they had believed Moses they would have believed him. And the system we oppose does precisely as the Jews did; it is in connection with the tabernacle and temple services, chiefly that Moses wrote of Christ. But the nation [illegible] generally, did not believe the everlasting covenant made with Abraham 430 years before the law, which covenants blessings which are not to be possessed until the dawn of the age to come. And of course could not be ruled as a nation on the principle of faith in some far off God,—as Abraham, Isaac and Jacob were.

This necessitated a law or covenant that bestowed its blessings there and then,—they not being interested in anything beyond the present life. The law from Sinai was for this purpose. Obedience to it ensured bountiful crops, long life, protection from all enemies, etc.,—but it related to nothing after death.

Moses, Aaron, Joshua and others, however, did believe the Abrahamic covenant; and this in no respect interfered with their privileges under the Sinai covenant, or law. This faithful few while enjoying the temporal blessings under the law and its priesthood, also saw the typical nature of the sacrifices and services, and their faith was reckoned to them for righteousness.

Jehovah said to Moses, see that thou make what thou wast made to see after the pattern showed thee in the Mount," which things, Paul says, are only the example and shadow of heavenly things. And we are told plainly that the daily offerings of the same sacrifices under the Mosaic system could never take away sin; but this man (Christ Jesus) after he had offered one sacrifice for sins for ever, sat down on the right hand of God, from henceforth expecting till his enemies be made his footstool." This shows conclusively that only the legal cleansing of the flesh was accomplished by animal sacrifices, UNLESS the offerer had faith in the Abrahamic covenant. Such, like Abraham, saw the one great antitypical Sacrifice, the Lamb of God's providing, and was justified by faith; saw the day of the Anointed and was glad.

The typical nature of the sacrifices is denied; and we find the real reason of this averment to be, that Christ's blood was not sacrificially shed; and therefore, there is no antitype.

It cannot be denied by any one who has a regard for the Word of truth, that remission of sin is not possible without the shedding of blood. Josephitism is a system which dispenses with blood, and is, therefore, NOT A CHRISTIAN SYSTEM.

We now propose to make some references to what we hold to have been types of the heavenly, spiritual things we now joy in.

We have already referred to the strict injunction to Moses to make all things connected with the tabernacle service according to the patterns shown him in the Mount. There must be some important reason for this. The Almighty could not have been so particular without a purpose. He could not have put them to such trouble for nothing. The last writer quoted is worked up about the baptism of John; and writes as if it were not possible to find a reason for the necessity of Christ's baptism, unless he had something to repent of, or some uncleanness to wash away.

We are the more anxious to occupy a little space with this matter now, because there was not one means of salvation for Abraham, another for Isaac, still another for David, Isaiah, Daniel, etc., etc. They were all justified by faith,—and faith, too in the same blessings covenanted. They all knew they must live again after death. And, as David says the way of life was made known to him,—and as he predicted that the HOLY ONE would not be suffered to see corruption; and that his own flesh should rest in hope; and that he would be satisfied when he shall AWAKE in the likeness of him (not allowed to see corruption;) and seeing Isaiah foretold one being led as a lamb to the slaughter for the transgressions of God's people,—and making his SOUL AN OFFERING for sin —we see, contrary to our author that the ancients had a comprehensive view of the means of salvation to be inaugurated when God would speak to us by a Son, whom he would appoint Heir of all things, on account of whom also he constituted the ages.

Reader, does not this chain of evidence annihilate the cheap way of God in providing a Savior for us, set forth by our author? Viz., He found one among a group of young men that would serve his purpose? or to that effect? Dare any one affirm that Christ was cut off for others when he himself had sinned? This would be extremely ridiculous.

Jesus was a Jew under the law of Moses. And when he spoke of righteousness to be fulfilled before his baptism, he spoke of the necessity of doing what was signified, or typified by the symbolic institutions of the [illegible] saic law.

Jesus being the Anointed Seed long promised of God, he was the Holy Priest who was to arise after the order of Melchizedec, and sit upon his throne as a priest upon his throne, and to bear the glory. Zech. vi. This being so he would some day have to occupy the place formerly occupied by Aaron.

As the Aaronic Installation was typical of that of the Melchizedec High Priest, Jesus Christ had to be consecrated in the same manner, that, in doing so he might antitypically fulfill the representation of the law, for Jesus said not a jot or tittle of it should pass from the law till all be fulfilled.

Aaron was forbidden to enter into the Most Holy Place of the tabernacle without being adorned and glorified with garments of splendor and holiness, and therefore, styled holy garments.

Nor was he permitted to enter, even, when clothed with these, "unless he had been previously baptized," upon pain of death.

The law said, "He shall wash his flesh in water, and so put them on."

He was not permitted to officiate as High Priest in his ordinary clothing.

He must "put off" this, and "put on" the holy linen robe; and had he put on this without bathing his flesh in water, and proceeded to officiate, this unbaptized High Priest of Israel would have been struck with death. Jesus was made of a woman, made under the law, remember, and had to obey it.

(To be continued.)

The following circular letter concerning the Bible School to be held previous to the Illinois State Conference is sent out by Brother Lindsay. Let all who can do so arrange to attend this school, as it cannot fail to be of interest.

Dear Friend,—

The time has come to announce the Second Annual Bible School to be held in connection with the Seventh Annual Conference of the Churches of God in Christ Jesus at Oregon, Illinois.

The School will begin on Monday, August 15, to continue until Wednesday, August 24, the date of the beginning of conference.

The recitation work of the school will consist of two sessions daily except Sunday, each session an hour and a half in length. One session each day will be given to the study of Old Testament history beginning with the book of Joshua, and the other will be occupied by a study of the epistles of Paul in connection with his journeys as recorded in the Acts.

The expense in attending this school will be small outside of the expense of transportation, since the Conference Board appropriated an amount of money to apply on grocery bill, etc. The conference hall will afford excellent quarters for lodging free of expense.

Please arrange to come. Do what you can to get others to come. Please drop me a card saying whether you will come or not and tell me of any others who may be induced to come. Those who write they will come will receive further directions. No tuition is charged. Yours truly,

S. J. Lindsay.

It is surely evident to all that we cannot well do business without means. It surely is likewise evident to those who have not yet renewed their subscription that we must be in need of what is due us. We dislike very much to mention this, and hope you will not compell us to repeat the hint.

The Present Drift.

The present drift of society is toward anarchy, a drift that has been peculiarly rapid during the last quarter-century. Socialism, Communism, Nihilism, and the hot battle between capital and labor, monopoly and poverty, are the dominant facts and forces in this war, now being waged, with increasing violence and desperation, against all government. There is also a strong drift in the church toward apostasy. Witness the advance of Romanism, ritualism, rationalism, even in Protestant churches and communities. In society at large there is a corresponding advance of materialism, agnosticism, and infidelity; and the polite disguises of science, culture and criticism do not hide the true features and forms which they clothe, but cannot conceal.—A. D. Pierson, D. D.

Earth's fanactics are often heaven's saints. Remember that the great fault of these last times is not fanaticism, Laodicean lukewarmness.—E. P. Marvin.

Christ and the Clouds.

I cannot look above and see
  You high-piled pillowy mass
Of evening clouds, so swimingly,
  In gold and purple pass,
And think not, Lord, how thou wast seen
  On Israel's desert way
Before them in thy shadowy screen,
  Pavilioned all the day!

Or of those robes of gorgeous hue,
  Which the Redeemer wore,
When ravished from his follower's view,
  Aloft his flight he bore;
When lifted, as on mighty wing,
  He curtained his ascent,
And wrapped in clouds went triumphing
  Above the firmament.

Is it a trail of that same pall
  Of many-colored dyes,
That high above, o'ermantling all
  Hangs midway down the skies—
Or borders of those sweeping folds
  Which shall be all unfurled
About the Savior, when he holds
  His judgment on the world?

For in like manner as he went—
  My soul, hast thou forgot?
Shall be his terrible descent,
  When man expecteth not!
Strength, Son of Man, against that hour,
  Be to our spirits given,
When thou shalt come again with power,
  Upon the clouds of heaven!

Wisdom of Selrach.

CHAPTER 38. (33 APOCRYPHA).

1. Honor a physician for his honorable uses.

2. For from a Most High is healing, and from a king will he receive a gift.

3. The exact knowledge of a physician will exalt his head, and in the sight of great men will he have been wondered at.

4. The Lord generated drugs from earth and a thoughtful man will not reject them.

5. Was it not from wood that water was made sweet in knowing its strength?

6. And he hath given to men exact knowledge that he might be glorified in his wondrous acts.

7. With them he hath healed and taken away man's pain.

8. A chemist with these will make a mixture, and he shall not finish his works, and peace from him is then upon the face of the earth.

9. Child in thy debility do not disregard, but offer a vow unto the Lord and he will heal thee.

10. Stand discordant-error away from thee and make thy hands upright, and cleanse thy heart from sin.

11. Give an offering of sweet smell and a memorial offering of fine flour and an offering fat with oil as though he (the physician) did not exist;

12. And give place to a physician, for the Lord generated him also, and let him not stand away from thee; yea, for he has his use.

13. There is an appointed time when in his hands also there is an offering of sweet smell.

14. Yea, for they will have besought the Lord to prosper them with rest and healing for their livelihood.

15. May the one who is sinning in the sight of his Creator have fallen into the hands of a physician.

16. Child, shed tears over a dead person and begin a threne as though suffering direly, and according to your judgment of him lay out his body, and do disregard his burial.

17. Make lamentation bitter and the outward show of it fervent, and observe the period of sorrow according to his worth one day or two for the sake of slander, and be comforted from thy sorrow.

18. For from sorrow cometh forth death and sorrow of heart will bow down one's strength.

19. Even sorrow passeth by with tribute paid, and a beggar's living is down in his heart.

20. Do not give thy heart unto sorrow; stand it away remembering the last things.

21. Do not ignore it; for there is no return, and thou wilt not profit him and thou wilt harm thyself.

22. Remember the verdict for him; because even as his is also thine; mine yesterday and thine today.

23. With a dead man's rest, let thy remembrance of him cease, and be comforted with him on the departure of his spirit.

24. A scribe's wisdom is in a favorable time of leisure, and the one who is inferior in his practice will have become wise.

25. Why should one who holdeth a plow have become wise, one who driveth cattle and who is brought up in their employments and who boasteth in a goad for their hide, and whose discourse is in the progeny of bulls?

26. He will give his heart to the yielding of furrows, and the wakefulness will be for fodder for heifers.

27. Even so every artisan and chief-artisan who is busy night and day, who are graving figures for seals, and his patient endurance is to give variety of design; he will give his heart to delineating things like to living creatures, and his wakefulness to the perfecting of his work.

28. Just so a coppersmith seated nigh to an anvil, and thoroughly acquainted with gleaming white iron; a breath of fire will smite his flesh, and he will constantly wrestle with the heat of a furnace; the sound of a hammer will dedicate his ear; and his eyes are on a likeness of a utensil; his heart he will give to the finishing of works, and his wakefulness to giving beauty to their finish.

29. Even so a potter seated at his work and turning a wheel with his feet and who with anxious care constantly leaneth over his work, and all his workmanship is by number.

30. With his arm will he smite some clay, and before his feet will he bow his strength; his heart will he give to finishing the glazing ointment; and his wakefulness is to cleanse his furnace.

31. These all have had faith in their hands, and each one getteth wise in his employment.

32. Without them a city will not have been built and they will not sojourn nor walk about.

33. And in a church they will not excell, upon the seat of a civic-judge they will not sit, and a covenant of judgment-rendered they will not have fully apprehended nor will they make evident righteousness and judgment, and in parables they will not have been found.

34. But a generic-creation of an animate-age will they stay up, and their will be in an employment of skill.

COMMENT.

The "Christian Scientists" should read and reflect carefully on the first few verses of this chapter. For the true principles and philosophy of "divine-healing" are correctly stated here and they agree with what is assumed and asserted to be true elsewhere throughout the whole range of Scripture-teaching both Old and New, but here epitomized in a truly philosophical way. Mrs. Eddy's book and teaching is merely the re-assertion of an exploded ideal philosophy as old as the refined Dualism of Greece and possibly of Egypt.

In what is said here of respect for and sorrow for the dead we have a rational and salutary teaching also; and the differentiation of human endeavor in its pursuit of a livelihood bears upon all the intellectual efforts and pursuits of today even more significantly than when it was first written. In a word choose your avocation in life and let your avocation be such as to best enable you to succeed in it whether as a tiller of the soil, an artisan, an artist or a prophet versed in parables and the higher wisdom of God, which is more fully brought out in the following chapter. In other words don't choose to be "a jack-at-all trades and good at none." Our intellectual leaders and teachers will do well to consider old Selrach's idea of manual training and other training for life pursuits as here brought out.

Conference Report.

The Church of God in Michigan met according to announcement at Dutton, June 2, 1904. The officers were all present except one. Ministers present were O. R. L. Crozier, Grand Rapids, Mich., C. Winchester, Byron Center, Mich., B. W. and M. A. Woodward, Dutton, Mich. Words will fail to tell of our disappointment at not having Bro. L. C. Chase or Bro. J. F. Wagoner with us as was expected, we looked for them on every train that came in, but was disappointed. The thought came to some of us, What will we do? almost forgetting our home talent. Most nobly did Bro. and Sister Woodward, Bro. Crozier and Bro. Winchester do their parts. The Conference was opened Thursday evening by our President Bro. R. Lake, all singing, 'Standing on the Promises." Words of welcome by Bro. Crozier and Bro. Woodward, followed by one of Bro. Woodward's good sermons. Friday was Veterans' day, and well represented by the the veterans of the truth. The meeting was led by Bro. Crozier, and very much enjoyed by all. There were reminiscences of the organization of our Conference and then a brief history of Paul's journeys through the churches. The social meetings were interesting and enjoyed by all, especially the Bible reading given by Sister Emily Barnum. We were hospitably entertained by the brothers and sisters at Dutton, we all received such a hearty welcome that we feel that it was good for us to be there. All were pleased to hear the letter of greeting from our Sister Clara Chaffee.

Saturday 9:30 a. m. business meeting. Reports of the Secretary, Treasurer and our State Evangelists were read and approved. The following were elected as officers for the ensuing year: R. Lake, West Millbrook, Mich.; 1st Vice President, Edwin Coats, Coats Grove, Mich.; 2nd Vice President, H. C. Hammond, Dutton, Mich.; Secretary Emma Jackman, Grand Rapids, Mich.; Treasurer, A. K. Richardson, Hastings, Mich. R. F. D. No. 3, State Evangelists, B. W. and M. A. Woodward.

Treasurer's Report: money paid in for our State Work, Dutton church paid, $18.50; Raisin Church, $18.00; Coats Grove Church paid, $52.00; collection at Dutton, $13.88; paid on subscription to the Evangelists' new field work, $45.00; from other sources, $15.00; amount on hand June 6, 1903, $15.14; total $175.52. Amount paid out was $78.70; money on hand $96.82. June 4th, 1904, whole amount received including amount on hand, June 6th, 1903, 180.52 Amount paid out from June 6th, 1903, to June 4th, 1904, was $78.70, leaving an amount of $51.82. Add to this amount paid in on the subscription to the Evangelists' new field work, $45.00; and it makes a total of $96.82. A. K. Richardson Treasurer.

Evangelists' report: whole number of sermons preached, B. W. Woodward 79; M. A. Woodward 57; number, baptized 40, married 7 couples. Days spent in Indiana 57. The following collectors were appointed by the Secretary to collect funds from the churches for gospel work in Michigan: Dutton, Sister Phebe Brewer; Fisher, Sister Ella Rose; Watson, Sister Hulda Myres; Brady, Sister Sarah Harper; Raisin, Bro. L. C. Chase; Coats Grove, Sister Nora Coats; Byron Center, Sister Ada Moses; Millbrook, Bro. Amos Aulback.

The reports of some of the churches were good and some were not as encouraging as we would like. One church reported that as they did not have regular preaching that they had availed themselves of Bro. Underwood's offer and had been sending out THE RESTITUTION. The attendance was good especially on Sunday. One sister yielded obedience, Sister Lena Pomp. Monday morning she was baptized by Bro. Woodward. O may she be faithful unto death, and there we are assured a crown of life awaits her. The meetings were all good especially Sunday. Bro. and Sister Woodward giving us excellent sermons the speakers bringing out of the treasure house of God's Word things both old and new. The beautiful words of truth as presented by them. The subjects, "The Holy City," "The Restitution" or the difference between the now, and the future home of God's people, and the sermon of Sunday evening, Matt. xxiv. 42, "Watch therefore, for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come," will long be remembered. Sunday afternoon the Lord's Supper was administered by Bro. Woodward, Bro. Hammond and Sister Woodward. The interest was good all through, and all seemed to be benefitted by this gathering together. Our next Conference will be held at Coat's Grove. The church at that place extend a cordial and pressing invitation for those who can to come. "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God."

EMMA JACKMAN, Sec.

Report of Tithing Meeting.

The Sister's meeting was called to order by Sister Lake, our president, and the 100th Psalm was read and prayer offered by Sister Barnum, a hymn was sung, and the meeting opened for business. Secretary and Treasurer's report were read and approved. The Treasurer's report was encouraging as it showed work done. There was paid out last year $84.00 for evangelist work by Bro. F. L. Austin, $15.00 for ten numbers of RESTITUTION, and there was yet remaining $188.18 in treasury. At this meeting it was moved, and adopted to appropriate $5.00 for gospel tracts, $50.00 for the Dutton church for repairs, and $16.50 for eleven numbers of THE RESTITUTION papers, every year a new name or two is added to the list of those not able to take the paper. As soon as we learn of any one of these persons who are able to send the required $1.50 for the yearly subscription we drop their name and add others yet unable or strangers to the gospel, who we hope to help give a knowledge of the kingdom, to which we are hoping in God's good time to be admitted.

An objection was made to the name "Tithing Society" as it was impossible for some to keep an accurate account of a tenth of their personal means. Remarks were made by Sisters Barnum, Brewer, Jackman, Hammond and others, which resulted in a vote being made and adopted to change the name back to the "Ladies Evangelical Aid Society" which name it now bears. The election of officers resulted in M. A. Woodward President, Addie Lake Vice President, Emily Barnum Secretary, Emma Jackman Treasurer. The Secretary's book was passed and 5 new names were added to the list of helpers. A vote of thanks was given Sister Wince for her excellent paper read at this meeting. May God keep her long for the helpfulness she is capable of rendering in so many different ways. The sisters may well be encouraged over the advancement made in the work through persistent endeavor to work systematically. But sisters, we ought to do more this year than ever before, as we are nearer the coming of the King and people are perishing for lack of knowledge. Let us not withhold our tithing offering, or whatever amount we may be able to give to his cause. One sister from N. Y. sent me $3.00 to be used in the work. May God bless Sister Chapman and all others who are working in this glorious cause.

Yours for the work.

Conference Report.

Pursuant to the call the Churches of God in Indiana met at old Antioch on Friday, June 10th, at 10:30 A. M. Although only a few were present at the first, the meeting opened in an appropriate manner fitting the occasion, followed by a sermon by Bro. Zilmer. Subject "We will serve the Lord." Joshua xxiv: 15.

Dinner was served at the church and then a few minutes before two o'clock the little congregation gathered together to listen to a sermon on the "Priesthood" by Bro. Hutch. Friday evening social meeting wasted by Bro. Wince. Subject, "The strong must bear with the weak." As per programme we had expected to listen to Bro. Wilson on a subject selected by himself, but as he was busy working in the Master's vineyard in Oklahoma he could not well leave there to meet with us, so Bro. Woodward, of Michigan, spoke on the subject of "The Church" Matth. xvi: 16-18. "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. This confession by Peter is the rock on which Christ said "I will build my church."

A goodly number came early Saturday morning and at 10:00 the social meeting was led by Bro. R. C. Railback, subject "The Christian Graces" 2 Peter i: 1-11. These were spoken of as the addition sum, and that every Christian should work this sum complete.

At 10:45, before the beginning of the sermon Bro. Woodward spoke on "Blessed be the dead who die in the Lord and their works do follow them." He spoke in memory of our dear Brother Richard Corbaley who fell asleep in Jesus within the past year, and who gave the ground where old Antioch stands. That work of his still permits the grand meetings held at this place the second Sunday in each June.

In the absence of Bro. Halsted, we listened to a sermon by Bro. Woodward on the subject, "Will there be a future life?" "If a man die will he live again?" Job. xiv: 14.

At 2:00 P. M. business meeting opened with singing, reading 2 Cor. iv, and prayer. Roll call showed the following churches represented,—Argos, Antioch, Bracken, Burr Oak, Plymouth, South Bend and Scircleville. Minutes of last meeting were approved. Evangelist reported as follows. Since Jan. 1, 1904, Discourses 101. Churches visited, Olio, North Salem, Inwood, Bracken, Rensselear, Roll, South Bend, Pleasant View, Scircleville, and Chicago. Baptized two. A. H Zilmer, Evangelist.

Literature sold since last Conference amounted to $10.68, 2000 pages of "Bible studies" have been printed. Bro. Hatch spoke of his labors in Illinois which was published in THE RESTITUTION. Bro. Wince visits four places has baptized two.

Motion was carried that the Annual Conference be held at Scircleville. Adjourned to meet at Annual Conference.

2. 40 Sermon by Bro. Zilmer, subject "If" or "The conditionality of Salvation."

7:30 Social meetiug led by Bro. Van Vactor, subject "Peace."

8:00 Sermon, by Bro. Wagoner, subject "The things most surely believed among us."

Promptly at 10 o'clock on Sunday the social meeting began led by Bro. Willey. A part of John viii; and beginning of xiv. Again was Bro. Corbaley spoken of. This time by the leader of the meeting and others.

10 45 Sermon by Bro. Zilmer, subject, "The coming of Christ" Lesson Matth xxiv: 29.

2:00 Sermon by Bro. Wince, subject "Christian character," 2 Cor. iii., followed by communion.

7:30 Social meeting led by Bro. Wagoner. "Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly." Col. iii; 16.

8:15 Sermon, by Bro. Woodward "There shall be no more curse."

This was the fortieth meeting held in succession at old Antioch on the second Sunday in June. Few are the faces now that were seen there forty years ago. I know of only one who has been permitted to attend every meeting, and that is Bro. William Railsback of Argos. Bro. W. D. Thompson of Plymouth has missed just one.

No doubt there are others who wished to be just as faithful but circumstances did not not permit their presence.

This fortieth anniversary opened with a sermon on "We will serve the Lord," and closed with "There shall be no more curse." What a glorious beginning and a grand ending for such a meeting. An admonition at the beginning, a promise at the end. Each meeting whether social or preaching, seemed to grow in interest and all seemed to gather good by being there. Let us all be faithful so that we may meet in that time when there shall be no more curse as we heard described in the last sermon. Closed with singing "In that sweet by and by."

LYDIA RAILSBACK., Secretary.

Russia in Trouble.

A few more victories placed to the credit of the Japanese, and the Chinese may pour into Manchuria and attack their old foes, who stole that rich province from them. General Ma is right on the borders of Manchuria, and news comes to the effect that large bands of Chinese bandits are eager to enlist under his standards. The matter is complicated by the fact that, not being an imperial commander, China can repudiate his actions and still retain her neutrality.

But the real foes of Russia, are they of her own household. In Poland, Finland, risings seem imminent, and in the whole district of the Caucasus unrest is constant. The Polish and Finnish regiments almost rebelled when ordered to the front, and were entrained under the strongest guard. This unrest so worries the authorities at St. Petersburg that the government has been compelled to reverse the usual order, by keeping the regular troops at home and sending the reserves to the seat of war. The army corps at home are being mobilized, and the tension in European Russia is almost unbearable.

While this state of affairs is growing worse at home, the Muscovite armies are meeting with defeat in Manchuria. In strategy, the Japanese generals are more than a match for their Russian foes, and the rank and file show a bravery that reminds one of the fatalistic fool-hardiness of the followers of Mohammed. It has become apparent that the only way to defeat the Japs is to wipe them out of existence, and this the Czar's soldiers, unless we are very much mistaken, will be unable to do.—Episcopal Recorder.

When Jesus overturned the tables of the money changers of those who were making his house a den of theives, when it is called a house of prayer, he certainly did not take the steps that would be approved by many of our self-styled love talkers of modern days. The same love is back of a rebuke, warning, threat, as behind a kiss. When afflictions cease to bedisciplinary, they have lost their merit.—Ecclesia.

The Christian who grows up into Christ in all things will never grow too tall.

The power of God is cut off when we use it to turn our own wheels.

Please do not forget our financial needs.

Wesley on the Evils of Drink.

In a sermon published in 1760, Wesley says: "Drams of spirituous liquors are liquid fire, and all who manufacture or sell them, except as medicines are poisoners generally. They murder his Majesty's subjects by wholesale—they drive them to hell like sheep. The curse of God is in their gardens, their walks, their groves. Blood—blood is there. The foundation, the floor, the walls, the roofs of their dwellings are stained with blood!"

And a letter published December 1st, 1772, in Lloyd's Evening Post, signed by him, contains the following: "Have we not reason to believe that half of the wheat produced in the kingdom is every year consumed, not by so harmless a way as throwing it into the sea, but by converting it into a deadly poison—poison that destroys not only the strength and life, but also the morals of our fellow countrymen! Well, but this brings in a large revenue to the King! Is this an equivalent for the lives of his subjects? Would his Majesty sell a hundred thousand of his subjects yearly to Algiers for four hundred thousand pounds? Surely no; will he, then, sell them for that sum to be butchered by their own countrymen? 'But otherwise the swine of the navy cannot be fed.' Not unless they are fatted with human flesh; not unless they are fatted with human blood! Oh, tell it not in Constantinople that the English raise the royal revenue by selling the blood and flesh of there own countrymen!"

PLEASE do not forget that we need all that is due on subscription at this time.

...y Knew not the Lord.

...of a godly sire; their father a ...of the Most High; reared amid ...of worship, and employed in ...service of the tabernacle; it is yet ...said; "The sons of Eli were sons of ...Belial; they knew not the Lord." 1 Sam. ii: 12.

They knew the law; they understood the ceremonies; they had been brought up among divine ordinances; their own father had instructed them in the observances of the true religion, but it was all in vain; they "knew not the Lord."

God's judgment fell upon them at the end, and they perished miserably in a day. And so shall wrath at last overtake those who now profess to serve Him whom they have never truly known, and who shall finally pronounce their terrible sentence: "I never knew you."

Can it be that among that doomed company there will be those who have been trained up in the midst of religious observances, whose fathers have been men of eminence in the church, and who have themselves ministered in holy things?

"This is life eternal, that they might know Thee, the only true God, and Jesus Christ, whom thou hast sent." John xvii. 3 Without this knowledge, we perish; for they "shall be punished with everlasting destruction" that "know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."

Alas! it is to be feared that there are many, even in the church, and perhaps in the pulpit, who know not the Lord. Their religion is a form: their worldliness is a reality. They have no joy in God, and must seek their joy in worldly things. They have never entered into the sacred brotherhood of the redeemed: and hence they mingle in all other brotherhoods, and know no difference between the holy and the profane; the saved and the lost. They are natural men, and cannot discern the things of the spirit; for these are foolishness to them. A terrible surprise is in store for these blind guides and their blinded followers, when they shall fall into the ditch together.

They know not the Lord. They may know philosophy, history, art, science, and all the wisdom of Egypt; but they know not the Lord, and he will not know them, in the day when his smile will be worth more than all earth's possessions and joys.

...ow will it be with you in ...you know the Lord? ...word, his

To the Bereans of Illinois:

At the quarterly meeting held with the Antioch church on Saturday evening, May 7, it was unanimously decided to hold a Bible school this year just preceding the annual conference as last year. So much did the Board of Management desire it that they voted ten dollars support toward paying the grocery bill for the same. The school will be held beginning on Monday, August 15, 1904. The work will proceed much on the same plan as last year except that the daily sessions will consist of two periods of an hour and a half each instead of two hours each. Many have already signified their intention of attending.

Young people cannot estimate the value of such a training until they have had it. For further particulars write me. Suffice it to say that about the only expense—at least the chief item of expense—will be the expense of transportation. Please write and say that you are coming.

Beautiful Winona.

With the opening of the season at Winona Lake, May 10th, the sale of excursion tickets over the Pennsylvania Lines to that attractive resort in Northern Indiana will begin. Every summer passed there by thousands has only increased their desire to return. On the golf links, the tennis courts, the baseball or cricket grounds, the croquet field, or boating on the lake, fishing, camping, swimming, driving, or attending recitals and lectures by world-famed personages in the auditorium—whatever the diversion may be, the associations are of that congenial sort conferred by good society. This resort is noted as the site of Winona Assembly and Summer School, attracting teachers and students from educational institutions of this and other countries.

Fifteen-day and season excursion tickets will be sold from stations of the Pennsylvania Lines during the summer. For information about favorable time of trains, apply to local ticket agents, or to F. Van Dusen, Chief Assistant General Passenger Agent, Pittsburgh, Pa. Illustrated literature describing attractions of Winona Lake may be had for the asking. Address S. C. Dickey, Secretary and General Manager, Winona Lake, Ind., who will give particulars regarding camping facilities, hotel accommodations, program of addresses by noted speakers and all other details.—Sept. 30.

"The World to Come and the Life Everlasting," is the name of a book of over 400 pages. The title page describes it as a Symposium of Writers on eternal life from the Bible Basis, and is selected from the works of a goodly number of Bible Students who have written during the past few years. It is compiled and published by Bro. John O. Woodruff, of Elizabeth, N. J., of whom it may be ordered. The paper and print are excellent, as is the durable cloth-binding. The price is $1.00, and considering the work as a whole it is very low, and we urge all who need a book on this subject to procure one without delay.

IMPORTANT NOTICES.

All persons addressing us should give their name, postoffice, county and state, plainly and distinctly.

All letters should be addressed to "THE RESTITUTION, Plymouth, Marshall, co., Ind."

Remittance should be sent by bank draft, postoffice money orders, or express orders. Money sent in either of the above ways is at our risk, money sent loose in letters is at the risk of the sender. It is folly to think that you can fold bills in a letter so that no one can tell it, for one who handles much mail matter can almost invariably tell a letter with money in it. Take warning and send safely.

All remittances should be made payable to the order of "THE RESTITUTION."

We cannot hold ourselves responsible for the return of manuscripts. Authors should preserve a copy for themselves.

In ordering books or tracts get the latest copy of the paper you have and order only what you see advertized in that.

When desiring a change of address, give both your old and new address.

By complying strictly with the above you will save us much annoyance, and your order will be much more promptly attended

Popular Lectures by M. Joblin.

Brethren and Sisters, Have you loved ones who think sincerity will save them? Have you friends who think they worship acceptably while ignorant of God's promises? Have you acquaintances with false hopes of heaven, or who believe themselves immortal by nature, or who think their sins are forgiven, although they are ignorant of the Law of Pardon, or who have no use for a God who consigns sinners to Eternal Torment, and are ignorant of Jehovah's beneficent purpose to fill the earth with his glory and bestow Eternal Life upon believers of the Gospel, so they can enjoy it for ever? If so, send for Popular Lectures by Bro. Joblin, entitled:—"The Kingdom of God;" "Old Mother Earth to Be Born Again;" "Strangers from the Covenants of Promise;" "Vain Worship;" "No Immortality Out of Christ;" "Hope Begotten by the Resurrection of Christ;" "God's Love and Solicitude for Mankind;" and "What Shall We Do to be Saved?"

Each Lecture of 16 pages $1 per 100 post free; or an assortment of the whole, same price. Address M. Joblin, 624 Woodland Av., Cleveland, O.

Poetry.

He Faileth Not

I have tried love, and I have love to fail
Have trusted friends and found that friends forgot,
Sought help from my own heart without avail,—
He faileth not.

Neither by day nor night, in age or youth,
In poverty and in the direst lot,
In sorrow and in joy his word is truth,—
He faileth not.

If I should let all other comfort go,
And every other promise were forgot,
My soul would sit and sing, because I know
He faileth not.

I cannot tell what winds of God may blow,—
What ads or perilous ways may be my lot;
But I have little care, for this I know,
He faileth not.

Pine Woods Bible Class.

Teacher. Has any one a subject which they would like to submit for our study today?

Carrie. Yes, I have.

Teacher. Please state it.

Carrie. I would like to have an investigation of Phil. i. 20-24, usually called:

PAUL'S DESIRE TO DEPART AND BE WITH CHRIST.

Teacher. Well, Carrie, what is the prevailing opinion as to when the departed go to be with Christ?

Carrie. At death.

Q. What is it that is supposed to depart at death?

A. The immortal soul of the deceased.

Q. Does the text say anything about immortal sons?

A. No, not one Word.
